The Engineers Club will gather material with which to build the Homecoming bonfire, traditionally lit on Thursday night during the festivities.

Throughout the Fall quarter, the Engineers Club took various trips around the Wilmington area, including a tour of the Saline Plant at Wrightsville Beach.

At a business meeting held in the Neptune Room, a Bell Telephone representative spoke to the club on labor bears.

The club members will serve as guides at the Science Fair.

At the last business meeting, David Welch was chosen as the club's new vice-president. Other officers are: Jerry Waldon, president; Butch Huffman, secretary, and Dan Walker, treasurer.

The club is still open to membership to any major, engineering, or science major. A 2.0 average is required.

Student Stagnants

1967. A new year. A new Quarter with new books, teachers, and courses. But everything else remains the same. There is still a war in Viet Nam. There is still death on the Wilmington College Campus. When something is dead—be it plant, man, or animal—it is quiet and still. It no longer has any purpose—it no longer has to do anything. Wilco students don't seem to want to do anything.

Home, someone has said, is where the heart is. To change that sentence a bit: home is where the Wilco student is. If he is not home, he must be hiding. There are many activities on campus crying for help, with no one answering this call. There are other activities which could be started, but no one here has the energy. Everyone is going to Wilmington College for nothing but an education. That is marvelous—but not everyone is on the dean's list. We will offer no challenges to the Wilmington College students since we know they will remain just as we have always observed them: apathetic and complaining. But, if we, the staff of THE SEAHAWK, can make you angry, we shall be very happy. (Of course, we realize that you won't do anything, but there will always be space on this page for your letters. Write!)

To All Freshmen

To all Freshmen (especially the thirty-seven who attended your class meeting in November):

What happened to all of your plans, ideas, and projects? You were enthusiastic . . . then. You were going to breathe the "breath of life" into Wilmington College. Where did your spirit disappear? Great projects were outlined at your meeting. Did these projects never go beyond the outline stage? Have you fallen into the rut of college—too busy playing bridge, dating, complaining, and studying(?), etc. to bother about school projects? The "breath of life" you promised would still be welcome. Why wait until you are sophomores? Wake up, show the same enthusiasm again. We are waiting.

"Life Must Go On . . ."

"Life must go on, though good men die," says poet Edna St. Vincent Millay. There will be other teachers, other administrators, but students who were taught by Col. Dumay A. Gorham, and administrators and students who worked with A. Rex Willis, will not soon forget either man.

Mr. Willis came to the college in 1960 as comptroller and became vice president in charge of finance. He was very friendly, likable, and dependable—and always very careful in all financial dealings as far as the college was concerned.

It was only about two and a half years ago that Col. Gorham began teaching at the college, but in that time he became known as one of the best teachers on the faculty.

Other men will and have taken their places, but the two who have departed will not soon be forgotten.

SOLVING THE PARKING PROBLEM? Actually Archie McGirt was coming to see if a friend was out of class. When our editor spied Archie and Topper galloping on campus, she couldn't resist asking him to return for a picture. And it is true that he almost received a parking ticket on the return trip. RANDOM THOUGHT

By JOHN BLAIR, JR.

Things are in a fine pickle. We've got a problem that has long been foreseen and put off until now it is too late.

What are we going to do with Adam Clayton Powell? I said we because he is our problem. We created him out of misunderstandings and prejudices. We get to stew in our own juice.

Years ago Harlem was fairly high-class; that is hardly the case now. It has become a stinking hole among New York's other slums, which have hardly anything to parade about. It is not the people in Harlem, however, who are at fault; their paths and their districts are parallel.

What happened to the Jews over the centuries in Europe is certainly terrible. I don't mean under Hitler; that was merely politics. It was the whole universal outlook at the Jewish population. For a score of centuries their only peace has been found in the grave.

Don't look now, but I believe I can see a few ghettoes being formed for the Negroes. Look at Harlem and take a long look at Watts. It's a little repulsive and horrible, right? It's your fault. We, being those whites who have learned their prejudices from our parents, who learned theirs from their parents and so on, are stewing in it.

It is easy to see how Adam Clayton Powell, a man whose views are well-known, who enjoys flaunting his presence in a position of responsibility, could gain control of Harlem's voters.

Negroes in Harlem, and other ghettoes, are direct products of prejudice. Their lack of education, wild ways, and disregard for authority stems from the treatment their race has received. They are not stupid, however.

People wonder how Powell can pull the fleece over his flock's eyes. He doesn't. The Harlem Negro has found a way to strike back at "Whities." They now elect a politician whose goal is to gain as much for himself as possible, and, though they are hurt, most of the ridicule of the situation is aimed at us. They love it and are justified.

This is the situation, and we are now to reap a bit of the harvest we've been growing for ourselves. I truly believe that the House has no racial incentives in their denial of a seat to Powell. I hope this will set a precedent for further action against Congressmen whose actions are as deplorable as Powell's are.

What one finds hard to understand are the racial problems arising from certain extreme groups, both black and white. I cannot imagine a Congressman who would be so stupid as to incite the colored voters over any issue that could be clearly defined as segregationist. It is commendable that these men have finally come out against these actions of Powell's.

And for those who are truly interested in the Negroes, let them applaud Brooke of Massachusetts as a man of high qualifications who, as his record shows, will hardly disgrace, Negro, white, or Americans in his actions.

Letter To Editor

When the Debate Club held its first meeting for the Winter Quarter Wednesday, January 11, it was found that several members are needed to complete a novice team for Wilmington College.

It is shocking to think that the only intellectual society on this campus has to go begging for members. What has happened? We choose to give the students the benefit of the doubt and say that the majority probably did not even know that there was to be a meeting.

Therefore we hereby announce, a week ahead of time, that there will be a meeting of the Debate Club next Wednesday, and every Wednesday night in the Library Building.

All those who feel intellectually up to the challenge are sincerely invited to make an appearance.

The National Debate topic this year is, Resolved: that the United States foreign aid policy should be substantially reduced.

The Club has been to one tournament this year at Wake Forest and more are on the agenda.

The Irony of Life

By BRITT MICHAELSON

Having been asked to write a little something on a student's opinion of Brown Bagging, I have since wondered about the appropriateness of the subject for a college newspaper. I find that it is quite pertinent for reasons the students themselves know only too well. Trying to be witty, I might say that the only thing wrong with Brown Bagging is getting caught. With such a subject I do not choose to be witty simply, because the subject has been so distorted and exaggerated and has received so much attention lately that it has almost become ridiculous.

However, it becomes unridiculous when one realizes the money that has been and will be lost to the State of North Carolina, due to this one little law. To me, this situation looks like a repetition of the passage of the Blue Laws by our glorious State Legislature. It is something that will be sorry for, and something that should have been left (well enough) alone. If the gentlemen in the legislature were trying to be good citizens and limit the intake of consumption of alcohol by Caro-

Squawks

By SALLI SEAHAWK

Welcome back. Our editor has very graciously allowed me to make an announcement. Our editor—or rather our old editor, shall we say, has been forced to leave us. In place of Virginia Bayden, who was managing editor of THE SEAHAWK last year and served as executive editor during Fall quarter, Renee Hartman is taking over as editor. We wish her luck. And should Virginia see this paper, we miss her.

The language department, especially the French teachers, wish to have something said about the brilliant teaching they are doing. This information comes from one of our reporters. We wish to ask these teachers if they think their department is so special? We are sure every department head could make the same boast!

We thought a miracle happened when we returned to school. The out of order sign on the phone in Kenan was actually gone. We used it once—but now the sign has returned. No one has been able to use the phone since September. How long does it take to fix a phone so it can be used?

Who owns the big white station wagon usually parked behind the library building? We don't want to say anything nasty to the administration, but the car is a hindrance in the already thin path between the grass (and wire) and the library building when students are changing classes. Despite all the room that may be there, the owner of the car always seems to park as close to the wire as possible. Could and can this be changed?

Don't forget to notice the new art show in Kenan. Also the drama department is busy with a new play, coming in February. Homecoming isn't too far away . . . maybe things will look up. The dance committee has said this will be the best Homecoming we ever had—we would like to add that they will need your (our) support. Not that we believe they will really get it.

Gambling may not be legal, but we have a bet with a friend who says that more than 500 people will vote in the Homecoming queen elections. We rather doubt that many will take time to cast a vote. After all we have over 1000 students. Maybe 200 might have some energy that day. Don't disappoint us.

linians, I am afraid they may have unleashed the lion. They may by their action have involuntarily paved the way to drinks-over-the-counter for North Carolina. As a non-drinker, I could say since it will not affect me, that it doesn't matter what they do. But for the sake of the people who happen to like a little "Rebel Yell" with their ice, I feel compelled to say something. Perhaps I am being too idealistic but I feel that this law is an encroachment of my freedom. My first reaction would be to go ahead and do what ever I bloody well pleased. However, since we have seen that this law is in effect and is being enforced, I should be a trifle wary as I have no wish to spend the night in the palatial Wilmington jail over a liquor bottle.

There must be another answer somewhere. Perhaps it lies in complete abstinence or in picketing and protest. After much thought I feel there are two choices for the average citizen: 1) You can sit at home with your bottle and drink yourself into oblivion all alone or 2) you can write your Congressman . . . Maybe he will do something!

Tournament In Review

Christmas has come and gone, the holiday season has ended, a new year has begun, and things have settled into the familiar routine of another quarter and a rainy, chilly, bleak and dreary January. In the world of sports, however, the forecast is not so dull. Plenty of basketball action is predicted, and Homecoming is in the not-so-distant future—in fact, only two weeks away.

Though the beginning of the year is a time for looking ahead to future games on tap, it is also a time for considering past sports action. Wilmington College's last sports event for 1966 was held Thursday and Friday nights, December 29 and December 30. Attendance was not as good as had been anticipated either night, as the Wilmington Seahawks played host to the Third Annual Invitational Holiday Tournament. Visiting teams included Roanoke College, Guilford College, and Phiblant, a Naval team.

The starting action Thursday night found Guilford pitted against Phiblant. Underdog Phiblant forged ahead in the first half, but the mighty Guilford team rallied in the second half to defeat Phiblant. In the second game of the evening, favored Wilmington College was defeated by Roanoke.

The consolation game was played Friday night, in which Wilmington upset favored Phiblant. In the championship game, which followed, a hot shooting streak by Guilford College caused them to retain their title as Tournament Champions.

Outstanding players were All-American candidate Bob Kauffman from Guilford, and Phiblant's Wallace, who is All-Navy. Frank Bua, a Wilmington student, set a tournament scoring record. He netted a total of 63 points, one point more than was scored by Kauffman.

Again looking to the future—this time to the more distant future—plans are indefinite for additional Invitational Holiday Tournaments, according to Coach Bill Brooks. Coach Brooks revealed that since turn-out for the games did not meet expectations, money was lost on the Tournament. He further commented, "I was pleased with the overall performance of our team during the Tournament, with the exception of the last part of the first game. I feel like inexperience was the biggest factor in the mistakes that we made at that time."

Pi Sigma Mu Holds Rush

Another quarter has begun at Wilmington College, which means a busy quarter for Pi Sigma Mu. The Fraternity is now a little stronger, with the initiation of five new brothers. The new members of the Brotherhood are Murray Gardner, Robert Prince, Robert Gaddy, Mickey Corcoran, and Elwood Whitman.

The initiation of the new brothers is an indication of the beginning of a new Rush Week. Rush Week began with an informal Smokers on Tuesday night, January 10, and with a speech given to explain the requirements of pledging. Slides were shown to prospective pledges. January 12, Prospective pledges attended a second Smoker to be informed about fraternity life as a brother. A dance was held on Saturday night, January 14, to conclude Rush Week.

The Book Stack

For your reading try these from the Recreational Reading Shelf:

Conrad Richter's A Country of Strangers. This is an absorbing story of a white girl captured by the Indians when she was young, who grew up as an Indian, married an Indian, and came to think as an Indian. She is returned, against her will, to her prominent white family. The story deals with the conflicts of Stone Girl's Indian upbringing with the white world as she is rejected by her white family. A moving story of a "search for identity by one who has lost all family roots, both Indian and white." A companion to the author's The Light in the Forest.

Allen Drury's Capable of Honor. Those who found Drury's novel of Washington political life starting in his Advice and Consent, the workings of the United Nations' interesting in his A Shade of Difference, will look forward to reading his latest political novel, Capable of Honor. Mr. Drury, a Pulitzer Prize winner and a Washington correspondent himself for 20 years, gives us a portrait of Walter Dobius, a Washington columnist, how he gains international fame and uses it to influence domestic and foreign policies of the United States. The book is thought provoking in that it poses the question, "How much do the news media, press, television, and radio influence national and international policies and what is their right to do so?"

The Embuzzer, by Louis Auchincloss. Guy Price misappropriated some bonds, is caught, brought to trial, serves his term in the penitentiary, and then exiles himself to Panama. His story is told by the "three persons most intimately concerned: Guy himself, Rex Geer, his closest friend, and Angelus, his wife. We see him first through his own eyes—'embittered, oddly proud of his peculiar distinction, and entirely unrepentant—the golden boy, the Wall Street manipulator, and finally the old man determined to justify himself to the grandchildren he will never see.' In Rex and Angelica's stories the "threads change color subtly as they pass through different hands. In the end the reader must decide for himself which is the real Guy Prime." Readers who enjoyed the author's Rector of Justin will find The Embuzzer equally interesting.

Mary Renault's The Mask of Apollo. If you became a Mary Renault fan through reading The King Must Die, The Last of the Wine, The Bull from the Sea, you will find her Mask of Apollo good holiday reading. This is a novel of fourth century B.C., Syracuse, and Athens. It is the history of a "particularly bloody period in Syracuse with an interpretation of the production of Greek classical drama at one of its highest points." One critic has said that "Miss Renault has written better novels than The Mask of Apollo" but a novel even one notch down for Miss Renault is still a great pleasure to read."

Other titles to select from on the Recreational Reading Shelf are:

The Birds Fall Down, by Rebecca West.

Incident at Exeter, by John G. Fuller.

With Kennedy, by Pierre Salinger.

The Time Between the Wars, by Jonathan Daniels.

The Fixer, by Bernard Malamud.

In Cold Blood, by Truman Capote.

Wilco Bows To Georgia

By WALTER HEALEY

Staff Sports Writer

The Seahawks took off on their longest road schedule of the year, January 13-26, to play seven opponents before returning home January 28 against Campbell College.

In their latest contest the Seahawks hosted Georgia Southern and played one of their best first halves of the year.

Georgia Southern, which finished second in the NAIA post season tournament last year, came into the contest supporting a 7-6 record with its latest victory over Southern Conference Club Citadel, and an All-American in guard Jim Rose.

The Hawks got off to a quick 4-0 lead in the opening minute of play and held the advantage until 14:13 left when the Eagles' Jim Seely scored to put them on top 13-12. Frank Bua, who has a 20-plus average for the season, put the Seahawks back on top. But the Eagles working their fast break to near perfection, opened up a 22-16 lead with 11:09 to go in the half.

The Hawks fought back and with 7:20 left Jim Hall, who was high scorer of the night for Wilmington with 22, canned a jumper to knot the score at 28-all. Wayne King and Jim Braxton hit baskets to offset Seely's and Rose's scores to give the Hawks a 36-36 tie, when the Eagles came out in a 1-3-1 zone defense, with 3:20 to go. Rose who sank 15 of his game high, 31 points in the first half connected on a short jumper near the end of the half to give Southern a 43-40 advantage at the half.

The Eagles came out flying on their fast break in the second half. Led by guard Ken Szotkiewicz, who tallied 19 for the game, Southern rattled off a 10-2 spurt in the first three minutes and widened the gap to 59-44 with 15:24 left in the game.

fense set up by the Eagles. Jim Hall kept the Hawks within ear-shot range as he popped on his jumpers from the outside. Butch Budd who saw action for the first time in the Christmas Tourney, showed signs of recovering from his foot injury with a 12 point performance and Jim Braxton added 10 for the Hawks, as the Eagles took the victory 91-76.

The highlight of the night came not from a Seahawk, but from Jim Rose, who showed how tough he was when he canned six clutch baskets in a row for Southern midway in the second half. This nullified any Wilmington chance of catching up. The senior All-American shot 8-12 from the floor in the second half.

Just before Christmas the Seahawks bowed to Asheville-Biltmore 83-78 after they had led most of the game. The Seahawks opened up a 42-38 halftime lead with Frank Bua and Jim Braxton paving the way.

In the second half the Bulldogs battled back to tie the game at 55-all with 13 minutes left behind the shooting of Guy Batsel who had 20 on the night. But the Seahawks pulled away with Wayne King, Bua, and Braxton hitting baskets to open up a 73-68 spread, with six minutes to go.

Jim McElhane, a slick ball handling guard for the Bulldogs, guided Biltmore's comeback until finally with 2:09 left Larry Arrick scored to tie the game at 78-all.

Bua, who took game scoring honors with a 26 point performance, was hurt and had to leave the contest at this point.

The loss hurt the Hawks in breaking the Bulldog press. A charging foul called on the Hawks and a fast break by the Bulldogs put Biltmore up 80-75 with about 58 seconds left. The Seahawks called time out and Coach Bill Brooks sent his boys out looking for the good shot to tie the game. But with 15 seconds to go Jerry Bron's jumper rimmed the basket and the Bulldogs went down and scored on a three point play to ice the game.

In the Third Annual Wilmington College Christmas Tournament the Seahawks took it on the chin in the opening round as they were upended by Roanoke in overtime 99-98.

The Seahawks charged to a 12 point lead in the second half behind the shooting of Bua and King. But the Maroons battled back and it took a last second lay-up as Wilmington found itself behind, by Bua to put the game into overtime, before the Hawks bowed to Roanoke. Bua canned 28, King, 20, Braxton and Hall each had 14.

The Seahawks salvaged the consolation game as they defeated U. S. Naval Amphibious Force (Phiblant), 73-69.

Jim Braxton is the 6-6 center for the Hawks and big Jim came through in the clutch against Frederick College when he popped in a jumper with four seconds on the clock to give the Seahawks a 76-75 victory.

Wilmington was down 39-32 at the half because of a poor team defensive effort and trailed through the entire second half. Ricky French, who tallied 14 points for the night, scored 12 of them in the first 15 minutes of the final half over the Seahawks zone defense. But with three minutes to go Coach Brooks called time and abandoned the zone and went man to man.

The Hawks battled back and cut the lead to one with 1:05 to go as Braxton hit two free throws. An intercepted pass by Wilmington set the stage for Braxton's dramatic shot.

Frank Bua led all scorers with 26. King tallied 14. Braxton and Hall each pushed through 10.

The Seahawks are now 5-7 on the season and go on the road against Baptist, Mercer, Campbell, Oglethorpe, Asheville-Biltmore, Pembroke, and St. Andrews before returning home.

Brazilian Exchange Students Attend Classes At College

Nanci Gaspar and Sonia Macia de Azamoua Mottrel Costa are two students from Brazil who will be attending classes at the college for a month.

Nanci and Sonia are part of the group of Brazilian students who are currently visiting in Wilmington. Both girls wanted to come to the United States to see the American way of living.

Nanci spent one month in New York City with her parents before coming to Wilmington. "I love it," said Nanci in speaking of New York. "It's wonderful."

The girls will sit in on courses in economics, French, western civilization, and Latin American history at the college.

"I study sociology in Brazil," stated Sonia and added, "I just love history and I'd like to see how you have history here."

Nanci continued, "I also love history. I will study sociology in Brazil, and it will be nice to have it here. It will probably help me."

Nanci and Sonia have been studying French for five years in a special class organized by France. "We can't forget our French," they said. "We have a very good time in our French class and hope we will here," commented Nanci.

In Brazil students may either attend public schools or private Catholic schools. Almost everyone goes to the Catholic schools, according to the girls.

Nanci, who is in her last year of high school was taking courses in English, French, Latin and Portuguese literature, history of art, history of Brazil, world history, principles of economy, international problems, geography, and psychology before she left.

When she returns she will add principles of law, sociology and philosophy in place of economics and psychology.

She attends school from 7 a.m. to noon six days a week. Each class meets about three times a week, depending on the importance of the subject.

Sonia, a sophomore in the Catholic University, is studying economics, sociology, political science, mathematics, statistics, and Brazilian history.

To enter a university in Brazil a student must take "very hard" entrance exams, according to Sonia. To go to college there you have to have very high marks as the competition is very large.

Nanci, who visited New Hanover High School, said that high school is the hardest in Brazil.

When asked about dating in Brazil the girls began to laugh. "We don't have dates," said Sonia. "It is not as easy as it is here," agreed Nanci.

"You only go out with a boy when you go steady," commented Nanci, "but you can pretend you are going steady," she added.

"When you are going steady with a boy, you can't go out with another boy," says Sonia. "They (the boys) are not supposed to go out with another girl, either," she added. "But they do," both girls laughed.

On a date in Brazil they usually go to a movie, the theatre, a party, or a restaurant. There is no social life—or extra curricular activities from the schools, but there are clubs outside of school.

Both girls "love" Wilco. Sonia commented, "If we could have it like you have it here. You think you have a small school? It's great!" she exclaimed.

Nanci agreed, and also commented on the beauty of the Wilco campus.

Yearbook Needs Workers To Fill Staff Positions

Each year The Fledgling, Wilmington College's yearbook, is greeted with either praise or dislike when it appears in May.

The Fledgling staff begins their work in the Spring when it covers events, such as baseball games, the May Dance, and graduation, which happen after the book has gone to the printers.

During the summer the staff meets to plan the overall book and to determine the number of pages the book will have. This year The Fledgling will have 232 pages, 24 pages more than last year's book.

"The book ought to express the growth of the college," stated Gerald Rossetol, yearbook adviser. "Every year it has gotten larger—and perhaps better," he added.

Staff members of the yearbook are responsible for different sections of the book. Each section is correlated by a unifying theme.

During the year the staff members have four deadlines to meet when various pages in the book have to go to the printers. The first deadline was in November. The last deadline will be in March.

The yearbook is scheduled to appear in the middle of May.

This year the yearbook staff faces a crisis since most of the staff is made up of graduating seniors. Their positions will have to be filled if a yearbook is put out in 1968.

Mr. Rossetol has asked that any student interested in working on the yearbook to contact him. His office is located in Kenan.

Scholarships are given to four staff members, the editor and asstant editor, business manager, and assistant business manager. The rest of the staff is composed of volunteers.

Editor for this year's Fledgling is Patsy Futch; assistant editor, Delrilla Dorsey; business manager, Gary Chadwick; and assistant business manager, Don Harrison.

Other staff members are Bebe Blomme, Clara Home, Liz Johnson, Sam Garner, Joe Crutchfield, Margaret Lassiter, and David Jones.

Dr. Hall Shows Diversity In The Literary Field

Dr. B. Frank Hall, head of the philosophy department, is a man of many talents, occupations, and accomplishments. In the literary field Dr. Hall demonstrates his diversity with a weekly local newspaper column, articles for periodicals and national newspapers, poetry, and theological social studies.

Dr. Hall's writing career began while he was in college. At this time poetry was his major literary medium. Between 1920 and 1930 selections of his poetry were published in several popular and academic periodicals.

Later Dr. Hall's main interest turned from poetry to prose of theological content. One of his books, This Company of New Men by Covenant Life Curriculum, is a comparative sociological study on the first century A.D. in relationship to the conditions of the twentieth century.

This text is used by six Protestant denominations as part of the curriculum for high school and college students.

Also an author of newspaper and magazine articles, Dr. Hall writes a weekly column for the Wilmington Star-News newspaper. He also writes devotional material for the National Council of Churches. This material is eventually published in newspapers throughout the United States.

His articles for denominational periodicals usually deal with world events as they affect the Christian. The major theme of his writings for college publications deal with various aspects of education.

Dr. Hall also writes half hour dramatic scripts and spots for television and radio dealing with theological themes.

Presently he has just completed a booklet dealing with Protestant and Catholic relationships in connection with the outcome of the latest Ecumenical Council.

In the booklet Dr. Hall deals with the question of putting theory into practice. He suggests practical community projects that can be performed by Catholic and Protestants together.

BSU To Enact Play

Baptist Student Union will present a Worship Service Sunday, February 12 at First Baptist Church at 7:30 p.m.

As part of the service, members of the BSU will enact the play, Love Agape Way, by Oscar J. Rumpf.

"The word agape is a Greek word meaning the love between God and man," said Bobby Bohannon, missions chairman for the BSU. The continued, "This play shows God's love for the world and shows how man should express his love for God and for other men."

The program will be the second service of this type that the BSU has presented this year. In November members of the club presented a Worship Service at Temple Baptist Church.

Larry Bohannon is president of the BSU. Dennis Lennon, vice president; Pat Kent, secretary; and Jimmy Davis, treasurer. Walter Biggs of the biology department is faculty adviser. Rev. Don Bratton is pastor-adviser.

The old brothers of Sigma Phi Kappa offer congratulations to Dicky Hudson, Carmen Arganna, and Danny Martin on becoming the latest inductees to their fraternal brotherhood.

The week of January 9 was Rush Week. Tuesday and Thursday nights of that week, Smokers were held. Friday the 13th was celebrated with a "Black Cat Party." The Brothers had a cook-out at Snow's Cut, Saturday, and a dance featuring the "Freshmen" Saturday night.

Lana Kay Lewis has been elected Sigma Phi Kappa Sweetheart for this year. The Brothers voted Danny Martin as Best Pledge. New officers for the year are as follows: president, Chas Weiss; vice president, Billy Higgins; treasurer, James Caison; secretary, Robert Fales; house manager, George Akel; and sergeant-at-arms, Danny Martin.

Representatives of Pi Kappa, the National Fraternity, are coming down to inspect Sigma Phi Kappa and Wilmington College as a whole for possible colonization after accreditation of the college as a four year institution.

Homecoming Arrives

Homecoming began last night. We cannot report on the participation at the bonfire or dance last night since the paper was being printed as these events happened. We can only say students have been promised the best Homecoming in the history of the College, but we can also say that Homecoming and its plans will be a flop unless there is good student participation.

The dance committee has been working hard, and it wants the students to enjoy this weekend, which is the biggest College weekend of the year. We realize that not everyone can participate. There are the students who will have to work, the students who believe Homecoming is silly and with not be bothered with it, and the students who do not have dates and will not attend. But to the students who aren't working, don't believe Homecoming to be silly, and do have dates, enjoy yourselves.

Tom McNair and the dance committee should be thanked for the time and effort they have put into this weekend. And also we would want to offer a word of congratulations to the girl who will be crowned as Homecoming Queen at the ball-game tomorrow night. She will have a special reason for remembering this weekend, and we hope that she will have something to remember.

Students Need Money

Since college students usually need money and money generally comes from some type of work called jobs, THE SEAHAWK, with its perhaps feeble attempt to help the apathetic Wilmington College students, is beginning a new feature in this issue. If you will notice on page three there is a list of jobs to which you may apply. These "want ads" come from the Wilmington College Placement Bureau and will appear as a regular feature in all coming issues of the paper. Please use this service; we are doing it for you and hope that you will be able to get something out of your newspaper other than just a laugh.

Grass Is Green

The grass is green. The grass is green and stands upright. The grass is green and stands upright and covers everything. The grass is green and stands upright and covers the bare ground. Do not walk on the green, standing upright grass that covers everything, because when you walk too much on the grass the bare earth begins to show. When the bare earth begins to show, this is called a path.

See the sidewalks. The sidewalks are made from cement. They are strong, and they cover the bare earth and where the grass might have been. They are where you are supposed to walk. They are sometimes in the wrong place, but that does not mean anything. Use them, for they were meant to be used, even if they are in the wrong places.

Do not walk on the grass, the pretty green grass. You will put paths in the grass and the paths do not look pretty. There might soon become a fine for walking on the grass. Leave the grass. Leave the grass for ants to crawl through.

Sorority On campus

We would like to take the curse of a "student stagnat" off the heat of Gaye Godwin. Gaye is a student has seen something that Wilmington College needed and has seen that Wilmington College has power. One day last week the first sorority on this campus was approved. It is true that Gaye had helpers in her fellow sisters of Chi Sigma Phi, but we must credit much of the early work with Gaye. We would like to welcome this new organization to our campus and say that we are proud of Gaye and the work she has accomplished.

Noe Lists New Regulations

"No one realizes what a parking problem the students have on our campus as much as your Physical Plant Department. However, it is our job under the direction of the Trustees of the College and the President, to enforce parking regulations. Therefore I deem it advisable to inform you of new regulations which are in effect," said Thomas Noe, superintendent of buildings and grounds.

1. Cars parked in Driveways and Faculty Areas are subject to be towed away at the owner's expense. Please stay out of these areas for your own protection.

2. Cars going around the circle in the wrong direction will be fined Five Dollars ($5.00) in the future due to the accident danger involved.

3. Parking tickets must be paid within seven (7) days or you will prevent a buildup at the end of the quarter. Tickets not paid during

Random Thoughts

By JOHN BLAIR, JR.

Different parts of the world can be classified as types of people.

Europe is an old man who still possesses golden memories but has told of them so often no one pays him any attention.

South America and Africa are problem children. The Old World gave them birth and nursed them but has left them, now, to find out about life.

The United States and Russia are like two grown men who love the same woman. They are mature enough to realize each other's power and respect it.

This leaves the blossoming young man of the world, China. China had a troubled birth; it was nurtured on tyranny and slavery and as it moves into manhood it is beset by extreme internal struggles. China is the youth who cannot make up his mind whether he should become a member of society or an outlaw. He has the power to gain his way anywhere in the world except against the two grown men of the world. It will, however, not be long before China has grown up. We hope that, like brother Russia, he will learn the meaning of power and realize some of the fear we have of it.

To understand China, which hardly anybody does, one needs to know a little of the background of China.

China had a strong empire before Europe had even the slightest hint of a civilization. These early dynasties set up traditions of government and personal behavior that have lasted until today and shall continue.

Perhaps, it is true that the mind of the Oriental differs from that of Western man's. These Chinese have a way of incorporating invading peoples into their own culture. They did this with both the Mongols and Manchus. The Mongols, under Genghis Khan, while not nearly as barbaric as is popularly believed, did not begin to approach China in civilization. A little after Genghis' Chinese conquest, Marco Polo met Kubilai Khan, Genghis' grandson, and saw the spirit of China in Kubilai. Beyond China the hordes had essentially remained the same, Kubilai had changed, not China.

Invasions have never, until recently bothered the people. The country is so vast and the population so numerous and remote that the fall of empires did not bother the Chinese peasant. He still had overlords and life remained very rough.

The Taiping revolt of the mid-nineteenth century changed this somewhat and China slowly awoke under Sun Yat-sen. Communism arrived after the war and gave the Chinese an identity as a people. It has raised the standard of life and created a national goal.

We have a history of prosperity and do not realize that Communism is a rise in life to this people; they will fight for it.

Letter To The Editor

Student Voices Opinion

"Student Stagnants" was an apt term for the editorial of January 20. The prime topics around school lately are the parking problem, Mr. Noe's bicycle, and ill-mannered teachers. Very enlightening.

Many students thought that the election of Greg Godwin as Student Body President would bring about tremendous changes. That few changes have ensued is not surprising — Lyndon Johnson couldn't change Wilmington College.

To revert to the serious side for a moment (and here most of our students will find the going a bit rough), let us come to the crux of the real problem. The problem is a question of terms, the term is Wilmington College, and the term is a farce. This school should be renamed, "The City of Wilmington's Four-Year Extension of New Hanover High School."

Because a high school is what is being run here. High school facilities for high school students. The Pub in the afternoon looks like a National Disaster Area. The signs put up by the Student Senate were a waste of time and money. What the student Senate does not realize is that you can't expect college maturity from high school students.

There have been many complaints (so what else is new?) about the noise in the library. What do we need a library for? Very rarely does anyone come in to read or look up reference material (there are three or four rejects who sit upstairs each day and look studious—if you haven't got it, you can at least play the part). All we

By SALLI SEAHAWK

We finally opened our mouth—once too often. This time we feel as if we should make an apology. To Dr. Bishop and the French department, we are sorry that you didn't realize we were joking.

Teachers — to us — are pretty wonderful people. Other than our parents, it has been teachers who have been the largest influence in our lives.

It is true that not every teacher is a good teacher nor should every person who is teaching be in the teaching profession. But once we come to the college level of teaching, and speaking in particular about the teachers of Wilmington College, we have only found one teacher we have not thought was good. And he was a friend's teacher, who liked him and recommended him.

It is the teachers who form the core of this and any college. If we annoyed Dr. Bishop we only wish to say, in a form of apology, that we only wanted to take some notice of our teachers. We would like to add that if Wilmington College has anything at all working for her, it is her teachers.

But to go to another topic which we shall call trivial, but amusing. Walking on campus we found a note which must have been written to Mr. Noe. "Please don't give tickets, am getting that today."

Somewhere in Kenan is a place for a fire extinguisher with a Pepsi bottle half filled with water.

If you are looking for an inexpensive way to spend next weekend, don't forget the play, A Man for All Seasons. Admission is by activity cards. Mrs. Fitzgibbon and her cast have been hard at work since school began this quarter and they deserve your support.

Isn't the new rule and fine about littering on campus ridiculous? Just as we have been asked not to walk on the grass, we suppose this is a good rule too, although we ourselves do not make a habit of throwing trash on campus, we didn't suppose anyone else made a habit of using the campus for a trash can.

We haven't been about to find out if we won our bet about the number of people who voted in the Homecoming election, but we should be able to tell you in our next column.

needed is a new sign in front of the Library, "New Wing of the Student Services Building." Of course, more "Keep the Pub Clean" signs would have to be made, but what's a little expense? If the talk continues, perhaps the administration will remove the books and install refreshment stands. Then students would have a pleasant, comfortable atmosphere in which to complain, throw things on the floor, and be all-around Harry High Schoolers.

Yes, that is what is so marvelous about Wilmington College. The student body is always looking for room to expand.

It's Homecoming Again

It's Homecoming Week-end at last, and amid the festivities of dances, bon fires, and pep rallies is the most important event of all—the annual Homecoming basketball game. Surely everyone should be eagerly anticipating that event, planning to offer enthusiastic support to the team.

This year's game is with the Augusta College team, from Augusta, Ga. Last year, Wilmington emerged victorious in its bout with Augusta. However, in action earlier this season, the Seahawks bowed to Augusta. This defeat took place during the Thanksgiving Tournament at Asheville-Biltmore, and was the second game of the year for Wilco.

Now, the Seahawks plan revenge, and confess to being "out for blood" tomorrow night. Though Augusta is a fast-moving ball club, Wilmington is confident of victory. The Augusta team has only one tall player—the rest are about average for a college team. They have balanced scoring.

Because there have been no recent injuries, the 'Hawks are at their full strength. Butch Budd, who suffered an injury during the first game and was unable to participate in the previous game with Augusta, is back in the starting line-up.

After eight games on the road, the Seahawks are looking forward to playing on their home court. They are also looking forward to a large crowd of enthusiastic fans. Will they be disappointed in their latter desire? If Wilco's usual school spirit is any indication, changes are very good—that they will be disappointed. At this point, it is tempting to add a long tirade about the virtues of school spirit. Since it probably would not be read—and certainly not heeded—perhaps it will be just as effective to relay a brief message from the basketball team. They said that a good crowd and improved school spirit would help spur them on to victory.

Past Homecomings Are Remembered

By MARION LOFTUS

With Homecoming upon us, The Seahawk decided to take a look at past homecoming activities here at Wilmington College.

The first Homecoming in the College's history was held on January 31, 1959. Eve Rossen was elected the first queen, and music was provided by the Jetty Jumpers.

1962's Homecoming brought a bonfire at Legion Stadium, with the Continentals and the Embers playing at an informal dance in the Pub.

In 1963, a bonfire, pep rally, and street dance were held, with music by the X.L's. 1964's events included a semi-formal dance and hootenanny, as well as a "shipwreck" party. The Rebels and the Majestics played at the dance.

A variety show was among the activities for the 1965 program, and no one will forget the performance of the Embers and the Shirelles in February of 1966.

Frank Allen of the biology department remembers all the Homecomings as being "pretty enjoyable," and particularly remembers the bonfire held at Legion Stadium.

Doug Swink of the drama department commented "These dances seem to roll by after a while, just like the plays." He did add that they seemed to be getting better. Mrs. Helena Cheek, dean of women, pointed out that last year's dance in the Pub was terribly overcrowded. Many students agreed with her.

Vicki and Colin Shaw remarked that Wilco does not have "the facilities to handle such large crowds," and that the no-drinking rule hampered the enjoyment considerably.

Intramural Basketball Games Played

A new season of intramural basketball began January 10, with ten teams entered in the competition.

Teams consist of members of various clubs, fraternities, and student groups at Wilmington College. Teams for this year are: The Aces, The Collegiate Civitan, Pi Sigma Mu, Circle K, Sigma Phi Kappa, The Groggs, The Turkey Buzzards, The Draft Dodgers, The Unknowns, and The Draffees.

Four games are played every Monday and Wednesday night of the season in the college gym.

On Monday, January 23, The Draft Dodgers defeated Collegiate Civitan, and The Unknowns beat The Draffees, 47-45. Gary Holt was high scorer for The Unknowns with 21 points, while Sandy Dew led the Draffees with 14 points.

In the other two Monday night games, Jack Sheehan led Pi Sigma Mu to a 31-28 victory over Sigma Phi Kappa, and Jim Permenter's 21 points gave The Aces a 47-42 victory over Circle K. Wayne Kelum provided 11 points for the losers.

Wilco Wrestling Team Defeats St. Andrews

By WALTER HEALEY, JR.
Staff Sports Writer

The Wilmington College wrestling team put on an awesome display of power after trailing early in their match with St. Andrews College to defeat the Knights 26-13 for their sixth victory in a row and their seventh in eight meets January 24.

The Knights opened up a quick 8-0 lead after the first two matches before the 'Hawks came to life. Jim Morrissey and Roy Jones copied decisions to narrow the gap to 8-6 when Wilmington surged for four straight pins to ice the meet and their second victory over St. Andrews in a week.

In the opening match, 123 pound class, Dean Leake reversed his loss to Eddie Radford last week with a 6-3 win.

Ken King met Warren Maxon in the 130 pound match. He pinned King at the 4:03 mark and boost St. Andrews lead to 8-0.

The Seahawks rallied when undefeated Jim Morrissey took on Buz Rogers at the 137 pound level. Morrissey built up a 2-0 lead after the first two minutes with a double leg take down and built it to 4-0 with a switch with 1:51 to go. Rogers then scored a point with an escape leaving the final score at 4-1, closing the Knight lead to 8-3.

At the 145 pound class Roy Jones held on for a 9-8 victory over John Bartlett which narrowed the Seahawks deficit to 8-6.

the 'Hawks an 11-8 lead which 59 second pin over Ed Minnich in their 152 pound match.

Hudson came out like a ball of fire as he collected two points for a take down and followed it with his pin, giving the 'Hawks an 11-8 lead which they never relinquished.

First year man Bob Elliot pinned Rick Reynolds in 3:34, to boost the Seahawk lead to 16-8.

Reynolds took a 1-0 lead after a minute and three seconds because of a penalty but Elliot pulled a reversal for two points and followed it up with a pin a minute later.

Paul Baker (W) who now has won eight straight matches, took on Jack Laponte in the 167 pound class. Baker moving cautiously for the first minute took Laponte in the 167 pound class. Baker moving cautiously for the first minute took Laponte down for a 2-0 lead with a minute gone by and quickly followed with a pin after a minute and a half, pushing the Seahawks to a 21-8 lead.

In their winning streak the Seahawks have knocked off Methodist College twice, 39-0 and 41-0, Guilford 21-14, N. C. Wesleyan 23-6, and St. Andrews twice, 24-13 and 26-13.

WHY

There's more than fabric superiority in Gant. In addition, "needled-into the warp and woof of every Gant shirt"—there's flair-fit show—three vital inherent factors that make all the difference when a man wears a Gant.

We chose Gant because they take shirt making seriously. They're hard to please (like we are) when it comes to fit of collar, its roll, its profile—how much it shows above the suit collar. They're fastidious about the way the body of the shirt drapes and folds. All must integrate to achieve that viable ingredient which gives comfort and aplomb. In substance, Gant shirts are keyed to the discerning tastes of well groomed men who appreciate quality. These men are our customers.

High School Students To Visit Campus For 'College Night' Activities February 9

February 9 has been set as the date for the second Tri-County College Night Program.

High School juniors and seniors from Pender, Brunswick, and New Hanover Counties have been invited to Wilmington College. These students, along with their parents, will have the opportunity to gain information concerning college aid, finances, admission, and any other factors they might wish to know.

Present to answer student's questions will be admissions officers from North Carolina colleges, as well as some out-of-state college officers. There has been a tentative acceptance from the Director of Guidance Services of the State Department.

A committee is currently working on the project of College Night. Members of the committee from Wilmington College are Mrs. Helena R. Cheek, Thomas P. Brown, J. Marshall Crews, and David Warner. Mrs. Ethel Booth and Mrs. Pat Wentz, Mrs. Kathleen Barnes of New Hanover County, and Mrs. W. C. Blackmoore of Pender County are also members of the committee.

A program has been planned for the afternoon session. Guidance Counselors and directors from high schools of five counties other than New Hanover, Brunswick, and Pender will also be present. At this time, the counselors will hear a talk on the topic of "What the Guidance Counselor Needs to Know."

That night, each high school student will visit with personnel from the three colleges of his choice, during 25 minute periods. The fourth period will be devoted to an investigation of a fourth choice college, or going back to a college previously visited.

The College Night program will be held in three of the Wilmington College buildings—Kenan, Library, and Student Services. According to Mr. Warner, approximately four to five hundred people are expected. Mr. Warner noted the success of last year's College Night, attributing it to the full co-operation of the faculty, administration, and Student Government.

He said, "I hope all the (Wilmington College) students will make these high school students feel as much at home as possible."

Smith To Speak In Lecture Series

Howard K. Smith, ABC's news commentator, will be the next speaker in the faculty lecture series, speaking on March 16.

Following Mr. Smith on April 12 will be Dr. Gabriel Ofiesh, retired Army colonel, who is Professor of Education and Director of the Center for Education Technology at the Catholic University in Washington, D. C.

Speaking on May 15 will be Dr. H. A. Gleason, Jr., the professor of linguistics at the Hartford Seminary Foundation. He is the Author of Linguistics and English Grammar and An Introduction to Descriptive Linguistics.

Pi Sigma Mu Fraternity recently completed a successful Rush Week, gaining 13 pledges. This pledge class is the largest one since Winter Quarter of 1965.

"The new pledges have given a new life to Pi Sigma Mu; they will add to the life of the fraternity," says fraternity brother Red Douglas.

Under the leadership of pledge-master Nelson Allen, the pledges are training to become outstanding brothers of Pi Sigma Mu. They are learning the aspects of the fraternity and fraternity life.

The weekend of January 21, the fraternity was visited by James Farlow, past Archon of Pi Sigma Mu. He was home on leave from the Air Force OTS.

Cape Fear Exhibition Begins In Kenan

The fifth annual Lower Cape Fear Exhibition began Monday in Kenan Hall.

Claude Howell, head of the art department, began this show to "help raise the cultural standards in Southeastern North Carolina," he said. He thought, "The College would be the logical place to do this."

The media for the show will be paintings in any medium, prints, drawings, and sculpture.

Each artist was able to enter a maximum of four works, only two of which could be in one medium. Work shown in any public exhibition before 1964 was not eligible for the show.

All persons living in, or a native of, the lower Cape Fear area, including the counties of New Hanover, Brunswick, Pender, Onslow, Columbus, Bladen, Sampson, Robeson, Duplin, Cumberland, and Carteret were eligible to enter works.

The jury for the show is Leonard White, head of the art department, Meredith College and President of the Associated Artists of North Carolina.

Mr. White gave a lecture Tuesday, January 31 in the Kenan lecture room on "The State of Art in North Carolina."

There is a 75 dollar first prize for painting and sculpture and a 50 dollar second prize in this class. For graphics there will be a 50 dollar first prize and a 25 dollar second prize.

"There is a slightly more professional attitude towards painting by having a juried show," commented Mr. Howell. He added, "There is much more honor to be in a juried show."

The College will encourage the sale of work. Prices will be on the label of the paintings. The College will retain a commission of ten per cent.

The show will be open only on week days.

Don't Be A Stagnate, Attend And Support College Activities

Cheerleaders Wear New Uniforms

Fall Quarter, 1966, brought several innovations in the Wilmington College Cheerleading Squad. With Miriam Taylor as head, the squad includes the following other members: Sherry Lackey, Lana Kay Lewis, Linda Lanier, Maxine Fladd, Judy Auir, and Joyce Pelland.

New uniforms are being worn by the cheerleaders this year. The uniforms, which the cheerleaders consider more on a college level, are one-piece green suits, monogrammed in gold. Matching megaphones and pom-poms complete the new outfit.

This year's cheers are also new. They are mechanical cheers—short and simple—and easy for the student body to learn and offer responses.

The signs, giving the time and place of games, are also the work of the cheerleaders. The cheerleaders will sponsor trips to some of the out-of-town games. During Homecoming, they were present at the pep rally, bon fire, and will be at the game.

Language Department Plans Publication

The Language Department is raising funds for the publication of the second issue of "Babel," a literary magazine.

The first issue was published last summer under the direction of Dr. Lloyd Bishop, and contained articles written by various instructors in the language department, as well as excerpts from outstanding term papers submitted by students.

"The quality of the review," said Dr. Bishop, "has received an enthusiastic response from linguists throughout the country and Latin America."

"Babel" is one of the few literary writings put out by an undergraduate language department. This type of thing is usually undertaken by large colleges and universities.

The second issue, also under the direction of Dr. Bishop, will be expanded to include articles on pedagogy. It may also contain articles contributed by other instructors at other colleges. The student contributions will not be included in this issue.

Moore Urges Students To Apply For Jobs

Governor Moore has urged college students interested in State government to apply for the 1967 Summer Internship Program.

In announcing the 1967 program, the governor stated that 25 North Carolina college students will be selected to participate in the 11-week program. Students will attend an orientation program and then work for 10 weeks in selected State departments while attending evening seminars on the campus of North Carolina State University.

To be eligible, students (1) must have satisfactorily completed three years of college, (2) must be residents of North Carolina, and (3) must currently be enrolled in a college or university either within or outside the State.

The State Internship Program will begin June 6 and continue through August 18, 1967. Students will be paid $75.00 a week while employed.

Governor Moore stated that he had again asked the Institute of Government to be responsible for administering the internship program. The Institute has been participating in the program since it was established in 1962. Students will be selected for the program by a committee that includes the State Personnel Director and prominent professors of political science teaching in North Carolina colleges and universities.

Students interested in applying for the Internship Program may secure application forms from college placement offices, departments of business, government, history or political science in North Carolina colleges and universities, local offices of the North Carolina Employment Security Commission, and the North Carolina State Personnel Department.

Applications must be mailed to the Institute of Government, Chapel Hill, before February 15.

Try-Outs Planned For "Cat And The Canary"

Wilmington College Theatre and Thalias announce try-outs for "Cat and the Canary" which will be held in Thalian Hall on February 13 and 14, beginning at 8:00 p.m.

"Cat and the Canary" opened in New York at the National Theatre on February 7, 1922, and enjoyed a tremendous success. It is best described as a mystery melodrama and ranks alongside "Ten Little Indians" as the theatre's best "whodunits."

It is replete with such mystery ingredients as the midnight reading of a will, a beautiful heiress, creaking shutters, grabby relatives, concealed panels, a lost necklace, and corpses.

"Cat and the Canary" calls for a cast of ten, four women and six men. Production of this third offering for the season is scheduled for March 31 and April 1 and 2.

Those wishing to help out in any backstage capacity are cordially invited to attend these try-outs.

Practice Rooms Aid Music Students' Work

"A major improvement for the music department," said applied music student Cindy Hardee in speaking of the practice rooms located in the music department area in Kenan.

"We're thankful that we have them," continued Cindy, but . . . "They ought to get them fixed," finished music student Sharon Blake.

Music student Terry Wortley continued with the one of the main complaints, "they are not very well soundproofed. In fact, they are not soundproof."

The pianos could be improved, stated music student Paul Roderick.

The practice rooms may be used by anyone on campus, and are supposed to be used by the music students. Since anyone taking any form of music lessons at the college are assigned to six hours of practice for each lesson, the practice rooms help students who would not be able to practice at home.

Music student Kenny Denny says, "I know that I can do what I want to do here in the line of practicing." They do give you privacy," added Kenny.

Music students are assigned to rooms with a certain time, but anyone may use these rooms if they are not occupied.

During certain parts of the day, the rooms are overcrowded, and "you have to stand in line to get into a practice room," stated Lloyd Hudson, head of the music department, "but at other times there is no one."

The music department is already short of the number of practice rooms they would like to have. Mr. Hudson feels that eight practice rooms would be a minimum number of rooms that the department should have.

The pianos in the rooms were bought used. "It is our hope," stated Mr. Hudson, "to replace them gradually."

But, despite their faults, the practice rooms, as Sharon stated, "give people the facilities to practice."

Book Shows Reader Action

The home of the new generation of artists, writers and rebels, and the heart of new "Bohemian" activity is New York's East Village, a locale geographically bounded by Third Avenue, the East River, 14th Street and Houston Street. The New Bohemia by John Gruen is a sometimes shocking documentary guide to this underground quarter and its denizens, to be published in paperback by Grosset & Dunlap, Inc. The book is illustrated with atmospheric photographs by Fred W. McDarrah.

The New Bohemia takes the reader to where the action really is. It is a colorful portrait in words and pictures of the swinging experiments in art, music, dance, poetry, and life that takes place in the uncensored center of Happenings, The Fugs, cafes and coffeehouse theatres, underground movies and The Little Magazines. It is a revealing look at the use and abuse of drugs and such communal love cults as the Kerista Group. John Gruen has interviewed New Bohemia's leading inhabitants, studied the motives of the people who are on the scene and the masterpieces and trash they have created, and has evaluated the repercussions of their artistic and ethical experimentation.

FIRE GUTS FRAT HOUSE

FIRE RUINS PI SIGMA MU HOMECOMING

Pi Sigma Mu lost its fraternity house in a general alarm fire. The fire occurred on Saturday night, February 4.

Firemen arrived on the scene, at 719 Market Street, soon after 10:00 p.m. The Fire Department requested the assistance of off-duty firemen in extinguishing the rapidly spreading blaze.

A large crowd of people—some sorrowful, some sympathetic, and some just curious—gathered to watch the fire sweep through the once beautiful, spacious two-story house. Cars were blocked from the area by the police.

As the last night of the long Homecoming week-end, the night of the fire found the fraternity house deserted to a large extent.

However, a few brothers were there, as was Mrs. Herring, the fraternity house mother.

When the fire started, the brothers who were present, with the help of National Guardsmen and part of the gathering crowd, removed as much furniture and clothing as possible. But, the fire spread too quickly for everything of value to be removed. Since many of the brothers lived in the fraternity house, they suffered personal losses.

Neighboring lawns were used to keep the clothing and furniture, as it was removed from the lawn of the fraternity house. Many neighbors offered to store the items for the fraternity. These offers were refused, however, because a van was donated to haul away all the furniture and clothing.

The fraternity brothers saw many hours of hard work literally "go up in smoke", as they watched their house burn. They had resided in a house at Market Street and Princess Place Road until last summer, when they moved into the ill-fated house at 719 Market Street.

Ironically, their old Fraternity house was razed by fire several days before their present one burned. The first fire however, was set by the Fire Department. It was part of a training program for novice firemen.

The latter fire began in the attic, but a definite cause of the fire is still undetermined.

Godwin States Concern About Student Conduct

"I would like to express my concern over the student conduct during Homecoming activities," stated Greg Godwin, student body president during an assembly February 8.

The conduct of a small group of students created problems for the entire student body.

The May Dance may be cancelled for a lack of chaperones. If the May Dance is held it probably will not be held off campus as planned.

The parking for the May Dance will have to be policed to prevent drinking which is a violation of state laws and also college regulations.

The policing would also have to prevent littering which is against school rules and which was very wide spread during Homecoming activities taking place on campus.

It is possible that future Homecoming activities will not have a Thursday or Friday night dance. "Does this give you a result of the Homecoming activities," questioned Greg.

Greg explained what caused all the trouble. "The attendance at Thursday's bonfire showed a lack of student interest in Homecoming activities. Intoxication went far beyond reasonable bounds at the dance, and the grounds were littered with beer cans and a varied assortment of bottles."

"Friday night's dance was an improvement," stated Greg, "but the littering again went beyond reasonable bounds."

"Saturday night was a nightmare for some of our chaperones." Some of our students were rude to the dance committee and chaperones. Others were disturbing a hotel guest upstairs," Greg continued.

It seems that several students had rented a room upstairs in the hotel to have a private party. After several complaints Chief Williamson, of the Wrightsville Beach police department, and the hotel manager asked Dean Thomas P. Brown and Dean Helena Cheek to go upstairs with them to prevent any of our students from being arrested.

"That is the only reason the deans went upstairs and ordered the students out of the rooms. I think our deans' efforts to help the students says a great deal in our favor," said Greg.

Greg concluded by publicly apologizing to the deans and the other chaperones for "they trouble they were caused."

Assembly Hears B. Frank Hall

Dr. B. Frank Hall spoke to a Wilmington College assembly February 8 on the topic of "What We Should Get in College, Inside and Outside of Classes."

"If college were no more than an interval between the time you were under parental supervision and the time before you were making a living, college is not worth it," he said.

"Classes are not propaganda tools," he said. "The real purpose of class is to give you an opportunity to exercise your own ability to think, and learning the methods of thinking for yourself."

"Ideally what college is for is to make sense out of your life, to give it direction, and to provide you with tools to make your life successful."

"College ought to give you the wisdom to distinguish between the now and the tomorrow."

College also means the growth of friendships, "learning to like, to live with, and get along with people."

Dr. Hall concluded, "College can give you the disciplines of self, a keen mind, a heart at peace, the miracle of human relationships, and whether it does or not is simply up to you."

Fine Arts Committee To Present Film Today

Mein Kampf, a chilling but fascinating documentary, will be presented tonight by the Fine Arts Committee in the lecture room of Kenan at 8 p.m. Admission to the film is free.

This film is a historic review of Hitler's attempt at world conquest. Mein Kampf was written and edited by Erwin Leiser mainly from film footage taken from secret Nazi archives.

The film is narrated by Claude Stephenson. Mein Kampf was awarded a prize at the Fourth International Film Festival in San Francisco.

In the film Leiser traces the history of the Hitler regime back through the first World War and its revolutionary consequences in both Germany and the Soviet Union. Leiser explains both what happened and why it happened.

Time Magazine has said, "To see this film, to endure it, may well seem to men of conscience a social duty and a moral obligation."

The film contains, says Time, "a frightfully adorable snapshot of little Adolf in rompers . . . An aerial photograph of Auschwitz extermination camp . . . Frame after frame full of German men and women radiant with uncritical adoration of the man who, by 1945, had caused the deaths of 50 million people . . ."

Collegiate Civitan Plans Wrestling Meet

Members of the Collegiate Civitan Club has challenged Circle K members to a wrestling match.

The club feels that this will be an activity that will accomplish a number of things. It will provide an opportunity for the two service organizations on campus to compete on a friendly basis. At the same time, it may stimulate some of the other student groups to also engage in some on-campus activities.

It was suggested that this exhibition match be held as a preliminary to one of the regular varsity matches.

Civitan Club members who are interested in participating are Eric Staton, John Hunt, Mike Michel, James Griffin, Harris Haskett, Jr., and Danny Grant.

If the Circle K decides to rise to the challenge, the meet will probably be held on February 23, before the varsity meet at 8 p.m.

John Hunt has also suggested that the Civitan Club challenge the faculty men to a basketball game, to be played as a preliminary to the last home game which is scheduled for February 18. John had noted that there had been a number of faculty men working out in the gym, and he suggested that this would be a good opportunity for a friendly game.

Editorials:

Who Is The Child?

Silence. The big bad man is standing near. Sh . . h . . sh. His name is accreditation, and he has something the College desires . . . but if anything should go wrong . . . Be careful, he may snatch away what the College almost has.

If anything derogatory should happen, remember Brazil, and now Homecoming, whispers begin because everyone is fearful of speaking. And, no one wants there to be a bad picture of Wilmington College, do they?

Why can't there be a bad picture of this college? Not necessarily bad, but why can't people in the surrounding area begin to see that there are not just good Sunday School children on this campus?

The students on this campus are not children. To use an old argument, if a boy is to be drafted, he is not a child; and many of the male students on this campus are of the age to be drafted. Some already have served their time in the armed services. A child is not sent to the Army. Many students are married and have the responsibilities of a family. This is not a game for children!

If a child does wrong, one of his toys might be taken away from him. The students on this campus must be thought of as children, they might not be able to have a May Dance. The question now arises: Who is the child? The student or the administration?

We are not saying that we do not want the school to become accredited. We do, and anything we can do to help, we would be glad to do. But some middle point must be reached.

They've Done It Again

On March 21 students will register for spring quarter classes. March 22 will be the first day of classes for spring quarter. On March 23 the Easter recess will begin. Need any more be said?

What is the purpose of having students return from quarter break for one day of classes? What are the teachers going to accomplish in that one day?

Many students live outside of North Carolina. These students will be traveling as much as 500 miles to go home over quarter break—and then will have to return here for two days. Isn't this rather ridiculous?

Why couldn't a system have been worked out so that exam break and the Easter recess came together. This would be so much more logical. If someone had looked at a calendar and realized that Easter came in March this year instead of April perhaps this colossal foolishness would not have happened, but who are we to argue with the administration?

So This Was Homecoming

The "best Homecoming ever" failed. This failure cannot be blamed on any one person or group of people, but must be examined fully.

The activities of Thursday night included a bonfire, pep rally, and dance. The bonfire was good . . . at least the actual fire was. The Engineers Club did a fine job with this. But what good are activities if students are not there to participate? A group of approximately 50 to 70 students took part. Here the failure can be blamed on students.

Friday night went well, on the surface. There was a good participation from students, the dance floor was not crowded, and the band was good.

But, as on Thursday night, after the people left, there remained litter, mainly in the form of beer cans and bottles. Drinking on campus is forbidden. Again the students must take the blame, even though it may have been a small percentage of students.

The ball game was excellent, but too many students skipped the game in favor of other things . . . and the game is the main reason for Homecoming. Could there be a Homecoming without a ball game?

And now for Saturday night. First, the band was late—and also, not very good. For this, the dance committee we feel must take the blame. Also, the dance committee should have realized the number of people who were going to attend this dance, and should have seen that a larger "ballroom" be provided. Granted, there were, it has been reported, a large number of people at this dance who were in no way students of the college. How this happened has no explanation.

And then we have the other incident. The one about which so many rumors have flown that no accurate explanation can be given, and we shall not attempt one. This incident has only been blown up too grandly and is receiving too much attention, which it need not have gotten in the beginning.

So this was Homecoming. What will it be like next year?

Letter Decries Student Body Disunity, Apathy

The hue and cry that has been raised by both faculty and students alike as a result of the Homecoming festivities this past weekend can and must be examined from two viewpoints.

The students of Wilmington College were indignant at the idea of the close supervision deemed necessary by the administration, particularly regarding the events of Saturday evening. We were not pleased with the band's lack of punctuality and their poor performance—it was admittedly a poor show. I have heard several opinions; some I agree with, others I prefer to disregard. But this is all I have heard—opinions.

There are approximately 1200 students in attendance at Wilmington College this quarter. Out of this figure, how many of you take an active part in the running of student activities? Even better, how many of you even take an active interest? Many of the students are discontented with the manner in which the administration handles student affairs. These students feel we are not being allowed the freedom we should have as college students. I also hear talk about a lack of "school spirit" on the part of the students. Why?

The solutions to all these problems which seemingly plague our campus lie within the desire for the students to reasonably and logically assess the situation and then actively do something about it. We can talk all we want, but until there is an active participation and support on these issues from all the students, working as a college community—and that is what we are—will we be able to achieve the recognition we seek as mature students?

The Dance Committee succeeded in providing excellent entertainment on Thursday and Friday night. Saturday night was an unfortunate disaster. But is this the fault of the Dance Committee? We pay a quarterly fee of $16 which is supposed to provide for entertainment at school functions. How many students knew who was playing before the posters were put up? How many of you made suggestions as to groups you would like to have on campus? Something else: how many students know exactly what the money given by you is used for?

I am in full agreement with the idea that we are not treated in an adult manner; but there must be a reason for this. As long as we function as 1200 separate individuals, rather than as the student body of Wilmington College, the situation is going to remain status quo. We have a Student Government that will work for us; if we support them and make it known that we feel that there are some reasonable changes to be made. The Student Government can not accomplish this alone; it must have the backing of the students; and by the same breath, if they are wrong, they should be criticized.

Finally, to the administration. We cannot be expected to act as mature adults unless we are introduced to a mature environment. The atmosphere engendered on campus lacks that quality. Granted we are a young school; granted we have no dormitories at present; granted we have been compared to a high school. This school is going to grow, but will the student body and the administration be able to grow along with it? What has the faculty, and in particular, the administration, done to counteract this situation and give the student body a reason to assume a more mature stance. I honestly believe that given the opportunity, and closer cooperation between the faculty, the student government, the administration, and most of all, the students, this campus can achieve the mature independence it needs so much.

As long as you the students just sit back and view the passing situation with a complacent disgust, nothing is going to be accomplished. Homecoming weekend is past history, students, but what about the future?

Mike Gordon

Defines Limits

There are noticeable improvements in the general appearances of the Pub which will hopefully spread and grow. We still have a vast potential for improving general appearances.

Have many people noticed that the Pub halls were painted during the break and would you believe you wouldn't believe it now? Is it so difficult to refrain from putting feet on these walls?

I am probably well reputed as the mud in the stick after last Wednesday's assembly. I am sorry that some fraternity members took unintended offense over a brief mention of the unfortunate loss of their house. The saddest reaction came from people who want to place themselves above student body problems. To clear up one impression I will quickly state that I enjoy a party as much as any of you; however, we are all social creatures and the very definition of our society implies acceptable limits which are preferably a happy compromise between our desires and the best interest of the student body.

With or without a strengthened constitution your President is instituting a policy of student policing backed by the Student Judicial Council to be responsible for extreme conduct or abuses. Please aid in this policy with cooperation especially at social functions where you will most likely find the parking policies. Seem rough? Larger schools have this policy, and it is now necessary here.

Please review the regulations published in the catalogue, the last issue of this paper, and your handbook. I don't believe you will find these regulations unreasonable, and we can hope they never become unreasonable.

Complaints of an inadequate student government accomplish nothing. Complaints are not action. Let's get behind your government and get some action, good them if necessary. This seems an excellent time to unite and install an honor system suggested to your Senate by Carol Trebing. Your Judicial Council is gaining strength through action, but still we need changes and reforms.

That "clean up the campus" campaign still needs some steam behind it. It keeps floundering in the senate and could be done better by the students individually. Let's encourage each other and see what we can accomplish especially in eliminating cigarette butts.

Squawks

By SALLIE SEAHAWK

All right, we shall speak . . . not that we ever remain silent. On topic, or rather, one of our topics for today is student discontent. We've forgotten, or rather we are going to forget, the term student stagnant for today.

Since Homecoming we have heard nothing but griping. This griping could be called a very good indication of student discontent. But griping is not going to get us any place. We can complain all we want, we can offer solutions—but these solutions are offered in the Pub, in classrooms, and in circles of friends, but in no case where the solutions could be put into action.

Sure, we would all like a good, college-type campus. Many of us here at the college are here for various reasons, financial, parents, location, etc. We all, in coming to college, wanted something, something that may almost be termed undefinable. Many students have expressed the belief that Wilmington College is great, but . . . we are in college for more than just "book learning," and to most everyone here, this college lacks what

If you can think of a solution to our problem, which instead of growing better, has gotten worse, please write a letter. All letters must be signed; but if you wish, we will leave your name off. You may give your letter to any staff member or leave it in The Seahawk box located in the main office. Anyone in the office will be glad to tell you where the box is.

Sort of old news, but 379 people voted in the Homecoming election. Yes, we lost some money on that. Heaven only knows what did it.

Mad Mouseketeer

In reference to the last letter to the editor appearing in The Seahawk, I would like to make some additional suggestions which may have been omitted in the New Hanover High School Extension Program at Wilmington College.

Seemingly every quarter which passes, we are plagued by a few more non-collegiate rules and regulations for which are becoming expensive gestures. Might I mention before and in restatement to some, that it is not my intention to discriminate any one individual because the faculty must be somewhere among the masses.

Now, might I suggest that we have some real regulations. I think some assets to our campus would be school bells, homeroom period, lunch tickets, recesses, lunch permits, fire drills, hall passes, notes from "Mommy" when we are in eighth period penalties for discipline, traffic boys with cute little shiny badges to guide us to class so that we will not harm the "pretty brown grass," and last, but certainly not least, let us have "Dial-a-Dy" bring us to school so that we don't have to arrive at 8:30 a.m. for our 11:30 class and try to find a convenient parking place at Risk and Crisis Junior High School when our faculty and senior parking lots are sparsely occupied.

In a few final comments, and certainly the purpose for this letter, the question arises: When is Wilmington College ever going to grow up? How can anyone place the blame for immaturity on students when they are subjected to this kind of atmosphere? Furthermore, what measures can the students possibly take for their parents when all of the opinions of student government members are overruled by the more authoritative?

I say, when the Micker Mouse is taken out of Wilmington College, then can the students assume their roles as adults.

A Mouseketeer

School Spirit Still Lacking

English students are taught to use the introduction of a work to state the purpose in writing the work. To comply with this instruction, we offer the following statement: Due to the apparent absence of pride and respect for Wilmington College athletic functions it seems imperative that an editorial be written in an effort to alleviate the problem. In other words, this editorial is another one of those dull, dry, editorials about lack of school spirit.

Having been warned of the topic, no one has to read further of me, (1) is an enthusiastic fan at Wilco's athletic events; (2) is not enthusiastic—or even a fan—and has no intention of becoming one; or (3) is "fed up" with editorials about school spirit. To the first of these groups, we say, "Congratulations!"; to the second, we "borrow" a phrase from Ann Landers, and say "ten lashes with a wet noodle!" (Or perhaps more appropriately, "ten lashes with a sweaty tennis shoe lace!"); and to the third group, we offer our sympathy, but continue with our original plan and write the editorial, anyway.

In the last sports editorial, an appeal was made to the students of Wilmington College, asking them to support the Seahawks in their Homecoming bout with Augusta College. Actually, there was a fairly large crowd at the game, but the crowd's enthusiasm was seriously lacking. Some of the clubs sat together as a group and obviously supported the team. But excluding the clubs and several interested individuals, the bleachers seemed to be a body of mute manikins. Is it too much to expect a response to the cheerleaders' line, "All for the Seahawks stand up and holler!" With a little assistance, even manikins can stand up. How much assistance do Wilmington College students need?

Lack of enthusiasm on the part of some of the students did not seem to handicap the Seahawks, and they lived up to their vow to avenge their earlier defeat at the hands of Augusta. From the beginning of the game, the Seahawks led the scoring. They finished triumphant by a 87-60 score. Frank Bua netted 20 of the Seahawks' points to be high scorer for Wilmington. Special recognition goes to Jerry Martin, whose excellent performance was a large factor in the Seahawk victory.

As already stated, the Seahawks lived up to their vow—they won the game. However, we, the students, failed to keep our half of the bargain. We did not offer really enthusiastic support. Fortunately, the basketball season is not quite over. We still have time to redeem ourselves. We can prove we are living, breathing humans, not mute, lifeless manikins. We can vow today to be at the next game and to cheer for our team. We can. Will we?

Wrestling Team Defeats North Carolina Wesleyan

The wrestling team started the homecoming weekend off with a bang as they copped seven of their matches against North Carolina Wesleyan to gain a convincing 7-6 victory over the Bishops.

Ed Radford won the 123-pound class by forfeit.

Ken King, in the 130-pound class, started the ball rolling for the Hawks as he pinned Steve Smith, Wesleyan, in 2:18.

Morrissey, in the 137-pound division, was like a ball of fire against Harry Rosserman, Wesleyan. Jim took a 2-0 advantage after 29 seconds and a minute later had Rosserman pinned. Morrissey is the only undefeated Seahawk in all 12 weights.

At the 142-pound level Roy Jones, Wilmington, decisively defeated Griffin, Wesleyan, 8-0. After 13 seconds Jones had a take down and built his lead to 4-0 with a switch with 5:43 left.

Co-captain Dick Hudson, Wilmington, had some trouble with Skip Gilbert, Wesleyan, as he defeated the Bishop 9-4, in their 132-pound match.

Hudson took a 2-0 lead after the first period on a take down and scored for a reversal. Gilbert then switched for two points cutting Hudson's lead to 6-2 going into the final stanza.

Bob Elliot, Wilmington and Skip Dickinson, Wesleyan, put on the best match of the afternoon as Elliot decisively defeated the Bishop 5-2, in the 160-pound class.

Paul Baker, Wilmington, who has lost only one match this season in 13 outings, was unscored upon for the eleventh time as he defeated Matt Bailey, Wesleyan, 7-0, at the 137-pound level.

Baker had two take downs and an escape plus riding time to put the Seahawks up 27-0.

Co-captain Tom Simmons, Wilmington won in the 177-pound class 9-7 to Whit Blackstone, Wesleyan.

Trailing 8-4 going into the final period Simmons scored with an escape with 2:56 left and added a take down with 1:48 remaining to close the Bishop's lead to 8-7.

Bill Griffin, Wilmington, was defeated 5-3 in the unlimited division by Leon Anderson Wesleyan.

"This was a good meet," said Spoles afterwards. "Some of the matches were close and a couple of the boys were a little tired towards the end but on the whole they did a real good job."

The Bishops are 4-4 on the season.

The Seahawks then completed the Homecoming festivities with a brilliant 25-12 victory over Guilford College.

The 'Hawks, who defeated the Quakers earlier in the season 21-14, had little trouble disposing of them tonight.

Ed Radford (W), started the ball rolling. In his 123 pound match it took him 5:52 to pin Gary Flora (G).

Ken King (W), was decisively by Perry Benbow (G) at the 130 pound level 8-4, to cut the Hawk lead to 5-3 but that was the closest the Quakers were to come.

Jim Morrissey (W) pinned Mark Craigie (G) in 3:13, of their 137 pound match.

In the 145 pound clash, Roy Jones (W), pinned Mike Stillwell (G), in 2:39 to boost the Wilmington lead to 15-3.

Paul Baker (W), decisively defeated Vaughn Vance (G), in the 167 pound class, 4-0.

Co-captain Tom Simmons (W), drew with Chris Carry (G), in their 177 pound match, 5-5.

Basketball Season Nears End

The Wilmington College basketball quintet is near the end of its poorest seasons since the sport was inaugurated into the College. The Seahawks as of February were 7-16 on the season dropping four of their last six contests.

In the past six games Coach Brooks' squad has lost two games to Pembroke, which is on a 12 game tear, to Atlantic Christian and Campbell, while knocking off St. Andrews and upsetting Augusta.

The basketball team came through with a clutch performance when they upset Augusta College during Homecoming weekend.

The Seahawks who were on the short end of a 75-52 score up in the Asheville-Biltmore tourney against the Jaguars were sparked by the play of Jerry Martin, who dumped in 14 points hitting on 6-10 shots from the floor. Martin helped the 'Hawks build up a 45-32 halftime margin as a near capacity crowd cheered on the action.

Frank Bua, the Seahawks leading scorer with a 20-plus average, topped the 'Hawks with 20 points as Wilmington received a fine all around game from the entire quintet.

The major factor in the game was a combination of fine shooting, 35 out of 70, and hustle, as a team.

Pembroke was 5-6 when they started clicking as a team to rattle off 12 straight victories but in their two meetings of the Seahawks the contest went down to the wire.

Joe Gallagher, a 6-8 Pennsylvania pivot, tallied 15 points and controlled both backboards in the first meeting which the Braves copped 71-64.

The Seahawks trailed at the half 36-32 but the Braves behind Carl Peed and Mike Heath upped their advantage to 61-54 late in the contest before the 'Hawks made a move. With 1:16 left the Seahawks trailed 65-61 but could draw no closer.

Frank Bua paced Wilmington with 17 points as Wayne King tallied 14, and Jim Hall 12.

In their second clash the Braves raced to a 38-28 halftime lead and went on to edge Wilmington 67-66.

The Seahawks just couldn't get unwound in the first half as Gallagher again controlled the boards. But the second half was all Wilmington.

Paced by King, who ripped the nets for 18 points, and Hall, who swished through 19 points, the Seahawks close the gap to 59-56 with 5:10 remaining. Hall cut the margin to one and with 2:50 to go tied the game with another jumper at 62-all. But with 59 seconds remaining Heath scored on a three point play to ice the game. Heath paced the Braves with 17 points, Gallagher added 16.

Atlantic Christian College opened up a ten point margin at the half and raced to a 108-82 victory over the Seahawks mainly behind the consistent shooting of Larry Jones and Bob Gilmore. Jones scored 22 and Gilmore 20 on the night.

Bua paced the Hawks with 21 points. Hall and Jerry Martin each connected for 13, and Butch Budd dumped in 12.

Campbell College put on a late surge, coupled with a hot team effort from the floor (55%), and dropped Wilmington 88-81.

The Seahawks raced to a 42-39 lead in the first half behind Hall and Jim Braxton but couldn't contain the Camels in the second half as Jim Marshbanks cut loose under the boards for 30 points as the Camels out-rebounded the Seahawks 53-23.

Braxton topped all 'Hawk scorers with 16 points and grabbed 13 rebounds. Hall connected for 16, Martin 14, King 12, and Budd 11.

On January 26 Butch Budd had his finest night of the year when the 6-4 hustling junior forward hit on 14 of 19 attempts from the floor and pulled down 15 rebounds to lead Wilmington to a 106-80 win over St. Andrews.

Budd connected on eight of eight in the first half to help give the Seahawks a 61-44 lead from which the Knights never recovered.

Budd led all scorers with 35 points. Bua dunked in 23 as Hall, King, and Martin each added 12.

Views Of Homecoming

YEA TEAM—Al Carrus beats his drums to lead a cheering section of the Homecoming basketball game. Al, unlike many Wilmington College students, attended the basketball game before going in the dance at the Blockade Runner following the Homecoming game. There is really no Homecoming without some sort of ball-game and the team, whatever sport it may represent, always wants support. (photo by Brindell).

Newman Calls Play Typical Performance

By EDWIN W. NEWMAN

Whom shall we pan?—the performers, or perhaps the audience? Both have responsibilities, you know.

It seems that on Friday night last there was a play performed at Thalian Hall, a play called A Man for All Seasons by Robert Bolt, a play which recounted certain events which might be regarded as significant in the life of Sir Thomas More, a man who existed in final confrontation with all temporal authority for the sake of satisfying the demands of the Self.

In a way, it was a typical performance for the Collegiate-Thalians—really not bad, in many respects; it featured the superlative talents of a handful of individuals who might be properly termed actors, but it also featured a number of players who could be neither heard nor understood. Among the former are John Ford, as Sir Thomas More; Randy Del Lago, who played King Henry VIII and who, unfortunately, allowed a crucial scene to falter in intensity; and Sam Garner, who had the task as the Common Man, to hold the play together and to convey the central meaning of the play. The latter need not be mentioned. And there were others, such as Al Carrus, who played the Spaniard Signor Chapuys; Tony Rivenbark, who played Archbishop Cranmer; Robert Wood, who played Chapuys' attendant; Frank Hall, who played Master Richard Rich; and Rosemary Green, who played Lady Alice Moore; all of whom demonstrated varying degrees of competency.

As everyone knows, Henry VIII wanted to divorce one wife in order to marry another, because he needed a male heir. Nothing, not even the Universal Church, could be allowed to stand in his way; those who opposed him could expect death as a reward. As for the Common Man, it is clear that for him there would never be any question of disputing the authority of King Harry, or anyone else, for that matter. All of the other characters in the play demonstrate in great measure their ability to be Common Men—to ignore or to transform the dictates of their own souls to allow authority to prevail and in order that they may be allowed to continue to exist. But Sir Thomas More is a Man, not only a man, but a man against complacent adjustment in its logical clarity and reassuring legality as opposed to the non sequiturs of his enemies (a situation typical of most persecutions which are carried out by the ambitious against the knowledgeable), but his moral courage in leaving falsehood earns him a place higher than that of a martyr. The implications of his stand transcend the mere historical context of the story; as the author says, "The main purpose of the play being to celebrate THE MAN; its essential action accords with the facts."

At one point, the Common Man, who appears as steward to More, boatman, publican, gaoler, and executioner, tells the audience that they, like himself and the insipid villain Master Richard Rich, will all die in bed; at the conclusion of the play, he remarks that it feels well to be alive and explicitly equates the audience with himself: it is easy to be a Common Man, to ignore the demands of the Soul (if, indeed, such demands exist in a Common Man) and to simply be a person, not really despicable, often likable, but culpable nonetheless.

But apparently no one in the audience Friday night resented being termed a Common Man; perhaps the people long ago had accepted the fact, or perhaps they simply were not listening. Perhaps it was just a bad night.

Optimists might hope that even the Common Man has at least the theoretical potentiality of becoming a Sir Thomas More; the audience Friday night did not show it. The essential communication between audience and players was not present, and it is probable that the audience may share the larger burden of guilt.

WORRIED—Tom McNair, chairman of the dance committee, was responsible for Homecoming. He and his committee tried, but they did not have the full success they or he anticipated, but less than one third of the blame rests on their heads. (photo by Brindell).

Fraternity Enjoys Homecoming

Homecoming certainly was a highlight of the quarter. It was well appreciated and put to good use at the Kappa house.

Friday night the Catalinas were great at school and a drop in at the house was featured. Saturday afternoon a concert-dance was held at the house featuring Greer Craig and the Wonders.

Sigma Phi Kappa was honored recently by the visit of Jim Mueller, the Pi Kappa Alpha representative from National Headquarters in Memphis, Tenn.

New pledges for this quarter are Bob Buck, Al Carrus, Duffie Hanafey, Gary Logan, and Hiram Tucker. The new pledge sweetheart is Miss Mary LeGwin. The pledge projects include construction of a large Bar-B-Que pit for outdoor cookouts and parties.

Sigma Phi Kappa is planning a Roaring Twenties Party later in the quarter. A boating excursion and beach party are also on the agenda.

Griffith Terms Constitution "Vague"

"It's in a bad way," stated senior Grady Griffith, chairman of the committee recently formed by the senate to rewrite the Wilmington College constitution.

Points Are Vague

"A number of points are very vague," he continued.

Greg Godwin, student body president, and Carol Trebing, student body vice president, both have felt that the constitution should be rewritten. Grady brought the matter up at the last Senate meeting.

In speaking about the vague points in the constitution, Grady mentioned that while the president has the power to appoint standing committees (he appoints the members of the Fine Arts and Dance committees), the constitution does not say if they are standing committees.

Constitution Conflicts

The constitution conflicts with the Senate's rules of procedure, and there are points needed for clarity.

It is vague on the points for impeachment. "It says nothing about officers being impeached for misconduct while in office," stated Grady.

Also the constitution is not very exact about the duties of the vice president, according to Grady.

"These are basically the main things," said Grady. "In other places it is just vague in working."

Change Proposed

"One point I feel should be changed is that I'd like to see the members of the judicial council chosen by the president of the student body and approved by the senate, rather than having them elected," concluded Grady.

"There are several loopholes in it," agreed Carol Trebing, vice president of the student body. "It is not the type of constitution that a student government that will have a function under dormitories and so forth can successfully be utilized."

No Fool-proof Method

She continued, "There is no fool-proof method of filling vacancies under this construction and there is no fool-proof of assuring judicial council jurisdiction over campus infractions."

"The present constitution," said student body president Greg Godwin, "does not seem to completely fill the needs of the students."

He added, "We don't define our responsibilities or powers very well. Most four year colleges have more definitive statutes and well established judicial rules."

"This college is large enough for the students to assume responsibilities for their own actions rather than placing this responsibility on the shoulders of the administrators. In the past administrative action coupled with a lack of student irresponsibility has resulted in numerous and well known discontent in the student body," said Greg.

Ready to Accept

"Most of us are ready and willing to accept the responsibility for our actions and it is hoped the construction of a new constitution will better define our general independence," he ended.

Members of the committee are Neil Brennecke, Cary Chadwick, Gaye Godwin, Kathy Joyner, Bunny Marshburn, Norberto Machiran, Linda Machiran, and Linda Rivenbark.

Collegiate-Thailians Announce Casting For Next Play

The Wilmington College Theatre and the Thailian Association will present "The Cat and the Canary" on March 31 and April 1 and 2, in Thailian Hall.

Hudson Sets "The Mikado" Performance

Gilbert and Sullivan's The Mikado will be presented by the College music department sometime during the third or fourth week in April, according to Loyd Hudson, head of the music department.

The chorus will present The Mikado on their spring tour, "but it is our intention to do it on the college campus also," said Mr. Hudson. "The place is uncertain. We are contemplating doing it in the round," he added.

Tryouts for the production will be at the end of March. "We may begin studying the choral parts prior to that," he stated.

The college chorus will present a concert, "Gloria" by Vivaldi on March 21 at the St. Paul's Lutheran Church. This program is open to the public.

Soloists for this will be Ann Darden, Gaye Newber, and Beverly Jurgensen. Sandra Willoughby will accompany the chorus and Frank Honey will participate at the organ.

The Top Twelve will sing for the Rotary District convention on March 6. On March 22 the chorus will sing for the Kiwanis Club.

This mystery melodrama premiered on Broadway 45 years ago this month and enjoyed a long run. Since then it has been revived constantly by the motion picture industry starting in 1927, and was last seen on the New York stage in 1965.

The plot opens with the family of Ambrose West attending the reading of his will at midnight, just 20 years after his death. Mr. West died, during his life, been rather strange and fearful that a touch of insanity ran in his family.

His castle-like home which overlooks a deep ravine is still maintained by his housekeeper, Mrs. Mallard, played by Virginia Sonny. It is she and Roger Crosby, the lawyer, portrayed by Tony Rivenbark, who greet the remaining relatives of Ambrose West.

These relatives are an assortment of cousins and nephews, all desirous of a share in the inheritance. Harr Blythe (Jack Gerock), Charles Wilder (George Deaton) and Paul Jones (Jeff Jefferay), all are arch rivals for Annabelle West (Dorothy Pastia).

Also thrown into the midst of this eerie household are two distant relatives, Susan Silsbury (Barbara Deaton) and Cecily Young (Chris Deasy). Adding to the mystery is the rumor that an escaped killer is loose in the neighborhood and is hunted by Hendricks, his keeper, played by Frank Hall.

According to his will, Annabelle West is made sole heir of his estate, but the will provides that if there is any indication of insanity, another will, provided for, should be opened and a different heir named.

From this point on the play is concerned with the efforts of the family to frighten Annabelle by murders, by tales of lunatics, and the like. Everyone, in turn, among the possible heirs is suspected but not until the final fall of the curtain is the extraordinary mystery solved. Even the family physician, Dr. Patterson (Billy Bullard), is a suspect.

"The Cat and the Canary" will be the third production for the Wilmington College Theatre and Thailians for this 1966-67 season.

Anne Fitzgibbon of the department of drama and speech will be technical director with Richard Thompson executing the sound. The set will be constructed by the following students of Wilmington College: Billy Alexander, David Wayne Barker, James Kenneth Cobb, William W. Cyphers, Jr., Chris Deasy, Wilbur L. Dixon, Robert Fales, Thompson Foy, Jack Gerock, Robert E. Hall, Frank Henry, Roy E. Jones, John Lewis, Gail O'Rourke, G. H. Poisson, Edward L. Radford, Rodney Shackelford, Thomas Simmons, Eugene Sue, Richard Thompson, and Doyle Whitfield.

Jack Lane will design the poster, and Doug W. Swink will be the director. Randy Del Lago will serve as stage manager, and Tina Forrester, the assistant stage manager.

School Opens Bids For New Buildings

Opening for bids for more than $2 million worth of new construction and renovations at Wilmington College was held February 21 in the lecture room of Kenan Hall.

Low base bidder in general contracting for the two-story library building was L. P. Cox Company at $664,244, followed by a joint bid by Godwin Building Company and Coastal Construction Company at $695,000, T. A. Loving Company of Goldsboro at $724,650, and Dickerson, Inc., at $515,200.

Low base bid for the two-story science building and Hoggard Hall renovations was $468,000 submitted jointly by Godwin Building Company and Coastal Construction Company, followed by L. P. Cox Co. at $474,130, Luther T. Rogers Inc. at $485,915, T. A. Loving Company at $489,500, and Dickerson, Inc., at $515,200.

In combination bids for the library and science buildings and Hoggard Hall renovations, L. P. Cox Co. was low base bidder at $1,134,174, followed by Godwin Building Co. and Coastal Construction Co., bidding jointly at $1,158,000, T. A. Loving Co. at $1,204,000, Boyd and Goforth of Charlotte at $1,204,000, Dickerson, Inc., of Monroe at $1,252,400, and Merit Construction Co. of Dunn at $1,387,525.

In combination base bids for library and science heating, Jordan-Blanton-Myers was low at $256,043, followed by Sneed Air Conditioning and Refrigeration at $259,570, Bolton Air Conditioning and Heating Co. of Raleigh at $261,110, Southerland Electrical and Construction Corp. of Jacksonville at $265,326, and Bullock Plumbing and Heating Co. at $268,300.

Low base bid among electrical contractors for the library building was A. B. Blake Electrical Contractors of Wilmington at $54,777, followed by Miller Building Corp. at $57,698, Electric Sales and Service at $58,445, Hodges Electric at $58,938, Cape Fear Electric at $59,111, and Watson Electrical Contractors at $67,236.

For the science building electrical job low base bidder was A. B. Blake Electrical Contractors at $52,777, followed by Cape Fear Electric Co. at $54,989, Electric Sales and Service at $56,995, Graves Electric at $59,498, Hodges Electric at $60,326, Watson Electrical Construction at $60,822, and Miller Building Corp. at $61,179.

In combination bids for electrical jobs for the library and science buildings, A. B. Blake Electrical Contractors was low at $106,577, followed by Miller Building Corp. at $113,600, Electrical Sales and Service at $114,225, Cape Fear Electric Co. at $114,900, Graves Electric Co. at $116,996, Hodges Electric at $119,284, and Watson Electrical Co. at $128,053.

Among elevator contractors submitting bids for the library building, Westbrook Elevator Co. of Danville was low at $10,984, followed by Otis Elevator of Atlanta at $11,698, and Dover Elevator of Greensboro at $11,951.

Low bid submitted for the science building elevator was $10,984 by Westbrook Elevator, followed by Dover Elevator at $11,576, and Otis Elevator at $11,829.

In combination bids for the science and library elevator jobs, Westbrook Elevator Co. was low at $21,968, followed by Dover Elevator at $23,527, Otis Elevator at $23,718, and Southern Elevator of Greensboro at $24,002.

An insufficient number of bids was received for library shelving, and for the science building and Hoggard Hall Laboratory Equipment Contract. Architect Leslie N. Honey said that these jobs would be re-advertised.

Architects for both Georgian-Design buildings are Boney and Dallard, McKim and Sawyer Associates, architects, both of Wilmington.

The two-story library building will be northeast of Kenan Hall on the campus, facing N. C. 132 and will have a total area of 58,751 square feet.

The first floor plan calls for a lobby, card catalogue area, circulation and work area, arts area, elevator, periodicals, documents, microprinting, reference office, typing room, catalogue offices, acquisition office, machines room, reading and storage, mechanical equipment room, boiler room, study rooms, faculty conference rooms, and storage and janitors' rooms.....

On the second floor of the library there will be a lobby, projection room, audio-visual room, about 20 student and study group areas, seminar rooms, rare books reading room, book stack areas, and lounges.

There will be ample space for 101,000 volumes in the library stacks and there will be a skylight through both floors.

A promenade will lead from the library building to the new science building as well as to other campus buildings.

The 39,327 square foot science building will be located north of the library building and northeast of the Kenan building.

On the first floor of the science building will be classrooms, seminar-lecture rooms, chemistry laboratories, chemistry auditorium, 13 offices, an elevator, and mechanical and boiler rooms.

The second floor of the science building will be composed of four chemistry laboratories, a balance room, five physics laboratories, six stock rooms, seminar rooms and offices, a physics auditorium, a darkroom, preparation room, count room, and mechanical rooms.

Highlighting the science building will be laboratories for research in nuclear physics, optics, and advanced organic studies.

Both the science and library buildings will have wheelchair ramps leading into the entrances. Hoggard Hall renovations will consist of changing the present chemistry facilities into biology workshops.

PLANNING—Members of the Freshman class plan their car wash. Freshman class members will be washing cars tomorrow in the motor parking lot. (photo by Brindell).

Editorials:

Strikes New Low

Reliable faculty sources have informed us of something which we already knew, or at least suspected.

It appears that scholastic standards, already low, have been reduced further. Many students have noticed the fact that instructors are, in general, grading leniently, and we ourselves have perceived that certain instructors go out of their way to water down material so that the least-qualified students can easily grasp it. It has been noticed also that teachers who graded on a five or ten point system three years ago are now grading on the notorious "ten-point spread." Everyone likes to make an "A" but the grade becomes meaningless if it is too easily attained. In addition, the quality point system has been modified to prevent poor students from flunking out.

In brief, Wilmington College is catering to the student of small intellect and low qualifications.

It is rumored, also, that the increased leniency is somehow connected with State appropriations. Such a theory fits in very well with the fact that the student body has not grown to the extent that earlier projections had indicated; indeed, the number of students has leveled off at about 1,200 for the past several years.

Apparently it is a case of the smaller the growth rate, the smaller the appropriation. It will be admitted that money is important, but brains should take priority.

What more need be said? Standards should be raised, not lowered. If the present policy is continued, Wilmington College will grow into an institution which will be unable to attract either good students or capable instructors. Furthermore, the school will become a mecca for the non-serious student. This has happened to many Southern colleges, the most notable of which is the University of South Carolina. Wilmington College is presently a second-rate teacher mill, and lowering of standards can only serve to perpetuate an already shameful situation.

Small Reminder

The goal of both our student body president and vice president was to see that our present constitution was rewritten this year. There has been a committee formed to do this, but it is ironic that their main, admitted purpose in working on the constitution is to impeach Carol Trebing, vice president.

It is necessary to examine the case. Carol was one of the students attending the "party" at the Blockade Runner during Homecoming. She, as well as the other students at this party, did not realize she was doing anything wrong, but now, this party has blown up to be the "scandal of the year." Carol is now quietly being charged with conduct unbecoming a student body officer.

It is unfortunate that all of this had to happen, but it has and cannot be erased. The committee may as well stop working if their main purpose in rewriting the constitution is to impeach Carol. This committee should be reminded that they will not be able to impeach anyone since a new constitution will not be retroactive to the old constitution.

Feast or Famine

Student participation is usually applauded, but student participation gave members of the Fine Arts committee a gigantic headache at the last Fine Arts film as more than 150 people tried to crowd into the lecture room of Kenan which only holds 99 people.

The committee expected their usual crowd of about 40 people, and knew that another 36 history students were required to attend. But as the people continued to arrive the room became crowded, students were standing in the back room, sitting on stools in the hall, and the aisles of the room also were crowded with folding chairs. This group of spectators were mainly students, and since they were students the Fine Arts committee felt very badly about the crowded conditions.

Their main worry is that the students who came to this film will be discouraged and will not even attempt to come to the next film, March 10.

Again the lack of having a decent auditorium on campus has been demonstrated.

Random Thoughts

By John Blair, Jr.

What is the capital of Wisconsin?

Would you believe Milwaukee?

I recently heard a program on the radio where some expert was discussing the amount of knowledge we young people possess. The conversation got around to a test given to the new crop of college freshmen. It was a geography test aimed at realizing just how much they know about the shape of this world. A number could not locate Viet Nam, Laos, or even Red China, and a large percentage was lost in Europe. This was not the least of it. I believe the expert said that 20 per cent could not come within 100 miles of locating the Rockies and some of these had them east of the Mississippi.

I put this interesting information in the back of my head until a few days ago when a friend of mine jokingly said that during a test he could not remember where France was. It was not until this point that I realized how great this problem was. It is true that this boy knew about where France was out with the tutor De Gaulle has been causing lately, he should have known its exact location.

I mentioned the radio program I had heard to this friend and the two of us decide to find out exactly how much or little some people knew about the United States.

I made the grand sacrifice and purchased one of those blank U.S. maps that I'm sure at one time or another you all have used. This we gave to a girl who proceeded to miss 14 states. She did this with, I'm afraid, considerable encouragement from us. We gave into her on little things, like how New York was not New Jersey, and by naming the states she had forgotten. Even I, the "tester", mixed up Oklahoma and Kansas. Though this girl, by no means did very well, she still did better than many would do.

What is the idiot getting at? Are we supposed to sit down and memorize the states? The answer is yes; perhaps the capitals too. It would be good to know that when Carson City is mentioned that it is the capital of Nevada and not some gas stop in Texas.

The purpose of knowing these things is to be able to associate fairly well a place with a name. I mean, Massachusetts does have a seaport named Boston, and doesn't border on New Hampshire's western boundary. Don't laugh—some of you didn't know this.

I am a little astonished at this lack of knowledge, and I hope that maybe I've started some of you thinking.

By the way the capital of Wisconsin is Madison. Sorry about that.

Squawks

By SALLIE SEAHAWK

Students of Wilmington College do not feel alone. Do not feel as if you and only you have the problem of student apathy. Do not feel as if you and only you are controlled by the administration. Do not feel as if you are the only campus with student discontent, BECAUSE you are not! Isn't that comforting news?

In reading exchange issues which THE SEAHAWK receives we have discovered that we share a problem other colleges have. There, does that make you feel more like a college? We thought it would.

What do other college newspapers say? The same things we say. We cut you and we praise you, and neither one does any good. We ask for your help and receive none. We are not alone, and we are comforted.

When you complain there is nothing to do around here, other college students in the state, even on such large campuses as the one of N. C. State, have the same gripes.

Now that we know we are not alone, we may as well sink into the apathy everyone else has, why try. It is the thing to be apathetic. At one time students stuffed themselves into telephone booths, at one time they swallowed gushers . . . all of that is dead, now everyone has joined the apathy craze.

If things get done, it is accepted as a matter of natural events. Take the student directory for instance. Many years ago it came out before Christmas. Last year we received it at the beginning of Winter quarter. This year the telephone directory committee must have gotten itself confused with The Flamingo and wanted to wait until May to appear, but finally they corrected their calendar and telephone directories were available last week. Congratulations, telephone committee!

Oh, of course, not everyone is apathetic. Some campuses have demonstrations about Viet Nam and there is always Berkeley, which seems to have demonstrations about everything and anything, and there is Wilmington, which only demonstrates lethargy.

Book Stack

Gunter Grass's best seller, The Tin Drum, has been reviewed more times since its publication in Germany in 1959 than I care to count. But, in view of the positive certainty that few students around these parts have read the book (or the reviews, for that matter), perhaps it will be permissible to attempt another review. This statement is not meant to offend anyone, although I am sure that it will; the problem is that The Tin Drum is a book which every one should know about.

I hope, however, that no one ever asks me what the book is about. It is about many things, including the melodramatic story of what some people still like to call the Third Reich; it is a story of eels and horses' heads and colorful Polish hussars and Nazi party buttons and amorous Russian infantrymen, but mostly it is the story of a drum made of tin, or, rather, many drums made of tin, which are beaten upon during the entire course of the novel by an incorrigible hunchbacked Polish-German midget named Oskar who is endowed with a kind of genius and a glass-piercing voice and who is an inmate in a mental institution at the time of the narrative.

What does it all mean? It means a lot of things on a variety of levels, at the same time achieving a unity of impression which cannot be described here; one must read the book.

Suffice it to say that the drum stands for Grass's imaginative faculties or something, perhaps even the creative spirit of poets in general, but that is only the beginning of it. The beauty of the book is that it does not mean anything in particular; perhaps it means everything, in the figurative sense of the word, in that it represents a totality of expression: it might be said that The Tin Drum is a hideous and hilarious expression of the twentieth-century situation, with the narrative centering on the recent history of Germany as being symptomatic of the state of the world in general—the chaos, the depravity, the meaninglessness, and the guilt.

The Tin Drum means irony. The irony is conveyed in a style of writing which is both traditional and innovative, both bardic and experimental. The narrative contains both powerful descriptive passages, such as the depiction of the defeat of splendidly-arrayed Polish hussars by grimy German panzers, and highly comic scenes, such as the death of Oskar's "father" as the Russian troops move into Danzig (he chokes while trying to swallow his party button).

The irony permeates the entire action and holds the book together. It is ludicrous, this irony, but only so because humanity, like Grass and his Germany, may well have reached the point at which it realizes that the only thing of which it can be certain as regards the universe is that it is ludicrous. When one has reached the point in circumstance of Oskar, the Tin Drummer, at the conclusion of the novel, one may realize, as he does, that there is nothing left to do but to laugh.

Letter To The Editor

Note Bewails Proposed Regulations

To the Editor:

This reader has chosen to make himself heard above the din in the halls, the Pub, and other places students tend to congregate. Every student should be proud that some have felt compelled to speak through the last edition of The Seahawk against what not the smallest infringements on their rights; however, these protests will be small whispers in the wind if they are allowed to drown in student apathy. No protest that is not continual and nerve racking loud can reach the ears of those who are trying not to hear or notice them.

We can show those who are unsympathetic to us that, indeed, we do not wear diapers, nor will we permit ourselves to be spoon fed. We will certainly be subjected to the insipid regulations that were suggested in the last edition if we do not make our cause known. We must show what we want instead of engaging in wistful thinking!

Chi Sigma Phi Car Wash Raises Funds

IN THE BEGINNING—Sorority sisters join together to pledge to work well and hard as they wash cars as their money raising project.

THEY WORKED—as Kathy Bradley demonstrated, the girls did make a serious attempt to work, but . . .

FLAP BEGAN—as the girls began to forget the real purpose of the car wash and as it appears, wanted to wash each other . . .

Beach Party Completes Week-End

Chi Sigma Phi held its first money-making project February 17. At that time, the sorority held a car wash behind the Pub of the Student Services Building.

Originally planned to last from 9:00 a.m. until 3:00 p.m., the car wash got under way at 8:30 and did not end until 5:00.

According to Gaye Godwin, president, the sorority made a 40 dollar profit on the car wash.

The car wash was the beginning of a busy week-end for the sorority sisters. Mrs. Elizabeth Wells, sorority advisor, was hostess at a spaghetti supper at her Wrightsville Beach home, that night.

Fraternity Moves Into New House

Pi Sigma Mu, in its effort to get a house, has rented the Old Pear-sall home at 3902 Market Street. With the combined efforts of the brothers and pledges, the fraternity began a partial renovation of the house last week-end. The fraternity is presently in the process of moving into the house.

Plans for the immediate future include continued renovation of the house. They are also planning a furniture drive.

The fraternity does not plan to postpone its spring quarter rush, despite the fire which destroyed the other fraternity house. Rush plans will proceed as usual.

Sigma Phi Kappa Makes Donation

Sigma Phi Kappa assisted the college with their annual College Night activities last month.

Bob Berg was recently appointed scholarship chairman for the fraternity. He will be required to keep up with the fraternity average and each fraternity member's grades.

Billy Huggins and Danny Martin represented Kappa at the first Inter-Fraternity Council meeting. At this meeting tentative dates were set for spring rush.

Sigma Phi Kappa answered the challenge by the Circle K Club and topped all other college clubs with a 20 dollar donation to the Boy's Home at Lake Waccamaw.

Recently social functions of the fraternity have included a hat party, a joint party with Sigma Phi Mu, a pool contest between brothers and pledges, a steak cook-out, and a Roaring Twenties party.

Hunt Sets Scholarship Deadline

Applications for the scholarship awarded by the Collegiate Civitan Club must be turned in March 9.

Applications may be obtained from committee chairmen, Paul Grooms, Dean Thomas P. Brown, Eric Staton, club president; or committee members, Mike Pearsall, Howard Elkins, Don Jensen, or George Zezefelis.

Requirements for applying for the scholarship are a 2.0 quality point average. The applicant must be at least a third quarter freshman.

The scholarship is awarded on the basis of need, quality point average, and extra-curricular activities.

"Any interested person meeting the requirements is encouraged to apply," stated club member John Hunt.

Colonel Beverly C. Snow, head of the Wilmington district of the Army Corps of Engineers, was the guest speaker for the Civitan meeting February 21.

Colonel Snow discussed the purpose of the Corps and some of the Corps' projects. He discussed the term and done projects recently completed by the Corps at Carolina and Wrightsville beaches.

"The lecture was enjoyed by all members of the club," John commented.

In the wrestling match between Civitan and Circle K, the Civitan Club defeated Circle K.

ACHTUNG!

Seniors who are planning to graduate in June should have turned in their applications for graduation by March 2, according to Dean Marshall Crews.

He said that application blanks may be obtained in Mrs. Mary Davis's office. The application must be signed by the student's advisor, Mr. Crews added.

Basketball Season Ends

Wilmington College ended its basketball season Saturday night, February 18, by defeating the South Carolina Baptist Buccaneers, a team from Charleston. The game, played on the Seahawks' home court, had a half-time score of 50-24, and a final score of 93-87.

After its decisive lead in the first half of the game, the Seahawks were challenged by a rally from the team from South Carolina. The first six points of the second half were scored by the Buccaneers. They continued their rally till the final minutes, narrowing the margin to six points.

Buccaneer Jimmy Hooks, putting in 25 points, was high scorer for the game. Jim Gardner added 18 points.

Jim Hall was high scorer for the Seahawks. He scored 23 points, and was closely followed by Frank Bua, who contributed 22 points. Jim Braxton's 17 points were also instrumental in the Seahawk victory. He led Wilco in rebounding, getting 18 of the Seahawks' rebounds.

The end of the Seahawk-Buccaneer game, and consequently, the end of the Wilco basketball season, proved to be the end of Jim Braxton's college athletic eligibility. The tall, talented basketball star will be missed on the Wilmington team. His athletic contributions have been numerous, and his many fans feel sure of his success in his proposed baseball contract with the Cleveland Indians.

Another Seahawk star, Butch Budd, was benched Saturday night due to doctor's orders. Still suffering from injuries received early in the season, Budd has seen only limited action this year. The week before the final game, a recurrence of the injury assured his inability to play in the final game. Injuries such as Budd's offer a possible reason for the Seahawk's 19 losses with only nine wins.

With the end of the basketball season, Wilco athletic enthusiasts look forward to the upcoming baseball season. Unfortunately, baseball fans around Wilmington seem even more scarce than basketball fans. But maybe things will be different this year; maybe each game will find the bleachers packed with enthusiastic fans.

Hawks Cop ACC Matches

In the midst of their finest season the Seahawk grapplers showed Duke what the word tough means to them when they nipped the Blue Devils in Durham 15-14.

The Hawks copped five of the nine matches against their ACC opponent and the meet wasn't decided until the last buzzer was sounded.

The Hawks had taken a 15-8 lead with two matches remaining when Tom Simmons and Bill Griffin, although they bowed, were tough enough not to be pinned, thereby securing the victory for Wilmington.

The Seahawks are now 11-3 on the season.

"The boys were really impressive out there tonight," stated head coach Charles Sproles with a beam of happiness in his hoarse voice. "They showed those Blue Devils what they were really made of."

That final match with Griffin was tremendous. Bill lost 5-0 but three of those points came on riding time and an infraction. He came through with a fine performance not being pinned."

Eddie Radford, who has lost only one match this season, defeated Blue Devil, Curt Wells, 7-0, in their 123 pound contest.

Ken King broke a personal losing skid with a fine 10-7 decision over Dave Daniels at the 130 pound level.

Jim Morrissey was knocked from the ranks of the unbeaten after 13 matches when he bowed to Malcolm McPhim 4-0 at the 137 pound class.

Seahawk Wrestlers End Season With Six Straight Victories

By Walter Healey
Staff Sports Writer

The incomparable Seahawk grapplers rattled off six straight wins after the Quadrangular meet in January to post 14-3 record for the 1966-67 campaign.

The Seahawks in their latest surge have defeated Duke, North Carolina State, Furman, and Pembroke.

The Hawks will now start preparing for the Southern Open Tournament which will be held in Atlanta, Ga., March 3 and 4.

"I was a little worried about Pembroke," said head mentor Charles Sproles. "It really felt great to win this one."

The Hawks are a "tough" team. They are individuals who have come through in the clutch all season for fans as they went undefeated on the home mat as they dumped Pembroke 18-11 in the season finale.

This marks the third time in two years that the Hawks have defeated the Braves. In their two previous meetings Wilmington won 20-14 and 28-10.

The Braves started fast as Terry Trafton edged out Eddie Radford, 5-4, in their 123-pound class.

This was only "Little Ed's" second loss of the season against eight wins.

Trafton pulled ahead with a take-down with 2:58 left, but Radford came up with an escape to tie the score at 3-3 with two minutes to go.

Trafton then twisted around for a reversal for the victory even though he was called for stalling in the late stages.

Ken King started the Seahawks rolling with a come-from-behind victory over Greg Decembrino, 5-3 in their 130-pound battle to pull Wilmington to a 3-3 tie.

Decembrino scored first with an escape and a take-down in the second period, but King scored on a reversal by rolling on Decembrino and capitalized on the situation with three points for a near pin for the victory.

Jim Morrissey of Wilmington finished the season with a 15-1-1 mark as he shut out Gordon Connell 3-0 in their 137-pound match to give the Seahawks a lead they never relinquished at 6-3.

Morrissey scored on an escape as Council held the advantage at the start of the second period then quickly followed this up with a take down and rode out the clock.

Bill Jones of Wilmington scored on a reversal with 2:50 left in his 145 pound match against Bill Pepper to squeak to a 2-1 win, and upping the Wilmington margin to 9-3.

Pepper moving quickly tallied on an escape after Jones had the position advantage at the start of the second stanza but couldn't score after Jones switched and rode Pepper out to gain an additional two points for riding time.

Ken Cobb built up over two minutes of riding time to edge Ron Bachner of Pembroke 4-2 at 152 pound, which put Wilmington ahead 12-3.

Cobb put two points on the board with a reversal after 2:48. Bachner countered with a rolling switch after ten seconds of the third period to tie the match but couldn't counter Cobb's riding time.

Bob Elliot tallied on a take down after 1:53 then added two points for a predicament to edge Frances Michael of Pembroke, 4-0, in a 160 pound battle as the Hawks soared to a commanding 15-3 lead.

Paul Baker scored four points in 40 seconds of the second period to win over Harry Whitehead 6-1 in the 167 pound event.

Co-captain Tom Simmons' late rally fell short as he bowed in the 177-pound match, 6-5 to Bill Sanke.

Simmons scored on a reversal but Sanke jumped out of it to trail 2-1 after the first period.

Sanke then scored on an escape and a take down to go ahead 4-2 with three minutes left.

Simmons tied the score with 2:25 left on a switch but the Barve quickly moved around to score on a reversal upping his advantage to 6-4 for the victory and cutting into the Wilco lead at 18-6.

Clarence Lucas of Pembroke pinned Bill Griffin of Wilmington in two minutes and 20 seconds after he had dropped Griffin with a hard take down to leave the final score at 18-11.

"This was a real solid effort by the boys," said Sproles after the meet. "They were tough and are looking forward to the tournament in Atlanta."

Against State

123 pound: Ed Radford won by forfeit.

130 pound: Ken King was decided by Tom Gerrity 9-0.

152 pound: Larry Clukey was pinned by Mike Couch in 2:56.

167 pound: Tom Simmons was pinned by Greg Hicks in 3:45.

177 pound: Paul Baker decided Howard Redding 8-5.

Unlimited: Bill Griffin was decided by Phil Kanoy 7-0.

123 pound: Ed Radford won by forfeit.

130 pound: Ken King won by forfeit.

Wilco Defeats S. C. Baptist

The Seahawks finished the basketball season on a winning note with a 93-87 drubbing of South Carolina Baptist.

The Hawks finished the season with a dismal 9-17 mark, their poorest in the college's history.

Jim Hall and Frank Bua paced the Seahawks with 23 and 22 points respectively. Hall came into form in the latter part of the season and kept Coach Bill Brooks quiet in contention in many of the games.

Bua, a junior forward, finished his first season at Wilmington with a 20-plus average.

Jim Braxton playing his last game of his college career made it a fine effort with 17 points and grabbing 18 rebounds.

The Seahawks jumped to a 50-24 halftime lead but had to hold off a tremendous effort by the Buccaneers as Jim Hooks, who scored 25 in the contest, and Jim Gardner who tallied 18 paced a comeback which closed the margin to six points in the waning minutes.

Wilmington dropped two games in the late stages of the campaign to Georgia Southern and Frederick.

Southern trounced the Hawks 88-70 as Jim Rose, the Eagles All-American guard, led them on a blitz in the early minutes of the second half to send Wilmington to defeat. Rose paced all scorers with 30 points.

Jim Hall connected for 24 points while Frank Bua dropped through 21 and Jim Braxton 10.

Class Plans Car Wash

To raise money for their class project, members of the Freshman Class will be busy washing cars Saturday, March 4.

"This seems like a small beginning, but it is a beginning," said Hugh Newkirk, vice president of the Freshman Class at their class meeting, February 16.

"As we make money from one project, we will invest it in others," stated class president Bill Baugh.

With the money from the car wash the Freshman Class plans to buy a ping pong table to put upstairs in the Pub. The rest of the money will go to a supper the class plans to have later in the year.

"Everything we tried to do was turned down by the administration," said freshman Jack Britton at the meeting.

For the car wash class officers and members were given tickets to sell, each ticket cost one dollar. The car wash was held in the senior parking lot.

vited to appear as finalists in the call-back auditions, which take place in Arlington, Texas, and Atlanta, Georgia, in the late spring. Awaiting for those who are picked is an opportunity to enjoy a full summer's employment at salaries ranging from $75 to $125 a week, according to the type production in which they appear and the number of hours worked a week, in one of the numerous live and lively productions featured at each entertainment center.

Scholarships, Loans Available

Various types of scholarships and loans are available for Wilmington College students. Any interested student should go by the office of the dean of students for an interview.

A limited number of both work and academic scholarships are available. Student on work scholarships work in the library, as lab assistants, or as student secretaries for about two hours a day. The money they earn is applied toward their tuition and fees.

Students may also apply for a loan. National Defense Education Act, College Foundation, and Perspective Teacher Loans are all available. To be eligible for a loan, a student must be taking 14 hours and must need financial aid. Loans are paid back over a period of years after the student graduates.

Ellis Changed Major; Johnson Enjoys Fishing

Former Wilmington College student, Miss Carol Ellis, is a new member of the English department. Miss Ellis attended Wilmington College as a music major but changed her major to English at the University of Georgia where she received her A.B. and M.A. in English.

Thomas McCall was "my guiding light," stated Miss Ellis who had always wanted to be a teacher and always really been wanting to teach English.

She feels Wilco can no longer be considered an easy school and doesn't believe students come here with the idea that they can just breeze through.

Miss Ellis still enjoys music and reading and believes "teaching English is more of a necessity than a hobby."

Dr. Granville Johnson, one of our new psychology teachers, re-University of Denver.

Before coming to Wilmington College, Dr. Johnson taught at the University of Denver, Arizona State College, Emory University, Georgia State College, and East Carolina.

Dr. Johnson said he just "stumbled into teaching" when he was the assistant in the psychology department. He originally wanted to be an archeologist.

In speaking of Wilmington College he stated, "It's great!" He enjoys "fishing and stuff of that ilk."

State Art Show March 10-20

The fifth annual Student Art Competition sponsored by the Erdahl-Cloyd Union Gallery Committee at North Carolina State University will begin March 10.

All fulltime undergraduate students enrolled in colleges and universities in North Carolina are eligible to enter paintings, sculpture, prints and drawings in the competition, which will close March 20.

Morris Davidson, painter, author and lecturer with the Cape Cod Artists' Colony, will judge the art on March 30.

Four awards will be given in each of the categories, and the art may be sold after the exhibition closes.

European Job Program Open To Students

Job opportunities in Europe this summer . . . Work this summer in the forests of Germany, on construction in Austria, on farms in Germany, Sweden and Denmark, on road construction in Norway, in industries in France and Germany.

These jobs are available as well as jobs in Ireland, Switzerland, England, France, Italy, and Holland. They are open by the consent of the governments of these countries to American university students coming to Europe the next summer.

For some years students made their way across the Atlantic to take part in the actual life of the people of these countries. The success of this project has caused a great deal of enthusiastic interest and support both in America and Europe.

Every year, the program has been expanded to include many more students and jobs. Already, many students have made application for next summer's jobs. American-European Student Service (on a non-profit basis) is offering these jobs to students for Germany, Scandinavia, England, Austria, Switzerland, France, Italy, and Spain. The jobs consist of forestry work, child care work (females only), farm work, hotel work (limited number available), construction work, and some other more qualified jobs requiring more specialized training.

The purpose of this program is to afford the student an opportunity to get into real living contact with the people and customs of Europe. In this way, a concrete effort can be made to learn something of the culture of Europe. In return for his or her work, the student will receive his or her room and board, plus a wage. However, students should keep in mind that they will be working on the European economy and wages will naturally be scaled accordingly. The working conditions (hours, safety, regulations, legal protection, work permits) will be strictly controlled by the labor ministries of the countries involved.

In most cases, the employers have requested especially for American students. Hence, they are particularly interested in the student and want to make the work as interesting as possible.

They are all informed of the intent of the program, and will help the student all they can in deriving the most from his trip to Europe.

Please write for further information and application forms to: American-European Student Service, Box 34733, FL 9490 Vaduz, Liechtenstein (Europe).

Educational Travel Association Offers Summer Sessions

University level summer sessions in France and Austria for college students interested in the language and history of either country are being offered this summer by the Educational Travel Association in cooperation with Air France.

Featured in the 17th annual "Summer Session Abroad" program are month-long terms at either the Ecole Pratique de L'Alliance Française in Paris or the University of Salzburg, Austria. The price for a complete session at either school is $225, which includes the courses, board and lodging, local sightseeing programs, transfers of group arrivals from the airport to the city, and a graduation certificate.

Each school will hold two sessions, one in July and a repeat session in August to provide flexibility of arrangements. Both sessions will offer the same courses in elementary, intermediate and advanced language, as well as the history of civilization, of the respective country. Departures from New York for the university in Paris will be on June 30 for the first session, and July 31 for the second. Departures for the University of Salzburg will be on July 2 and August 2.

In conjunction with the school program, ETA is offering a variety of extension tours in Europe following the study sessions.

For detailed information, write for the "Summer Sessions Abroad" brochure to Air France, P. O. Box 707, New York, N. Y. 10011.

Howell Cites Art Department Growth And Improvements

by Joann Gaskins

"We feel that we are at last able to give quality education in the art department because of our new facilities in Kenan Hall," Claude Howell, art instructor said.

"We are much better equipped, and while growth is slow, we feel that we have begun with a firm foundation," he added.

Presently the school offers only a minor in art. New additions and future improvements will help to allow the department to offer a major in the future.

Press Added

A graphers press, used in Miss Sue Byrd's graphics class, is the latest piece of equipment added.

"Plans are underway to add a ceramics class in the fall," Mr. said. "We also hope to have weaving and crafts soon."

"Not too many people are familiar with the library in the art department," Artie Markatos, sophomore art student, said.

"It is part of the main library, but is placed in Kenan because we use it so much," Mr. Howell added.

The library, which consists mostly of reference materials, is available to anyone wishing to use it.

Department Has Reproductions

The department has a large collection of reproductions including some from prehistoric times, Greece, and Rome, the Renaissance, and Contemporary America. Not yet catalogued are approximately 5,000 slides which can be used by the faculty in the classroom.

"We eventually hope to have them catalogued so that students may come in any time and use them," Mr. Howell stated.

In the art courses "students get to work in all mediums," Artie said. "In design class we are concerned with theory and practice of fundamentals, color balance, shape and space," she added.

"Although design is very time consuming, I enjoy it. It will help me, individually, to get the basic ideas for free-hand sketching," said George Williamson, who plans to attend the School of Design at State.

Students Draw Models

In drawing class students draw models, who model for an hour at a time. Marty Murry, Rick Folick, and Peggy Brummett, students, are modeling this quarter.

"It's hard; it's great; I love it," exclaimed Peggy when asked how she felt about modeling.

Although exhibits are under student affairs, the art department sets them up.

"Usually everybody in the department gets around to doing something toward preparation for an exhibit," Artie stated.

Much of the hanging of paintings, card typing, and even picking up of entries in the exhibit, is done by students.

Shows Planned

Three shows are planned for March. Ruth Clark—one man show, ceramics by P. G. Minniss, and a display of Contemporary European Prints are included.

April is set for a one man show of Vic Huggins and a Pre-Columbian Artifax exhibit. The annual Students' Show is scheduled for May.

"The entire art department is used not only by students, but by the people of Wilmington. Our studio, books, and slides are available," said Mr. Howell. "We are not trying just to teach students but to act as a force in the community," he concluded.

ART IS FOR ARTIE—Artie Markatos, art student, has had one of her art projects selected for the Pembroke College Art Show. (Photo by Blaustein).

Pembroke Show Picks Markatos Art Work

"Something I did in class," said art major Artie Markatos in speaking of "Seated Figure No. 7" which was selected for exhibit in the Fifth Annual Pembroke Competition sponsored by Pembroke College.

Artie was among the 125 students who submitted works from 26 colleges and universities in North and South Carolina, Virginia, and Tennessee. From the 259 entries, 100 were selected for the exhibition.

This exhibition is the state's first art competition and North Carolina's only regional student competition. Ben F. Williams, curator of the North Carolina Museum of Art, was juror for the show.

"Seated Figure No. 7" is a mass drawing, Artie explained. "This is a drawing that shows volume, solidity, and roundness."

Artie commented that "Mr. Howell has taught me the fundamentals, but I don't think I've copied his style." The "training I'm getting in class now" has helped Artie who tries "as much as possible to sketch every day."

"I'm having a terrible struggle about having to paint," said Artie when questioned about what medium she prefers to work in. "I work in ink, pencil, corte, charcoal, and stuff like that," she said.

"Right now I am sort of groping. I really don't know what I want to do in the future," she stated. "I'd like to teach on the college level."

"Of course," she added, "the dream of anyone who majors in art is to be an independent artist."

Artie believes, "I think any sort of drawing in any medium or any specific restrictions helps you to develop and to decide what type of thing you want to do."

When asked about what she does in her spare time, Artie's quick reply was "art!" She added, "It is either art, watching films, or listening to records while I'm doing something else at home."

Artie works in the art department as an art scholarship student, is art editor of THE SEAHAWK, a member of the Fine Arts Committee, and works on the Collegiate Italian productions.

Howard K. Smith To Highlight Wilmington College Lecture Series

Internationally famed television commentator, author, and foreign correspondent Howard K. Smith will deliver the fourth lecture of the Wilmington College Lecture Series March 6 at 8 p.m. in Hanover Hall, Wilmington College.

Smith, who will discuss "The Challenge Facing America," has probably received more journalistic awards than any American newsmen now speaking and writing regularly on national and world affairs.

These awards include four consecutive Overseas Press Club Annual Awards for best reporting from abroad, a DuPont Commentator Award, the Sigma Delta Chi Award for news writing, an Emmy Award for writing "CBS Reports: The Population Explosion," and the Overseas Press Club Citation in 1963 for Best Interpretation of Foreign Affairs, Television.

For more than 11 years, Smith served as chief European correspondent for the CBS Network, returning to the United States to take over assignments as moderator, commentator, or reporter on most of the major CBS news efforts, including "CBS Reports," "Face the Nation," "Eyewitness to History," and "The Great Challenge."

He joined ABC News in December, 1961, and became the only working newsmen ever to win the Paul White Award. He was nominated for an Emmy for "Howard K. Smith: News and Comment," his ABC-TV program which ran for 17 months.

He is also author of two books, "Last Train from Berlin" and "The State of Europe."

Smith was born in Ferriday, Louisiana, and was graduated from Tulane University in New Orleans in 1936. He then went to Germany to study briefly at Heidelberg University, beginning what was later to become an intensive study of Nazism. He was later expelled from Nazi Germany for his denunciation of Hitlerism.

After leaving Germany, Smith studied at Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar. In 1939, he began his journalistic career with the United Press in London.

Tickets for the Smith Lecture will be available at the box office, or they may be purchased in advance from Belk-Beery, Newell's Shopping Center, Wrightsville Beach, or from Henriksen's Pharmacy. Students are admitted with their activity cards.

This Is It . . For A While

This will be the last issue of The Seahawk until Spring Quarter due to exams and the Easter recess coming so close together.

All students and clubs submitting articles to the paper for publication must sign the name of the person writing the article. Typed or untyped articles must be in the Seahawk box located in the main office no later than the Tuesday after the paper appears to be considered for publication in the next paper.

Any club or organization on campus wishing a reporter to cover an event, should place a notice in the Seahawk box at least a week before the event. "We are trying to give better school coverage and cooperation is needed," said editor Jenae Hartman. Clubs should understand that only newsworthy items will go into the paper.

If any club or organization wants a photographer to cover one of their events, they should place a request in the Seahawk box, also a week before they want the picture taken.

"For the most part, we would like to keep press releases out of the paper, but coverage of school events is not possible unless we are kept informed about what is happening," said Renee.

College To Host Regional Debate

The Debate Club will host the Regional Semifinal high school debating tournament April 1.

There will be six high school debating teams participating. Members of the Debating Club of the College will serve as judges for the tournament.

Members of the faculty of the college will also help judge.

"Volunteers will be needed as time keepers," state Carol Trebing, president of the Debate Club.

Other officers of the Debate Club are vice president, Charles Weiss, and secretary, Ellen Davis.

BSU To View "Harvest Of Shame"

Members of the Baptist Student Union heard a program last night on the Christian in War.

A chaplain from Camp Lejeune spoke to the club about his rationale of war.

The next BSU program will be a film, Harvest of Shame, March 30 at 7:30 p.m. on campus.

This film deals with the life of the migrant workers from Florida to New England. The film shows working conditions, living quarters, and the reactions of workers.

"It will also serve to remind members of the BSU about the summer L.I.S.T.E.N. project, which consists of work among such people," stated club member Bobby Bohannon.

L.I.S.T.E.N. stands for Love Impels Sacrifice Toward Every Need.

Dr. Randall To Retire

by Steffi Olsen

Dr. William M. Randall has announced that he will retire as president of Wilmington College June 30, 1967, after 17 years of service to the College and community.

Dr. Randall received his AB and his AM from the University of Michigan. He received his Ph.D. summa cum laude from Hartford Theological Seminary in 1929.

At the University of Chicago Dr. Randall was an associate professor in 1929, a professor in 1930, and the assistant dean of students in 1938. He has also served as dean of students at the University of Georgia and dean at the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy.

Served As Intelligence Officer

Dr. Randall was a Major and Lt. Colonel in the Air Force in War Department Intelligence and served throughout the Middle East from 1942-1945.

Dr. Randall became dean of Wilmington College in 1951 and President in 1958, when the College became a State institution. During his tenure, WC's history has been one of continuous growth and development.

When he became dean there were 132 students and four full-time faculty members.

Early Faculty Sparse

"One instructor taught all mathematics courses, another taught all the social sciences, another taught all English courses, and another taught all the business courses. Of course, there were some part-time teachers also," said Dr. Randall.

Wilmington College then occupied part of the Isaac Bear Building. The library contained between 10,000 and 12,000 volumes.

In 1962 the College moved to its present five building campus. Another major change came in 1963 when Wilmington College, with an enrollment of 900 students, became a four-year college.

"At that time, we added a few new courses," stated Dr. Randall. By that time we had a full art department, under Claude Howell; a full music department, under Lloyd Hudson; and a full drama department, under Doug Swink."

States Future Plans

Immediate future plans for WC, according to Dr. Randall, include its accreditation as a four-year college by the Southern Association of Colleges and Universities. An accreditation team will visit the campus April 11-14. "If their report is favorable, Wilmington College will be accredited in November," said Dr. Randall.

To be accredited by the Southern Association, the college must have a faculty composed of at least 30 per cent Ph.D.'s. "Right now we are primarily trying to develop a four-year college faculty," said Dr. Randall. "This is done in two ways: by encouraging present faculty members to get their Ph.D.'s, and by hiring Ph.D.'s."

Future plans for improvement and extension of the campus include the construction of a library building which will contain 150,000 volumes and a new chemistry and physics building. Another $2 million has been recommended by Governor Dan Moore for new construction at the College. This will include two dormitories, a new cafeteria, and an education building.

In a letter submitting his resignation to the Board of Trustees, Dr. Randall concluded, "I hope for Wilmington College, which is very dear to me, continuing success in the year to come in its objective to serve the needs of the State and particularly of this area for exemplary and ever useful higher education for our youth."

Trustees Request Personnel Increases

A request for personnel increase at Wilmington College dominated the appearance of College officials before the Joint Appropriations Committee in Raleigh March 4.

Appearing before the committee to present the case for the 1967-69 biennium capital improvements and "B" budget requests to enlarge existing programs and initiate new programs was President William M. Randall and board of trustees members B. D. Schwartz, Addison Hewlett Jr., Alan A. Marshall, Frederick B. Graham, and Chairman L. Bradford Tillery.

Commenting on the eve of the committee appearance, Dr. Randall said, "We are particularly interested in an increase in personnel, including library, faculty, and maintenance."

Dr. Randall pointed out the fact that Wilmington College's appropriation per student is $80 less than that of the next lowest college for 1967-68 and $98 less than the next lowest college in 1968-69.

In the event that the $224,660 biennium request for salary increase is not granted, Randall said, "It would make it difficult for us to continue to teach as we have been teaching with an increasing student body."

In his mid-February budget recommendations for the biennium to the General Assembly, Governor Dan K. Moore recommended capital improvement appropriations for Wilmington College totaling $1.6 million and general appropriations, of $1.6 million in the "A" budget for essential operational expenses.

However, under "B" budget appropriations, Gov. Moore cut the original college request for $678,081 by more than half, including a reduction of new employee personnel requested from 52 to 15.

Dr. Randall noted that the present faculty ratio at Wilmington College is 1 to 17.1 and that this is the highest, except for two other colleges, in the state.

The college's request for additional faculty members would put the ratio near 1 to 15, he said, "which is actually higher than most other colleges now but would be an improvement."

Other items presented to the committee include increased travel and equipment appropriations totaling $14,800; $16,000 for heat, light and water increase; and $10,000 for supplies and materials.

Under capital improvements, Wilmington College has requested that the committee consider furnishing the entire or greater portion of the cost of two new dormitories and a cafeteria.

Governor Moore's recommendations provided $680,000 for the dormitories and $375,000 for a cafeteria, with 50 per cent of the cost to be self-liquidating.

Also the college has asked for reconsideration of a $40,000 greenhouse and $1.3 million drama and speech building request.

Literary Contest Open To Students

Students are invited to enter a literary contest sponsored by The Seahawk and the Fine Arts Committee.

The contest is divided into two areas, prose and poetry. First prize winners in each category will be awarded a 25 dollar first prize. Second prize will be 15 dollars, third prize, 10 dollars.

Students submitting a prose entry may use either essay or short story. No more than three poetry entries and two prose selections may be submitted. Students may enter both categories, though.

The contest is limited to full time students of the college.

All entries must be turned in by May 1 to Dr. Joanne Corbett, head of the English department.

All entries must be typed and double spaced. All entries must be in triplicate. A title page must be given with each entry. This title page should include name, address, and class. No name should appear on the entry itself.

Winning entries will be published in The Seahawk.

"I hope that students will enter," said Renee Hartman, Seahawk editor. "We had first planned just a literary issue, but thanks to the fine arts committee, we will be able to offer a prize."

"Cat and Canary" Opens Tonight

This weekend will mark the third production by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association, when "Cat and the Canary" is presented at Thalian Hall in downtown Wilmington on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights. Curtain time will be 8:30 p.m.

This classic among the "whodunits" opened in New York in 1922 and at various times has been brought back. Its latest revival was in 1965.

Story Concerns Heiress

The story concerns an heiress, Annabelle West, played by Dorothy Pastis, whose legacy includes a mansion run by a Mrs. Mallard, Virginia Sonsky, and a diamond necklace that must be hidden somewhere in the rambling old house. Also Annabelle falls heir to various and sundry relatives who gather for the reading of the will by Lawyer Crosby, portrayed by Tony Rivenbark.

Such cousins of Annabelle include flighty Susan Sillsbury and caustic Cecily Young, played by Barbara Deaton and Chris Deasy, respectively; blunt Harry Blythe (Jack Gerock), cautious Charles Wilder (George Deaton) and weak Paul Jones (Jell Jeffery) are the three male cousins who variously quarrel over gaining the affection of Annabelle.

Adding to the mystery and confusion is the unexpected appearance of the local asylum attendant (Frank Hall) and of a suspicious Doctor Patterson (Bill Burdard).

Del Lago Is Stage Manager

Stage manager for this production is Randy Del Lago and Tina Forrester, assistant stage manager. Anne Fitzgibbon, professor of drama and speech at the College, is serving as technical director.

Richard Thompson is sound director and Hoyle Foster, the lighting technician. The construction of the two-scene set was prepared by: Billy Alexander, Wayne Barker, James Cobb, William Cyphers, Chris Deasy, Wilbur Dixon, Robert Fales, Thompson Foy, Jack Gerock, Robert Hall, Frank Henry, Roy Jones, John Lewis, Gail O'Rourke, Hank Poisson, Edward Radford, Rodney Shackelford, Tom Simmons, Eugene Sue, Richard Thompson, and Doyle Whitfield.

Thelma Sellers is in charge of costumes assisted by Tina Forrester, Betsy Peersall and Virginia Sonsky. Properties have been handled by Elizabeth Bridgers.

Lane Designs Posters

Jack Lane designed the posters and Mary Broadfoot and David Stone have handled the publicity. Make-up will be executed by Renee Hartman. Doug W. Swink is the director.

Wilmington College students wishing to see this mystery-melodrama may do so just by presenting their activity cards at the box office, there will be no charge for them. For others, admission will be season tickets or tickets may be purchased at the box office.

"Cat and the Canary" opens tonight at Thalian Hall at 8:30 p.m. and will play Saturday and Sunday nights.

Greek Letter Groups Establish Council

With the formation of Chi Sigma Phi Sorority, the third Greek Letter Society was formed on the Wilmington College campus. That made it possible to begin an Interfraternity Council (IFC).

The IFC was formed to achieve better cooperation and understanding between the student body and the fraternities, to promote greater interest in the fraternities, and to regulate Rush.

The first meeting was held at the Sigma Phi Kappa Fraternity House. Kappa representatives were Billy Huggins and Danny Martin. Pi Sigma Mu Fraternity was represented by Preston Brown and Philip Galloway. Gaye Godwin and Sammie Driggers represented Chi Sigma Phi.

A model constitution was discussed. Permanent representatives would be made up of two officers—chairman and co-chairman—and two representatives from each fraternity.

At the next meeting, which was one week later, the constitution was finished and officers were elected.

Officers are Philip Galloway, chairman; Billy Huggins, co-chairman. Chi Sigma Phi representatives are Sammie Driggers and Susan Long. Murray Gardner is representing Pi Sigma Mu, and Danny Martin is representing Sigma Phi Kappa. The other representative from both fraternities will be announced later.

April 10 through 15, has been designated as Rush Week. Another IFC meeting is planned before this time.

ANOTHER CAR WASH—Members of the Freshman class will be buying a ping pong table to put upstairs in the Student Services building with the approximately 60 dollars they made from their car wash March 4.

Statues

Statues. A statue is something made out of stone. A statue is created by the artist. A statue gives the appearance of being alive, but it does not speak. There are also human statues. A human statue is alive, but it does not speak. It does have the ability to giggle and smile upon occasion.

There have been reports of human statues existing on this campus. Look around you, for you have created these statues. They sit in the Pub, and there are probably one or two in some of your classes. These human statues do have a function. Their function is to represent the student body in the statue garden known as the Student Senate.

You, the average student, elected them. In some cases you had no choice since there were not many people who wanted to enter this statue garden and those elected had no opposition.

The statue garden has two caretakers who smile benignly at the human statues. The caretakers help the human statues make the rules in which the statues, since they do not speak, seem to have no interest in.

It is possible that, outside of the statue garden, the human statues have the ability to speak, but that is ended as soon as they enter the garden. They lose their ability to speak and can only smile and giggle. Oh yes, it must be admitted that a few true humans enter and speak and say things, but these are only a very few that sit among the statues.

The students, as previously stated, are the creators of these statues. To the students who ask if anything can be done about the statue garden, the reply is yes. This editorial is a reminder that student elections are not too far off in the future. These elections should not be a popularity contest for statues and statue seekers who have been elected in the past, but people who will speak out and up should be nominated and elected.

It is time that the student senate should become something more than a statue garden!

Battle

There is a great battle being waged on the plains of the Pub. The two forces in the battle are the eaters and the cardplayers. There is only one slight problem—cardplayers can also be eaters.

In a recent resolution handed down by the Student Senate, it was said that no longer would there be card playing in the downstairs part of the Pub during certain hours. These certain hours are the lunch hours.

This was a wise action, but as is the case with many wise actions, it is an unpopular action. Before this wise action was taken, students coming in to eat lunch would find many tables monopolized by cardplayers. The simple eaters only wanted a place where they could sit and eat, something they are not supposed to do upstairs in the Pub, as the cardplayers could.

Last Spring everyone wanted to have the upstairs portion of the Pub for student use. Now it belongs to the students. Now it could belong to the cardplayers. But the cardplayers are crying and wailing, "When can we eat?" The answer is simple. Put away your cards for five minutes, join the eaters downstairs, and then go upstairs and play cards to your heart's content!

Contest

Twenty-five dollars is not a whole lot of money, but it is money! There are probably many budding writers on campus and now is a chance for them to show their talents.

The idea for the literary contest THE SEAHAWK and Fine Arts Committee are now sponsoring came from the lack of a literary magazine on campus.

At one time there was a Scriptic Society on campus. This group did publish a magazine, but this group seems to have died, for reasons unknown.

THE SEAHAWK had first planned to have a literary edition sometime later in the Spring. We were told response, without reward, would be small. The Fine Arts Committee then stepped in and offered 100 dollars to use as "reward."

With this reward in the background, now is the time to begin writing.

Sound

During the Howard K. Smith lecture the sound system in Hanover Hall worked, as it had not worked during the Churchill lecture earlier in the year. People may suppose that a hired team of technicians came in and worked on the sound, but this is not how it happened. The sound worked because a student, Richard Thompson, spent many hours working and worrying with it. It is doubtful that any speaker who came before the microphone was as nervous as Richard was that night. This students deserves a word of thanks.

JUNIOR CLASS MEETING—John Hunt, president of the Junior Class, again tried to have a class meeting. Sophomore Marion Loftus attended. She was covering the meeting for The Seahawk. One unidentified junior did come. John has not yet given up with his plans to have a Junior Class meeting. April 5 has been set as the date for the next meeting. (photo by Brindell)

Random Thought

by John Blair, Jr.

A little while ago I was riding one of our modern city buses when a man and woman got on at the same time. Both had obviously just come from work and from the appearance of the man's clothes, he had been doing manual labor. Without thinking, he sat down in the last empty seat.

Letter To The Editor

Editorial Harmful

One reason for writing editorials is to bring certain results. There are results that the editor intended, but there are also results that are unintended. To be fair, let's assume that all intended results are good. The unintended results may be good, but also, through a lack of foresight, bad. It seems, therefore, that the possible results of an editorial may be good, but also, the possible results of an editorial may be good and bad, whether intended or unintended.

One way to judge an editorial is by its results, weighing the good against the bad. At first glance, this seems a relatively easy task. An editorial affects results in those who read it. A complicating factor is added by considering the different groups that read it; and as an increasingly active participant in higher education, Wilmington College is constantly being observed. There are on-campus groups: students, clubs, faculty, and administration. There are also off-campus groups: community residents, local and state officials, and accreditation associations. There are, therefore, many interests that concern themselves with Wilmington College, and Wilmington College should be concerned with the way these groups are influenced.

The most observable result is one which is concrete and can be seen or felt. These can be good and bad. Another complicating factor is here added, and that is the power to affect the present and the future. This power is held by some of the groups that observe our activities. The result of the way they are influenced can be seen and felt, and it is important that they not be badly influenced. It can easily be seen that the results can be harmful.

Editorials are primarily directed to on-campus groups, particularly the students. They are not the only groups influenced, however. If groups influenced adversely are more powerful than those influenced otherwise, the editorial is more harmful than good and should not be printed. I am not calling for editorials or the newspaper to be slanted to these influential groups! But rather than do the college any harm, why not think twice and be more objective in subject content and treatment. I'm sure it is not impossible.

RAY PACER

He was quickly reminded about his "faux pas" by his feminine fellow wayfarer, who stood over him and gave him the evil eye. Our hero arose and the woman sat down, being careful not to mess her clean suit. She got off a block or two later.

It is true that secretaries, as I assume this woman was, work very hard but somehow a mechanic's job in a garage seems to entail just a little more physical effort. I use this anecdote to show a creeping danger in our society. It is not a new danger, as it started last century; but it has become quite a bit more dangerous recently. I am, of course, referring to women's rights—a long time dead issue. Somehow I cannot really think of it as a death—more of a metamorphosis because women's rights have now completely reversed the situation.

I have long been a staunch advocate of equal rights for all people regardless of race, religion, or sex, especially when it affects old "yours truly."

It is a well-known fact now that the Civil Rights Bill provided that women were to receive the same job opportunities as men. Stop and think. We, being the male animal of the species, have given women voting rights, equal rights in labor and education and most of our money, but what have we got in return?

Don't say "Where would you be without us (women)?" because we can play that game too. As nice as women are, we're pretty swell too. Concerning the basic purpose of Man and Woman here on earth, you cannot blame that on us. That is somebody else's fault.

I'm not saying any of this because I think that we should return to the time when women didn't even have property rights (the time in glorious Americana Historia referred to as "The Good Old Days"). I just want us to create a society of equal rights to politicians think that the only way to assure equal rights is to take rights from another group).

Now is the time, men, to stand up and be counted; to grasp our destiny in our mitts; to rise above ourselves and test our mettle, whew! Men! Remain seated, giving up hard-earned chairs only when you want to, and remember we know the secret! Never shut up!

How is it that women get what they want? They don't stop talking until they get it. So remember, don't sit there mutely—talk!

Squawks

by Salli Seahawk

Now everyone is back and settled down into the routine of school after that nice group of holidays we had.

It was rather hard to concentrate last Wednesday and Thursday with the knowledge that for four days there was not going to be any school! How much of what teachers tried to say and teach was remembered on Tuesday?

But now we are back until the next exams release us for summer. We wonder if registration for fall quarter will be held in the middle of July? Anything is possible here!

Although registration has been quickened somewhat, long lines still were in evidence last Tuesday. Many students after waiting to have their scholarship or loan checked, had to go and wait in another line equally as long or longer.

Also what is the purpose of having lines stop while people go eat lunch? Many students were told to return at two while the personnel in the office ate. Couldn't a second group of people begin to take money while one group rested? As a student who was told to return at two, we protest.

Accreditation Means Approval

The James Walker Memorial Associate Degree Program in Nursing offered by Wilmington College has been granted full accreditation by the North Carolina Board of Nurse Registration and Nursing Education.

"Unless we have it, the students could not write the State Board of Examination for license. This accreditation means approval," said Miss Luretta Booe, director of the nursing program.

Two-year Program

The Associate Degree Program

of Nursing is a two-year course of study involving about 50 per cent nursing education, confining studies at Wilmington College and guided learning experiences in various community health agencies.

Nursing students have used James Walker Memorial Hospital, the agencies of the Consolidated Board of Health of New Hanover County, the Mental Health Center, Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro as their learning laboratories. They will also use the New Hanover Memorial Hospital when it is opened.

Students Gain Training

Through contracts with these participating agencies, students gain in-service training by providing nursing care for patients who have been selected by the teacher to enable students to meet specific objectives.

Upon completion of the program at Wilmington, nursing students are eligible to take the State Board Examination for licensure as Registered Nurse.

"Approval of the school is for the protection of the public so that the people we graduate to become nurses have the knowledge and are able to form judgments and give safe nursing care," said Miss Booe.

There are nine students who will graduate after the end of spring quarter, "providing they meet graduation requirements," said Miss Booe.

There are 17 members of the freshman nursing class.

Students Receive Degree

The nursing students will participate in the regular graduation. They will receive an Associate of Arts in Nursing degree.

Prior to graduation, nursing students will receive their pin. Miss Booe explained that all nursing schools have a pin graduates of that school wear.

The pin Wilmington College Nurses will receive will use the Wilmington College seal as the basic design. There will be a slight modification where "Nursing" will appear instead of "North Carolina."

WATCH CAREFULLY—Miss Mary Alice Whitfield shows nursing student Susan Davis the proper way to use a hypodermic needle.

Nance To Work For Ph.D. Degree

A Wilmington College professor will begin work for the Ph.D. degree in organic chemistry during the summer of 1967.

Lewis E. Nance, assistant professor of chemistry, will begin his studies in June at the University of the Pacific in Stockton, Cal.

He received his B.S. and M.S. degrees from Clemson University and did graduate work at the University of North Carolina.

Before joining the faculty of Wilmington College, Nance taught at San Antonio College and the United States Army School of Medical Technology.

He will resume his position at Wilmington College in September, 1967.

Nine Students To Graduate From Nursing Program In Spring

This Spring, nine student nurses will hopefully be graduated from Wilmington College. These girls have spent two years in training in the fields of nursing.

The first quarter of school in 1965 was not spent in nursing as the courses were not available. They did, however, take required courses such as chemistry and sociology. During the winter quarter of that year they went to James Walker Memorial Hospital for laboratories.

During the spring quarter of 1966, the prospective nurses studied maternal and child care. This instruction was carried over to the first session of summer school when the girls observe Health Department nurses giving help to expectant mothers.

The second session of summer school was spent in Goldsboro where the students received psychiatric training at the Cherry Hill Hospital.

In addition to their nursing training, the students are attempting to start a Nursing Club at Wilmington College. They have written to Raleigh for ideas concerning by-laws, etc., and have already held some meetings. Bonnie Savage was elected president, Connie Roderick is vice-president, and Mary Bland is secretary.

"Even if we had known the hard work and study we would have to do, we would have signed up anyway. We're that determined," said Bonnie Savage, speaking about the program.

Nancy Hazel, who wanted to do something pertaining to a hospital, entered the program at the college "as soon as it was offered."

Cynthia Buie has enjoyed the training at the hospital she has been able to put "into practice what I've learned in the classroom."

"I like the program," stated Connie Roderick. "It is an all around balance of nursing courses as well as college courses, and there is a college environment."

Jessie Davis feels "The facilities here are equal to those elsewhere."

BACK TO CLASS—Nursing students not only attend classes at the James Walker Memorial Hospital, but also attend regular college classes. These nursing students are preparing to go to class in the nursing department located in Hoggard Hall.

Three Instructors Staff Department

Wilmington College nursing department is staffed by three well-qualified instructors and is under the direction of Miss Luretta Booe.

Miss Booe received her diploma in nursing from North Carolina Baptist Hospital, her B.S. degree in Nursing Education from Duke University and her M.S. in Nursing Education from the University of Texas.

She has also attended the University of Maryland, the University of California, and Texas-Western College.

She has almost unlimited experience in the nursing field, having served as supervisor of the medical wards for the Army Nurses' Corps, as an instructor at the School of Nursing of the University of North Carolina. She was also director of the Associate Degree Program of Nursing at Lander College in Greenwood, S. C.

Miss Dorothy Lee Dixon, Assistant Professor of Nursing, graduated from the University of Maryland Hospital School of Nursing and received her associate of arts degree from Wilmington College and her B.S. and M.S. degrees in Nursing Education from Duke University.

Miss Dixon was formerly an instructor at James Walker Memorial Hospital School of Nursing and taught industrial nursing for the North Carolina Shipbuilding Company.

The other member of the nursing staff is Miss Mary Alice Whitfield. A graduate of James Walker Memorial Hospital School of Nursing, she received her B.S. and M.S. degrees in Public Health from the School of Public Health of the University of North Carolina.

Mrs. Jane Lowe is also working with the nursing students at the hospital.

SENIORS MEET—At this senior class meeting Jim Smith was elected as vice president of his class. Reports on the class project of a sun dial to be placed in front of Kenan Hall were given. Also, any senior who was not measured for their cap and gown for graduation should have this done immediately. (photo by Brindell).

French Students Form Le Cercle Francais

by Marion Loftus

A new club, Le Cercle Francais, began during Winter Quarter, 1967, at the suggestion of Dr. Lloyd Bishop, head of the Language Department.

The Constitution for the club, presented to the Student Senate by Ellen Davis, was passed unanimously. It states that the club's purpose is "to give French majors, minors, and other interested people a chance to appreciate the French language."

Le Cercle Francais is composed of active and honorary members. Active members will consist of students majoring or minoring in French, plus the outstanding students in elementary and intermediate French, with the recommendation of the French professors. All French professors are honorary members.

David Allen, president of the club, called it "a very worthwhile organization. The singing of French songs, especially, for me, the French National Anthem, is inspiring and gives a real appreciation of the French culture."

The club meets primarily to sing French songs, converse in the language, and familiarize the members with the French culture. Eventually, the group hopes to learn and present a play in French.

Ellen Davis, club member, stated that the organization of a French Club was "a very good idea, because there hasn't been one in a long time. This gives the students interested in French an opportunity, other than class, to express themselves in the French language."

Since the club's organization there have been several meetings. The first was held at the college; however, it was decided to hold future meetings off-campus. This, members felt, would provide a more comfortable atmosphere.

Dr. Bishop held one meeting at his home, and club members, French professors, and their wives sang French songs, drank wine prepared French-style, and discussed plans for future meetings.

Fraternity Elects New Officers

Sigma Phi Kappa Rush Week will be April 11 and 13. All eligible males are invited to attend.

Brothers and pledges of this fraternity ushered at the speech given by Howard K. Smith.

New officers for the fraternity have been elected. Serving as new president is Billy Huggins, Jimmy Meyers is the new vice-president, James Caisson is treasurer, and Bob Berg is secretary.

At the end of Winter Quarter, the club sponsored a French party, held at the home of Lily Donath. The girls provided several French dishes, while the male members and French professors contributed French bread, wine, etc.

Dr. Bishop, according to David Allen, organized the club with the hope that it would prove beneficial in appreciating the French way of life. There is no strict date set for holding meetings, and no officer is necessary to call one. Tuesday night at 8:00 p.m. has been the most convenient time up to the present, but the day and time is usually decided on to suit the majority of the members.

Besides David Allen, other officers in the club are Phyllis Ellis, vice-president, and Cindy Hardy, secretary-treasurer. All officers were appointed by Dr. Bishop; however, new officers will be elected at the first meeting of the Fall Quarter, 1967. Mr. Stites is the club's advisor.

Trustees Appoint Price As Business Officer

A Business Officer has been appointed by the Board of Trustees of Wilmington College to assume the duties performed by the late A. Rexford Willis.

James Adkins Price Jr. has taken over the position of chief finance officer at Wilmington College.

A graduate of New Hanover High School, Price attended the University of North Carolina and received his B.S. degree in commerce with a major in accounting from Columbus University in Washington, D. C.

During 1935-44 he served with the U. S. Corps of Engineers and the U. S. Railway Mail Service, and during 1944-46 with the U. S. Navy.

Price was employed by the Internal Revenue Service in 1946 and was a special agent for Washington, D. C., until 1951. At that time, he was called into active military service.

Released from active duty with the rank of lieutenant in 1952, Price became special agent for the Internal Revenue Service in Greensboro, N. C.

He retired from federal service as supervisory special agent for the Greensboro office in 1966.

A lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve, Price serves as commanding officer of the Naval Reserve Surface Division 6-29 (M) in Wilmington.

Hunt Receives Scholarship

A graduate scholarship in history at Wake Forest College has been awarded to John Joseph Hunt, Jr., a Wilmington College senior history major.

Hunt was president of the Junior Class and served on the Interclub Council. He is a member of the Student NEA and is presently serving as publicity chairman for the Collegiate Civitan Club. In addition to his extracurricular activities, Hunt works 35 hours a week for a local bank.

John has also been awarded the Civitan scholarship for Spring Quarter.

Institute Of Government Sponsors Program

College students interested in a career in local government are urged to participate in a three-month summer internship program sponsored by the Institute of Government.

Twenty-two students will be selected and placed in one of the twelve local governments participating in the program. Students will be given a variety of assignments of a research or administrative nature and will work out of the office of a city or county manager or the head of a major city department.

Interns will report on either June 5 or 15 and work until September 4 or 15. Interns will be paid according to local pay plans, but each intern will receive a minimum of $975 for the 13 weeks period.

Three times during the summer the interns will participate in seminars in Chapel Hill arranged by the Institute of Government.

Students interested in applying for this summer program should apply immediately to Donald Hayman, Institute of Government, Chapel Hill.

Speaking Of Sports

by Carrie Davis

With a game with Williams College on March 20, the Wilmington Seahawks opened the 1967 baseball season. According to Coach Bill Brooks, "This is the first year that the baseball team has been eligible on NAIA for play-off berth, and our goal right now is to win enough games to be able to participate in the play-off."

Will the Seahawks have a successful year? What are the prospects for this season? These questions were presented to Coach Brooks. He said it is too early in the season to tell much about the team's possibility of victory. He did say, however, that the Seahawks will have better reserves this year than it had last year. This fact is due to the increased size of the team.

This season, the team is made up of mostly freshmen and sophomores. Only four boys are back from last season. These boys are as follows: Sandy Dew, at center field; Dan Whisnant, at second base; Pete Daughtery, at third base; and Jimmy Hall, at first base. The team has two pitchers, Seniors Doyle Whitfield and Vic Johnson, back from last year.

At present, Coach Brooks said it is impossible to tell which of the new team members will play each position. "There are at least two boys battling for each position; it's hard to know who'll end up on the first team," said Coach Brooks.

The Seahawks are probably attempting the toughest schedule they have ever attempted. They will be playing the Top Four in the Carolinas Conference, who are High Point, Guilford, Atlantic Christian, and Pfeiffer Colleges.

Sea Squawks Win Title

Mrs. Virginia Braxton and Mrs. Judy Lewis had their most successful intramural girls basketball season as 25 girls participated on and off throughout the five regular season games played.

"This is an improvement over last year," said Mrs. Braxton. "In our first year to get the girls interested, we had only five turn out to play but this season 25 came out and we formed two teams."

The Sea Squawks won all five regular season games that were played against the Rebels.

In the championship contest the Sea Squawks won 32-20 as Patty High burned the nets for 14 points and Aveline Young dunked in 12.

Girls Hold Volleyball Contest

Mrs. Virginia Braxton and Mrs. Judy Lewis of the physical education department held their first girls intramural volleyball contest on March 8.

"We plan to have some more games on Wednesday nights as soon as classes resume in the Spring Quarter," said Mrs. Lewis. "Any female student wishing to participate in the games is welcome to come out."

Also on slate this spring is girls intra-mural softball. Anyone seeking further information should contact Mrs. Braxton or Mrs. Lewis.

Turkey Buzzards Topple Draftees For Intramural Championship

By WALTER HEALEY
Staff Sports Writer

People talk about the fine balance in the Atlantic Coast Conference and how any team can win the ACC post-season basketball tournament. Well this season's intramural tournament proved to be in the tradition of the ACC.

The Turkey Buzzard, paced by Jim Kaylor and Steve Munday, won the tournament championship by downing the Draftees 42-35.

What was surprising about the tournament? The Draftees. This was a team that finished eighth during the regular season and had to meet the top-seeded Aces in the opening round of tourney play.

Larry Corbett, a wheeling-dealing center, had paced the Draftees throughout the season but the team only managed to win three out of nine contests. Ed Lewis, a sharp shooting backcourt ace, was on the roster but wasn't able to play until tournament time. These two bombers got together and made the Draftees move as they upset the Aces, 62-56, in the opening round of play.

Lewis was the sparkplug they needed for this game as he burned the hoops for 27 points. Corbett threw in 17.

The Aces had taken a 32-38, halftime lead behind the shooting of Jim Parmenter who scored 20 points in the game. Mark Young scored 13 points, Bill High 12, and, Larry Boylan nine.

In other first round action the Circle K moved into the semifinals as the Draft Dodgers forfeited their game.

The Groggs had little trouble in knocking off the Unknowns as Chuck Cuppett scored 18 points, Sterling Howard added 15, and captain Bob Vaughn 14.

The Turkey Buzzards made it a romp putting four men in double figures as they passed College Civitan 78-42.

Steve Munday paced all scorers with 19 points for the Buzzards. Jim Kaylor hit for 15 points, Wayne Stancil had 14, Walt Healey nailed 10 and Wayne Barker, the player coach of the Buzzards pumped in eight.

The Buzzards fast break worked to perfection behind the fine rebounding of Bud Smith and Munday and the play-making of Kaylor.

Hunt paced the Civitan squad with 15 points while Griffin added 13.

The dynamic combination of Corbett and Lewis turned the trick again against the Groggs in the semifinal round. This time Corbett was the high scoring out-dueling Cuppett of the Groggs on the inside as he scored 24 points to Cuppett's 20. Lewis, who was tightly hounded by Coward throughout the contest, scored eight buckets for 16 points as the Draftees pulled out a 49-44 victory.

The Draftee defense held high scoring Sterling Coward to six points but couldn't contain lefty ace Ed Lemon who dunked in 14 points.

With Jim Kaylor and Steve Munday throwing them in from all angles the Turkey Buzzards, who hit ten clutch free throws in the waning minutes, nudged out second seeded Circle K club, 55-49.

Kaylor scored 26 points for the Buzzards and Munday 17.

Don Harritan was the high scorer for the Circle K with 14 points. Phil Oakley, who sparked a late rally which fell short, scored 11 points and Wayne Kellum added eight.

The first few minutes of the championship contest was a saw-saw battle as both teams took the lead and lost it. A jumper from the head of the key by Walt Healey, who scored all 11 of his points in the first half, put the Buzzards ahead to stay at 10-8. With Sam Long, Bud Smith, and Munday working the boards the Buzzards moved to a 25-13 halftime lead.

In the second half the Draftees fought back and cut the lead to four but clutch shooting by Wayne Stansil, Steve Munday and Jim Kaylor kept the "never-give-up" Draftees at bay.

Kaylor and Stansil scored eight each while Munday added seven as the Draftees put a tough zone defense and worked the ball for the good shot throughout the second half of play taking advantage of some poor shots by Healey and Buzzard ball handling mistakes.

Corbett paced all scorers with 18 points while Lewis netted 12 markers.

Student Calls Registration 'Chaotic'

"It's a chaotic situation," states Glenda Phillips, junior, speaking about registration. The day after the registration mumble, The Seahawk took a small survey to see student comments about this "chaotic situation."

"The present system is terrible," said Marty Farrar, sophomore. But sophomore Jack Sheehan disagrees. "It was an improvement over the previous ones. Sophomore Mark Farr commented, 'It's better than the old system. It shows the college is trying to progress. Some problems are due to bad planning.' Freshman Robert Beverage has 'never thought about it'.

Records Should Be Kept

"They did a lot by letting us take everything home," says sophomore John Blum. He "Punished records should be kept from quarter to quarter so we don't have to tell out those 'commenced cards' excluded sophomores. Randy D. Lago.

Lamar Baker, sophomore, seemed to voice the major complaint about registration when she said, "I don't like the long lines." She added, "Registration is all right, but without a computer the school can't handle the lines."

Paying Slow Point

"The only slow point was in paying," said sophomore Jim Crockett. "It should perhaps be well to have two separate places at which to pay one's registration—payment seemed to be the main problem," said Jennifer Smith, junior. Junior Danny Martin complained, "I don't like the lines to pay the money. Sometimes I got to be done about those lines."

"I suggest that to avoid lines waiting to pay money, students pay their fees in the department in which they are majoring," said Tom Simmons. Marty Farrar suggests, "After preregistration, students should be given their cards and allowed to register right away."

More Lines Needed

"Two or three lines instead of just one would save time," says Jack Sheehan. "More stations should be set up where they could cut lines in half," states Earl Crisp, senior. "I think you should have two of everything," senior Carol Benton commented.

"There should be two lines to speed things up," freshman Phil Galloway said. Freshman Eddie Strickland believes, "Checks should be made out before going into the office. People writing checks slow up the line."

Sophomore Betty Frink has suggested having "the scholarship and loans line going in one side of the office so these students can pay immediately so they will not have to wait in another line." "They should have someone with the scholarship man to take money," commented Linda Lanier, sophomore.

Registration at End of Quarter

"Students should register before the quarter is over, the last five days could be set aside for registration," freshman L. T. Hines has said. Agreeing with him was freshman Paul Baker who said "There is no simpler way unless you register at the end of the quarter."

Sophomore Kathy Bradley seemed to have a novel idea. "A dollar should be exacted from each student and with this money the administration could buy a copy machine. At the beginning of each quarter, students could pay a nickel and have permanent cards copied."

But as senior Harold Phillips has said, "Changes are needed, but I'm not sure what changes would work."

Try-Outs Set For Production

Try-outs will be held April 3 and 4 at Thalian Hall for "The Recruiting Officer" by the Thalias and Wilmington College Theatre. These try-outs will start at 8:00 p.m.

"The Recruiting Officer" was written by George Farquhar and first produced in 1706. This eighteenth century comedy deals with the humorous situations confronting the conscription of troops in a small town. It is written with such vividness that the author must have drawn upon his own experience in the writing.

The play calls for a cast of thirteen men and four women plus extras. The ages are varied and the range is rather large from old to teen-agers.

Anyone desiring a role in the play or work backstage is cordially invited to these open try-outs on Monday and Tuesday nights.

Compter Course College Offers

An eight-week seminar in PL 1 is being sponsored as a public service by the Wilmington College Computer Advisory Committee.

The objective of the seminar is to give participants a minimum working knowledge of PL/1, a computer programming language designed to enable users to write application programs of greater diversity and scope on a machine independent level.

Allen J. Barwick, coordinator of the seminar, pointed out that the course is for beginners. A more detailed course will be offered by Wilmington College in the Fall of 1967, he said.

The class, which will be open to all interested persons, will meet each Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 9:30, beginning April 4.

Interested persons should contact Allen J. Barwick, Director of Institutional Research and Development at Wilmington College, for further information.

Hudson Announces 'Mikado' Cast

The roles in the Wilmington College production of Gilbert and Sullivan's MIKADO have been announced by Mr. Loyd Hudson, chairman of the music department. Gaye Newber will sing the part of Yum-Yum, Paul Roderick will sing Nanki-Poo, and Edward Moore will sing Ko-Ko.

Other roles will be sung by Cynthia Hardy, Pitt-Sing; Linda Bagby, Peep-Bo; Barbara Knowles, Katisha; Sam Garner, Pooh-Bah; Terry Wortley, Pish-Tush; and Eric Staton, the Mikado.

The College Chorus will participate as the schoolgirls, nobles, guards and coolies of the Japanese town of Titipu.

Present plans are being formulated for the presentation of MIKADO at the College and on the annual spring tour of eastern North Carolina. Dates will be announced for the local production and the tour at a later date.

Burns Speaks To Senate Meeting

The Student Senate of Wilmington College held its last meeting of the Winter Quarter on Wednesday night, March 8, in the Pub.

Frank Burns, in charge of the cafeteria in the Pub, addressed the meeting concerning the problem of students playing cards in the Pub, and also the problem of students throwing cigarettes on the floor, breaking ashtrays, etc.

Mr. Burns stated that card playing in the Pub between the hours of 11:15 a.m. and 1:15 p.m., prevented students having a place to sit down and eat their food. Since this is the busiest time of the day,

Mr. Burns suggested that card playing be limited to the upstairs section of the Pub during this time, and that the downstairs section be reserved for eating only.

Grady Griffith suggested that two or more senators give an hour a day to patrol the Pub area, and students not cleaning up would be turned over to the Judicial Committee.

Marty Farrar stated that the present Pub rules should simply be enforced, and that a new rule be added to cover card playing. He then proposed a motion to prevent card playing in the downstairs area of the Pub between the hours of 11:15 a.m. and 1:15 p.m. The motion was passed unanimously.

Neil Brenneke suggested that a juke box be installed in the upstairs portion of the Pub, and this idea was turned over to Mr. Burns for further investigation.

An announcement was made by the Honor System Committee that two replies from other colleges had been received concerning their Honor Systems. The Committee is scheduled to make a complete report at the next meeting on April 3.

Ramsaur Collects Parking Fines

Parking fines will no longer be paid in the bookstore. Students who have fines should go to the maintenance building.

Nancy Ramsaur will collect parking fines between 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. each day.

Double fines will be in effect this quarter. If a fine is not paid within seven days, it will double.

COAST GUARD WANTS SENIORS

WASHINGTON, D. C.—College seniors or graduates can fulfill their military obligation as officers in the U. S. Coast Guard. Qualified applicants are notified of selection for Officer Candidate School before they enlist.

OCS classes convene in September and February at the Coast Guard Reserve Training Center in historic Yorktown, Virginia. There the carefully selected college graduates receive 17 weeks of intensive, highly specialized training. Upon graduation they are commissioned as ensigns in the Coast Guard Reserve and serve on active duty for three years. Those qualified may be offered flight training.

Coast Guard officers receive the same pay and benefits as officers of other Armed Forces. Included are 30 days of annual leave and free medical and dental care.

Peacetime duties of the Coast Guard include law enforcement, search and rescue, oceanographic research, marine safety, and the maintenance of aids to navigation.

Information on the U. S. Coast Guard Officer Candidate School may be obtained from Commandant (PTP-2), U. S. Coast Guard Headquarters, Washington, D. C. 20226 or the nearest Coast Guard Recruiter.

Sorority Plans Rush Week

Complying with IFC regulations, Chi Sigma Phi's first rush week will be the week of April 10.

Rush Week will begin Monday, April 10 at 7:30 p.m. upstairs in the Student Services Building. All girls are invited to attend this Rush Party.

Other activities for Rushweek will be held throughout the week. Rush week will end Saturday afternoon, April 15.

DEAR FELLOW JUNIORS-The above picture was taken on Wednesday, April 15, at approximately 7:45 p.m. The occasion was the third attempt at having a Junior class meeting. Ironically the picture is not entirely appropriate. Fortunately these juniors, myself, Eric Staton, and Glenn Cavanaugh, were able to round up between 12 and 15 of their fellow class members. Were you there? If not, you missed a great deal that may possibly affect your status next year. Sincerely, John Hunt, President of the Junior Class. photo by Blaustein)

Dr. Won-Kyung Cho To Appear On Campus

Dr. Won-Kyung Cho, Korean classical dancer, scholar, and dance critic, will appear on campus April 19-20 under sponsorship of the Fine Arts Committee.

Dr. Cho will give lectures on Korean art, music, and theatre. He will also give a performance of Korean dancing.

The time schedules for Dr. Cho's lectures have not been set yet, according to Randy Del Lago, Fine Arts committee chairman. "We will notify the department heads so they can announce the times to the students," said Randy.

Dr. Cho graduated with the M.A. degree from Yonsei University in 1955. For the next five years he was assistant professor and visiting lecturer on Korean literature and Dance at Yonsei University, Ewha Women's University and other colleges in Seoul. He danced at the National Theatre and at the City Hall Theatre, and conducted his own Dance Studio in Seoul, where he also served as Dance Critic for four of Korea's leading newspapers.

He came to the United States in 1960 and studied at Juilliard School of Music and at the Martha Graham School of Contemporary Dance. He has given dance recitals at Carnegie Recital Hall, Seattle World's Fair. He has given dance recital, lecture-demonstrations, workshop seminars, and classroom lectures at leading colleges, universities, museums, and television stations throughout the country.

Dr. Cho published an illustrated booklet "Dances of Korea" in 1962. He choreographed and performed in "Teahouse of the August Moon" at the Hodges Gardens Summer Theatre in Louisiana. He was recently awarded the doctor of fine arts degree from Monmouth College in Illinois.

He was visiting lecturer at the speech department, University of Wisconsin, fall of 1963, and 1964, and at the University of Washington, during the summer session of 1964 and 1965.

He had a four week European Tour in May of 1965, and will return there in May of 1967.

Gerald Goodman, Troubadour, will appear on campus May 24. "He sings and accompanies himself on the harp, stated Randy. His songs include classical, folk and popular ballads.

FARMER'S DANCE-Dr. Won-Kyung Cho will appear on campus next week sponsored by the Fine Arts Committee.

NCCOP Staff To Be Available For Teaching Efforts, Advice

The Director of the North Carolina Computer Orientation Program (NCCOP) has announced that Wilmington College will be one of the first two colleges to be connected with the Triangle Universities Computation System (TUCC).

The computer terminal will be installed in Room 216 of the Library building on April 24.

According to Allen J. Barwick, director of Institutional Research and Development at Wilmington College, the installation will be a Model ASR Teletype unit, connected via dial-up telephone facilities to the IBM System/360 Model 75 computer housed in the TUCC.

The Model 33 ASR has facilities for preparation of punched paper tapes and for reading tapes

Juniors Conduct Class Meeting

The Junior Class was finally able to hold a class meeting last Tuesday, April 5, after President John Hunt and newly-elected Vice-President Eric Staton begged some juniors studying in the library to take out a few minutes to attend.

The main purpose of the meeting was to set up a nominating committee to nominate officers for the Senior Class for next year. After three attempts at a meeting, this committee was finally appointed. The members are: Eric Staton, chairman, Catherine Proctor, Glen Cavanaugh, and Manuel Machiran. This committee is open to suggestions from the student body, and any Junior interested in running for an office next year is urged to submit his name to any committee member. The purpose of this committee, according to Eric Staton, is "to overcome the general apathy in the Junior Class."

Manuel Machiran also stressed the importance of an active student body, appealing to the students to run for the office of Student Senator in the up-coming elections.

The next meeting of the Junior class will be April 18 at 8:00 p.m. in the Pub. The time was moved up from 7:30 because this was felt to be more convenient for juniors. Members of a publicity committee plan to put posters announcing this meeting on every door in every building on campus.

At the next meeting, John Hunt stated, a committee for next year to enforce and issue senior parking tickets will be established. Hunt feels that if this committee is set up now it will avoid confusion next fall.

Also at the next meeting will be a continuation of the discussion on the honor system. Since this is presently being discussed in the Student Senate for possible use next year, officers of the Junior Class would like to get opinions from the juniors on the idea. Hunt remarked that he felt it would help Wilmington College gain accreditation if the student body passed the honor system.

Manuel Machiran pointed out that the Honor System Committee is due to give a complete report at the next Senate meeting on Monday night, April 17. Any student body member may attend, and is urged to attend, to find out about this proposed system. Also, any student may speak out at any Student Senate meeting, and is encouraged to do so.

In addition to the election of Eric Staton as Vice-President, Jerry Bron was elected Junior Senator.

Wilco Students Organize Political Affairs Club

"To increase student interest and make the student government more competitive and therefore more responsible to the students," was cited by President Mike Meier of the newly-organized Student Political Activities Club at its March 30 meeting as a reason for its formation.

Related purposes of the organization are to increase student knowledge of local and state politics and to give more unity to the Political Science Department, at the same time supplementing the education of prospective graduate students.

Plan Activities

"Several activities are planned to further these goals," Secretary Joanne Walton said. "Officials of local and state prominence are scheduled to speak on various aspects of political activity."

Before the official organization of the club, the members of SPAC were influential in obtaining such speakers as George T. Clark and Gilbert Burnett of the State Legislature to explain local political campaign tactics.

On the national level, Stewart Brock, representing the Committee on Political Education of the AFL-CIO, spoke to several groups on campus.

Require Active Participation

A more active participation will be required of members in assisting the New Hanover League of Women Voters in compilation of the book - Know New Hanover County.

and submitting them to the computer. "The staff of NCCOP, though limited, will be available for initial teaching efforts and advice," Barwick said.

"Jim Scoggins, Circuit Rider for the NCCOP, will be here for three days beginning April 24. All faculty interested in using the computer should contact me so that we make arrangements to talk to Mr. Scoggins," Barwick added.

SPAC plans to interview each candidate for offices in the coming student elections (May 10) and publish its findings in an independent information bulletin to be available to all students.

Active participation in elections by members and endorsement of candidates are also planned.

Open to All Students

Meier said he hoped all students would participate in the club. He said, "Most meetings will be open to all students, but in order to plan programs and plot future club policy, some meetings will be open to members only."

No dues are required of members. "The basic requirement is an interest in politics," Meier said.

Recommended but not required is a 2.0 quality point average and credit in at least one political science course.

Thomas Scism is academic advisor for the group.

Contest Deadline Set For May 1

The following rules have been announced for the literary contest sponsored by THE SEAHAWK and the Fine Arts Committee:

1. The contest is limited to full-time Wilmington College students.
2. No more than three poetry entries and two prose selections may be submitted.
3. All entries must be typed, double-spaced, in triplicate, and have title pages giving name, address, and class. No name should appear on the entry itself.
4. All entries must be turned in by May 1 to Dr. Joanne Corbett, head of the English department.

The contest is divided into two areas: prose and poetry. Students may enter both categories.

First prize winners in each category will be awarded $25. Second prize will be $15. Third prize will be $10.

Winning entries will be published in THE SEAHAWK.

Dead

What is wrong with this campus? The words apathy and stagnation have been used. That implies nothing more, for people who want it explained in simpler terms, than an "I don't give a darn" attitude.

If you are going to look back on your college career as thinking everything is too childish for you to participate in, there is no need for you to even to want a college campus. Why do you need it?

We are changing our minds when we speak of the students of this college. We aren't going to call them apathetic or stagnants, but just plain dead. Welcome to Wilmington College, the place where death runs rampant! Things die here before they even begin.

Take the case of the new constitution, or rather the constitution that is going to be rewritten—sometime. It was at least a month ago when this committee to rewrite the constitution was organized. Rah, rah, rah for an inactive committee. They have had one meeting. Well, students of this committee, if you are still here next year, please get to work because time is running out this year.

Students speak of the administration putting the quietus on everything and anything the students want to attempt to do. This is not always true. Although the administration is not the best, fighting them is not going to get the students anywhere. If we wanted we could write many editorials complaining about what is called the administration of the college, but it is not the administration who makes the student life at the college what it is. They are here to guide the student and we are here to be led. But it is awfully hard to do anything in a coffin.

We are not here to bury the College. We would like to see it resurrected, but that is hard to do without support. We know faculty and administration will support us—if we are reasonable in our demands, but you, Mr., Mrs., or Miss Wilmington College Student must support us. We can't work for you unless you work for and with us!

Until that time comes, enjoy your stay in the coffin. Isn't it nice and quiet in there?

Volunteers

Student body elections are coming. This is, if you remember, a time when the student artist creates statues for next year's statue garden we call the Senate. Many times, despite the number of students now at the college, not enough students are willing to struggle to enter the statue garden either as a class officer or senator.

An election is not an election unless more than one person is running for an office. It is needless to say that people need to be nominated and people need to fill the positions of class officers and senators, etc. It is also needless to say that this election should not be a popularity contest, should not be for status seekers, but should be for students genuinely interested in student government. Sometimes it is hard to find people of this last group.

The Junior Class has come up with an idea which all classes might want to follow. They have set up a nominating committee to find people to run for the offices of their class. They are not only looking for volunteers, but are also going to try to find people to run. In this way they will be assured of having people to serve as officers for their class.

This is one of the best ideas we have heard this year and we hope that the sophomores and freshmen will follow the example of the juniors. (Of course, we hasten to add before leaving, it might be hard to get a class meeting together.

Lonely

Editorials about specific people are always nice to write, especially if they are in praise of someone. It would be nice if we could single out more people on this campus to say that they are neither apathetic, stagnants, or as we have decided, dead. Junior John Hunt is the topic of this little editorial.

John is a dean's list student, works at a local bank, is a member of high standing of the Civitan Club. He was winner of the Civitan scholarship for this quarter as well as being president of the Junior Class. It is in this last vein that we wish to speak about.

Beginning in what was either late February or early March John wanted to have a Junior Class meeting. Three juniors arrived. They set a date for the next meeting when only one junior other than John came. John did not give up, and last week he was able to have a meeting with nine people, several who were gotten out of the library to come to the meeting. The juniors showed good judgment when they elected this student, but they certainly aren't doing anything to help him. They might be reminded, as well as the other classes, that no one person can accomplish everything!

Random Thought

by John P. Blair, Jr.

Why take a foreign language? This is a question which many of us non-language majors ask ourselves.

Pros and Cons

To tell the truth, there are pros and cons toward a language, other than English, which many claim is foreign to them. The reasons for are ones we'll meet in future years as we expand in the world and our interests diversify: reasons against a foreign language present themselves here and now and so I will discuss them first.

I'm sure we have, at some time, I wanted them.

I cannot speak for the other languages, however, I am sure they will admit, without too much prompting, to being burdened with not a little homework but in German we are working in an area which entails just a little work, like translating Nazi documents, which is interesting. But while it is interesting, it is also time consuming. It takes me two hours to translate and even longer if I want to have any understanding of the subject material.

Legitimate Gripe

For these reasons, and we students don't need many, language is just bothersome and, as far as these arguments go, it is a legitimate gripe.

These aren't the only arguments, however. When I entered college I was informed that German (French has recently been eliminated from this) might help determine, Lord forbid! where I am sent by Uncle Sam upon my induction. Knowing the military, however, this is a first-class reason for assignment for one of our Eastern fronts.

Other Reasons

There are other reasons, such as that undying search for knowledge that is constantly driving onward. Besides, who knows, maybe somewhere is a Fräulein, and . . .

Wolfe Bites

The Kandy-Colored Tangerine-Flake Streamline Baby. Tom Wolfe. The Noonday Press, New York. 1966. 339 pp. $1.95.

Tom Wolfe is a murderous writer, especially if you happen to be a burler, or a critic, or an American. Tom Wolfe is the bugaboo of just about any kind of protestuousness, including that involved in being a social critic, which, among other things, is what he is.

Developing Own Culture

America, says Tom Wolfe, is developing its own culture. This in itself is news, but Tom Wolfe is among the few to perceive the fact that nobody wants to admit it. For years we have been importing foreign culture in lieu of developing one of our own.

Because the culture is new, the burghers have refused to recognize its existence. The new culture has reared its ugly head in the form of Las Vegas, North Wilkesboro, N. C. Speedway, customized cars in the "Dionysian" mode rather than the classical style to which Detroit more or less faithfully adheres, demolition derbies, Peppermint lounge, and the Nanny Mafia, to name a few. Each aspect of the new culture is the subject of an essay.

Last American Hero

Closest to home—that is, closest to the area which is graced by the presence of Wilmington College—is North Wilkesboro. Speedway. The hero of the essay is none other than Junior Johnson, who learned to drive by running moonshine liquor for his old daddy. Johnson is the last American Hero, a sort of Robin Hood type:

Even today, while Johnson is making tons of money racing late-model Fords all over the South and while his old daddy is serving time in Federal Penitentiary, good old boys imagine at night that they hear Junior's souped-up Olds roaring across the bridge at Millersville.

The significance of Junior Johnson, besides the fact that he represents the last of a dying breed, is that a large part of our culture is based on the automobile. The fact is so obvious that it should not be necessary to state it, except that the burghers refuse to admit it.

To take Wolfe's view is to see the new, developing American culture as wild and woolly. The only question is: Will we get away with it? Wolfe thinks so. He is aware of the utter triviality of much of the new culture and of the sordidness and stupidity of much of American life in general, but he also realizes the potentialities of American civilization. He is depending on an elite group of intellectuals (not in the formal sense of the word, just people who use their minds) to save us. As Wolfe concludes, after having related the story of a friend who achieved the impossible by squealing a New York driver, "Well, Hugh Troy has taken one big-leaguer out of the game—but there are so many millions to go."

Letter To The Editor

Little Support

Perhaps there is something dead around here, as many people are saying; but is it the student senate? The members of the senate do sometimes throw rocks in their meetings, which seems rather difficult if they are supposed to be statues. Many of us would like to see the senate accomplish more than they have this year.

One of the senate's problems is an old one of lack of student support. This non-existent backing is evident outside of the senate in many areas of student-campus life. It would be a welcome change if a majority of students would concern themselves with their college and at least put forth some effort toward improvement.

The freshman were very successful in one of their projects, again only a few people did the actual work. In part these few people have shown up upper classmen in the matter of fun raising.

The situation in the pub seems to be improving. Let's hope this is intentional and permanent.

May I remind all students that student body elections are scheduled for the third Friday in May and last year's self-study indicated poor student participation. At least, exercise your right to vote and support your candidate—go out and look for them!

Your Fine Arts Committee is trying to finance what should be a very good program for the last of May. They need your support also. Your support will help to expand and improve programs for next year, more variety, for example.

I would like to thank the people who helped to make the Azalea Festival's Queen's Ball an outstanding success this year. Thank you once again.

Charges Fallacious

To the Editor:

We frequently hear of the apathy of college students, their lack of involvement, their refusal to accept responsibility, etc. There is on the Wilmington College campus a group of students who continue to demonstrate the fallacy of these charges. The Engineers Club for several years has assisted in the setting-up, the policing, and most of the physical work at the Southeastern N. C. District Science Fair. Their efforts were doubly appreciated at the 1967 District Fair on Saturday, March 18. Not only did these young men take time off to help with the fair from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on a Saturday but it was Saturday between quarters and their working on the Fair cut their Spring "break" in two. On behalf of the Science Fair Committee I would like to thank personally Ben Granito, Hubert Huffman, Bobby Lee, Duncan McFayden, Jerry Waldorf, Dan Walker, and all other members of the Engineers Club, and to congratulate them on a job well done.

Fair Director

Squawks

by Salli Seahawk

And they tell us not to litter the campus! But it wasn't his fault. Don't blame Mr. Noe. The fertilizer put out last week for the "nice green grass" was ordered to come on Saturday. But as is the case on this campus, things never really happen when they should.

But at least, and for a few days, perhaps students used the sidewalks. However unfortunate that may be. Although the grass, we hope, will grow and turn a lovely shade of green, how long are we going to have to smell the smell and look at the chicken feathers

SEAHAWKS SEEK NAIA BERTH

BY WALTER HEALEY, JR.

The baseball team knocked off Colby College 4-2 April 6 to up its season record to 9-4. The Seahawks after the first 14 games of the season (there was a tie) are 6-3 in NAIA action.

The Seahawks have five remaining games at home all at night at Brooks Field with a starting time of 7:30.

The remaining home games are April 19, The Citadel; April 24, St. Andrews; April 28, Pembroke College; May 6, Baptist College; and May 15, Campbell College. The Campbell game will wind up a 30 game schedule for coach Bill Brooks and the 'Hawks, who are looking to gain a berth for the NAIA tourney.

In their victory over Colby all four runs were unearned against losing pitcher Bob Kimball. Three errors by Coby allowed the 'Hawks to score all their runs.

Sandy Dew paced the Seahawks with three hits in four trips while scoring twice.

Jimmy Johnson started for Wilmington but had to be relieved by Jim Sanders in the sixth. Sanders struck out six in 3½ innings of work.

The key to the victory was three double plays the 'Hawks turned over, including one in the ninth with two men on base.

Johnson and Sanders allowed only four hits between them.

The Seahawks opened the season with six straight wins. They dumped Williams College, 6-2, in the season opener as Doyle Whitfield and Ed Lewis combined for a five-hitter.

The 'Hawks jumped off to a quick 5-0 lead after two innings as they took advantage of a Williams miscue. Sparky Johnson and Sammy Askew, a Kenly native, provided the power in the frame with two long doubles.

Ex-marine Chuck Cuppett went all the way and whitewashed Pfeiffer College as the Seahawks won 4-0. Jim Sanders went the distance in the second meeting with Pfeiffer as Wilmington won easily, 9-1.

Pfeiffer collected two of the four hits Cuppett gave up in the first inning. An error loaded the bases for Falcons, but a fine defensive play by Jim Hall on a line drive off the bat of Ken Rhyme, enabled the 'Hawks to double off Randy Richardson who was on third and end the threat.

Wayne Johnson, who banged out three hits, drove in the second Seahawk run on a broken bat base hit after Hall's sacrifice fly had given the 'Hawks a 1-0 lead.

Sanders, who is a freshman, fired a three-hitter against the Falcons in the teams' second meeting. Eight Seahawks slapped out hits, including a solo 375-foot blast by Sanders in the fifth inning.

Vic Johnson, who is the only other senior on the club besides Whitfield, outlasted Randy Johnson of Atlantic Christian College to gain a 2-1 victory in ten innings.

Vic allowed ACC three hits in the second inning and only six scattered ones after that.

Sandy Dew had three hits against ACC, Wayne Johnson and Pete Daughtry each collected two. Three ACC players collected two safeties apiece.

The Seahawks bombed Atlantic Christian 9-1 in their second meeting as Whitfield won his second game on a four hitter.

The 'Hawks power was supplied by Sparky Johnson with three hits, Wayne Johnson and Dan Whisnant each had two. Wilmington scored seven runs in the first three innings off the Bulldogs. Sparky Johnson blasted a two run double in the first, and, hits by Wayne Johnson and Whisnant in the third tallied runs.

The 'Hawks extended their winning streak to six as they won the first end of a double header with Marshall College, 4-3. The Thundering Herd came back in the night cap to break a four game losing streak and stopped Wilmington 9-1.

Blimp Foy hurled the first four innings as he and Jimmy Johnson combined to limit Marshall to three hits in the game.

The Seahawks were trailing 3-1 as they committed four errors in the first two frames to allow Marshall to pull ahead. In the fourth, Sandy Dew doubled in two runs and Elmer Maley cracked a tie breaking single minutes later to score Dew.

Tom Harris flipped a three-hitter against the 'Hawks in the second game with Marshall batters exploding for 11 hits. Tom Yonker paced Marshall with three hits, Fantuzzo and Mazur each had two apiece.

Sandy Dew was the only bright spot for the losers as he collected two of the three 'Hawks safeties.

High Point College came in for a two day stand to sweep a pair of one run ball games from Wilmington, 6-5 and 2-1.

The Panthers scored five runs in the fifth inning off loser Chuck Cuppett as he faced 10 men in the inning and allowed only three hits. In between the hits were two walks and three errors.

Wilmington came back and tied the game in a four run eighth inning as the 'Hawk batters finally got to Ray Blossie the eventual winning pitcher. Daughtry blasted a run producing double. A single by Whisnant followed by Cuppett who helped his own cause with a long double to score two runs and tie the game.

A hit batter, a sacrifice and a solid single to right center by George Lare, scored the winning run in the tenth.

Bloose was outstanding striking out 16 batters and walking but four. Cuppett, who evened his record out at 1-1, struck out 10 and walked four.

Forrest Dower scattered 10 Seahawk hits the next day and struck out ten as High Point edged the 'Hawks again.

Jim Sanders allowed the Panthers only six hits but two came back in the third frame to score a run and three were grouped together in the sixth to tally the winning run.

Sandy Dew collected three hits for the Seahawks and drove in Whisnant in the fifth for Wilmington's only tally. Pete Daughtry went two for four in the game.

Guilford College, which finished sixth in the NAIA tournament last year, split with the Seahawks in their two day stint.

The Seahawks scored a run in each of the first three innings of the first game to edge the Quakers, 3-2, as Whitfield won his third game of the season.

The 'Hawks scored in the first frame on a single by Dew, a bloop double by Jerry Martin, and a single by Askew.

The Seahawks scored in the second on two errors and in the third on a double by Wayne Johnson and a single by Mike Brannan.

Tommy Grayson was the leading hitter for the Quakers as he banged out three hits off Whitfield. Both Guilford runs were unearned.

Askew paced Wilmington with three hits off loser Ed Parker.

The Quakers came back the next afternoon with a 5-2 decision over the 'Hawks.

Chuck Cuppett absorbed his second loss of the season as he gave up four earned runs and ten hits.

Tommy Grayson continued his mastery of Seahawk pitching with three more hits to bring his total to six in two contests.

Pete Daughtry paced Wilmington with three hits against winner Bill Burchette.

The Quakers scored what proved to be the winning runs in a three-run third inning.

The Seahawks then played a 3-3, 15-inning tie with Lynchburg before blasting out 18 hits against St. Andrews in a 21-9 victory.

Whitfield started for the 'Hawks but was relieved in the fourth by Cuppett, who went the rest of the way to gain credit for his second victory in four innings.

Wilmington had a six-run second, a seven-run seventh and a five-run ninth. On the whole Sandy Dew had four hits, Dan Whisnant three, Sam Askew three, Wayne Johnson three, and Mike Brannan had two.

The Knights committed seven errors as only 12 of the Seahawk runs were earned.

Speaking Of Sports

by Carrie Davis

It seems appropriate that the spotlight should first fall upon the two boys who are the oldest team members. These boys—the only seniors on the team—are Victor Edmund Johnson and Doyle Irving Whitfield.

Excellent Leaders

Coach David Miller describes these boys as "both excellent leaders," and further states, "Both are very good college pitchers." Vic has a 1-0 record, at present, and Doyle's record is 3-0.

Vic Johnson is a 22-year-old Tarrytown, N. Y., native. A graduate of Irvington High School, Irvington, N. Y., he lettered in three high school sports—football, basketball, and baseball.

In 1959, Vic entered the Armed Forces. While in service, he was active in athletics at the places where he was stationed. He played for Parris Island in 1960, and for Camp Lejeune in 1963. Later during that year, he went to Brazil with the Pan-American baseball team, which won a Silver Medal.

Like Vic, Doyle is a physical education major and a history minor. A native of Mount Olive, Doyle played baseball and football at Mt. Olive High School. A first team baseball star for three years, he made all-conference quarterback during his junior and senior years. His Senior year also saw him receive the honor of playing in an East-West All-Star baseball game.

Hopes to Play Pro Ball

Upon college graduation, Doyle hopes to play professional baseball. Later, he plans to coach and teach high school physical education.

Garner Reviews 'The Cat And The Canary'

by Sam Garner

This review will probably seem a bit too logical in comparison to the last review featured in this newspaper. The primary reason for this is due to the fact that my experience in the theatre has been more practical than literary. With this in mind, and knowing the problems involved in producing a Thalian-College play in historic Thalian Hall, I will begin.

Billed As Melodrama

The Cat and The Canary was billed as a melodrama. The script was—the play was not. The time-honored methods of producing a melodrama were hinted at but not actually evident in this production.

The style of acting did not reflect the type of play until the third act. When the villain was finally discovered to be trusted Charlie, the actions of the characters were melodramatic but, even then, they were played down and not up to the proper level. If the action had been swift and the method broad, the play would have been much more successful. A realistically portrayed melodrama is not "good theatre" anywhere.

Now, discussing the technical side of the play, the production had both good and bad points. I must admit, the good outweighed the bad. The "great hall" was a nice setting for the first and third acts. It possibly could have been a bit more colorful but the atmosphere which was almost created (moody, dull, mysterious) was reflected by the set for these acts.

Lighting Terrible

The bookcase hidden panel was clever as was the picture which moved up to reveal the safe. Complements should be given to those who deserve the credit for the very nice use of these hidden openings. The books in the library were very nicely done. It is a pity, however that they could have not been seen better. The lighting of most of these shows is terrible and this lighting was no exception.

The bedroom set for the second act was almost a total failure. The room did give the impression of being "upstairs" and this was its only asset. It reminded me of a room from a sixty-year-old YMCA in Mexico after the rainy season. The walls were confusing and the painting drab. It is a pity that the primary set was so good and this set was so bad. It would have taken only a black cloth to hide the down left living room wall which extended upstairs into the bedroom. Oh well, one set was good and that is saying a lot.

Satisfactory—Not Good

Finally, the characters of the melodrama. All things considered, the cast did a satisfactory job—not good, satisfactory. A few comments are needed to support this statement, and I must remind you that you are reading only one man's opinion.

The second curtain call was well arranged—maybe not planned this way when the cast turned into Mr. Crosby (Tony Rivenbark), and gave him center stage. This character was by far the best portrayed on the stage. Tony seems to be developing into a fine little character actor and the college theatre is lucky to have him. The show belonged to Mr. Crosby although he only acted in the first act and dropped in during the second. The voice was a bit dull at times, but I have only words of praise for Mr. Crosby.

Deaton a Surprise

Charlie Wilder (George Deaton) was a surprise. George Deaton did one of his best performances in this little endeavor. His change of character from the first two acts to the last one was well done. George's voice and appearance were his best assets. I feel that this character was well developed and equally well portrayed.

Likewise, Barbara Deaton as the dizzy Susan Sillsby came across very well. Her part could have been played in a much more broad way but what she did was well done. Her character is a stock type but it is always a pleasure to see a character one recognizes on stage played well.

Frank Hall, from whom a good performance is always expected, did not let me down. The voice which is all his own was not as sharp as usual and did go with this character. His stage presence reflected his experience in theatre, and he seemed confident and motivated in his manner.

New Faces

It is always nice for a theatre-goer to see new faces on a well-known stage. Chris Deasy and Jeff Jeffery were the new faces this time. Chris' stately appearance and stage beauty were very satisfying. She handled her small part like a pro and I, for one, would like to see her in more plays.

Jeff Jeffery, like Chris, is new. This fledgling however, far outshone some of the more seasoned amateurs on the stage. His actions brought a good change of tempo to the show and he seems to have a good sense of timing. It was a pleasurable experience to see Jeff come on stage as the entire action of the play was lived by his appearance. The fact is that he took a good part from the script and made to come to life in a rewarding performance.

Pretty Heroine

The other characters in the play were satisfactorily handled. Mrs. Mallard's monotone was not loud enough. Anabelle's faints were not the best, and Harry's accent was a bit too thick. On the other hand, Virginia Sponsky looked much the character, Dorothy Pastis was a quiet spoken and pretty heroine, and Jack Gerock did provide the masculine element in fine fashion. Dr. Patterson was a satisfactory character.

"The Cat and The Canary" was interesting and I am happy that I saw it. I enjoyed parts of the play, but, as a whole, I was not impressed.

Swink Announces Cast For Next Production

The cast for George Farquhar's "The Recruiting Officer" which will be presented on 19, 20, and 21 May, in Thalian Hall has been announced by Director Doug W. Swink, professor of Drama at Wilmington College.

Heading the cast are familiar faces to the Wilmington theatre-going audience—Carole Benton as Silvia; Randy Del Lago as Captain Plume; Gerald Dowdy as Melinda; Sam Garner as Captain Brazen; Tony Rivenbark as Kite; and David James as Mr. Worthing.

Also "The Recruiting Officer" cast boasts quite a few new names and faces such as Phyllis Johnson, in the role of Rose; Beth Edwards as Lucy; Doug Cochran as Mr. Scale; Gilbert Tillet as Bullock; David Jones as Costair Pearmain; Michael Reilly as Thomas Apple; and Roy Franzen as Butcher.

Some familiar faces may be recognized in supporting roles—those upon whom rests the task of giving depth to a production. Some of these are Bill Wahlgren in the part of Mr. Ballance; Frank Hall as Mr. Scruple; and Robert Wood as the Constable.

The cast will be rounded out with Cam Baird and Michael Sampley as servants and Tina Forrester, Claudia Smith, Virginia Sponsky and David Swink serving as part of the street scene players.

Hank Blaustein and Al Carrus will serve as stage managers with Anne Fitzgibbon of the Drama and Speech Department as Technical Director. Costumes will be handled by Thelma Sellers and Jan Starling. Kay Teachey will act as prompter. Renee Hartman in charge of make-up, and Richard Thompson, sound effects.

Construction of the unit set will be handled by Bill Alexander, James Allen, Wayne Barker, Norma Cummy, Jan Darby, Robert Hall, Frank Henry, Glenn Hodges, Hank Poisson, Jerry Spell, Osborne Walls, Doyle Whitfield.

This production by the Thaliens and Wilmington College Theatre will bring to a close the 1966-67 season for the joint venture in live theatre for the Port City.

Coach Seeks Team Members

Due to lack of interest there will be no intramural softball unless interested male students go see Coach Dave Miller. Coach Miller is willing to work out a schedule for the remaining weeks of the Spring quarter if more than three people show up to form at least six teams for a meeting.

Now for the feminine aspect of our college, Mrs. Virginia Braxton and Mrs. Judy Lewis, are almost finished with their intra-mural volleyball and wish that any girls interested in intramural softball contact them over at the gym as soon as possible.

National Officer Speaks To Sorority

Preceding Rush Week, which will end tomorrow, Chi Sigma Phi Sorority entertained Miss Margaret Macdonald, a national officer of Alpha Sigma Tau Sorority. Miss Macdonald came to Wilmington to learn more about Chi Sigma Phi and its policies.

Following a conference and lunch with Dean Helena Cheek, sorority sister Debbie Brown took Miss Macdonald on a scenic tour of Wilmington.

Thursday night, Miss Macdonald was the guest of Chi Sigma Phi for dinner at the King Neptune Restaurant at Wrightsville Beach. Later that evening, there was a called meeting, at which Miss Macdonald addressed the sorority on the expectations and benefits of a national sorority.

In her speech, Miss Macdonald stressed the procedure for a local sorority to follow in affiliating with a national one. The last few minutes of her speech were devoted to answering questions which arose during the discussion.

Miss America, Jane Jayroe Enjoys Travel During Reign

by Renee Hartman

"I didn't come on a boat," said Jane Ann Jayroe, Miss America, to one of the many students shaking her hand while she was on campus last Thursday afternoon.

As we talked to this smiling young lady she was busy signing photographs of herself and smiling for the photographers who were milling around in the Pub.

After asking her if she ever became tired of constantly signing autographs she quietly said, "Yes, but it's worth it."

"I've really enjoyed the year," she stated. She compared her year as Miss America to the education received in two or three years of college. "Travel is a type of education you can't receive through books."

"The greatest part of college life is the activities you take part in," said Miss Jayroe. "I was pretty active."

Miss Jayroe attends Oklahoma City University, where she is a Junior majoring in vocal music education. She is a member of the honorary sorority Sigma Alpha Iota which is a professional Music Fraternity and a social sorority, Alpha Chi Omega. Miss Jayroe has served as social chairman and secretary of this sorority.

She is also a member of the college's music chorus.

Miss Jayroe hopes to put her major in vocal music to work either as a career in musical comedy or in teaching.

In speaking about her college campus she commented about the "good music department" and the "basketball."

"I am especially fond of the people of North Carolina," said Miss Jayroe, who quickly added, "and I don't say that in every state."

Although Miss Jayroe did not tour the campus, she did say that "It looks like a very impressive campus. You are lucky to have room to grow."

Club To Purchase Bulletin Boards

Members of the Collegiate Civitan Club sold tickets for the Azalea Open Golf Tournament at the Cape Fear Country Club. This project is the club's major source of revenue for the year.

Civitan has also announced future plans to purchase a bulletin board for each class at Wilco. Not enough room, they feel, is available for each class to publicize their activities and post general announcements.

Reynolds, Crews Explain Q.P. Changes

Reasons for changes in the quality point retention system at Wilmington College have been explained by Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, dean of faculty, and J. Marshall Crews, dean of students and director of admissions.

"These changes were figured out directly from the recoverability of the students," said Dean Crews. "The chief objective is to help the student who is in his third year and has demonstrated his academic abilities."

Changes Extreme

Changes in the requirements for the first three quarters were numerically more extreme than the changes made for the later years. Dr. Reynolds commented that changes made in quality point requirements for freshmen were also made on a basis of recoverability. Formerly, freshmen would be suspended if they had a quality point deficiency of 31 or more at the end of three quarters of work.

Under the new system, freshmen will be suspended if their quality point deficiency reaches 46 or more at the end of the third quarter.

Each full-time student must pass at least three hours during any term to be eligible to return, regardless of his quality point standing.

Keep 1.0 Average

However, Dean Crews noted,

"If a student keeps a 1.0 average his first year, his chances of graduating are good."

Commenting further on the changes, Dean Reynolds said: "From experience we found that many students need a year to become oriented after leaving high school. They should be given a chance to adjust."

"We assume that the (third year) student will be able to make up quality point deficiencies quarter by quarter until graduation. A student with five quarters of work left could be 25 quality points short and still recover."

Idea Based on Ability

Dean Crews pointed out the fact that if the student could not make a "B", he should not be allowed to stay. Thus, the idea of recoverability is based on the ability of the student to make good grades.

"The student should be doing graduate-credible work, since he should have been building up points all along," Dean Reynolds added.

Dean Crews had noted in an earlier interview that the changes were a part of an overall effort to reduce student suspension and probation.

Not Trying for Enrollment

But he emphasized the fact that "we are not trying to maintain high enrollment. No school could remain accredited five minutes if it did that."

Terming the new system "more realistic," Dean Reynolds said that it did not represent a lowering of standards but, rather, a raising of standards.

Dean Crews stressed the fact that "at the end of this quarter students' quality point averages must conform to the chart or the students must come to summer school to make up the points."

"I urge all students to be aware of the new standards and if they want me to figure their averages, I will be glad to do so at any time."

Evaluation Team Visits Campus

A special evaluation committee from the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools was on campus April 10-14, marking the last leg of Wilmington College's lengthy journey toward accreditation.

President William M. Randall termed accreditation the "stamp of approval" that is placed on a college. He said that the federal government requires accreditation before it will give money for buildings and other facilities.

"We are an exception, because we were already accredited as a junior college," he added.

He said that the status of Wilmington College as regards accredi-itation would not be known until after the Southern Association meets in November of this year.

Heading the evaluation committee is Dr. Henry L. Ashmore, president of Armstrong State College in Savannah, Ga.

Serving with Dr. Ashmore are: Dr. Robert A. Wiersfield, University of South Carolina; Dr. James W. Clark, University of Alabama; Dean Edgar E. Burks, Louisiana State University in New Orleans; B. P. Simons, Sam Houston State College; L. F. Mallory, Mississippi State University; and Shelby Counce, Memphis City Schools.

Another visitor was Dr. Charles B. Vail, associate secretary of the Commission on College of the Southern Association.

The committee is made up of specialists, each specialist probing a particular aspect of Wilmington College. Examined were special activities, physical plant, student personnel, library, faculty, financial resources, education program, and purpose-organization and administration.

Functioning as a fact-finding group for the Association, the evaluation committee was investigating faculty qualifications in terms of degree spread, number of doctorates, and grading system; financial resources compared to the Association's minimum per student; and curriculum adequacies, majors, and degree requirements.

The committee was attempting to determine, in effect, whether or not the Wilmington College administration and Board of Trustees have recognized the College's purpose and are moving toward it.

But the committee members also were interested in the attitudes of the students toward the school. Dr. Ashmore commented that student reaction was important in gaining a feeling of an institution.

Relating the situation of Wilmington College to that of Southern education in general, Dr. Ashmore said that the quality of higher education in the South is improving but that the South must take greater strides to take a lead in this field.

"The South has unparalleled opportunities to reach out for quality higher education," he emphasized.

At End Of Year Senate Learns Budget

The Student Senate has only recently learned what their budget for the year was. This information was given to the Student Senate by Greg Godwin, Student Body president at the last Senate meeting April 17.

This lack of knowledge about the budget was brought out in a speech by Greg Godwin asking the Senate for money.

Greg stated that he had asked for a budget of $1525. This proposed budget, said Greg, was "banged around and laughed around." The Senate was finally given $675. Of this money, approximately "$200 is left for the remainder of the year."

The figure is an approximate one since "There may be some bills we do not know about," explained Thomas P. Brown, Dean of Men. "We were not told we had this problem," stated Norberto Machiran, senior senator. Norberto suggested an investigation about the budget, but said Dean Brown, "I don't think you need an investigation."

John Hunt, president of the Junior Class, suggested some type of treasurer's post be set up for next year. If such a post was set up records could be kept of money coming in and out of the Senate. In this way, the Senate would always know how much money could be allotted for various projects and what their balance of funds amounted to.

Greg requested funds to send three representatives to the National Student Association meeting to be held at the beginning of May at Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg, Va.

Going to this convention would be "worthwhile for the connections we can make—not only for now but for the future," said Greg. "We need a mixed delegation," Greg continued. "We were almost laughed out of the last convention because we did not have a mixed delegation."

"Do you blame that on me?" questioned Mrs. Helena Cheek, Dean of Women.

Greg also asked for an appropriation to further the Fine Arts Committee on campus. This money would be taken from the Float Fund of $200 which is kept separate from the budget. This money was set up originally to build a float for the Azalea Festival.

President of the Senior Class, Buzz Allen, questioned why a float from the college was not put into the Festival stating, "A float would have been nice to have."

Greg replied "I didn't feel $200 was enough to make a float, and I didn't feel there was enough student interest."

The money for both the delegation to the NSA convention and the Fine Arts Committee was appropriated.

The Senate heard a brief report concerning the proposed Honor System to be introduced next year if passed by the Senate and Student Body. Various reports from area colleges were discussed.

Further reports will be heard at the next meeting which will be Monday night in the Pub at 7:30. Any interested students may attend these meetings.

Crews Announces Registration Changes

Plans to facilitate registration at Wilmington College have been announced by Dean J. Marshall Crews.

"We are trying to make it possible for students to pay their fees during the period following pre-registration," Dean Crews said.

"On registration day, all the students would have to do would be to get on class rolls," he added.

Dean Crews admitted that problems would be caused by students who would be unable, because of failures in prerequisite courses, to take desired courses and would have to make last-minute changes.

"There will always be some problems. It will still take an hour, whatever you do," he commented.

He said that complete details would not be worked out before summer and that he anticipated the introduction of the new system Fall Quarter.

College To Begin Counseling Program

A new counseling program will be introduced at Wilmington College Fall Quarter, according to Dean J. Marshall Crews.

Dr. Darwin Newton of Eastern Kentucky University has been hired as a full-time counselor, to work in cooperation with Deans and faculty in advising students. He will report for work September 1.

The new program will feature a battery of tests to be given to all incoming freshmen at the end of the summer. Purpose of the tests is to determine what problems the students may have in reading ability, study habits, and other areas.

"A student has a reading problem, we can recommend a special non-credit class for him," Dean Crews said.

The testing serving is the equivalent of that given to freshmen at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and many other schools.

"Any counseling program depends ultimately on the faculty," Dean Crews concluded. "Seminars will be held during Fall Quarter on how to detect difficulties among students."

Dr. Granville B. Johnson, professor of psychology, is presently doing preparatory work for the program.

Contest Ends Monday

Only a few days remain to turn in entries for the literary contest sponsored by THE SEAHAWK. There will be $150 worth of prize money to be given away for winning entries.

The rules for the contest are:

1. The contest is limited to full-time students of Wilmington College.
2. No more than three poetry entries and two prose selections may be submitted.
3. All entries must be typed, double-spaced, in triplicate, and have title pages giving name, address, and class. No name should appear on the entry itself.
4. All entries must be turned in by May 1 to Dr. Joanne Corbett, head of the English Department.

The contest is divided into two areas: prose and poetry. Students may enter both categories.

First prize winners in each category will be awarded $25. Second prize will be $15. Third prize will be $10. Winning entries will be published in THE SEAHAWK.

Facts

The facts stand, and we must have our say.

In an interview published in this issue of THE SEAHAWK, Deans Reynolds and Crews expounded upon the changes which have been made in the quality point system at Wilmington College. The facts supporting the changes were stated with pristine clarity. The Deans, in their transparent honesty, are to be admired for their sincere interest in those students whose personal problems may thwart their intellectual potentialities.

However, there are other facts, which we will state thusly:

- The new quality point system was described as being "more lenient than the present one" when it was presented to the faculty on February 8, 1967; we, in our childlike naivete, tend to equate leniency with lowering of standards.

- Numerous faculty members (not just one) have expressed disquietude with what they regard as lowering of standards; these instructors include one department head who expressed agreement with the last editorial on this subject.

- A "survival of the fittest" philosophy is as essential to intellectual endeavors as it is to athletic contests, flabby minds being as undesirable in the classroom as flabby bodies on the playing field; programs which tolerate or encourage mediocrity do not face squarely the realities of a competitive world.

- Leniency tends to negate the work of the superlative student; he may come to regard his achievements as being of little value, since the standards are set with the mediocre student, not him, in mind.

Obviously, we and the Deans are not of the same mind. It seems to us that the deans view Wilmington College as a therapeutic institution; we regard it as a potential center of higher learning. The facts stand, and we must have our say.

Cracked

And back to the statue garden. It is a shame to continually throw stones at the Statues, but if they were to become too cracked, a necessary repair would have to be made. The members of the Statue garden only recently learned what their budget for the year was. This is rather shocking information to learn at the end of the year, on the eve of student body elections. Not only did the Senate not know what its budget was, it also does not have a treasurer. This is the fault of the constitution which does not provide for a student body treasurer. Also, at the present time, there is no student body secretary. There was one elected, but it seems she has dropped out of school. It seems a special election should have been held instead of depending on various senators to fill this position at Senate hearings.

These conditions in the Student Senate should not be allowed. Nor should the actual conditions in the Senate which have made it into a statue garden be allowed! It is rather foolish to elect people to represent you, if these people are going to sit and raise their hands only to vote. Perhaps there is no need to even have a Student Senate. Perhaps?

Worried

Monday is the last day to enter the literary contest the newspaper and Fine Arts Committee are sponsoring. When this paper went to the printer last Friday, not one entry had been turned in. Not one entry. We had high hopes when we planned this contest. Extremely high hopes. We even applied to the Wilmington College Foundation and received more money from them, so the categories of the contest could be further divided. We would hate to have to return the check unused. Perhaps we are a bit hasty, knowing how people like to wait until the last minute. So please, use your creative talents and enter this contest. Who knows but that you might be one of the winners?

Grum

There is a new course being offered at Wilmington College. Enrolled students may receive credits toward a degree in advanced gastroenteritis.

The course is offered five days a week every quarter in the Pub at any time the student feels he cannot procrastinate the necessity any longer.

The course is required of all students who, due to lack of transportation, cannot make the pilgrimage to the culinary meccas of the Port City.

Prerequisite is three years of ingesting overdone liver at New Hanover High School, or the equivalent.

Work undertaken includes study of modern concepts in assimilation and digestion of solid grease and methods and techniques of mastigating fibrous frankfurter rolls.

Also studied will be the possible traumas resulting from the presence of Periplaneta americanus on the walls, grum on the floors, and the absence of hairnets on the heads of the instructors. Effects of the aforementioned factors on the overall sensibilities of the students will be studied.

It is recommended that students possess copious pocketbooks and an interminable supply of Pepto-Bismol.

Random Thought

by John Blair, Jr.

A few people around Wilco have mentioned how the newspaper is improving; it is. I am not bragging because I am only a writer and just observe and comment. The credit goes to our editor and her immediate help. The improvement is not only in the organization of the paper but what it has had to say.

Many persons, students and faculty, do not agree that these editorials are a form of progress, but rather a retrogression. Either these people do not understand the purpose of these recent editorials or they do not appreciate the importance of this purpose. Of course, it is possible that these people have not read our editorial page until the recent article on the laxity of certain teachers appeared. This aroused the ire of many and started them thinking, which was a main reason behind the article.

Yes, many students started thinking, but apparently the length of concentration of the average student on matters other than the opposite sex or bridge is so short as to be negligible. So many students came up to me and asked who wrote the thing about which I was excited—perhaps there would be a little student reaction. There was—one letter. When I read that infamous editorial I decided that I wouldn't write anything about it; I felt it wasn't meant for me—it would be very simple to sit down and scribble out something in my column, but I wanted some one to take some effort and write the newspaper a letter — anything, from an agreement to a cussing out. One somebody did take the trouble.

When I started writing this particular item, I hoped that the little bit would cleanse my system; it hasn't. I just didn't realize how angry I was. Some one sits down and tells the school and the community how easy some teachers make it, insults the system and especially the people in it, and we get one letter.

I realize that some individuals could care less about anything and never will; they are followers and supposedly college is for the thinkers. I know the student who wrote the letter—he is a conscientious person who cares what goes on in the school and what people think about it because this affects his future. How about the rest of you 2-S's and future homemakers; don't you care?

There are many valid reasons why Wilco has become grades thirteen through sixteen in the New Hanover school system, but they won't get any better by just talking about them. We'll need your help.

Squawks

by Sallie Seahawk

It may perhaps be a serious offense to attack that noble part of our campus, but we feel we must. The faculty is one of the subjects under discussion for today.

Not only has apathy struck the students, it seems to have caught the faculty in its net also. Faculty members, we suppose, are extremely busy people, they have families and more importantly to the students, papers to grade and lessons and lectures to plan.

But life should be more than home and papers. We have heard many faculty members complaining about the lack of an intellectual atmosphere on this campus. We would be and are the first to agree with them. BUT when something which may loosely be termed intellectual comes to the campus, where are the faculty members?

We are speaking of the recent appearance of Dr. Won Kyung Cho on this campus. We are not speaking of the time he was on campus during the day, but we are speaking of the most entertaining and informative dance-lecture he presented at night. Six faculty members were there. Six. Two of these were the advisors to the Fine Arts Committee.

So, faculty members, do not complain about the students. Look at yourselves! You also have room for improvement when it comes to attendance of college activities.

Everyone, students (a few more of them could have also come) and faculty—Oh, and dare we breathe the word... administration (none of which were present)—have a chance to redeem themselves. There will be the Thalian-Wilco Theatre production of The Recruiting Officer beginning May 19, and also the music department's production of The Mikado. This last will be presented on campus in the SRO Theatre. It would be nice to see the "theatre" filled.

And don't give the excuse one faculty member gave. He thought there would not be enough seats, therefore, he stayed away. That is sheer foolishness!

And to you students, this is our reminder about two things. The first is student elections. We know you don't care; but how about voting anyway. The second is a reminder about our literary contest. May 1 is the deadline. We have $150, it is going to be a shame to let that money go to waste!

Cites 'Fine Job'

To The Editor:

The Fine Arts Committee has really done a fine job this year. Thanks to Randy Del Lago.

It would be apparent to anyone who has taken advantage of any of the extra-curricular activities made possible by this committee that this is true. They didn't have much of a budget at all, but the entertainment that has been provided has all been excellent. Besides being entertaining, they have also been educational. I don't want to bug anybody about the lack of enthusiasm on campus for these presentations, but if you were so inclined to attend, you probably enjoyed yourself.

Uddike Virtuoso

by Ed Newman

Assorted Prose. John Uddike. 256 pp. Fawcett World Library. $6.00. 1966.

John Uddike's Assorted Prose is a collection of most of the non-fiction he has written; as he says, "this book collects all of it I thought anyone might like to read." It includes biting parodies, random sketches from his days with the New Yorker, a singular piece on Ted Williams, a number of poignant personal recollections, and a solid section of book reviews. The last are especially significant, if writers are to be critics.

Uddike is the writer's writer. He is a virtuoso of prose. In his novels, and, to a large extent, in his short stories, he demonstrates an ability to exploit this virtuosity on a universal level. In his non-fiction, his virtuosity serves him equally well, whether he is describing the limited modes of expression of the sports writer ("Crush vs. Whip"), parodying the fatuous circumlocutions of former President Truman ("Mr. E-Resident"), conveying the feeling of regressive superstition experienced in an eclipse of the sun ("Eclipse"), or negotiating an intellectual journey through the dense undergrowth of twentieth century theology ("Tillich," "More Love in the Western World," and "Faith in Search of Understanding"). Uddike is not a craftsman, but an artist.

Accordingly, Uddike has a way of endowing the mundane with a special meaning. The following passage (the larger part of a piece of the New Yorker "Talk of the Town" variety), bewailing the advent of the "pop-top" beer can, is printed, simply and finally, to allow Uddike's prose to speak for itself:

Who can forget the small, symmetrical thrill of those two triangular punctures, the dainty piff, the little crest of suds that foamed eagerly in the exultation of release? Now we are given, instead, a top beeling with an ugly, shmo-shaped "tab," which, after fiercely resisting the tugging, bleeding fingers of the thirsty man, threatens his lips with a dangerous and hideous hole. However, we have discovered a way to thwart Progress, usually so unthwartable. Turn the beer can upside down and open the bottom. The bottom is still the way the top used to be. True, this operation gives the beer an unsettling jolt, and the sight of a consistently inverted beer can might make people edgy, not to say queasy. But the latter difficulty could be eliminated if manufacturers would design cans that looked the same whichever end was up, like playing cards. What we need is Progress with an escape hatch.

Student Charges

Instructor Bigotry

Bigotry of any type in any setting demands comment. Tolerance of any occurrence of it is difficult to comprehend, especially when that tolerance occurs on the part of the students and administration within an academic community. On more than one occasion over the past three years I have listened to one professor produce an unimaginable stream of thinly veiled allusions and unnecessarily vulgar displays of racially directed theatrics. It is bad enough when one is subjected to the spectacle of a "full professor" distorting his features so as to produce a caricature of "liver lips" in order to evoke laughter from his students, but when this is followed by unfounded, undocumented statements such as "Finns have slanted eyes," then the effect is totally absurd. This may or may not appear offensive to the casual observer, but there are those of us who feel that when one enters the classroom such juvenile behavior should remain outside.

Incidents such as the aforementioned are regrettable when they are restricted to the college community, but when this type of behavior occurs in such a way as to besmirch the college reputation within the community at large, it becomes a matter of concern for everyone. Incidents such as those surrounding the Brazilian affair may be hushed up and glossed over, but they are not forgotten. This college can ill afford a reputation of the sort gained by harboring this type of individual. Academic standards must be high on our faculty as well, and this man's Behind Hoggard Hall is the Nature Trail of Wilmington College.

"The trail was built as an outdoor laboratory for students so we could use it as a means of teaching," said Frank Allen, chairman of the biology department.

The trail was built as an outdoor laboratory for students so we could use it as a means of teaching," he said.

Despite a fire last year no real damage was done to the Nature Trail. The fire, "kind of cleaned things out for us," commented Mr. Allen.

Although the route of the nature trail may have to be slightly changed because of new buildings, "We're going to keep it going," stated Mr. Allen.

One of the main purposes of the Nature Trail is that of an outdoor learning laboratory. Biology teacher, Jack Dermid, conducts a biology lab over the Nature Trail showing them the various communities which live in the outdoors.

And the Nature Trail is also a good place to go for a walk and leave all ideas of civilization and college behind. This couple seems to be taking advantage of the fact that IT'S SPRING!

Art students find the nature trail a pleasant place to sketch. Mary Ann Brown and Artie Markatos seem to be searching for the ideal spot, which seems to have been found.

Bergen, McCrackin Pace Golf Team

BY WALTER HEALEY, JR.

The golf team has won two matches and lost only one so far this year as Coach Earl Allen has used some fine strategy to gain victories over St. Andrews and East Carolina College.

The Seahawks defeated the Knights 14½-12½ and ECC 15-12. Wilmington absorbed its loss against Pembroke 18½-8½.

In the St. Andrews match Paul Bergen was the medalist for the meet with a one-under par 70. Allen Murray had a 75 for the Hawks and Bill McInnis a 75 for the Knights.

Bergen was the medalist in the ECC meet with another 70. Alex McCrackin fired a 71 for the Hawks.

John Clark of Pembroke was the medalist in the Braves meet with a 72 followed by teammate Jeff Howell with a 73. Bergen fired a 76 and Murray a 77.

The Results:

Against St. Andrews

Paul Bergen decisioned Bill McInnis (A) 2½-2½.

Jim Paschal was decisioned by Bill Hubbard (A) 3-0.

George Tenuta was decisioned by Rich Vanderblooman (A) 3-0.

Alan Murray decisioned Athos Rothstand (A) 2½-½.

Alex McCrackin was decisioned by Dave Seake (A) 2½-½.

John Williams decisioned Dave Sinclair (A) 3-0.

Bergen and Paschal decisioned McInnis and Hubbard, 3-0.

Tenuta and Murray halved with Vanderblooman and Rothstand, 1½-1½.

McCrackin and Williams halved with Seake and Sinclair, 1½-1½.

Against Pembroke

Bergen was decisioned by Jeff Howell (P) 2½-½.

Murray was decisioned by John Clark (P) 3-0.

McCrackin was decisioned by Charles Sower (P) 2½-½.

Williams was decisioned by Linwood Hedge (P) 2½-½.

Tenuta decisioned Buck Ritter (P) 2-1.

Paschal was decisioned by Wiley Barrett (P) 2-1.

Bergen and Murray were decisioned by Howell and Clark 3-0. McCrackin and Williams were decisioned by Sower and Hedge 2-1.

Tenuta and Paschal decisioned Ritter and Barrett 3-0.

Against ECC

Glen Hodges was decisioned by Howard Pernar (E) 2½-½.

Paschal was decisioned by Jack Williams (E) 3-0.

Bergen downed Dave McKenzie (E) 3-0.

Murray lost to Gary Hudson (E) 2-1.

Tenuta split with Phil Buzzelli (E) 1½-1½.

McCrackin decisioned Drayton Scott (E) 3-0.

Hodges and Paschal lost to Williams and Pernar 3-0.

Bergen and Murray decisioned McKenzie and Hudson 3-0.

Tenuta and McCrackin defeated Buzzelli and Scott 3-0.

Paul Bergen (W), decisioned John Frampton (B), 2-1.

Glen Hodges (W) was defeated by Hugh Fields (B) 2-1.

Alex McCrackin (W) defeated Buddy Watkins (B) 3-0.

George Tenuta (W) halved with Les McEwen (B) 1½-1½.

Alan Murray (W) was defeated by Andy Hogue (B) 3-0.

Jim Paschal (W) decisioned Butch Moore (B) 2½-½.

Bergen and Hodges halved with Frampton and Fields, 1½-1½.

McCrackin and Tenuta decisioned Watkins and McEwen, 2-1.

Murray and Paschal lost to Hogue and Moore, 3-0.

FINAL SCORE

S. C. Baptist 14½, Wilco 12½.

N. C. Wesleyan

Glen Hodges (W) lost to Lee Ball (NCW) 3-0.

Jim Paschal (W) lost to Bennis Goodrich (NCW) 2-1.

Paul Bergen (W) defeated Buck Roney (NCW) 2-1.

Allen Murray (W) lost to Mike Hux (NCW) 2½-½.

Alex McCrackin (W) defeated Ron Moore (NCW) 2½-½.

George Tenuta (W) defeated Tony Demith (NCW) 2½-½.

Team Matches

Hodges and Paschal lost to Ball and Goodrich, 3-0.

Bergen and Murray lost to Roney and Hux, 2-1.

McCrackin and Tenuta defeated Demith, 3-0.

Speaking Of Sports

by Carrie Davis

Several years ago, another sport was added to the athletic program at Wilmington College. That sport was golf. Since that time, interest in the sport has grown, and golf is now a well-established member of the sports curriculum at Wilco.

The Golf Team was organized in 1956. Made up of six players, the team had good potential, and in the opinion of Athletic Director Bill Brooks, "The team had a pretty good season."

As a beginning team, the Seahawks Golfers played Louisburg, Wingate, Presbyterian Junior College, Campbell College, and E.M.I. At present, the competition has increased to include St. Andrews, Pembroke, East Carolina, North Carolina Wesleyan, South Carolina Baptist, and Atlantic Christian College.

When the paper went to press, the Seahawks had played five matches. Of that five, the home team won three games and lost two. "This is an improvement over last year," said Golf Coach Earl Allen. However, he was unable to predict the outcome of the season. There will be seven more games. These boys are eligible for NAIA Tournament, which will be played May 18.

Paul Bergen is the captain of this year's team. Other team members in past years include Ricky Berman, Jack Harrell, Jack Harrell, Jr., and Jimmy Henderson.

Home matches are played on the Wilmington Municipal Golf Course. They begin at 1:00 p.m. There are only two more home matches. One home match will be played with South Baptist May 1, and the other one will be played with Campbell College on May 12.

A complete schedule of the remaining matches is as follows:

Robert W. Vaughn

Another member from last season's baseball team is being spotlighted.

Robert W. Vaughn hails from Washington, D. C. The hefty Seahawk third baseman is in his second year of attendance at Wilmington.

Vaughn is a graduate of Northwestern Senior High School in Hyattsville, Maryland. He graduated with an academic diploma.

During his four-year stint at Northwestern Vaughn participated three years on the varsity baseball team, two years each in varsity soccer and football.

Bob also was on the student council while at Northwestern.

After he graduated from high school Vaughn went to East Carolina College where he was involved in freshman baseball and football.

After his frosh year he transferred to Wilco and has established himself as one of the most daring and exciting goalies in this NAIA district. Bob has been on both the varsity soccer team and baseball club for two years.

Bob plans to graduate from Wilmington in 1968 with a major in History and a minor in physical education.

"From here I hope to go either to North Carolina University to study on the graduate level. After that I want to teach and raise a family. A family of boys."

Baseball Team Nears End Of Season

The Seahawks are still seeking that post season berth in the NAIA. Things were shook up a little as the Hawks dropped two games in a row to Belmont Abbey. But Coach Brook's club has come off that two-game losing streak to topple The Citadel and ACC to boost their season record to 12-7.

Colby scored four runs in the first inning in the two teams second meeting and added two in the fourth to edge the Hawks 6-5.

Vic Johnson, who hurled 8½ innings of super relief pitching, almost saw the Seahawks pull out the contest in the bottom of the ninth.

With one out Sam Askew, the leading Hawk batter, whacked a double off the fence in left field. Sam advanced to third on a pass ball. Wayne Johnson then lifted a fly ball to center. Askew tagged but was thrown out at the plate.

A dispute arose between Coach Brooks and the umpires. Coach claimed that the Colby third baseman pushed Askew off the bag and cost Askew a split second in his start for home. The umpires won out of course.

Jabar was the winning pitcher for Colby while Hawk starter Eddie Lewis suffered his first loss of the season.

Vic Johnson had a fine day at the plate as he had three hits in four trips to the plate. That's something a pitcher won't let anyone forget.

Wilmington then went down to Charleston, S. C. to take on The Citadel.

Jim Sanders and Doyle Whitfield limited the Cadets to five hits while the Hawks racked up five Cadet pitchers for nine runs and 11 hits as the visitors won 9-2.

Dan Whisman opened the game with a walk and scored on Sam Askew's triple. Wayne Johnson then lifted a sacrifice fly to score Sam.

In the third the Cadet pitchers and that was all Sanders and Whitfield needed.

Askew paced the Hawk attack with three hits. Sandy Dew and Jerry Martin each had two.

Tom Seaman provided the only spark for The Citadel with a long home run in the eight off of Whitfield.

The Seahawks then meet disaster at Belmont Abbey. The Abbey put it to the Hawks two nights in a row 12-5 and 14-5.

On the way back from the Abbey the Hawks defeated Atlantic Christian College, 9-4.

Jim Sanders won his third game of the season against one lost. The frosh hurler also took the lead in team home runs as he blasted his second of the season over the 350 foot sign in left.

Wayne Johnson also thumped a homer and batted in four runs with three hits in the contest.

Juniors Form Committees At 'Sucoessful' Meeting

The Junior Class met last Tuesday, April 18, for what President John Hunt called "the most successful class meeting of the year." He added that he believed poor participation at the meetings was due to poor publicity announcing them.

Jerry Bron, Junior Class senator, suggested that a bulletin board or sign be put up at the entrance to the College to advertise class meetings, campus activities, etc. Eric Staton, Junior Class vice-president and president of the Civitan Club, said that Civitan members were planning to put bulletin boards up in the Pub for each class.

A committee was then set up to make permanent posters for next year, so that all meetings would be made known. Members of this committee are Nancy Shew, Glenda Phillips, and Manuel Machiran.

At this meeting, the Junior Class officers were introduced to the 25 class members in attendance, since most juniors were unaware who held these positions. Eric Staton, chairman of the nominating committee, reported on the juniors running in the upcoming election. This is an attempt to have no one running unopposed, and to have capable and qualified people running for offices.

A committee to handle the Senior Parking Lot was also formed to issue tickets next year. Members are Jerry Bron, Manuel Machiran, and Dennis Lennon. This committee will facilitate the issuing of senior stickers, and handle senior parking tickets.

Dennis Lennon pointed out that class meetings were very important in helping the Student Senate. "At these meetings," he stated, "students find out what is needed on campus, and can arrange to have their problems brought before the Senate."

Manuel Machiran urged the Junior Class to attend the next

Senate meeting on Monday night, when the proposed Honor System will be discussed. This is of vital concern to every student, since, if passed, the Honor System will affect every student on campus next year.

The class project for 1968 was turned over to the meeting for discussion. The Class of '67 is the first class at Wilco to have a project, and the class of '68 feels this is a worthwhile tradition. A committee consisting of David Warner, Cynthia Hewitt, Bob Vaughn, and Mary Herbert Davis was formed to propose ideas.

At the end of the meeting, Catherine Proctor apologized to John Hunt on behalf of the Junior Class for their lack of participation as members of the class of '68, and for their non-support of the projects he attempted this year.

Actors Enjoy Play

"The play's the thing" for many students of Wilmington College.

A veteran of five years with the College drama department, senior Sam Garner, who is playing the role of Captain Brazen in the forthcoming production of The Recruiting Officer gave his reason as "I suppose I participate in plays because."

Sophomore Mike Riley, playing the part of Thomas Apple, had "never been in one before but had been interested. 'Nothing but curiosity' prompted Mike to try out.

Tony Rivenbark, freshman, who will portray Kite. This year has been Tony's first opportunity to participate in plays. "I've always liked to perform," he said.

Another newcomer is Roy Franzen, who "thought it might help me to gain stage presence for singing on stage."

Senior Carole Benton as Silvia says "I like all the people. You meet new people, and it is an opportunity for you to give part of yourself."

On May 1 at 8 p.m. in the SRO Theatre students and faculty may view the music department's presentation of The Mikado. Admission for students is by activity cards.

"We are going to go it in concert style," stated Loyd Hudson, head of the music department. "This indicates no set or costumes."

"We'll use all the lines, all the solos and chorus "except in acting it out they will use stools and lecture stands; and they will step up in the form of a lecture," he explained.

Mr. Hudson said, "We couldn't think of a logical place to do it on campus and did not want to do it off campus," as his reason for doing it in concert style.

Before the action of the opera begins, Nanki-Poo, played by Paul Roderick has fled from the court of his father, the Mikado of Japan, to escape marriage with an elderly lady, named Katisha, Barbara Knowles. He assumes the disguise of a musician and falls in love with a fair maiden, Yum-Yum, played by Gaye Newber.

Nanki-Poo is prevented from marrying Yum-Yum by her guardian, Ko-Ko, Edward Moore; who also wants to marry Yum-Yum.

When Nanki-Poo reaches the court he learns from Pooh-Bah, Sam Garner who is a corrupt and proud public official, and Fish-Tush, Terry Wortley, that Ko-Ko has become Lord High Executioner and is planning to marry Yum-Kum that afternoon.

The cast is rounded out with Eric Staton as the Mikado of Japan and the rest of the college chorus as school girls, nobles, guards, and coolies of the Japanese town of Tipipuu.

Miss Ann Darden will be the accompanist for the production.

May Dance In Pub Next Saturday

Students are invited to "Chez Pierre" May 6 from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the Pub.

"We have to have the May dance in the Pub because we had so much trouble during homecoming," explained Tom McNair, chairman of the dance committee.

Lucky to Have Dance

"We weren't allowed to rent a place," he continued, "to have the dance. In fact, we are probably lucky to be having the dance at all."

"The Dance Committee is going all out to make the best of the situation, however. And it should be an enjoyable evening for all who attend," he stated.

"The main thing is to ask the students to please refrain from throwing beer cans on campus." He added, "I say that jokingly, but it is a serious matter because it might have an effect on how many dances we will have next year, and where we will have dances next year!"

No Stags Allowed

No stags will be allowed at the dance. Admission is by activity cards only. Naturally students may invite someone who is not a student at the college, but no outside couples will be allowed.

This year the May Court will not be required, as in the past, to wear any particular color dresses. "I feel this could get into an unnecessary extra expense for the girls," Tom commented.

Formal Dress

The dress for the dance will be formal.

Committees planning the evening are refreshments, headed by Elsie Bosso and Debbie Brown; decorations, headed by Georgia Macris; and special effects, Leon Thomas and Robert Foy.

When questioned about the "special effects" Tom said, "I would rather keep the special effects a surprise because they might not come out as well as we hope they will."

Students View Tondos, Columbian Artifacts

A show of tondos by a leading North Carolina artist and a display of Pre-Columbian artifacts are now available for viewing in Kenan Hall.

The tondos, large, dynamic, circular paintings, are by Victor Huggins. He is an instructor of art at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Huggins says that the "rectangular field imposes arbitrary forces which are either nonexistent or inconsequential when dealing with the circle."

"The vertical-horizontal influence of borders is not felt; the problem of forms seemingly tilted or off-balance does not interfere; elements do not appear to be stacked on one another, but float, defying gravity, on the circular ground."

A native of Durham, Huggins studied at Middle Georgia College and at Richmond Professional Institute. He received A.B. and M.A. degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The showing of Pre-Columbian artifacts of gold, jade, stone, and ceramics belong to the collection of R. E. Dudley of Jacksonville.

"As far as we know, this is the first time Pre-Columbian art has been shown in Wilmington," said

Final Play Begins Run Friday Night

The Recruiting Officer by George Farquhar will be presented at Thalian Hall by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thaliens, a local little theatre group, at Thalian Hall on May 19, 20 and 21. This production will be the final show of the 1966-67 season.

This comedy opened on the London stage to a tremendous ovation just two hundred and sixty-one years ago this past April 8, at the Drury Lane. It has since been revived many times, the latest being by Sir Laurence Olivier in 1963 to open Great Britain's new National Theatre. Its intricate plot, delightful situations, and refreshing and natural humor have appealed to every age.

"The Recruiting Officer," deals with the subject of recruiting in a country town. It presents Captain Plume (Randy Del Lago) making love to the women in order to secure their followers as recruits. Kite, his resourceful sergeant (Tony Rivenbark) enlists Coster Pearmain (David Jones) and Thomas Appletree (Michael Reilly) and assumes the character of an astrologer in order to gain more recruits.

Silvia (Carole Benton), daughter of Justice Ballance (Bill Wahlgren), who is in love with Plume but has promised not to marry without her father's consent, runs away from home disguised as a man, is arrested by the constable (Robert Wood) for scandalous conduct, is brought before her father, and by him delivered over to Captain Plume as a recruit. Other judges at her trial are Justice Scale (Roy Frantzen), and Justice Scruple (Frank Hall).

Captain Brazen (Sam Garner), a rival recruiting officer, who boasts of battles won and friends in every port, endeavors to marry Melinda (Gerald Dowdy) but finds himself fobbed off with her maid, Lucy (Beth Edwards). Melinda in her rights wants Mr. Wortley (David James) a country gentleman.

Rose (Phyllis Johnson), a country girl who is always selling chickens, succumbs to the wiles of Kite and gains for her man another recruit—her brother Bullock (Cam Baird). The servant who serves both houses is played by Michael Sampley.

Hank Blaustein delivers the prologue to the show and sets the mood and atmosphere for this eighteenth century comedy.

Serving as stage managers are Hank Blaustein and Al Carrus with Kay Teachey as prompter. Anne Fitzgibbon is the Technical Director with Richard Thompson as Sound Technician. Renee Hartman will be in charge of make-up; Hoyle Foster, lighting; Elizabeth Bridgers, properties and Bill King will serve as house manager.

Thelma Sellers has been given the responsibility of costuming the entire production.

The construction and painting of the unique set and making of set pieces has been executed by Bill Alexander, James Allen, Wayne Barker, Norma Crummy, Jan Darby, Chris Deasy, Jack Gerrock, Robert Hall, Frank Henry, Glenn Hodges, Hank Poisson, Jerry Spells, Osborne Walls, and Doyle Whitfield.

The entire production is under the direction of Doug W. Swink of the Department of Drama and Speech at Wilmington College. Admission will be either by Thalian Membership card, individual tickets purchased at the door, or by Wilmington College Student Activity Cards. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. sharp.

Fine Arts Committee Plans Film, Concert

The final Fine Arts presentation for the year will include two films and a man who sings and accompanies himself on a concert harp.

La Strada May 26
The other film, also to be shown in the lecture room, will be La Strada (The Road) on May 26 at 8 p.m.

This film was written by Federico Fellini and Tullio Pinelli. It was directed by Fellini.

Creates World
La Strada creates a world of its own, investing the lives of its characters with screen poetry and speaking to the profoundest human emotions through real yet original film images.

The story concerns a simple-minded waif, a brutish strong-man, and a philosophical "fool" who travel the highway in Italy. The film becomes the story of every man's loneliness and search for a way of life.

The cast of this film includes Giulietta Masina, Anthony Quinn, Richard Basehart, and Aldo Silvani.

May 29 the film GREED will be presented in the lecture room of Kenan Hall at 8 p.m. This film was written and directed by Erich von Stroheim. It is based on the novel McTeague by Frank Norris.

Greed Called Classic
Greed has been called one of the classics of motion pictures. It is a silent film. Greed is an experience for contemporary audiences as it concentrates with superb minuteness on the distortions of human nature when confronted with a passion for money.

The film stars Gibson Gowland, Zasu Pitts, Tempe Pigott, Jean Hershold, and Chester Conklin.

Goodman to Appear

Then on May 24 Gerald Goodman will be on campus. Mr. Goodman sings and accompanies himself on the harp.

Mr. Goodman's program will be presented at 8 p.m. in the Student Services building.

Gerald Goodman is always in quest of ancient legends and ballads which he adapts to his own musical settings, preserving the strange and virile spirit of the spirit of the Middle Ages.

Goodman Concertized

In the romantic tradition of the wandering troubadour, Goodman has concertized widely throughout the United States and Canada. He is recognized as one of the foremost harpists of our time.

His program will include selections from American musical theatre as well as classical and folk ballads.

BSU Plans May Retreat

BSU members have planned their spring retreat for May 19, 20, and 21 at the First Baptist Church's beach cottage.

Dennis Lennon, new BSU president, is in charge of the retreat. The cost of attending the retreat is two dollars to cover expenses. This money should be turned into Dennis by May 16.

"A retreat," explained Bobby Bohannon, is "a time of planning and realization, a time of seeing where we've gone and seeing what we want to do in the future."

This will be the last BSU activity for the year.

Dr. Gleason To Deliver Final Lecture

Dr. Henry A. Gleason Jr. will deliver the final lecture of the 1966-67 Wilmington College Lecture Series Monday, May 15, at 8 p.m. in the Student Services building at Wilmington College.

Dr. Gleason, professor of linguistics at Hartford Seminary Foundation, has chosen "Language—A Base for the Liberal Arts" as the subject of his lecture.

He attended New York State College of Agriculture and was awarded the BS degree from Cornell University. He received the Ph.D. degree in 1946 from Hartford Seminary Foundation.

Besides teaching in public schools and a number of colleges, Dr. Gleason has served on the faculty of summer linguistic institutes and has participated in several summer curricular conferences sponsored by Educational Services Inc.

From 1956 to 1958, he was visiting senior linguistics scholar at the Deccan College in Poona, India, and in 1963 was a field observer of the mathematics program in Liberia, Kenya, and Uganda, Africa.

Dr. Gleason, author of Linguistics and English Grammar and An Introduction to Descriptive Linguistics, is currently preparing a Dictionary of Linguistic Terminology under a grant from the National Science Foundation.

He also served as consultant to the staff of Webster's Third New International Dictionary.

Circle K Members To Host Dance

Circle K members are having a dance for Wilco students tomorrow night at the Elks Club beginning at 8 p.m. The purpose of the dance is to raise money to buy athletic equipment for the Boys' Brigade Club and to help carry on some of the civic functions of the club.

Admission to the dance is $2 a couple if the tickets are purchased in advance. Tickets will cost $2.50 at the door. Tickets may be gotten from any Circle K member.

Circle K Member Hap Hazard was able to get fellow Circle K members from the University of South Carolina to play for the dance. This group is better known as the Enchanters.

The Enchanters have played for many fraternity dances and have appeared at the Pavilion at Myrtle Beach, S. C., according to Larry Lapkovitch, club member.

Wayne Kellum, club member, with the aid of the local Kiwanis Club, was able to obtain the use of the Elks Club. The Elks Club is located on Front and Nun Streets in Wilmington.

"The date of May 13 was finally decided on," said Larry, "because this would give the college students one last time to get together before they go their many ways for the summer."

Senate Emphasizes Need For Treasurer

The need for a treasurer of the Student Senate was again emphasized.

Dr. Gleason, vice-president of the Linguistic Society of America, is one of the lecturers chosen by the National Council of Teachers of English to participate in its Distinguished Lecture Program.

Under this program, lecturers are sent to colleges and schools away from metropolitan and major university areas to strengthen the teaching of English in small colleges and non-urban school districts.

A special invitation to attend was extended to all English teachers in the area. The public is also invited to attend.

sized at the last Senate meeting. May 1. Carol Trebing, president, added that this treasurer "should be elected, not appointed."

At a short conference before the regular meeting, Norberto Machiran addressed the candidates running in the May 11 student election, briefing them on delivering campaign speeches, putting up signs, and other general regulations. He added that more people were running for offices this year than last year, indicating more interest on the part of the Student Body.

Speeches were given in the Pub at 9:30 a.m., Wednesday, May 10.

Seahawks Make NAIA Playoffs

by Walter Healey, Jr.

The Seahawks made a bold move in the Naia ranks by clipping Pembroke twice in four days. The two victories brought the 'Hawk total to 17 against eight losses. There seems to be a tournament in the making which should now be in progress if all goes according to plans.

Jim Johnson relieved Doyle Whitfield and fired eight and two-third innings of four-hit ball to notch his second victory against no defeats as the 'Hawks tripped Campbell in 12 innings, 5-4.

Sparky Johnson played the hero's role with a 350 foot double in the 12th to send across the winning run. Sparky had three runs batted in while Sandy Dew had two hits.

The Seahawks bowed to the strong arm tactics of St. Andrew's Stu Dodson. Dodson spun a five-hitter against Wilmington while striking out nine.

Loser for the Seahawks was Chuck Cuppett who suffered his fourth loss in seven starts. Cuppett was the victim of errors as the Knights struck for three runs in the first inning. Chuck allowed only three hits and whiffed nine.

Wayne Johnson hit a grand-slam home run and Jim Sanders won his fourth game as the Seahawks dumped High Point, 4-1.

Wayne collected five rib's on two hits for Coach Bill Brooks' boys. Sandy Dew and Pete Daughtry each banged out three hits while Jim Hall had two.

Sanders was then the victim of another grand slam, this time by Mike Brannan, as the 'Hawks scored all their runs in one inning and down Pembroke, 6-1.

Wayne Johnson blasted his second grand slam of the season against Pembroke in a wild 10-9 affair. Johnson had five rib's on the night.

Chuck Cuppett went the first six innings plus to receive the victory. He was relieved by Jim Johnson who stopped the Braves until the ninth inning. With one out Coach Brooks brought in Sanders who put the hex on Pembroke, and about 500 fans, who went down to another defeat.

POSING AFTER MATCH - Wilmington College Golf Team. The Seahawks finished their regular season with 4-7 record. Their last loss was to East Carolina College. Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, May 5-7, was the date for the A.C.C. Invitational Tournament. This 3 day 54 hole tournament was won by Roland Turner of Campbell, who finished with a 220. Wilco's Paul Bergen, with a 231, finished fourth. Bergen and Murray are the Seahawks top players for the year.

Two Ph.D.'s To Join Faculty This Fall

Two new members of the College faculty for next year will be Dr. Darwin R. Newton and Dr. Jack B. Levy.

Dr. Newman will serve in the position of director of counseling and testing.

He received his B.A. degree from Nebraska State Teachers College in Chadron, Nebraska, and his A.M. and Ed.D. degrees from Colorado State College.

Dr. Newton will serve in the vice chancellor in high schools and is presently chairman of the department of psychology at Eastern State College in Richmond, Ky.

Dr. Levy, who received his A.B. degree from Duke University and his M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from North Carolina State University in Raleigh, will join the faculty of the College at the beginning of the winter quarter 1967-68, as assistant professor of chemistry.

Dr. Levy is presently in England doing research in heterocyclic organophosphorus chemistry with Dr. Frederick G. Mann at Cambridge University.

Brown Gets Advisory Post

A Wilmington College administrator, Thomas P. Brown, has been appointed to the College Work-Study Advisory Committee of the State Board of Higher Education, Dr. Howard R. Boozer, director of Higher Education, announced on Thursday.

Mr. Brown is dean of men and assistant dean of students at Wilmington College. He also serves as student aid officer for the College.

The committee will advise and assist the Board of Higher Education on matters relating to the College Work-Study Program.

Other committee members are Tom Brickhouse, UNC-Chapel Hill; Steve Gabriel, Appalachian State Teachers College; Gladys Oldham, Winston-Salem State College; George Lambert, Budget Division Staff, and Stan Broadway, Board of Higher Education Staff.

Former Competition Winners Display Creative Work

Drawings by Contemporary North Carolina Artists, a traveling exhibition sponsored by the North Carolina Museum of Art, will be on display at Wilmington College throughout the month of May.

Artists were invited to submit works for the exhibition on the basis of their past participation in the annual North Carolina artists' competitions held by the Museum.

Among the former winners represented in the current show are Gordon Mahy, a Davidson College graduate now living in New York; Russell Arnold of Wilson, and Claude Howell, head of the Wilmington College art department.

Words by Henry Pearson, formerly of Kinston and now of New York, are also in the show. Pearson has recently drawn national attention to his "Op" art works.

Almost all drawing techniques and materials—pencil, pen, and ink, colored and Chinese ink, charcoal, crayon, tempera—are represented in the show. Portraits, landscapes, and other categories are also included.

Rankin To Speak At Commencement

The third graduating class of Wilmington College will participate in commencement exercises June 11 at 4 p.m. in Hanover Hall. One hundred twenty-six seniors will graduate at this time.

E. L. Rankin, Jr., director of the Department of Administration of the State of North Carolina, will deliver the graduation address. The invocation and benediction will be given by Dr. W. D. Morris, pastor of Temple Baptist Church.

Following the commencement exercises there will be the President's Reception for the graduates of the college. Each graduate is allowed to bring three guests. Cards will be given to each graduate for this purpose.

All graduating seniors will meet Saturday, June 10 at 8:30 a.m. in the small gymnasium to practice for the commencement exercises. On the afternoon of graduation all graduates will meet in the small gymnasium at 3:15 to form the line for the exercises.

A graduation fee must be paid by all graduating seniors before the end of exams. This $7.50 fee may be paid in the main office.

Mrs. Helena Cheek, who is in charge of the commencement exercise, has stressed the fact that the seniors must pick up their cap and gown from the office of the dean of students June 5-9.

Immediately after the exercise the caps and gowns should be returned to the room marked "Storage Room I" on the left corridor above the Gymnastics Room. Someone will be there to receive them.

Mrs. Cheek urged that all graduates attend the reception. This reception will begin immediately following graduation ceremonies.

Aiding Mrs. Cheek with commencement has been Buzz Allen, president of the Senior Class. Senior Graham Dail has been giving out information about commencement to the seniors as well as giving out the tickets to the reception.

Student marshal for the commencement is Glenda Hayes Phillips. Student ushers are Manuel Machiram, Mike Meier, Chas. Weiss, and Richard Zimmerman. Faculty marshal is Dr. Frederick Hornack.

The College's Brass Ensemble will play for the commencement and Frank Honey will be at the organ.

Meier Takes Positive Attitude

"We're going to take things as they come," said recently elected student body president Mike Meier.

"The school environment here is not conducive to a collegiate atmosphere. It sort of a community type thing; therefore, it is difficult to say what can be done to get rid of the apathy on campus," Mike declared.

Mike does have several positive ideas which he plans to put into effect next year. He believes the new constitution will help make it easier for students to enter student government. He also plans to use what he called "outside help" in working on student government activities.

"I'm a firm believer in outside help," state Mike. "The senators have enough to do—if they do it!"

Apathy A Fact

"Apathy is a fact we'll have to live with and we'll just have to work with what we have," he maintained.

"We are no longer going to take the negative approach. Instead we are going to use positive rewards instead of negative punishment. We've had enough of that," Mike emphasized.

"We are going to find the good things on campus. These good things will be built up instead of being torn down," Mike hopes "the whole Senate will take this outlook. I am going to try to persuade them that they should."

Mike added, "I am not ignoring the negative approach, but I am not going to preach it as much as before. Everyone knows that it is here."

Cabinet Meeting

Our first cabinet meeting will show more of what we are going to do," says Mike. The cabinet is a new feature of student government and is going to be included in the new constitution.

The cabinet will be composed of the president of the student body, the vice president of the student body, and the class presidents.

"The cabinet will also include 'anybody I want placed on it,'" said Mike. "This cabinet is going to be a formal thing," he commented.

Plans for next year include having a letter to the editor in each edition of THE SEAHAWK. "In this way I will be able to inform students what I am doing and what the cabinet is doing," said Mike.

"We're also going to be selling college stationery again next year. A committee will soon be formed to work on this."

"One thing we really are going to work on is the dances. People don't like dances on campus," Mike acknowledged. "This problem will be looked into a great deal."

Another thing to be continued next year is the use of several polling places for elections. "This was very successful," commented Mike.

"We don't really know what else we'll be doing next year," Mike concluded, "as I don't like long range plans."

Mike Meier, New President

School Hopes To Build Dorms

"The advisory Budget Commission of the Legislature has already given their approval to the building of the dormitories," said Dr. William M. Randall, college president. "We now have every reason to believe the Legislature will give us their approval."

Colleges can apply for money from HUD either in January or July. Wilmington College was going to wait until July after the legislature had acted to submit an application to HUD. However, Dr. Randall said, "we learned there was money left over from the January applications and if we could get an application in by May 15 we might be able to get money at an even lower rate of interest than what we would have to pay after July."

Tentative plans call for the dormitories to be located near the field house. Each dorm room will be for two people. Fifty students will be living on each floor.

The paramount reason for building dormitories at this time is to make provisions for students now renting in private homes at costs above those of college housing," explained Dr. Randall.

Another reason for dormitories, Dr. Randall noted, was that many students cannot now afford to attend because of housing costs in private homes, as well as the fact that many students' parents are unwilling to allow them to attend a college where housing is not supervised.

Building To Undergo Face Lifting Soon

The Student Services Building will soon undergo a face lifting, as improvements for the benefit of the students will be made.

Tentative plans call for the addition of more couches, chairs, and lamps to be put in both the upstairs and downstairs rooms of the building.

The deans have been advised by a representative of the Board of Trustees to go ahead and make whatever plans they want for the improvement of the building for presentation to the board.

J. Marshall Crews, dean of students, has said that there will be a meeting with the deans and representative students to make suggestions for changes and improvements.

Possible changes in the building include separating the large room upstairs into two rooms by the use of a folding door. This folding door would make it possible to still use the room for meetings.

An office for the student government could be put into what is now the small lounge upstairs. This also might be put into what was the former radio station room.

Dean Crews has said that it might be possible again to have a radio station on campus. But he stressed that there would have to be better organization than there was in previous years.

Another suggestion has been for a game room be made into one of the upstairs rooms. In this room there would be a ping pong table and possibly a pool table.

New furniture, as couches, lamps, tables, and comfortable chairs, will be bought.

Del Lago, Bohannon Win Top Prizes

Sophomore Randy Del Lago captured the top prizes in both the poetry and prose awards of the Literary Contest sponsored by THE SEAHAWK. Senior Julianne Bohannon also received third place in both categories.

Second place winners were seniors Ed Newman in the prose category and Carol Trebbing in poetry.

Honorable mentions in poetry went to Robert Wood and Mazie Davis. Julianne also won the honorable mention in prose.

Judges for the contest were Gerald Rossetol and John Gold, from the English department, and Dr. Lloyd Bishop and Kenneth Stites, from the French department.

When told that the same person had won the same awards in both areas of the contest, Mr. Rossetol expressed his astonishment and said that the four judges had worked almost independently.

Mr. Rossetol and Mr. Stites judged the prose entries. Mr. Gold and Dr. Bishop worked with the poetry.

Mr. Gold commented on the fact "that there were so many good poems in the bunch. We regretted that we could not acknowledge more. Dr. Bishop and I were elated that the choice was not a simple choice."

The winning poetry selections and selections from the essays are printed on page 3 of this edition.

Renée Hartman, SEAHAWK editor, said, "Since I was the one who wanted the contest in the beginning, I was really pleased at the number of people who entered. I was only sorry that more people did not."

Hunt Presides At Final Meeting

The last scheduled meeting of the Student Senate was held Monday night, May 15. The main purpose was the installation of the newly-elected Senate members, who were sworn in by Liz Johnson.

John Hunt, president of the Junior Class, called the meeting to order in the absence of the president, Carol Trebbing. He began with a word to the new senators. "I hope," he said, "that you will be a little more successful in achieving your goals than I have been."

This referred to his somewhat unsuccessful year as president of his class.

Hunt Expresses Hope

Hunt also expressed the outgoing senator's hope that the constitution committee would be re-established next year. The fact that this year's committee accomplished little, he added, "might be a stimulus for you."

Norberto Machiram also stated his hope that the activities of this committee be continued. He then thanked and congratulated the candidates on their campaigns and asked them to thank the Student Body on behalf of the board of elections for their support.

Large Turnout

It was the largest turnout in the history of the college, according to Machiram, with 445 students, or 42.8% of the school voting. This included special students as well as full-time ones.

Greg Godwin then reported that he had spent $73 at the SNEA Convention in Fredericksburg. He also reminded the Senators of the Troubadour Harvest to be held May 24. "I'm sure you will get something out of it," he added.

With regard to the problem of a Senate treasurer, Mrs. Helena Cheek, dean of women, stated, "Perhaps it will be better with a more stable system in the office next year."

Meeting Called

It was then decided that a special meeting should be called for the following Monday, May 22, to further introduce new Senators to the procedure. The meeting was adjourned after only 25 minutes, because of a Bridge Club meeting to be held in the same room.

Comfort

By next year the student services building, less formally known as the Pub, may be a more comfortable place to spend time between classes and after classes. The Deans are now working with the Board of Trustees to get money to improve the building. Although they do not know how much money they are going to be allowed to have, they do feel as if the board is going to give them some money to fix up the Pub.

The administration is not going to go into the Pub to even attempt to do anything without consulting the students. Dean Crews has stressed this. As soon as the money is received a meeting will be held with students and the administration. It is the students who mainly use the building and the students should be allowed their voice. In a recent interview with Dean Crews he emphasized that any student ideas and suggestions will be very welcome.

Our suggestion goes to the clubs on campus as well as to any classes looking for a class project. Buying a piece of furniture, painting a room as the Civitan Club has already done, or purchasing something else for student enjoyment would make a very worthwhile project for next year. For clubs already considering their plans and projects for next year, why not consider this one? It would be well worth it.

And please, if we do get new furniture, remember you are supposed to be adults. Adults did not tear up the furniture that is presently upstairs in the Pub. Let's get something that is good—And Keep It GOOD!

Dormitories

President Randall has pointed out to us the fact that, although those legislators representing New Hanover County in the General Assembly are aware of and sympathetic with Wilmington College's need for dormitories, letters should be written by the students expressing a desire for immediate, positive action.

We should support his idea, realizing that legislators, however sympathetic, become more so under a deluge of letters from the people whom they represent.

Thus, we would advise the students of this college who would like to see dorms on campus to write unequivocally-worded letters to Sen. John J. Burney, Rep. William Hill, and Rep. George Clark as soon as possible.

This is indeed a case where student action can be significantly effectual, and we should seize the opportunity.

End

The end of the year! Although we can say that we are rejoicing, the end of the year is a little sad. Now is a time to pause and reflect on what has happened this year. We have tried to do several things, and have successful ones were we are leaving for you to decide. We have had much criticism, but we are also proud and happy to say, much praise. The praise has overpowered the criticism, therefore, in just speaking for ourselves, we believe the paper has gone a long way this year. And, since we are staying on as editor next year, it is going to be going a long way further. When they are finally able to kick us off the staff of this paper, THE SEAHAWK is going to be a newspaper students, faculty, administration, and the newspaper staff can be proud of. This is both a threat and a goal!

We've had a few protests this year, the main one being to stir students into some action, even if this action is only a letter to the editor. So we shall choose this prosaic bit of an editorial by saying "Keep those cards and letters coming!"

Also, we would like to thank just a few of the people who have given us so much help with our task this year. Our specific thanks go to Dong Swink, David Warner, and Mrs. Ruth Standland. (There are times when this paper could not have come out had it not been for the telephone in the bookstore and all the other equipment we borrowed from them.) There are many other people, people who gave us quiet encouragement when things—for us—got really bad, and to them we also say thank you; but this list would grow too long if we had to list all of them. The last ones we want to thank are the ones who took the copy and us to the printer at various times.

Notice

This is a notice to all clubs. We did our best to give you final recognition in this, our last edition of the paper for this year. Our reporters asked you for information, but in many cases you said you would give it to us tomorrow or turned the task of getting the information to someone else. Our reporters, though we are trying to give you the best coverage possible, do have other things to do than chase after you. If you have not seen your name in the paper as often as you would have liked, do not blame us, but blame yourselves! We tried, but in many cases, you would not meet us even halfway.

Letters To The Editor

McNair Attacks Sallie Seahawk

Dear Sallie Seahawk,

I think you are absolutely correct! Why didn't we think of this before? Let's have a great big demonstration! All the students who are fed up with the way things have been done on campus this year must be urged to participate. We can all get knives and all go over to the Pub and slice up the furniture in the upstairs lounges. This will only be a start and is certain to produce results. The administration will know we mean business!

Oh rats! I just discovered that someone has already done it. As Mr. Carl Gay would most certainly say: "It must be those folks across the hall." Surely, grown up, mature college students would never do a thing like that, unless, of course they were obsessed by some idea of a demonstration or something.

You were right on another point, Sallie. Some of our students must have come to college "to grow up, to experience the world." Because EVIDENTLY THEY NEED TO DO JUST THAT! What I am saying, Sallie, is that possibly everyone on this campus is not as responsible and mature as you seem to think, and if I were to pick a prime example of this type person on our campus, I think I would have to choose you.

For your information, there is a lot more to growing up than just throwing a "temper tantrum" every time things don't go the way you want them to. Naturally, we all believe in trying to improve our surroundings, academic and otherwise, and I would even go so far as to say that this is your main motivation when you "Squawk". However, I feel sure you will realize upon growing up, that even though every situation you come upon throughout life will not be pre-arranged to suit you in every way, that maybe you should try to make the best of SOME of the situations. This is part of growing up, don't you think?

Don't injure yourself, or anything like that, but try to look at the good side of something just once a year. Maybe the next year (if you feel up to it) try to look at two things optimistically. Who knows? Maybe eventually you could force yourself to enjoy a dance. Please don't misinterpret me, Sallie. I wouldn't be foolish enough to say that Wilmington College is the absolute ideal institution, but I would say that it is certainly not as bad as you ALWAYS imply. And even though you won't agree, I am also sure that our administration knows more about their job than you do!

Why don't you try attending a college function just once without having your nose pushed so deeply into your little column? You might see something you like.

I am of the opinion that a person like you should try "slurping" or something like that.

Tom McNair

Dance Committee

Lists Complaints

To the Editor:

We, the members of the Wilmington College Dance Committee, would like to congratulate you on your newly-acquired record. Of the seven dances that were held on this campus during the past school year, you were either negatively critical or unfavorably silent in your coverage of all of them. Your record is without blemish. We have noticed that you have denounced student apathy at every opportunity but that you have never remarked favorably on the large student interest which has been shown at the college dances. Maybe we be so presumptuous as to ask why? It is true that not every dance was overflowing with attendants, but there has always been a large enough crowd at every dance to keep the band playing well into the night. No band ever left early because of a lack of student interest. How is it then that

Squawks

by Salli Seahawk

And now, for the last time ever, we will give our final squawks. And we want to say a few choice words to one of the writers of the wonderful letters that were received for this issue of the paper. Perhaps Mr. McNair is confusing the word demonstration with the word riot.

To us a demonstration means non-violence, and non-violence does not include the ripping of furniture. And, as he already has so ably pointed out, someone has taken care of ripping the furniture.

Of course, not everyone on this campus is mature. We realize our mental years, even though we sometimes slip below these years. But, Mr. McNair, what is the sign of maturity? We know that we have not suggested anything in this column that we have not followed the suggestion ourselves!

And as for going to college functions with an eye to criticize, we beg to disagree. We usually come with the idea of enjoyment; we only criticize when we believe criticism is necessary. We definitely believe criticism is necessary for those people who sit and complain and do nothing else. What good are they?

To look at the good side of something does not take much doing. All we have to do is look at the campus, which is definitely pretty; we can look at our faculty, even the apathetic ones. Since in class they are, for the most part, truly excellent teachers. We can look at the growth of the school; we can look at the students, the handful of students who are interested and who are working for the school; we can look at... but why continue, it would take too long and there is not enough space!

No, it is true, this campus is not too wonderful in every respect, but it does have a few things working for it, things we have listed.

We're a very optimistic person, Mr. McNair. That is what is wrong. It is just that our idealistic eyes have been opened this year since we began this column, and some of the things we learned have not been what we call party.

And, it may interest you to know, Mr. McNair, that we did enjoy the May Dance. We came, as we came to all of the dances this year except for one, and we were very impressed with what your committee had done. And that is all we have to say to you, Mr. McNair, and to everyone else, except have a nice summer and a nice college career, to those of you who will still be here next year. We won't be.

all of this went unreported when, at the same time, you were denying student apathy?

Well, members of THE SEAHAWK staff, we are listening.

We are sorry. We are sorry. We are sorry. If we remember correctly there were several stories and pictures in the paper about homecoming. There has been a story about every dance we've had this year. The reason we did not have a big spread on the May Dance, oh ye dance committee members, is because our photographer, who was rather overworked at the time, did not find the time to develop the pictures he took at the dance that night. If it seems we are passing the blame to someone else, it is only because that is what happened. And now you have heard. —Editor

Tiny Alice And The Labyrinth

by Randy Del Lago

When we look closely at a labyrinth, we find that it is not a physical structure only, definable by its impenetrable walls, its myriad and deceptively similar gates, its seemingly endless complex of passages; nor is the essence of its fearfulness embodied alone in the beast that is known to wait within to devour in silence those who penetrate the darkness. The labyrinth is more. It is the mystery that pervades the physical structure, that lingers in the darkness and the silence of the countless corridors, escapes into the countryside and, there, possesses the minds and imaginations of passers-by, becomes rumor, legend, and, finally, evolves into myth.

Tiny Alice is, in fact, a religious labyrinth, establishing a significant distinction between the God of man and the mystic god of ultimate abstraction. It protests against man's seemingly eternal need to "personalize" that final Mystery, called God, which we will liken here to the atmosphere within the material labyrinth. Man, Albee suggests, in his own determination to define the undefinable, most often ends by perverting or modulating this entity into an hypothesis founded in his own experience and thought. Indeed, any effort on man's part to limit, even by definition, the reality of God can only result in a serious distortion and corruption. Albee's plea, then, is not, certainly, for an immediate comprehension of the ultimate Mystery, which, as he clearly indicates, would be intrinsically impossible on a mortal level; but simply for an awareness, by man, that apart and beyond his own meagre ability to conceive of God, a further Mystery must and does exist. Hence we employ both words, God and Mystery—God being merely the extent to which the Mystery can be conceived of by the mind of man.

The play, essentially, traces one man's movement backward into religion—"backward," in that he must begin in the periphery and move in toward the center. Employing the labyrinthine analogy, we must recognize that the material walls of the maze (God) have been constructed, or superimposed by the human intellect upon and about the original Mystery (Alice). Thus it is necessary for Julian to penetrate the physical structure in order to discover the spiritual essence. For us, the spiritual periphery, the orthodox church, is represented by the Cardinal.

Albee carefully demolishes the material labyrinth, leaving nothing for the final curtain to fall upon but a dying man and an impending Mystery. If he had known the Mystery, doubtless he would have named it. As it is, he calls it—Alice. This nomenclature, however arbitrary, should not mislead the viewer. Alice is neither face nor figure; she is not even the light that announces her coming. Instead, she is the effect she has overall. Hers is the presence of the Minotaur that permeates throughout the labyrinth and pervades the countryside. As the maze collapses, the Cardinal returns to his birds, and Miss Alice, the Lawyer, and the Butler escape to reorganize, perhaps, for another, similar experiment; so that all that remains is Alice, at once the stimulus for and the essence of man's need for religion.

The Lost Art of Pillow Fighting

by Julianne Bohannon

Pillow fighting has, I am afraid, become a lost art. It has been tossed aside by today's children in favor of playing G. I. Joe and Glamorous Ginny. But I can remember when I was younger that pillow fighting was a special delight and required talent.

The selection of a weapon was of major importance. Today's foam rubber pillows just don't lend themselves to pillow fights the way the old feather ones used to. Usually one chose his own pillow since he was most familiar with it, and after several battles knew exactly what he could expect from it. It was also important that the pillow be eased in a sturdy cover so it wouldn't rip during battle and render the fighter defenseless. Of course, if things got frantic in a battle, and you lost your pillow to an opponent, you could always grab one off your parent's bed.

Once all the preliminaries were settled, the fighting would begin, slowly at first, but with every moment the hits became more direct and the action gained in momentum. Usually after about five minutes the fight would spill over into the hallway and then it was only moments before we were dashing through the sitting room, flinging our weapons madly at the pursued or the pursuer. Laughter bounced about with us, as did screams of terror and delight. When we had tired of the floor, someone would jump onto the bed and begin warding off attackers from his new vantage point. Inevitably he was dislodged and fell in heaps of laughter to land exhausted on the rumpled bed.

It's a shame that this treasured art is dying simply because it can't be as attractively packaged, advertised and sold in a store. For a pillow fight is based on imagination within children, and that can never be commercialized.

Imagination Frames Him There

by Randy Del Lago

Imagination frames him there
Holds him still that I might know him

Well enough to pen his form now
Anywhere it pleases me
In cloud or candle-smoke or stone
Or in the scented ocean air
That bathes my body with its own
And press his salty lips against my brow

This distant figure framed in light
A streetlamp's principality
A bed of mist A pavement roof
The jeering laughter of a gull
My tongue caress my lover's thighs
My verses spread their wings tonight
And bear me to the ocean's side
Where anxious words know warming soft replies

Imagination smiles at me
He does not know what thoughts
I have
Instead he thinks I only smile
To press a scabbell in his hand While pigeons watch above the street

Within the cold obscurity
Of broken tenements that stand Awflike within this other nestling sea

A bird-child wakeful in the night Rehearses words he thinks will please

He does not know I only hear
The softness of his lips when he is speaking I move away
With nodding sea-gulls high among The sharp-edged rocks above the shore

Remain indifferent to the street-lamp's sphere

You see my finest poem there
His flesh still trembling from my touch

His breast a tiny frightened bird's
His laughter teasingly silent now
A gull is shrieking savagely
And shells lie scattered on the street

So lift my bird-child carefully
And search his sibilant lips for broken words

The night yawns indifferently
My thoughts are drawn into the mists

That veil the street upon which I Am standing now they linger there
Between the streetlamp and myself
As now the figure seeing me Adjust his coat and hurries on Imagination parts with me at dawn

Brookgreen Gardens: Showcase Of Cultural Depravity

by Ed Newman

A tourist motoring down US 17 in South Carolina who has had to pass up all of the glamor and sin of sunny-funny Myrtle Beach and feels culturally deprived should make a run by Brookgreen Gardens. Located a scant ten miles south of Myrtle Beach, Brookgreen Gardens is a veritable gem of a place, just the spot to take the family. There is even a zoo of sorts, filled with mildewed mountain lions and irritable brown bears, as well as the standard array of colorful and aromatic birds. It is probably the best that South Carolina has to offer. The tourist can forget about Charleston and the Battery and the rest of that Ante Bellum ballyhoo. Brookgreen Gardens is the place to go, whether he is a native South Carolinian seeking culture (an admittedly improbable situation) or simply passing through.

Strolling down painted-brick paths, O art lovers, what do you see? Beauties at every hand: behold the sleeping fawn; such a pity that the fawn has elephantiasis. And what is this? A satyr? Dear satyr, why are there a thousand of you at every turn? Perhaps you are attending the multitudinous nude women which adorn your painted-brick pedestals and lily-padded pools. No worry about their springing to life, at all events. Tough luck, nudes of varying bulks. Too bad, satyrs and fawns of disproportionate limbs.

Had enough, O art lovers? Hold, you have not glutted on the treasures of the Grotto, focal point of the cult of cultural depravity. Here may be found art relics of every imaginable design, all done up very nicely in stone and steel, and all different sizes. Observe the bust of Caesar, twelve feet high, tight lipped and sardonically presiding over a row of miniature horses, winged horses, gigantic drinking ducks, fierce eagles, weary Indians, bronzed nudes, cinder block rabbits, sleeping fawns, sipping fawns, dancing fawns, fawning fawns, faithful dogs, creeping panthers, writhing wrestlers, dying Gauls, cornstalks, magpies, plowing farmers, bumblebees, urns, pots, platters, sleeping panthers, winged lions, copper fish, bravny archers, leaping antelopes, Christmas trees, bearded prophets, wrinkled elephants, pelicans, toads, and so on, ad infinitum.

Two Times Three Equal Five

by Julianne Bohannon

When I entered the first grade at Nashville High School, I was introduced to many new things. But one thing remained constant throughout my school days: The legend of Flaming Futrell. Julia B. Futrell was the head, assistant and secretary of the mathematics department at our small high school. When I was a first grader she had been teaching a long time, and she was still there when I had to take algebra I in the ninth grade.

Not only did she not look seventy, she did not teach as if she was seventy either. Nothing escaped her watchful eyes. She moved from student to student searching each problem for errors, especially careless errors. Fortunately she had a sense of humor, and she let us call her Flaming Futrell right to her face. Actually, I think she was secretly proud of the title.

I remember the first careless error I made in her class. We were working with equations, and had been sent to the board. My equation wouldn't balance and I couldn't find the mistake. As I thumbed through my text book to find the printed answer, Mrs. Futrell came up to me and inquired about my equation. I replied that there seemed to be some mistake since it wouldn't balance. A glance at the work told her what was wrong and she told me to go to my seat. At first I thought perhaps I had gotten one of those unsolvable equations that the book had mentioned. But when she called the attention of the entire class to my problem I knew I hadn't been so lucky. She pointed out that my logic was indeed correct, however, my error was in the multiplication of two times three. There it was, sure enough: two times three equals five. She had that quality about her that made me feel embarrassed, yet I didn't resent being made a fool of before the whole class.

Her retirement had been rumored for at least ten years, so it was quite a shock to me when she really didn't come back to my junior year. I read about her in my hometown newspaper every now and then. She just got back from Hawaii not long ago. And every time I see her she asks me what two times three is. I always say five.

Little Tommy Goes To The Circus

by Robert Wood

We read our history books
And heard the good deeds
Done in the good wars
By all the good heroes
Who never dirtied their armor

We jumped up again
To the tune of the flute
And the roar of the drums
And the trample of boots
And the laughter of the young Off we marched

Down the storm-worn roads
To the tune of the wind-worn flute
And the blood-painted drums

We sang the old songs
And drank the old glory
And climbed the time-worn moun-

To meet our foes
And to revel in death.

Show Displays Best Works

by Jennifer Smith

There are three art exhibits presently on display in Kenan Hall. One of the exhibits, the Pre-Colombian artifacts from the Dudley collection, is being held over from the April show throughout this month. The Annual Wilmington College Art Department Student Exhibition and the Exhibition of Drawings by North Carolina artists constitute the other two shows.

Consisting of 40 works by major North Carolina artists, the North Carolina drawings show was originated by the North Carolina Museum of Art. Artists were invited on the basis of prior participation in the annual North Carolina Artists' competitions held at the museum. The current show in Kenan Hall represents the prize winners at that contest.

Show Displays Mediums

The drawings in this traveling show display a variety of mediums: pen, pencil, colored and Chinese ink, charcoal, crayon, and tempera among others. For parties interested in purchasing any of the drawings, they may contact Claude Howell of the art department to make arrangements.

The annual Wilmington College student show represents the best works of the year of all art students and consists of 255 works. The choice for pieces on display was determined by Mr. Howell as the judge of painting and design and Miss Tommy Sue Byrd as the judge of prints and drawings.

Designs Are Exercises

The design pieces have the highest representation numerically. They are basically exercises that teach the students the fundamentals of art such as perspective, balance, color relationship, value change, texture, and line. The designs employ the greatest variety of mediums.

The graphics or prints constitute another aspect on the show. These include woodcuts and etchings.

Drawings Concerned with Figure

The life drawings are basically concerned with the figure and, therefore, make use of models. The variation, poses are sometimes employed, thus incorporating still life with life drawing. The drawings display the aspects of contour, mass, and gesture.

The paintings in the show are both abstract and realistic, and use oil as their major medium.

People Follow Arrows

In an interview with art student Artie Markatos, it was suggested that those people viewing the student display follow the direction of the arrows. In this manner, viewers will be able to trace the progression through which the student passes in developing his style and talent—from the fundamental exercises of design to the freer and more creative works of drawings and paintings. As an art student, Artie feels that this show gives the student an opportunity to learn how to present his works, concerning himself with matters such as framing and matting.

Pieces Not for Sale

Since the exhibits main purpose is to give the student practice in presenting his work and to show what art students have created in the past year, this is not a sales exhibit. But people interested in purchasing any works may contact the individual artists.

The three exhibits will remain in Kenan Hall throughout the month of May.

Audience Eager To Go Home

by ED NEWMAN

George Farquhar's "The Recruiting Officer" was performed Friday night by the Collegiate Thians, with disastrous results.

The story involves the obtaining of army recruits in a small country town. Captain Plume, a recruiting officer, makes love to the women of the town, at the same time enlisting their boyfriends. Kite, his sergeant, the enlists two by pretending to be an astrologer. Silvia, daughter of Justice Balance, is in love with Plume but has promised not to marry without her father's consent. She runs away from home disguised as a man, is arrested, and is turned over to Plume by her unknowing father as a prospective recruit. Captain Brazen, a rival recruiting officer, tries to marry Melinda (a Shropshire lady of fortune) but gets her maid instead. Melinda herself is trying to win the attention of Mr. Worthy, a country gentleman. Rose, a country girl who sells chickens and other things, falls victim to the charms of Kite, while her brother is induced.

As written by Farquhar 250 years ago and adapted by David Spide, "The Recruiting Officer" is a superficial but very funny play. Its greatest asset is its witty dialogue and this point, primarily, is where the Collegiate Thians failed.

Each line in a play of this sort should be delivered as if it were the only line in the play. Instead, the players seemed in a hurry to get it all over with. This fact was evident from the very beginning, with Randy Del Lago settling a speed record for rapid-fire delivery of presumably funny lines. Most of the actors were guilty of this, though Carole Benton and Tony Rivenbark fared a little better. The problem was not so much that the lines were delivered so fast but that there was no change in pace. The viewer felt as if he had just run a four minute mile when the play ended. Thus, the audience, like the players, was eager to go home.

Dermid Says Photography Involves Chance, Patience

"Wild life photography is quite a challenge because you can't direct wild life as you can people. There is quite a bit of chance and patience involved that makes it very exciting," says Jack Dermid, assistant professor in the biology department.

To point out exactly what he meant by "chance" and "patience", Mr. Dermid related an incident that occurred while trying to make a motion picture of quail hatching out of their eggs. After having spent the good part of two days in a hot and confined blind waiting for the eggs to hatch, Mr. Dermid decided a drink of water would be most refreshing.

Leaving the blind for only 30 minutes to pursue this end, he returned to find the young already hatched and two days of patient waiting without their end goal. But, as Mr. Dermid says, "Don't get discouraged." He didn't and managed at a later time to obtain the picture he wanted.

Mr. Dermid has done some very outstanding work in the field of wild life photography. Before coming to Wilmington College, Mr. Dermid was employed by the North Carolina Wild Life Resources Committee, for whom he did wild life photography.

Speaking Of Sports

By CARRIE DAVIS

As the 1967-1968 school year draws to a close, the Wilmington College athletic department makes plans for next year's athletic program. Coach Bill Brooks reports preparation of schedules for basketball and baseball.

Currently, 22 basketball games have been scheduled for next season. The Seahawks' only new opponent, so far, is the High Point College team. Coach Brooks predicts approximately four more will be added. With these additions, the present schedule will be charged, so the schedule is only tentative. Wilco will lose only two starters—Jim Braxton, who graduated, and Wayne King, who will transfer to State. Chris Spiciale, transferring to Wilmington this year, was not eligible to play this season. However, he will join next season's team.

The athletic department is presently recruiting players. It reports several boys who say they will come to Wilco, but these prospects are still indefinite. There are three prospects from New Hanover High School. Coach Brooks expressed his feelings about the next basketball season by saying, "We're hoping that definitely, basketball will be improved."

The basketball season opens November 29, in Wilmington, with the Seahawks pitted against Atlantic Christian College. Ending February 24, the season will be longer than in past years. The final game finds Wilmington playing South Carolina Baptist at Charleston.

The baseball team for next season also reports a loss of two players. These players are both seniors as well as pitchers. They are Doyle Whitfield and Vic Johnson.

This year, the team is composed mostly of freshmen and sophomores. For that reason, little recruiting is being done, although a pitcher and one or two other players are being sought.

About 30 games will be scheduled for next season. (There were 28 games this year.) So far, only seven games have been scheduled; like the basketball schedule, the baseball schedule is only tentative. Coach Brooks is also optimistic about the baseball team.

In looking toward the 1968 Golf Team, Coach Earl Allen said, "We always feel like next year will be better than this year, but it's something we will have to wait and see."

All of this year's team will be back, and will be eligible, "golfer-wise," Coach Allen hopes they will be academically eligible to participate. He said the athletic department is also recruiting members, having talked to several boys and written a few letters.

No schedule has been worked out, as yet, though a match with Atlantic Christian College has been scheduled for April 4. The schedule probably will not be completed till fall.

Coal Allen is counting on Paul Bergen. The first day of this season, he defeated 58 of the 60 players participating.

The soccer team is doing no recruiting, according to Coach Charles Sproles. Only one or two of this year's members will not be back, so the team will remain practically the same. The captains, Danny Whisnant and Bob Vaughn, will be back. The entire team will be more experienced, and should be better.

Coach Sproles reports more interest in soccer, now, both with students and the team.

A schedule has not been formulated, but it will be similar to this season's schedule. Most of the games will be played in October. Coach Sproles said he was trying to add a couple more teams—possibly William and Mary and Guilford.

When questioned about the up-coming wrestling season, Coach Sproles replied, "I've talked to a lot of boys that I'd like to have, but I'm a little disappointed that I haven't been able to get them in school."

He cited the problems of Wilmington offering no scholarships for wrestling, and having no dorms. Therefore, the prospects go to other schools. He does, however, have a 177 pounder who will definitely attend Wilmington, and a 130 pound prospect.

Coach Sproles expects next year's team to be improved because of experience. However, he does not anticipate a better record, because some of the opponents will be stronger.

He mentioned some of his team members, praising them for their accomplishments this year. At 123 pounds is a rising junior, Eddie Radford, whom Coach Sproles predicts will be "better than ever" next year. At 130 pounds will be Ken King. Jim Morrissey will wrestle at 137 pounds. Larry Clukey, Ken Cobb, and Roy Jones will all wrestle in the 145 pound class. Dickie Hudson, Robert Elliot, and Wayne Barker will wrestle at 152 pounds. In the 160 pound class will be Paul Baker. Bill Griffin will wrestle at 191 pounds.

Committee To Show Final Films

The Fine Arts Committee will show the remaining film of its film series for this year Monday night.

On May 29 the film Greed will be shown. This film was written by Erich von Stroheim who based the story on the novel McTeague by Frank Norris. Jon Stokim also directs the film.

The silent film Greed has been called a classic of motion pictures. It is an experience for contemporary audiences as it concentrates on the distortions of human nature when confronted with a passion for money.

This film will be shown May 29 in the lecture room of Kenan Hall beginning at 8 p.m. No admission is charged.

Basketball Team Suffers Worst Season Ever

The basketball team had one of its poorer seasons, finishing the campaign with a 12-17 record. Coach Bill Brooks just couldn't get the Hawks to play two good halves in the same game.

The Seahawks finished third in the invitational tournament during Christmas at Wilmington but that was the only honor the club could achieve.

There were many problems on the court as an observer could note and Coach Brooks hopes to have them fixed up by the time the '67-'68 season gets under way.

Frank Bua was the leading scorer with a 20-plus average. Jim Hall found the range in the latter stages of season and came through with some 20 point performances. Butch Budd broke his ankle during a pre-season contest and came back to help the club at mid-season. Budd's return still left some desire for more rebounding.

This coming season the Hawks will have Bua, Budd, Hall, Wayne Johnson, Sam Askew, and Jerry Bron returning with a new addition in 6-6 Chris Speciale from New York City.

Golfers Win Five Meets

Coach Earl Allen came up with a good golf team this year as the Hawks won five and lost seven meets. The Seahawks were victorious over St. Andrews, Atlantic Christian, Pembroke, East Carolina, and South Carolina Baptist.

Paul Bergen and Alan Murray set the pace for the golf team in the early goings. Alex McCrackin, George Teunta, Jim Paschal, and Glenn Hodges all finished the season in fine style. The Hawks won their sweetest victory against ACC in the final match on the Bulldog's home course.

Co-captain Dick Hudson in Action

The baseball team won the District Title with two of the finest series against Belmont-Abbey and High Point that had been seen in some time. Coach Brooks and the team represented the college in the District play-offs in Georgia this week in an effort to gain a berth for the NAIA National tournament.

Turkey Buzzards Win Intramural Crown

On the intramural scene the Turkey Buzzards, who finished tie for second place during the regular season, won the elimination tournament by defeating a valiant Drafftee squad, 42-35.

The Buzzards received all-around performances from all the members of the squad during the season and especially during tournament time.

Coach Dave Miller, director of the Intra-mural basketball, selected an all-tourney team which consisted of Chuck Cuppett, Grogs; Steve Mundy, Turkey Buzzards; Jim Taylor, Turkey Buzzards; Larry Corbett, Drafftees; and Ed Lewis, Drafftees.

Wrestlers Rise To The Top

The Seahawk wrestling team finished the regular season with a 14-3 record the best in the College's history. The Hawks, under Coach Charles Sproles, then went down to Atlanta, Ga. to participate in the Southern Open tournament where they finished in seventh place.

Coach Sproles took three of the Hawk wrestlers to the NAIA tourney in Pennsylvania. They were Jim Morrissey, Paul Baker, and Bob Elliot. All three grapplers made a fine showing for themselves against rough competition.

The team added some power after the Christmas break with the return of Ed Radford and Roy "Bull" Jones to the mats. On the other side of the slate there was a broken ankle to co-captain Dick Hudson near the end of the season causing the 152 pound Dick Huds causing the 152 pound wrestler to miss the post-season tourneys.

Paul Baker took individual total point honors, with Morrissey in second and Elliot third. A special note for heavyweight Bill Griffin who helped the Seahawks win a number of matches with a tremendous showing of personal pride.

For graduation seniors, the time of year means the end, especially to registration forms, schedules, papers, the Seahawk, books, and all of the other paraphernalia the years at college. Will graduation seniors have more photos by Blaustein and Brindell?

Now is the time to do the last minute studying, the reports you've known about since the beginning of the quarter, but being a true student, you have not. Lab practicals, research papers, final quizzes.

Wind Ensemble To Present Spring Concert

The Wind Ensemble of the University of Washington is preparing for its annual spring concert. The ensemble, which consists of students from various schools, will be performing a variety of pieces. The concert is scheduled for May 31st at 8:00 PM in the University Auditorium. Tickets are available for purchase at the door for $2.00. The ensemble is led by conductor John Williams. The concert will feature a variety of pieces, including "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "The Star-Spangled Banner (Revised)". The ensemble is also performing a variety of other pieces, including "The Star-Spangled Banner (Revised)" and "The Star-Spangled Banner (Revised)".

So when it will be over and instead of sun bathing on a promenade you can go to the beach, where you won't have to worry about school - for three months at least.

Early Students Find Spaces

It may be said that a recent survey taken by The Seahawk, which the students were to conduct, those who go to the campus each day are not having any trouble finding a parking space or getting tickets. Not so, however, when these students are the ones who have the problem. The early students, who are not yet in the car, have problems in getting into the campus after about 8:15 a.m. Students who arrive after this usually find themselves parking in the large lot near the gym. This large lot near the gym was given many varied names by the students. The "North 4th, South 4th, and Freshman parking lot" are the main titles for this area. The students mentioned

Pledges To Give Party

The students and teachers of the University of Washington are planning a party for the students. The party is scheduled for May 31st at 8:00 PM in the University Auditorium. The party will be a celebration of the end of the school year. The students and teachers are all looking forward to the party. The party will be a celebration of the end of the school year. School Expects Money For Parking Facilities

"The biggest problem we have on campus is parking," said Thomas D. Noel, superintendent of buildings and grounds, in a recent interview. Noel said he was eager to have his views aired for the students so that they could better understand the situation on campus. He said that the school is expecting $2.75 per car for parking facilities, but that the school is not sure if the students will pay for parking. He said that the school is not sure if the students will pay for parking. He said that the school is not sure if the students will pay for parking. He said that the school is not sure if the students will pay for parking.

No Tags
The big question, of course, related to parking tickets. Noel noted that the "biggest problem is our lack of college tags. Perhaps 25 per cent of the students have no college tags." He said the second biggest problem was parking in drive-ways. It was pointed out that college tags sold in the bookstore cost only 30 cents.

Scholarship Money
Noel commented that he took in about $250 a year in parking tickets, pointing out that the money is used for scholarships. He added, "Many students ignore the tickets and never pay. Some others, if they pay a lot, say 20 dollars, only pay off half, but about half of their income at least one parking ticket each quarter. Reasons for tickets as given by the students are lack of college tags, parking in drive-ways, and 'lack of convenient places to park'."

Student Complaints
The two biggest complaints he said were about the parking situation. He said that the school is not sure if the students will pay for parking. Construction Of Buildings Underway

By CATHARIN KNIGHT

Rising behind Kenan are the skeletons of the new library and chemistry-physics buildings which will soon add to the campus of Wilmington College.

According to Dr. William M. Randall, president of the college, the library building should be completed by the beginning of summer school, 1968 or soon thereafter. "Once they get the roof on it will be all right," said Dr. Randall. Rainy weather could slow construction somewhat.

Completion in 1968

As to the chemistry-physics building, completion should be by the beginning of the autumn quarter, 1968.

Both buildings are Georgian in style, in keeping with the general architecture of the college. The artist's conception of how these buildings will look when completed are hanging just inside the door of the present library.

And what will happen to the present library building when the new one is finished? Dr. Randall said "we haven't quite determined what we will do with this space." Eventually, he said, the entire building will be used for administrative purposes.

Funds from Legislature

Funds for the construction of these two buildings were obtained from the 1965 legislature, according to Dr. Randall. There was a choice of buildings to be constructed. "The wisdom and thoughtful attention of the Board of Trustees to the educational development of the institution is well exemplified by their choice of these two as first priority needs," said Dr. Randall in his speech at ground breaking ceremonies this summer.

The second floor of the two-story Library Building will overhang the first, making a portico which will be enclosed by arches and afford protection from the

The new library will house 200,000 volumes and will accommodate approximately 800 students.

The first floor includes a central circulation reference area, an administration area, and an elevator for the transportation of books, an arts-music room, a new books browsing area, student study-rooms, and rooms for faculty conference.

"There will be an open gallery in the center of the second floor, which will give a more spacious effect to the first floor," according to Dr. Randall.

A rare-books room and audiovisual room are included in the plans for the second floor. Many group-study rooms are planned, in which an individual student or group may study. Also featured are numerous corals, which are individual study rooms, for the student who wishes to concentrate.

Twenty-three faculty offices have been included in the plans for the chemistry-physics building. This building will house the physics and chemistry class rooms, laboratories, seminar rooms, and two auditoriums.

Eight Labs for Chemistry

The Chemistry Department will have eight laboratories in the new building as well as a preparation room, stock and storage rooms, and a chemistry auditorium.

The Physics Department will have five laboratories plus a balance room, a count room, a dark room, three mechanical rooms, a number of stock rooms, a preparation room, and a physics auditorium.

Committee Starts Work On Dances

"This year we will have five dances other than the Homecoming Activities," said Mark Young, chairman of the dance committee. The first dance of the year was the Freshman Dance Friday night. "Since we have an ample budget this year," Mark emphasized, "we plan to bring the best entertainment possible to the college."

"I am very happy," said Mark, "to have the assistance of Georgia Macris, who worked on the committee last year and who is also a very talented decorator."

No plans have yet been made for Homecoming, but Mark promises that work for this weekend will begin very soon.

"If we have any money left over at the end of the year, we are going to have a 'left-over' dance," Mark commented.

Lecture Series Begins In October

By CARRIE DAVIS

The Wilmington College Faculty Lecture Series begins October 26, with the presentation of Madame Suzanne Labin. Beginning at 8:00 p.m., the lecture will be held in the Student Services Building.

Madame Labin will discuss Far Eastern Affairs, with emphasis upon the current situation in Viet Nam. She has recently arrived on the West Coast after attending a meeting of the World Anti-Communist League in Taipei, Taiwan.

Students, faculty, and townspeople are all invited to hear Madame Labin.

November 2, the Lecture Committees of Faculty and Trustees will present Alexander Scourby. Mr. Scourby will give a dramatic reading entitled, "Great Moments from the Bible." He is a star of theater and television, and narrated the Sound and Light Production for the U.S.S. North Carolina.

This program will take place in Hanover Hall at 8 p.m. Faculty and townspeople are asked to purchase tickets. Students are admitted free with their activity cards to all lectures.

Two additional lectures have been engaged for winter term. January 15, Dr. William D. Grey, Professor of Botany at Southern Illinois University will speak. Dr. Grey will discuss "Population and Protein," in the Student Services Building. It is open to the public.

February 27, the noted news commentator, Edward P. Morgan, will deliver the principal lecture in the series. Entitled, "Can We Preserve Individual Liberty in Today's World?" the lecture will be held in Hanover Hall at 8:00 p.m. Tickets are required for non-students.

Two lectures are anticipated for Spring Quarter.

Students who are willing to sell tickets to the series are requested to contact Walser Allen, Chairman of the committee, or Mrs. Atha Bloodworth, in the main office.

Senators Object To Fine Arts Budget

The main business of the first Senate meeting was the presentation of the yearly budget.

The budget, of $13750 of total appropriations, was presented by Student Body President Mike Meier. This budget was based on the budget of last year.

Many senators objected to the fact that the Dance Committee received $6000 while the Fine Arts Committee, programs of which the senators feel are not well attended, received $3000. (see related story, page 1).

It was asked that chairman of the Fine Arts Committee, Randy Del Lago, attend the next meeting to explain why the money is necessary and also to explain the programs for the year.

In other appropriations, the Senate received $675; THE SEAHAWK $3400; The Student Directory $350; and the drama department $725.

The Debate Team, although inactive, received $600. If the team is revived, the money will go to it; otherwise, the money will go back into Senate funds.

In other business, Bill Baugh reported that copies of the proposed honor system would be available to all senators for review before the next meeting, at which time the honor system will be discussed.

The Student Directories, according to Gaye Godwin, will be out by November.

Dellago Defends Appropriation

"We can't say we objected, we just want it reviewed," says Dale Donahue, sophomore senator, speaking about the Fine Arts Committee appropriation of $3000.

Several senators commenting on the appropriation following the senate meeting feel that the committee should not receive this much money since the Fine Arts programs are not that well attended, although the dances are.

Student Body Secretary Sara Rivenbark echoed other senators when she said, "We added it up and it came to over $1000 for Spanish dancers and a Mime, and we thought that a bit much."

"The Fine Arts committee was second on the list of appropriations and no one goes to them that much. It should go to something that has a larger representation," Sara commented.

"My point was that they have $3000 while the Dance Committee only has $5000. Since this money comes out of the student activity fees and more students attend the dances than the Fine Arts programs, more should be given to the Dance Committee," said Barbara Halterman, sophomore senator.

She added, "I feel the Fine Arts Committee is an important part of the campus and to the student who should be culturally inclined, but the hours never work out for anybody."

"They just want it explained," said Sara, "by some member of the committee to see if the programs are really worth it."

"If Randy can answer our questions and give a good argument the appropriation for the committee will be approved," stated Dale.

Speaking in favor of the appropriation was senior senator Dennis Lennon who said, "I think that on our campus the Fine Arts Program is necessary to provide a liberal arts education."

He questioned, "How can students expect to get any culture without a halfway decent Fine Arts program?"

Replying for the Fine Arts Committee, Randy asserted, "I'll be at the next Senate meeting to explain why the $3000 is necessary, and, in fact, not sufficient for really effective Fine Arts programs."

Randy pointed out that "if it is true that the Fine Arts programs are ill attended, one reason might be that insufficient funds prohibit the scheduling of programs that would arouse greater interest on the parts of the student body."

Welcome

Welcome back to the college campus with the cleanest cars in the state. With the number of clubs on campus which had car washes last year—and they have already started this year — we should recognize our cars for their shining cleanliness.

And so, another year begins for Wilmington College students (the car wash last Friday attests to that fact).

To all freshmen, especially the young lady who did wrinkle up her nose as she informed a friend, "Yes," she said in a resigned tone, "I'm going here." Wilmington College is not that horrible. It does have its good points. Where else in this state can you spend a dollar every weekend to have your car washed and realize you are supporting a club on campus?

Returning

We've returned. This, we, not the royal we, is referring to what you are now reading: THE SEAHAWK, your campus newspaper. We are a newspaper, not a gossip column. On these pages you will not learn who is now pinned to whom or what Jane said to George and how cute the new English professor is. For that type of newspaper you may either go to your closest junior high—or start one yourself.

We will be telling you what is happening on campus. That switch deserves mention. We will tell you what the various campus clubs and organizations will be doing—as long as it is of general interest to the students on campus and not just to the individual organization.

We want to write about what is happening, we do not want to resort to creating something to write about. We write about what we see and hear.

A former editor of this paper once aptly expressed our goals for THE SEAHAWK. "Our objective is not only to give a thorough and comprehensive reportage of news and to express our own opinions, but also to stimulate thought among the student body and encourage you to offer these thoughts in the newspaper. A newspaper, more than being an entertaining collection of facts, should kindle ideas among its readers, and we shall endeavor to do this through our features and columns."

We hope to reach these goals, but we can't do it without your help. We welcome your views, for this is your newspaper; your opinions, your criticisms. To again quote a SEAHAWK editor, "we expect and hope some of these opinions will dissent with our own; a college where one line of thought is accepted or voiced gives evidence either to an appalling indifference or witlessness."

In addition, we do not feel as if we are a puppet of the faculty or administration. The views expressed on this page belong to the person writing them. Any unsigned articles are the opinion of the editor and her advisers. We will print a paper this year using our judgement and knowledge, that is all we can expect to do and all we hope to do.

Our office is always open in the morning. If you'd like to come by to talk to us about something you would like to see in the paper, or if you would like to work on the paper, feel welcome to come in.

Parking

"I wish everyone would ride bicycles," said Thomas Noe, Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings, before school began in anticipation of the number of cars that would be on campus this year.

Wilmington College has 1,246 students this year. Counting the seniors there are 1,205 registered cars on campus.

It is true that some students bought more than one parking decal, but even so, there will be more cars on campus this year resulting in the usual complaints about no place to park and the very usual gripes about parking tickets.

There has been money appropriated from the N. C. General Assembly for more parking facilities, but these facilities will come with the new buildings now under construction.

So all we can advise you to do is to be here early and avoid the madness of 8:20 fears of finding a place to park that is not ten miles away from your first class—and to just grin and bear it!

Burrowing With Barrow

By CLIFF BARROWS

Since at this time of year Wilmington College is flooded with new students, many of which are from out of town, it should be appropriate that they be conducted on a tour of their new home. They are now attending college (? Skepticism is no flaw in the South.) in one of the oldest and most bountiful centers of anti-culture in the United States. It has been said that the only touches of Western Civilization are washed up on the local beaches, and that these are taken and placed above the mantels by the local populace solely for use as conversation pieces. The statement is more than less accurate.

Wilmington is alive, rather, dying with its heritage which survives in the many old buildings about the town. One with which to start is St. James Episcopal Church which squats in all its rich Christian glory at the corner of Third and Market Streets just a few blocks from the local low rent district. Evolved with and directly opposite the church is the Cornwallis House, where, during the Revolutionary War, the British soldier made his military and social headquarters. Wilmington has always believed in the social aspect of human existence and with the General paying for the parties they only thought it Southern hospitality to allow him the pleasure of their company. It was at the aforementioned church that the General stabled his horses. Certainly no better use, before or since, was made of one of the local downtown shrines. In fact, since the General left with his horses, the area has been on the downfall. For an interesting afternoon, the new student may like to stand on the banks of the lovely Cape Fear (there is surely no river in the world which can boast of such brilliant greens, reds, and blues or such rich browns softly covered with the light dew-silt in the gasolined sunshine) and watch portions of the downtown area float by.

Two streets up, and the student can not miss it as it is in the middle of the street, is the Kenan Memorial Fountain, one man's monument to himself or maybe to the fact that his sisters married wisely and well. This attractive and useful (body shops make a decent living off it) sculpture is affectionately known both in and out of state as the 'spitting turtles.' Tourist magazines the country over cite it to unskilled drivers as another reason why North Carolina and particularly the Southeast portion may be hazardous to their health.

To one side of the 'spitting turtles' is the First Baptist Church. Its vari-colored history will be covered in the column on the social structure, origins and medieval present of Wilmington. Just across the street is the Bellamy mansion, a delightful ante-bellum home that, like most of the ante-bellum structures here, languish in seemingly present-bellum disrepair — those that the river does not inherit.

Farther out Market is the field referred to as Green Meadows, the local stomping grounds for the Wilmington chapter of the Ku Klux Klan, an organization which breeds — and not unlike flies. They often have such well-known speakers as Robert Shelton and Grand Kludd Dorsett. The new student should stay tuned to the local sheriff's office so he will not miss this last of the free carnivals. Back into Wilmington is located St. John's Art Gallery. It was at one time the meeting place for a local group of far-right wingers called the Masons but has become a far-left art gallery (all art galleries in the Port City would be far-left). It is the only art gallery in Wilmington which says something for the left wingers but even more for the right ones.

Last but not least, the new student should visit the Airlie Gardens. It is a natural beauty and as for history, no more can be said than did William Faulkner in his trilogy The Hamlet, The Town, The Mansion. This should bring the student back to the College, the latest thing in pre-modern architecture which supports such a quality of academic experience that — it would deserve a column to itself.

Letter to the Editor

Meier Expresses Thanks

To the editor:

I wish to extend my thanks to the various organizations which function on this campus for their help during the somewhat trying period of Freshman Orientation. Without their help it could not have been carried out effectively.

We, as upper-classmen, must show our fellow freshmen students that our institution is a place where the free exchange of ideas and thoughts can take place. Our responsibility, (as upperclassmen) too, is to carry the campaign of "the positive attitude" to them so that they will understand why it is needed. Our positive attitude, however, does not wish to ignore the bald-face "wrong" which are on this campus and which drain our pockets of their meager silver and copper weights we call money.

But let us stick with the positive side for a while. The first meeting of the Senate was October 2. There the Student Activity Budget was placed before them to approve or disapprove. It is, if I might say so, a good budget with the Senate, Fine Arts Committee and Dance Committee being appropriated more funds than ever before. The total appropriation reaches almost $14,000.00.

Squawks

By MARILYN ROBERTS

There have been some changes made here over the summer, but the one thing that, has definitely not changed is the absolutely lousy food sold on campus.

We had decided to conduct a one-woman boycott of this food, but a few days after school began, curiosity and hunger drove us to the snack bar. We spent three days — research — eating this food. We are bringing sandwiches from home from now on.

No improvements could we notice; the food, in fact, seems to have gotten worse (if that could be possible).

A hamburger is not a hamburger when it is as thin as two pieces of typing paper put together — and raw in the middle. And, to be truthful, we didn't want a hamburger. We wanted a chicken salad sandwich. We had wanted a chicken salad sandwich for three days. We did not get the sandwich because they didn't have any.

So why have a sign proclaiming chicken salad for 30 cents when there is not any?

It is rather sad that we, as college students, have to pay for the poor quality of food served upon us. If the food were good, we would not have cause to complain. But it is not good; therefore, we shall complain. (Our stomachs are still reacting to that hamburger!)

And what about the service? Come now. When in the afternoon there are three ladies behind the counter, is it fair for two of them to be talking while one must wait on anyone who comes? Is a five minute wait (perhaps we do exaggerate a little) necessary for a simple hot dog?

And that was the day we asked first for a chicken salad sandwich and then for a hamburger and they were out of both — $2.90!

But there is one thing we should do. We should clear the tables of cups and bottles. . . . excuse us, no bottles this year, just cups, and other such trash after eating. It does make it easier on the next person who sits at the table as well as for the people working there whom we have seen diligently cleaning them off.

But back to those cups. Isn't it a relief to be able to buy a small drink for only one dime and not have to worry about putting the bottle back in the rack? We think that is awfully considerate of whoever thought of us so kindly.

The Student Senate, this year, is an aggressive one. All the members are looking forward to a progressive, worthwhile year. This spirit will be aided with our new Constitution on which Hugh Newkirk has so diligently spent his time and effort, and is continuing to do.

In closing, then, let me say that everything we want and need cannot be obtained at once. We must work with what we have and most of all, work together. For nothing can be gained by going our individual ways.

College Initiates New ID Cards

A new form of activity cards were issued to students this fall. "These are polaroid ID cards laminated in plastic," said former Wilmington College student, Tom Landen, now staff photographer for Campbell College, who spent one day on campus helping to initiate the new system.

ID cards were issued to students beginning Sept. 28, a few days after school began instead of late in October as in former years.

Photos for the ID cards were taken by a polaroid camera before the card was laminated in plastic. The whole process took less than five minutes.

Different than in previous years, the new cards have the student's date of birth. "We thought more students would be willing to put down their date of birth rather than their age," said Mrs. Helena Cheek, Dean of Women.

The new cards will not be stamped at the beginning of each quarter. "They will be used throughout the year," said Thomas P. Brown, Assistant Dean of Students.

Wilmington College is buying the polaroid camera and laminating machine from Campbell. Dean Brown pointed out that the new cards are an experiment and "if they don't work we'll try something else. The equipment is ours now, though," he said.

Program Provides Student With Period To Adjust

Offering a series of new courses, both the English and Math Departments are experimenting with three-quarter programs that will satisfy basic general requirements.

The courses—following a 103, 104, and 105 sequence—are a "new idea here, though not nationwide," according to J. Marshall Crews, Dean of Students.

The math program is designed as a comprehensive view of college math, including algebra, trigonometry, and a history of mathematics. Fulfilling the math requirements, the study is designed for students who do not plan to major in mathematics or a related field.

"Because this is a sequenced course requiring three quarters, a student cannot pick it up at the beginning of second quarter. It may be offered again next fall if there is a demand," said Dean Crews.

The new English program permits students to fulfill their English requirements in composition over three quarters instead of two.

Mrs. Becky Pearsall, instructor of a 103 course, said, "The study is an experimental one which covers the same material as 101 and 102 with the same standards, but it permits a student to have more time for preparing assignments and for individual counseling."

The program provides the student with a long period to adjust to college courses, according to Mrs. Isabel Foushee, instructor in another 103 class. "The two courses which carry a five hour credit are rather demanding; the new program offers a longer period of adjustment."

Music Department Sponsors Vladimir Ussachevsky Recital

Vladimir Ussachevsky, composer and lecture-recitalist, is known internationally for his creative work for the electronic medium. Mr. Ussachevsky, chairman of the committee of direction, Columbia-Princeton Electronic Music Center, will be presented at Wilmington College on October 11 at 8 p.m. in Hanover Hall.

This program is sponsored by the Music Department.

Born in China in 1911 of a musical Russian family, he had his first music studies there, and in his teens went to Pomona College in California, where he received his first training in composition. In his senior year at Pomona a full evening's concert of his compositions was presented. Later at Eastman School of Music he received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees, and had major performances of his music. A period of Army service followed, in which his Chinese and Russian language fluency was of service; and in 1946 he resumed his career in music at Columbia University.

In 1951 he began his experiments on the tape recorder, and in 1952 presented his first public demonstration of these experiments. In 1953 he began an extensive collaboration with his colleague, Otto Luening, a composer also at Columbia University, in which the two men produced major orchestral works with solo tape recorder; suites for theatre productions, for ballet, and other mediums of public presentation.

Mr. Ussachevsky's individual work for the electronic medium includes "Studies in Sound," "A Piece for Tape Recorder," "Sonic Contours," a score for the film "No Exit" from the Sartre book, incidental music for films, as well as a major work for several choruses with electronic accompaniment.

In 1957 a Guggenheim Fellowship in composition allowed him to work in Europe in the tape and electronic medium in major studios of Gravesano (Switzerland), Milan, Baden-Baden and Paris.

Mr. Ussachevsky went to the Soviet Union in 1951 where he gave informal illustrated lectures in Russian on electronic music produced at the Columbia-Princeton Electronic Music Center, to members of the Union of Soviet Composers in various Soviet cities. In that same period he also visited electronic music studios in Poland, Holland and Germany. Both in 1953 and in 1961, Mr. Ussachevsky served as an American delegate to conferences on electronic music in Paris.

Some of his music has been recorded on Columbia Records, RCA Victor, Composers' Recordings, Inc., and Folkways, and these are frequently used for television productions and have had numerous radio performances. He was presented recently on CBS-TV "Camera 3" in his subject, and tours widely, in special times of season, through the United States.

Art Exhibits In Kenan

"We are quite excited about scheduled shows for the year," said Claude Howell, head of the Art Department.

"There is a great variety and we hope that the quality will be even better than usual," he added.

The first two shows opened Sunday in Kenan Hall. These two shows include a one-man show of paintings by Joseph Schwarz and Artifacts from the Near East.

Beginning November 5 will be the East Carolina Print Show and the Folger Shakespeare Show.

The New Hanover County Student Show will be in Kenan from December 3-12.

The Primrose College of Indian Artifacts and a one-man show of paintings by I. Rice Pereira will begin in January.

Also in January will be the Associated Artists of N. C. Print and Drawing Show.

February will see the Lower Cape Fear Annual Exhibition.

In March there will be a two-man show, Sculpture, by Mitchell and Green.

April's shows will be the Ruth Julian Collection of Painting and Sculpture.

The Wilmington College Student Art Show will round out the year in May.

ORIENTATION TO ELECTIONS—Orientation for freshmen and new students was three weeks ago. During this time the Freshmen attended meetings, listened to speeches. Friday they will have their chance to participate as a Wilmington College student by voting in their Freshman elections.

Orientation Open To Freshmen

Sections of orientation will be open to freshmen each quarter. Enrollment in the course is strictly on a volunteer basis. Dr. Newton pointed out that although many students will do well in high school, when they reach college these students will discover that the study habits and attitudes that served them in high school do not stand up in college.

Dr. Newton does not expect any landslide business at first. "A few students will have to take it before it will catch on," he says.

Orientation will offer more actual learning by doing than lecturing, according to Dr. Newton. "There is not going to be any outside class work per se except to apply what is done in the orientation class to other courses."

Swink, Alexander Announce Cast

The Wilmington College Theatre and the Thalian Association will present MY FAIR LADY on November 17, 18, and 19 in Thalian Hall.

This famous play, which ran almost eight years on Broadway, is respected as the zenith of the American musical theatre. Later, when it was made into a motion picture, it won five Academy Awards, including the award for Best Picture of the Year.

The story revolves around Eliza Doolittle (Rosemary Salata), a Cockney flower-girl who is transformed into a beautiful, elegant young lady by Henry Higgins (Randy Del Lago), a speech expert who makes a wager that he can, indeed, effect this remarkable transformation.

After he has made the wager with his friend Colonel Pickering (Neil Bell), he begins his instruction, much to the dismay of Mrs. Pierce, his housekeeper (Pat Fuchs). Most of the complications arise from Eliza's encounters with the "polite" society represented by Higgins' mother and her young admirer, Freddy (played by Jere Hodgins).

"But the biggest 'complication' of all is Eliza's own father, Alfred P. Doolittle (Sam Garner), who never seems to know just exactly what is coming off."

Others in the cast are Catherine Baird (as Mrs. Eynsford-Hill), Tom Clemmons (as Janice), Blanche Blaustein (as the Queen of Transylvania), and Terry Wortley (as Harvey).

Others included in the cast are Virginia Sonsky, Marc Pope, David Jones, John Dowdy, Kay Ogden, Ellen Dunn, Sandy Lazandnes, Winna Dowdy, and David Henry.

Also Barbara Deaton, Cam Baird, Tina Forrester, David James, and others too numerous to mention.

Unquestionably, this is one of the largest productions ever staged at Thalian Hall. MY FAIR LADY, by Lerner and Lowe, will be the first production of the Thalian-Wilmington College season.

Directing MY FAIR LADY are Doug Swink (dramatic director) and Bob Alexander (music director). Technical director for this production is Mrs. Anne Fitzgibbon.

Hudson Names Top 12

Lloyd Hudson of the Music Department announces that the Top Twelve has been chosen for this year. Additions were held Thursday, September 28.

This year's Top Twelve is composed of the following: Sheila Page, Sharon Higgins, Linda Bagby, Barbara Knowles, Nancy James, David Allen, Edward Thompson, Paul Rodenberry, Terry Wortley, William Pearsall, and Fred Merritt. Kenneth Dandy will be the accompanist.

The College Chorus has been organized. However, it is still open to anyone who would like to join.

Tired of feeling useless? Looking for something entertaining, creative, and enjoyable to do? Come by The Seahawk office and sign up for a year that will not prove dull.

The Seahawk needs people for our advertising and reporting staffs. No experience required. We train.

Soccer: '66 Profile

If you are walking past the gym about three o'clock or so and look towards the athletic fields you'll probably see a group of gentlemen kicking around a yellow ball. No they are not playing Irish football. It's the Seahawk soccer team opening its third season under Coach Charles Sproles. The 'Hawks finished the 1966 campaign with a 3-6 record after bowing in all their contests in the initial '65 season.

Coach Sproles has the majority of his club back including goalie

Bob Vaughn. Vaughn helped keep the Seahawks in all the games last season with some breath-taking saves.

Along with Vaughn are star forwards Dan Whisnant, Gene Russ, and Phil Oakley. Whisnant paced the squad in scoring and had the distinction of scoring three goals in a game twice. Russ was second in scoring with five goals.

Pete Daughtry, Steve Mundy, Wayne Barker, and defensive ace Elmer Maley have returned. Along with a number of frosh to spark the Seahawks the veterans turned back a group of German players, 6-0, in a preseason contest. They closed out the '66 season with a 3-2 come from behind victory over North Carolina Wesleyan on the strength of Daughtry's two second half goals.

By GIL HUGULEY
Well, Hello! Welcome back to those of you who made it back and just plain welcome to those of you who will try to make it, period. It's good to be back in the saddle again, although this is a new saddle for me, so please excuse me if my leather squeaks.

Good Ole Charlie Sproles is "moulding his clay" into what looks to be a fine soccer team this year, although by the time you read this, we will have played two regular season games and the truth of the above statement will be either proved or not.

At this writing the team has played one exhibition game with the crew of the German ship Leutjenburg and blanked them 6 to 0.

Since I intend to make this column brash and outspoken and will occasionally make a fool of myself, I will go on record now and state unequivocally that the Seahawks will defeat Methodist College of Fayetteville 5 to 1 when we travel there Oct. 23. This probably unastute prediction is based on the fact that in their first game, the Methodists were creamed by Ft. Bragg 11 to 0.

Keep in mind that the first two games have already been played. The Athletic Department informs me three more home games likely will be scheduled at the last minute.

Hmmmm . . . it becomes apparent why the Athletic Department hopes to schedule those three home games. With only one home game presently on the schedule, I'm sure the A. D. feels it must get some more home games on the slate to avoid having the gym stoned by an angry mob of avid sports fans and Seahawk supporters! I mean, after all, with all the fantastic support exhibited by the Student Body at Wilco, the Athletic Department must constantly strive to give the fans what they want. They wouldn't want the unified support of all the students to turn against them.

Seahawks Blitz Germans 6-0

Coach Charles Sproles' Seahawks picked up where they left off in the final game of the 1966 season with a stunning 6-0 victory when they defeated a group of German soccer players in the first exhibition game of the season.

The action was rough and the pace was fast as the Seahawks delivered goal after goal in surprising succession. Team work was quick as Dan Whisnant opened the game with the first goal. Gene Russ led the team in scoring by slamming in two fast goals.

Other goals were made by Pete Daughtry, Artie Green, and Phil Oakley.

Although the game was only practice, injuries were numerous. Gene Russ was tripped up in the fourth quarter and came up with a wrist broken in two places, an injury which could possibly put him out for the rest of the season. Minor injuries were Phil Oakley with a sprained ankle and Steve Mondt with a cut foot. Both players should be back in play by next week.

Fine Arts In Review

By KAREN DER LAM
In 1966 Jean Cocteau directed and wrote the screenplay and dialogue for the BEAUTY AND THE BEAST animated from Nine La Fontaines de Beaumonts' classic fairy tale. Combining horror with the romantic, Cocteau sought to find the hidden magic of the "film." The tale is something he was the first filmmaker to make it become a story some of us have never heard of at our earliest childhood in the dream world of the ventional thing that the film form, but directly replaced all poetic devices of literature, which are on page or stage and are commanding film devices, using only movement within the given dimensions of the movie form. This particular "genre" begins when Beauty's father comes upon the Beast's castle on a stormy night. He is led through the castle made by human arms that glow from the walls and hold out branches to all who enter, where faces called in wood or at elaborate fireplace move their eyes and peer from the gloom. Hands growing from the center of the fully-spread table serve his dinner and after eating he falls asleep. The next morning, as he prepares to leave the mysterious castle, he picks a rose for his daughter, Beauty. Suddenly the Beast appears and demands Beauty for the theft of his rose. Finally the Beast allows one condition that one of his daughters can die in his name. When her father returns home, Beauty's sister, Belle him for picking the rose, but she returns to the Beast's castle to take her father's place. And thus the story begins. . . . Cocteau (who has said that "Wonderland has little use for vagueness; mystery exists only in the realm of the fantastic") has provided a wealth of Dore-like detail that could only be provided by actual location shooting in the old frame houses and chateaux that still exist in the French countryside. Jean Cocteau's remarkable photography augments the atmosphere of unreality.

When the film first opened, it was considered too sophisticated for children, and too simple in its telling for adults. But history has vindicated Cocteau. For BEAUTY AND THE BEAST is now considered one of the greatest classics of the fantasy screen. It ran at Josephine Day as the Beauty and Jean Marais as the Beast.

This film, the second in this year's Fine Arts series, will be shown in the Hester lecture room on Friday night, October 20 at 8:00 P.M. There will be no admission charged.

Students Ask Lower Food Prices In Pub

Can food prices on campus be lowered was the question put to Frank Byrne, owner of the food concession on campus, in a special meeting Oct. 13.

Meeting with Byrne were Mike Meier, president of the Student Body, Renee Hartman, Editor of The Seahawk, and Hugh Newkirk, member of the Cabinet, in addition to Deans Marshall Crews, Thomas Brown, and Mrs. Helena Cheek.

"During the last several days students have come up to me saying the prices were too high and they did not feel the quality of the food justified the prices," Mike told Byrne.

Lower Prices

"Why couldn't the prices be lowered?" Mike questioned.

"Why aren't the prices of the places where I buy the food lower?" countered Byrne.

"We don't want you to sacrifice anything, but we do want you to see things from a student's view," Mike told him.

Hugh pointed out that since Byrne has exclusive rights to all of the food sold on campus, he does have an absolute monopoly saying, "Something could be done!"

It was suggested that prices for such things as hamburgers, French fries, and cheeseburgers be lowered by a nickel. This would bring the price of a hamburger down to 25 cents, French fries down to 20 cents, a hot dog down to 15 cents, and cheeseburgers down to 30 cents.

Smaller Portions

To do this Byrne says he will have to make the portions smaller.

"What you are asking me to do," said Byrne, "is to reduce prices and give students my mark-up."

Mike replied, "This is the way you seem to want to see it, but I don't want my fellow students to be taken advantage of."

Dean Crews pointed out that Burns has six employees he has to pay whether he has a customer or not. The school does furnish stationary equipment and utilities for Byrne and in return receives 15% of the gross profit.

"His profit is small," said Crews, "But I think if we get something cheaper, you could get more of a profit."

Open for Criticism

"I am open for constructive criticism," Byrne stressed.

"A hamburger sold on campus with lettuce and tomato costs 35 cents and the hamburger, in my opinion, is usually cold and generally not good," stated Renee.

The hamburgers are cooked ahead of time to speed up service, said Byrne. The hamburgers were cooked in that fashion when Burns took over the food concession in 1966. "It would be impossible to turn them out fast enough unless they were done in that manner," he added.

It was suggested that instead of completely cooking the hamburgers, they be half cooked and then put on the grill to finish frying before serving.

Food Handling Problem

"I would be most delighted to improve the quality of the food, if it is due to the way it is handled," he declared.

When the new drink machines were mentioned, Byrne said that while bottle drink machines were on campus, he lost between 25 and 40 dollars a week in lost bottles.

Bottles would be scattered all

Nickle Items

When asked about putting some nickle items back into the machines, Byrne said, "Absolutely not, nickle items are not worth the effort."

Byrne receives a profit of only 1-1/4 cents from nickle items, but 3-1/4 cents profit from dime items. Although he refused to commit himself he did say he might consider putting nickle bags of peanuts back into the machines.

In answer to the problem of improperly working machines which cause students to lose money, Byrnes emphatically said, "I have instructed people, we give their money back. If a machine is reported to be improperly working, we investigate it. We have no reason to refuse to refund money for an improperly working machine."

CONFERENCE—Mike Meier (standing) confers with president of the Senate, Dave Warner, during the last Senate meeting. The Senate meets again tonight at 7:30 to discuss the honor code.

Senators Approve Fine Arts Budget

members passed the Fine Arts Committee's appropriation at their Oct. 16 Senate meeting.

Although the other items on the budget were passed during the first Senate meeting, the Senate did not feel justified in passing the Fine Arts appropriation until the chairman of the Fine Arts Committee, Randy Del Lago, appeared before the Senate to explain why it needed 3000 dollars for the year.

Randy brought forth the principle of a revolving wheel, saying "1. Your programs do not generate interest, 2. because they are not very grand, 3. because you do not have enough money to spend on them. 1. Because your programs do not generate interest and so on."

Randy mentioned the fact that the Dance Committee can charge admission to dances, something the Fine Arts Committee cannot do. This, Dean Thomas Brown explained, was due to a ruling of the

"Perhaps you don't want a Fine Arts Committee," Randy asked the Senate. "If you have one, you have to pay for it."

"I don't know what to say," stated Randy. "It is the most obvious thing in the world. We need the money. What you are trying to do is to pump water into an organism needing blood."

Speaking for the Dance Committee in opposition to the Fine Arts receiving the total appropriation was Bill Baugh saying "We need the money if we are to have entertainment."

"I'm not in favor of cutting the Fine Arts Committee to nothing, but I think they could manage on the budget they had last year," said sophomore senator, Dale Donehue.

In other business of the Senate two new clubs were given charters. New charters were granted to the Student Nursing Association of Wilmington College and the Spanish Club.

These charters were granted with the provision that these clubs not petition the Senate for any money.

ONE DANCE LEADS TO ANOTHER — While the Hippie Dance is still in everyone's minds, the Dance Committee has already planned the second dance of the year. The Rushmore Dance will be in the Student Services Building from 9 to 1 p.m. Nov. 4. Dress for this dance will be school clothes. The Entertainers will play for this fourth annual Rushmore Dance. "One thing everyone should remember," said Mark Young, chairman of the dance committee, "is that North Carolina forbids drinking at a dance on campus." (photo by Reilly)

New Constitution To Effect Everyone

A copy of the revised constitution will be presented to the Senate for approval at the end of October, according to Hugh Newkirk, chairman of the Constitution Committee.

Constitution To Effect Everyone
"This is one of the biggest student undertakings in years and will effect everyone," stated Hugh.

Plans to revise the present student government constitution began last February when members of the Senate found the present constitution to be vague and outdated.

Constitution Vague
"Everything in the present constitution is vague," said Hugh. "The constitution needs to be cleared up so people will know what procedures to follow and to have guidelines to go by so they can accomplish something."

"The new constitution will give students more power as well as giving them something to work with," commented Hugh.

The revised constitution calls for all students running for a student body office to take a test on the constitution. To be eligible for office the student would have to make a passing grade of 70 on the test.

Impeachment Policies

The revised constitution would provide requirements for students running for office and impeachment policies in a more clearly defined manner.

An Appeal Board is planned under the provisions of the new constitution. This Appeal Board would allow students to appeal injustices they suffer," said Hugh. "This Board must have the power to protect as well as to give students fair representation."

Hugh is uncertain if the Appeal Board would take the place of the present Judicial Council.

If the Honor Code does go into effect, the Appeal Board will be the medium where accusations would be tried.

Authority Final

"The authority of the Appeal Board would be final," emphasized Hugh. "This is what the committee wants, but we don't know whether the Senate and the students will accept it."

Another feature of the revised constitution will call for weekly Senate meetings. Hugh feels this is necessary because with a two week delay between Senate meetings many students on committees do not do the work assigned as they either put it off until the last minute or conveniently forget it.

There is a lot of pressing business that does come before the Senate and it would be best for them to meet weekly," said Hugh.

Student Approval

The final draft of the revised constitution would go before the Senate for approval after which it will go before the students for their approval. A two-thirds majority vote from the students is necessary before the constitution can be approved.

"I'm not a senator," emphasized Hugh, and I have a responsibility both to the students and to the Senate. I have chosen students for my committee who are enthusiastic, energetic, and willing to work."

Committee Works

"I wrote up the constitution the way I thought it should be and then submitted it to the committee who also made improvements as improvements had to be made," he continued.

Facts

Facts can speak for themselves. There are 505 students in the Freshman Class. Eighteen freshmen came to hear the Freshman Campaign speeches. Thirteen of these freshmen were running for office.

There are 210 members of the Junior Class. Six juniors came to their meeting.

There are 157 members of the Senior Class. Twenty-five seniors, including all of the officers, were able to attend the first senior class meeting.

The sophomores have not tried to hold a class meeting. We wish them more luck than the other classes have had.

It is important to note that of the eight officers supposedly representing the Junior Class, only three of these officers were present at the Junior Class meeting. This could show how much interest people have when they run for class office.

Gripes

It is a known fact that students are going to always find something to gripe about. This is done whether the question becomes "must" or "not." There is one thing, though, deserving criticism which is now receiving. This one gripe is about food.

For the money paid for this food, the quality is not justifiably good. Last time a meeting with Frank Bryne, owner of the mess hall campus, nothing was done except to go around and gripe. Students and deans pointed out to Mr. Bryne that when this campus are students, and as students we don't want that much money to pay for food.

It may be said that to date, nothing has been done. This is not true. The student committee and deans have not tried. We are trying to talk to be nice, but to point out that we are tired of paying prices for something we can't have more transportation — go off campus and eat for a lower price and equal or better quality.

The rest will depend on Bryne and we are only waiting to see what he will do. We hope he will follow our suggestions.

Constitution

Two features of the proposed revised constitution deserve mention. One is the calling for weekly Senate meetings and the other is the Appeal Board.

Only by having weekly Senate meetings can the student body accomplish anything this year. For example, at the last Senate meeting, both the Honor Code and the review of the Fine Arts Committee were to be discussed. If ample time was spent working on both of these ideas, not enough time could be given to each during one meeting. If the Senate met weekly, they would have more time and less busy in accomplishing their goals.

The Appeal Board, possibly to take the place of what seems to be a very inactive Judicial Council, could be most definitely used for the benefit of all students. The Judicial Council is now nothing more than a name and a group of people who have their picture in the yearbook. If the proposed Honor Code is put into effect, the Appeal Board would have a very definite place in campus as an infractions of the Honor Code would come before this Board.

The other points of the constitution are good. It is time for the constitution to be revised, and it is being revised.

Barrow Deems Himself Clever

Burrowing is an interesting word, which quite often brings to mind such things as gopher holes, groundhog dens, and foxholes. The last aforementioned animal being one of a sly, insidious nature. The anonymous Barrow may not idolize a fox, but upon reading the text of his recent article, one could easily conclude that he at least deems himself quite clever. Cleverness is an admirable attribute when found in criticism that is constructive; but bear in mind that constructive criticism must do a great deal more than ridicule and find fault; it must offer a solution or at least a more healthy approach to a problem.

Barrow obviously is not able to appreciate the South and its deeply rooted traditions or perhaps he simply lacks aesthetic appreciation of any type. But it is more probable that he fits neatly into both of these categories.

As one who is not originally from the South, I cannot be accused of "rooting a horn for my homeland." It seems quite obvious to me that the South is one of the few regions in the United States that has a culture of its own to cling to. I should hope that it does not require an outsider to realize this, when the signs are as numerous and apparent for all to see. What other region, excluding New England, which does not adhere to its original, basic concepts, can claim any sort of remaining traits carried over from early days of national — sectional is perhaps more appropriate — history?

What is the crime in keeping a heritage alive? Where is the error in erecting a memorial to a prominent family? Only a rather low middle class attitude insists upon criticizing the wealthy! And what are the faults of Georgian architecture?

If Barrow is as discontent with the Wilmington area as he indicates, why does he remain? Simply to spoil it for others who happen to enjoy what the area has to offer them? Or better yet, why doesn't he attempt to correct what he considers wrong?

Marie Bassow

Barrow Roots

Like Pig Does

I must object to the column by Cliff Barrows which appeared in the October 9th issue of your newspaper. Mr. Barrows does not burrow, he roots like a pig.

I object and wonder at your motives. The only plausible reason you could have had for publishing such drivel was to offend, anger, and solicit letters to your newspaper. If such be the case, then you have certainly succeeded, but only at the expense of student trust in your integrity.

Any editor who eagerly stoops to such a horrid example of yellow journalism soon finds himself in the embarrassing posture of squinting. This results in some other substance than ink on paper.

I am not concerned with what Mr. Barrows thinks about Wilmington, for he is entitled to his opinions. I am, however, concerned about your moral health. Mr. Barrows' column is at least as unpalatable as the horse manure in St. James Church was when, as Mr. Barrows so eagerly informs us, Cornwallis stabled his mounts there. Since we normally consign excrement-covered paper to the sewer, but you choose to put it under our noses, it seems apparent that your morals are in an advanced state of decay.

If you persist in publishing a person who must hide behind a pseudonym in order to burden us with his sick hatred, you will become no better than the mentally aberrated Mr. Barrows.

In fact, several people have advanced the theory that you are Mr. Barrows yourself. If this is true, then you are guilty of transvestism, a practice not noted for the production of good mental health.

Come now, get off your duff and put out a NEWSPAPER, not a catch-all for the regurgitated half-thoughts of the "stickies." I know that this is going to be a little bit of work for you, but after all this is your second year as an editor — don't you think it's time?

No, Mr. Prince, I am not Cliff Barrows. That rumor may now end.

Fine Arts Program

As a former consultant of the College Fine Arts Committee I would like to express my opinion on the complaint of the student senators regarding the Fine Arts budget.

I understood that the Fine Arts Programs were to present cultural performances of value to the students and of interest to the community. In many colleges, the college is the cultural center of the community. The growth of Wilmington College should justify the expansion of the Fine Arts Programs.

What bothers me most is the notion that the arts are not of equal importance to recreational social activities, this is a "rear view mirror" idea from people whose life is in front of them.

Burrowing With Barrows

by CLIFF BARROW

Where is Twentieth Century Man? Is he the one who lives vicariously through the brighter high lights of his television tube, or who snarls all the easy stomach-ached women in his shiny automobile, or who makes faithful love to his tailor, or who banks on life insurance (how does one insure life?)? Or maybe he is the literary researcher knowing there is no true answer, quadrilingual, and unable to communicate with his wife on how to discipline the children?

Actually, he is all of them. The questioning is from where will come the Twenty-first Century Man. This is not the best of all possible worlds. It is still stuffed with civilized blood baths, philosophies which stumble under the necessities of organized religions, societies built on the fetters of racism, material wealth, and pseudo-intellect coupled with false pride, and the total loss of man as an individual. The ideal man of the next century would be one more free from present tradition, heritage, and culture. He would be one who is both womb free and world wise.

Traditionally, in the 18th century B.C., there was such a man. He left a land made of material values (he had the least class structure (he was on the bottom), and forced false religion (he didn't believe in) to find a new land. He found one and populated it with material values, class structure, and an empty religion. Perhaps it was he who said that Ted had him out, but did that decide so that he could repeat what he had fled from?

Today there also exists such a man. More fortunate than his neighbor in destiny, he holds a continent and is spread across the other six. One wonders if, since he stands to inherit the future, he shall do as was done 33 centuries ago. Will he as many of his leaders and spokesmen urge continue the same system that for an equal number of centuries great men have fought to disestablish? Or will he find and prove within himself that quality which has made other men great and with it make a better world. It is a fragile question of whether or not a man can rise above that which he has been made to believe he is. If he can, then cannot help but be a better future.

If he cannot, he will have once again doubled the hydra's heads.

Pieces

By RANDY DEL LAGO

A SEPARATE PEACE, by John Knowles ever the characters, although they are young, are fully sentient human beings. The feelings that they learn to recognize and express are universal, as are the emotions and experiences that they share.

The story is about friendship, and though it takes place at a prep school in the early years of World War II, the author does not depend upon the war or its proximity to create for him the dramatic tensions in the book. Instead, they arise organically from the individual characters and the relationships that exist between them. These characters are real, and the action (one attends the other) is completely natural. This is perhaps the novel's primary virtue: that it is devoid of affectation.

Yet this alone does not make A SEPARATE PEACE the great book that it is; for apart from form, style, or construction, there must be meaning, that which compels recognition. And it is here that Knowles triumphs; for this is one writer with a very great deal to say—not only about friendship, today—but about people, in youth, and beyond.

'My Mother Loves Me' Says Freshman

"Why not?" answered one freshman to the question, "Why did you come to Wilmington College?" which 128 freshmen were asked during Freshman Orientation.

Other new Wilmington College students had more varied reasons, such as parents. "The reason that I came to Wilmington College," said a Wilmington native, "is because I love it here. My mother would have died if I had left home—she loves me."

Another new student stated, "I came here because my parents can't trust me anywhere else."

Nineteen students are now on campus because of its location, while 16 students are here because it is close to home.

Many of these students mentioned the attraction of the local beaches and the fact that they could live at home.

"Because I live in Wilmington is the main reason for my going here, and I think I can receive as good an education here as elsewhere."

"I came here because my mind was hungry for knowledge," said one boy before adding, "Also it's closer to my girl's house."

Financial reasons also determined the choice of many students, as did scholarships.

"I came to Wilmington mainly for financial reasons," said one student, "but I still feel it is a good school."

"No choice," declared one student, "scholarship."

"I came because of the quality compared to the cost of the school."

"The tuition is so favorable here," said another student.

Two students, obviously boys, are here to avoid the draft. "I need a four year advanced education that is reasonable in cost and will keep me out of the draft," one of these boys commented.

Twenty-two students are here to receive an education. "I came here to get an education so I can fly," asserted one freshman.

"I do not dislike my parents and wish to move away from home and Wilco offers what I need."

"I had a desire to further my education. I had heard much about Wilmington College, and it seemed to be a nice place to reach my desire. So here I am," thus said a student from Willard.

Marriage seemed to play a big part for many girls as the one who said, "The college is close to home, and being married I can be wife and student."

"I transferred here because I got married."

The reputation of the college attracted many students. "My brother came here last year, and I must keep up the family tradition," was one person's reason.

"It sounded like a great school."

I heard good things about it. When I got out of the Army, I decided to come here."

"I came because I have heard it is a wonderful place to meet new friends and get a good education."

"Wilco is a small college with a chance to meet people personally rather than faces."

Engineering and the nursing program attracted other students. "I thought I could learn more about engineering."

"I decided to attend Wilmington College because of the benefits of the two-year nursing program, such as a shorter period of study and the college credits earned for the courses taken."

The most puzzling reply was given by a freshman from Wilmington. "I wanted to attend Wilmington College because I have had numerous pleas concerning the high standards here," he said. "Furthermore, I would like to try to help this college in any little way I can."

Stay Out Of Faculty Spaces: Bron

"Stay out of the faculty places in the senior lot," Senior Class President Jerry Bron told seniors at the first senior class meeting. "I was not pleased with the turnout," said Jerry. Twenty-five seniors attended the meeting. "I feel that since seniors are in their last year and that since the majority of them will be graduating in June, it is to their benefit to come to these meetings."

To help the attendance the next meeting of the senior class has been set for 3:30 on some Monday afternoon. The exact date of the next meeting has not been decided. "We hope this will help attendance," commented Jerry.

The seniors discussed the possibilities of making more parking spaces available for senior parking. A parking committee has been set up to talk to Price about revenue from senior parking fines.

This money would go towards the class project.

Members of the parking committee are Dennis Lennon, Manuel Macharin, and Jerry Bron.

Two committees were set up to work on the class project. The first of these committees is the ways and means committee composed of David Warner, Robert Vaughn, Cynthia Hewette, and Mary Davis.

The committee working on project ideas is composed of James Parker, Sarah Clewis, Chuck Lewis, Glenda Phillips, Mark Young, Catharine Proctor, and Howard Elkins.

SNEA Advantageous To Education Majors

"If you're interested in going into education, joining SNEA will be advantageous to you," said Pete Ambrose, president of the Student National Education Association.

SNEA is the professional association for college and university students who are preparing to teach.

The programs of this organization are geared to give the student an insight into the problems and responsibilities of teaching.

SNEA meetings are held on the third Monday of each month in K-121.

SNEA members have the opportunity to attend the fall conference in Raleigh in November as well as the Spring conference to be held in Charlotte in April.

The highlight of the year's activities for the club is the banquet which takes place in April.

Other officers for this year are Lynda Melver, vice president; Chris Baxter, secretary; and Cynthia Hewett, treasurer.

BSU To Meet On Thursday

On September 29 the BSU sponsored a Be-In at the First Baptist Church Beach Cottage at Wrightsville Beach.

A planning committee for the state social action seminar in December was held the next day. Two members from Wilco traveled to Greenville to attend.

The first regular program meeting was scheduled for October 12. The theme was to be "I and Thou" in connection with the fall emphasis of relating to the campus and community as Christian students.

On October 26, an organizational meeting will be held to discuss business, accept new members, and revise and vote on the constitution.

BSU members and prospective members are reminded that the State BSU Fall Convention will be held at the First Baptist Church in Raleigh on November 3, 4, and 5.

Concerning the coming year, Lennon added, "An exciting and interesting program of speakers, discussions, and entertainment has been planned," and again urged any interested students to attend the meetings.

Other BSU officers for the year are Bobby Bohannon, vice-president, and Brenda LaBrecque, secretary-treasurer.

'Hawks Continue Winning Streak

Coach Charles Sproles' Seahawks continued their fine start in the 1967 soccer season with an impressive 12-0 victory over S. C. Baptist Saturday afternoon Oct. 8.

The Seahawks went on a whirlwind scoring spree that lasted throughout the game and the team from Charleston never had a chance.

Backed up by goalie Bob Vaughn who never let the visiting team near the Wilco goal, the 'Hawks played a tough game of soccer from the first to the last.

Even in the final minutes of the contest when tempers were short, and a Seahawk player was thrown out of the game by the officials for being overly aggressive, the Wilco team did not lose their control of the ball.

"I wish every game they play could be as good as this one," said Coach Sproles as he enjoyed congratulations over the victory.

Needless to say, the Seahawks have begun a great season if they can only keep it up. The Seahawks travel to Charleston for a return match with S. C. Baptist, Oct. 12. Goals in the Saturday match were made by:

On The Sidelines

By GIL HUGULEY

The intramurals program at Wilco is off to another rousing start. A wildly cheering mob of six or seven students attended this year's intramural kickoff banquet.

The banquet, originally scheduled for the bookstore, was shifted to the Pub due to the overflow crowd.

It is good that this year's banquet was a success, being even better than last year, but it is a sad commentary that fewer students attended the tube-steak affair than normally present themselves for the wildly successful dances held at the college.

One would think that intramurals would take its proper place right behind academics in the college community.

Apparently, however, it has been relegated to the boonies of happiness along with P.E. make-up classes, prices in the Pub, and the in loco parentis theory of College administration.

Why? Why did only one organization send representatives to the intramural football meeting? Well, the answer to that is pretty easy — there simply isn't any interest.

Ah Ha! But why is there no interest? That's the real heart of the problem.

Without getting into a long philosophical discourse on student apathy, let us simply say that lack of interest stems from laziness. We may give all sorts of reasons for not wanting to have a decent intramurals program, but all we really mean is that we don't want to WORK at having run.

After all, we might even have to SWEAT a little. Er, beg pardon, of course we mean "perspire."

Laziness breeds fear, fear of the unexperienced, and we therefore don't want to play football because we might get a bruise on our pretty bodies or damage our Beatle haircut, or smear the wax on our Hippie mustache.

Don't get us wrong, we are in favor of pretty bodies, Beatle haircuts, and Hippie mustaches, but we think using them as excuses to avoid a little sweat, er, perspiration, is a little too slick.

If this is the definition of an urbane, sophisticated society, then give us some hillbillies.

The uniforms will be the same as last year, according to Joyce

Pelland, who added, "We have a good squad this year with new and different cheers. We plan to attend more out of town games this year, and may charter some busses so more people can go. We want to encourage audience participation this year."

Fine Arts — In Review

by Randy Del Lago

The second film of the Fine Arts series will be presented on Friday, Nov. 3 — in the lecture room of the Kenan building at 8 o'clock p.m. The program will consist of two films by the Russian director Sergi Eisenstein: "Potemkin" and "Ten Days That Shook the World."

Undisputed as film history is the fact that "Potemkin" made in 1925, was the first work of a film-maker to embody, in the most tangible form, various principles of construction peculiar to the medium: montage (editing) and parallel action (the expansion of time through special manipulation); or, in sum, the purely formal deployment of objective action to create psychological dimensions.

Eisenstein was not the first film artist, but he was the first to be so pure, the first to use photography like painting-in-movement, photography like verbal imagery. As set down in his writings, his own theories inform us of this.

Yet "Potemkin" must be seen to be believed. The rebellion of the sailors on His Majesty's battleship Potemkin in 1905; their success; the winning of the people of Odessa at the spectacle of the laid-out corpse of the rebellion's leader; the city's aid in the form of food sent out on small boats; the massacre of Czarist troops of the townspeople gathered on Odessa's great steps to cheer the Potemkin, and the final sequence when the mutinied battleship expects to be attacked by the whole fleet, only to have not a single shot fired at it because the whole fleet has "come over." These are some of the events related in the film.

The story is technically the reportage of the news-reel fused with the most meticulous effort to present life as "permanently-felt," no less than "fleetingly-seen."

Both this film and "Ten Days That Shook the World" are silent film-classics with musical scores added later (1931).

All Fine Arts programs are presented free of charge to members of the student body and their guests.

Backstage Crew Works On Scenery

In order to mount "My Fair Lady" on Thalian Hall stage, the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association are using several innovations of their own and putting one of the largest backstage groups it has ever had into operation. Dates of production have been set for Nov. 17, 18 and 19.

One of the innovations that will be used for the first time is the runway that will completely encircle the orchestra. This runway will not only be used by the vocal and dancing choruses, but also as an acting area. It will afford a more intimate communication between the audience and actor. It is the first time that such a ramp has been used in old historic Thalian Hall.

For a musical comedy of this scope, three new backdrops have been ordered. A show that requires eleven different set changes in the first act and seven changes in the second act demands of the stage construction crew a great deal, not only in labor, but also in ingenuity.

While most of the big and heavy construction work is carried out at Thalian Hall, small tedious and time-consuming projects occupy the college S.R.O. Theatre's workshop. Two such projects have been the making of ten chimney-sweep brooms and ten binoculars of the 1910 vintage.

Those on whom the burden falls for all of the construction of scenery and properties are: Charles Alexander, Jimmy Allen, Paul W. Baker, David Choate, James Dur-

Expansion Plans Underway For Wilmington College

Expansion plans are underway for Wilmington College, with two dormitories, a cafeteria, and an education building scheduled for completion in the Fall of 1969.

For construction of roads and parking lots, the 1967 North Carolina Legislature appropriated $100,000. Added to this is another $75,000 which is self-liquidating. There will be parking spaces for approximately one thousand cars, according to Dr. William M. Randall.

Construction on the dorms is hoped to be started this spring, said Dr. Randall. Each two-storied dorm will have a capacity for 200 students. They will be built at a cost of $3,400 per student, or a total of $680,000.

The dorms are intended to be located in the area near the field house. They are "making a survey now," and doing soil testing in connection with the planned location, said Dr. Randall.

The $750,000 cafeteria is planned to be built between the dorms and the present campus. The education building will be constructed behind the present faculty parking lot. However, this plan is tentative and depends on the outcome of the survey being conducted.

The half million dollar education building will contain demonstration classrooms, in which a class from one of the public schools will be taught by the teacher from the county school system. One way mirrors will enable students to observe classes without being seen.

There will also be laboratories for testing and all psychology classes will have labs. An auditorium seating 300 persons will also be featured.

Plans also include the construction of parking lots behind all the new buildings, including the library and chemistry-physics building. The faculty parking lot will be removed to create an unobstructed grassy park in front of the education building.

Dr. Randall said there has been no decision reached concerning the large unpaved lot in front of the tennis courts. This parking lot was an "accident" anyway. When the first buildings of the college campus were being constructed, the contractor used this parking lot as a landing strip for his private airplane, according to Dr. Randall.

Part of the money for construction of the cafeteria, dorms, education building, parking lots and roads were all appropriated by the 1967 N. C. Legislature, in addition to the city water and sewer lines and transmission lines, which Wilmington College now has.

Dr. Randall said it is almost certain, but not conclusive, that future plans might include an infirmary and a swimming pool for the physical education department.

Freshmen Elect Bill Harrell Class President

Promising individual and class improvement the freshman class elected Bill Harrell as freshman class president.

Bill considers the price and quality of food in the Pub a big problem.

"I hope to unite the entire school and put a stop to these ridiculous prices," said Bill.

"I also think that we definitely need more dances and concerts with good popular groups," he continued.

Bill is presently a member of the dance committee. He wants the student government to work with the dance committee in obtaining this entertainment.

"As freshman president I am everyone's representative and would like to hear any likes and dislikes of the freshman class and will try to give it attention immediately," he said. "I'm not afraid to work."

As freshman class vice-president David Koseruba stresses the need of a place for college students to go where they may relax. He also advocates that a vice-president's duty is to be the strongest supporter of the president.

Labin To Open Lecture Series

Opening the 1967-68 Faculty Lecture series is Madame Suzanne Labin. This first lecture in the current series will be held on Thursday night, Oct. 26, in the Student Services Building. It will begin at 8 p.m.

Often termed "The Jean of Arc of Freedom," Madame Labin is an effective opponent of Communism in the Free World.

A political writer, she is the author of 15 books. Stalin's Russia is one of her most famous works.

Madame Labin received a master's degree in chemistry at the Sorbonne. She then turned to social science.

At the Ecole des Hautes Etudes Sociales et Internationales, she continued her studies. The in-depth studies of the Russian living standards caused her to begin actively fighting Communism.

She had already struggled for freedom in the resistance in her home land, France. For this reason, she was even more dedicated to protecting this freedom from the Communists. Since World War II, she has fought a constant battle against the Communist menace.

Madame Labin's lecture in Wilmington will be entitled, Viet Nam — Far Eastern Affairs.

A coffee hour will be held immediately after the lecture. Everyone attending the lecture is invited to the coffee hour.

The next lecture will be held on Nov. 21.

Chorus Presents Concert

Members of the College Chorus are presenting a concert tonight in the small gym in Hanover Hall. Entitled Sounds of Choral Music, the concert will begin at 8 p.m.

Sounds of Choral Music will present a history of music written for choral combinations. Included will be a representative selections from the period of Chant, the Renaissance, the high Renaissance, the Baroque, the Classic, the Romantic, and the Contemporary.

Representing several different periods of choral music, the program will include: "Kyrie Eleison" from the 11th Mass as contained in the "Liber Usualis"; "Matona, mia cara" and "Mon coeur se recommande a vous" by Orlando di Lasso; "April is in my Mistress' Face" by Morley; "Sound the Trumpet" by Purcell; "Awake the Trumpet's Lofty Sound" by Handel; "Lacrymosa" from the "Requiem Mass" by Mozart; "Hallelujah" from the "Mount of Olives" by Beethoven; "There Shall a Star Come Out of Israel" by Mendelssohn; the Coronation Scene from Mussorgsky's "Boris Godunov"; and "Now Let All Sing" by the contemporary American Theron Kirk.

Paul Roderick, a sophomore voice student, will be the soloist for the evening. Miss Ann Darden, instructor in music, is the accompanist for the Chorus. Members of the College Wind Ensemble, directed by William F. Adcock, assistant professor of music, will assist on the program. Loyd Hudson, associate professor of music, is the conductor of the Wilmington College Chorus.

No admission will be charged and the public is cordially invited to attend.

'My Fair Lady' To Open Nov. 17

Backstage crews are feverishly busy with either sewing, searching for props, painting, making or nailing scenery together for the opening of "My Fair Lady" on Nov. 17 at Thalian Hall. This musical comedy is being produced by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association and will run for three nights.

Almost any musical requires multiple set changes in its performance. "My Fair Lady" is no exception. It has 11 set changes in the first act and seven in the second act. In order to adequately mount a musical of this scope, three new cloth backdrops have been ordered which will in the future further expand the possible uses of the stage.

In order to outfit old Thalian Hall for this musical hit of the American Theatre, the Wilmington College crew that is doing all of this work found it necessary to construct a runway which would encircle the orchestra pit. This runway not only will be used by the actors as an added acting area but the singing and dancing choruses will avail themselves of it. This will also provide a closer communication between audience and actor and will end the conventional proscenium arch stage disadvantages of a thrust stage. It is the first time that such a ramp has been used in the old historic theatre.

Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and Wednesday nights are used for construction and painting of the large scenic pieces on the stage downtown. At other times during the week the stage crew is at work on small time-consuming items in the workshop opposite the S.R.O. Theatre at Wilmington College. Two such projects have been the making of ten chimney-sweep brooms for the dancers and ten binoculars of the 1910 vintage for the Ascot scene. Just recently, construction has begun on six chandeliers for the Queen of Transylvania's ball room.

Ann Fitzgibbon, professor of drama and speech at Wilmington College, is serving in the capacity of technical director for the production. Kay Teachy and Butch Huffman are the stage manager and sound technician, respectively.

Linda McWatty is the piano accompanist for the entire production.

Bob Alexander, vocal music director at Hogsgard High School, is the music director, and Doug W. Swink, of Wilmington College's Drama and Speech Department is the drama director. These two have combined their talents before in last years' "Good News" and "The Fantasticks" presented by the WILCO Straw-Hat Theatre.

Civitans To Place Capsule on Campus

"Collegiate Civitan Club members wish to place on campus a 'time capsule' to be opened thirty-three, fifty, or a hundred years from now," said a letter written to the Board of Trustees by the Civitans for approval of their project.

The Board has approved the project.

Civitan's feel that this academic year is a memorable one in the history of the college since this is the twentieth year since the college began. The 1967-68 year will not only see Wilmington fully accredited as a four year institution, but will also mark the retirement of two of its most respected members, President William Randall and Adrian Hurst, who has headed the Mathematics Department since its beginning," said club president Mike Michel.

"It is to commemorate these events and to honor these men," said Mike, that the project was chosen.

Tentative plans for the capsule call for it being a four-inch deep and three inch diameter canister of stainless steel. A microfilm record of campus life as well as history of the first twenty years of the college's growth would be placed in the canister.

"The sidewalk in front of the new library building is where we would like to place it," said Mike. "We feel that the library would be the center of the campus and the appropriate place to put the capsule," he added.

The cylinder would be marked by a plaque flush with the surface of the walk.

"The entire club is involved in the project," said Mike. Louis Adcock, club adviser; Eric Staton, John Hunt, Danny Grant, Terry Worley, and Mike are the main members working on the project at this time, and form the committee working at this time.

"We are going to try to get people from different departments as well as from other clubs on campus to help in the suggestions about what to put into the capsule," said Mike.

Students To Elect May Court Nov. 29

Nominations for the May Queen and her court may be turned in to Dean Brown's office beginning Nov. 13. May Queen election will be conducted Nov. 29.

All nominations must be in Dean Brown's office by Nov. 21. Nomination blanks may be obtained from this issue of The Seahawk.

The May Queen must be a senior. Two attendants will also be elected as representatives from each class. A total of ten girls will be elected. The runner up for May Queen will serve as her Maid of Honor.

According to Ray Pacer, chairman of the Board of Elections, the only requirement for the election of the May Court is that "a student running for attendant must actually be in the class which they are supposed to be representing."

Nomination blanks will be found on page 6.

Lecture Series To Present Scourby

Alexander Scourby, noted actor of stage, screen, and television will appear on the Wilmington College Lecture Series, Tuesday Nov. 21. His lecture, "Great Moments from the Bible" will be presented in Hanover Hall at 8:00 p.m.

Locally, Mr. Scourby is best known for his narration of "The Immortal Showboat." The narration is presented each summer at the U.S.S. North Carolina, berthed in Wilmington.

On Broadway, he has acted with John Gielgud in Crime and Punishment, and with Maurice Evans in Hamlet, Richard II, and Henry IV, Part One. Recently, Mr. Scourby has won high praise for his portrayal of Walt Whitman in the production A Whitman Portrait.

Mr. Scourby has also made several appearances on television. He has been a guest star on such series as The Man from Uncle and The Defenders. He has narrated such programs as the NBC-TV Project 20 programs, "He is Risen" "The Coming of Christ", and "The Law and The Prophets."

He has recorded the entire Bible for the American Bible Society and has done extensive recording work for the American Foundation for the Blind.

The well-known actress, Lori March, is Mr. Scourby's wife. She stars in the television serial, The Secret Storm.

Upon presentation of their activity cards, students will be admitted free to the lecture.

Labin Talks On Viet Nam

Madame Suzanne Labin, a noted anti-communist, presented a lecture at Wilmington on Thursday night, Oct. 26. She has recently returned from a tour which included Vietnam. She said that the people of the countries which she visited "are grateful to the United States for stopping the Communist aggression and saving the freedom of these nations."

Speaking of "Viet Nam - Far Eastern Affairs," Madame Labin reiterated the fact that the Vietnamese War is not a civil war. She called it a war "which the North Vietnamese can hold because it is financed by Russia and Red China."

Madame Labin does not favor negotiations in Viet Nam. "No negotiation is necessary. Negotiation in Hanoi is like looking for food in a tiger's mouth." According to her, Ho Chi Mein can stop the bombing in the North at anytime "by stopping his aggression in the South."

She lashed out at pacifists, who protest the War in Viet Nam. In her opinion, present air strikes in Viet Nam "have all the appearances of trying not to offend." Madame Labin said, "the accusation that the United States is escalating the war when they retaliate is a nonsense."

In her opinion, the Soviet Union would not risk war with the United States. She said if the Vietnamese War came to a show-down between Russia and the United States, the Russians would back down.

For that reason, she feels that a direct confrontation with Russia should take place. In short, Madame Labin stated that "to win, America does not need more and more soldiers, but more and better strategy."

Pelland Heads Cheering Squad

Six cheerleaders and two alternates have been chosen for the 1967-1968 season here at Wilco.

Elsie Bosso, Linda Lanier, Joyce Pelland, Diana Smith, Linda Moore, and Susan Norris were selected with Judy Thompson and Shirley Sikes serving as alternates.

A cheerleader's meeting was held

Oct. 11, for the purpose of electing officers. Head cheerleader is Joyce Pelland, assistant head is Linda Lanier, secretary-treasurer is Susan Norris, and publicity chairman is Linda Moore.

The uniforms will be the same as last year, according to Joyce

Pelland, who added, "We have a good squad this year with new and different cheers. We plan to attend more out of town games this year, and may charter some busses so more people can go. We want to encourage audience participation this year."

Fine Arts — In Review

by Randy Del Lago

The second film of the Fine Arts series will be presented on Friday, Nov. 3 — in the lecture room of the Kenan building at 8 o'clock p.m. The program will consist of two films by the Russian director Sergi Eisenstein: "Potemkin" and "Ten Days That Shook the World."

Undisputed as film history is the fact that "Potemkin" made in 1925, was the first work of a film-maker to embody, in the most tangible form, various principles of construction peculiar to the medium: montage (editing) and parallel action (the expansion of time through special manipulation); or, in sum, the purely formal deployment of objective action to create psychological dimensions.

Eisenstein was not the first film artist, but he was the first to be so pure, the first to use photography like painting-in-movement, photography like verbal imagery. As set down in his writings, his own theories inform us of this.

Yet "Potemkin" must be seen to be believed. The rebellion of the sailors on His Majesty's battleship Potemkin in 1905; their success; the winning of the people of Odessa at the spectacle of the laid-out corpse of the rebellion's leader; the city's aid in the form of food sent out on small boats; the massacre of Czarist troops of the townspeople gathered on Odessa's great steps to cheer the Potemkin, and the final sequence when the mutinied battleship expects to be attacked by the whole fleet, only to have not a single shot fired at it because the whole fleet has "come over." These are some of the events related in the film.

The story is technically the reportage of the news-reel fused with the most meticulous effort to present life as "permanently-felt," no less than "fleetingly-seen."

Both this film and "Ten Days That Shook the World" are silent film-classics with musical scores added later (1931).

All Fine Arts programs are presented free of charge to members of the student body and their guests.

Backstage Crew Works On Scenery

In order to mount "My Fair Lady" on Thalian Hall stage, the Wilmington College Theatre and Wilmington Association are using several innovations of their own and putting one of the largest backstage groups it has ever had into operation. Dates of production have been set for Nov. 17, 18 and 19.

One of the innovations that will be used for the first time is the runway that will completely encircle the orchestra. This runway will not only be used by the vocal and dancing choruses, but also as an acting area. It will afford a more intimate communication between the audience and actor. It is the first time that such a ramp has been used in old historic Thalian Hall.

For a musical comedy of this scope, three new backdrops have been ordered. A show that requires eleven different set changes in the first act and seven changes in the second act demands of the stage construction crew a great deal, not only in labor, but also in ingenuity.

While most of the big and heavy construction work is carried out at Thalian Hall, small tedious and time-consuming projects occupy the college S.R.O. Theatre's workshop. Two such projects have been the making of ten chimney-sweep brooms and ten binoculars of the 1910 vintage.

Those on whom the burden falls for all of the construction of scenery and properties are: Charles Alexander, Jimmy Allen, Paul W. Baker, David Choate, James Dur-

Expansion Plans Underway For Wilmington College

Expansion plans are underway for Wilmington College, with two dormitories, a cafeteria, and an education building scheduled for completion in the Fall of 1969.

For construction of roads and parking lots, the 1967 North Carolina Legislature appropriated $100,000. Added to this is another $75,000 which is self-liquidating. There will be parking spaces for approximately one thousand cars, according to Dr. William M. Randall.

Construction on the dorms is hoped to be started this spring, said Dr. Randall. Each two-storied dorm will have a capacity for 200 students. They will be built at a cost of $3,400 per student, or a total of $680,000.

The dorms are intended to be located in the area near the field house. They are "making a survey now," and doing soil testing in connection with the planned location, said Dr. Randall.

The $750,000 cafeteria is planned to be built between the dorms and the present campus. The education building will be constructed behind the present faculty parking lot. However, this plan is tentative and depends on the outcome of the survey being conducted.

The half million dollar education building will contain demonstration classrooms, in which a class from one of the public schools will be taught by the teacher from the county school system. One way mirrors will enable students to observe classes without being seen.

There will also be laboratories for testing and all psychology classes will have labs. An auditorium seating 300 persons will also be featured.

Plans also include the construction of parking lots behind all the new buildings, including the library and chemistry-physics building. The faculty parking lot will be removed to create an unobstructed grassy mall in front of the education building.

Dr. Randall said there has been no decision reached concerning the large unpaved lot in front of the tennis courts. This parking lot was an "accident" anyway. When the first buildings of the college campus were being constructed, the contractor used this parking lot as a landing strip for his private airplane, according to Dr. Randall.

Part of the money for construction of the cafeteria, dorms, education building, parking lots and roads were all appropriated by the 1967 N. C. Legislature, in addition to the city water and sewer lines and transmission lines, which Wilmington College now has.

Dr. Randall said it is almost certain, but not conclusive, that future plans might include an infirmary and a swimming pool for the physical education department.

Freshmen Elect Bill Harrell Class President

Promising individual and class improvement the freshman class elected Bill Harrell as freshman class president.

Bill considers the price and quality of food in the Pub a big problem.

"I hope to unite the entire school and put a stop to these ridiculous prices," said Bill.

"I also think that we definitely need more dances and concerts with good popular groups," he continued.

Bill is presently a member of the dance committee. He wants the student government to work with the dance committee in obtaining this entertainment.

"As freshman president I am everyone's representative and would like to hear any likes and dislikes of the freshman class and will try to give it attention immediately," he said. "I'm not afraid to work."

As freshman class vice-president David Koseruba stresses the need of a place for college students to go where they may relax. He also advocates that a vice-president's duty is to be the strongest supporter of the student.

Labin To Open Lecture Series

Opening the 1967-68 Faculty Lecture series is Madame Suzanne Labin. This first lecture in the current series will be held on Thursday night, Oct. 26, in the Student Services Building. It will begin at 8 p.m.

Often termed "The Jean of Arc of Freedom," Madame Labin is an effective opponent of Communism in the Free World.

A political writer, she is the author of 15 books. Stalin's Russia is one of her most famous works. Madame Labin received a master's degree in chemistry at the Sorbonne. She then turned to social science.

At the Ecole des Hautes Etudes Sociales et Internationales, she continued her studies. The in-depth studies of the Russian living standards caused her to begin actively fighting Communism.

She had already struggled for freedom in the resistance in her home land, France. For this reason, she was even more dedicated to protecting this freedom from the Communists. Since World War II, she has fought a constant battle against the Communist menace.

Madame Labin's lecture in Wilmington will be entitled, Viet Nam — Far Eastern Affairs.

A coffee hour will be held immediately after the lecture. Every one attending the lecture is invited to the coffee hour.

The next lecture will be held on Nov. 21.

Chorus Presents Concert

Members of the College Chorus are presenting a concert tonight in the small gym in Hanover Hall. Entitled Sounds of Choral Music, the concert will begin at 8 p.m.

Sounds of Choral Music will present a history of music written for choral combinations. Included will be a representative selections from the period of Chant, the Renaissance, the high Renaissance, the Baroque, the Classic, the Romantic, and the Contemporary.

Representing several different periods of choral music, the program will include: "Kyrie Eleison" from the 11th Mass as contained in the "Liber Usualis"; "Matona, mia cara" and "Mon coeur se recommande a vous" by Orlando di Lasso; "April is in my Mistress' Face" by Morley; "Sound the Trumpet" by Purcell; "Awake the Trumpet's Lofty Sound" by Handel; "Lacrymosa" from the "Requiem Mass" by Mozart; "Hallelujah" from the "Mount of Olives" by Beethoven; "There Shall a Star Come Out of Israel" by Mendelssohn; the Coronation Scene from Mussorgsky's "Boris Godunov"; and "Now Let All Sing" by the contemporary American Theron Kirk.

Paul Roderick, a sophomore voice student, will be the soloist for the evening. Miss Ann Darden, instructor in music, is the accompanist for the Chorus. Members of the College Wind Ensemble, directed by William F. Adcock, assistant professor of music, will assist on the program. Loyd Hudson, associate professor of music, is the conductor of the Wilmington College Chorus.

No admission will be charged and the public is cordially invited to attend.

'My Fair Lady' To Open Nov. 17

Backstage crews are feverishly busy with either sewing, searching for props, painting, making or nailing scenery together for the opening of "My Fair Lady on Nov. 17 at Thalian Hall. This musical comedy is being produced by the Wilmington College Theatre and Thalian Association and will run for three nights.

Almost any musical requires multiple set changes in its performance. "My Fair Lady" is no exception. It has 11 set changes in the first act and seven in the second act. In order to adequately mount a musical of this scope, three new cloth backdrops have been ordered which will in the future further expand the possible uses of the stage.

In order to outfit old Thalian Hall for this musical hit of the American Theatre, the Wilmington College crew that is doing all of this work found it necessary to construct a runway which would encircle the orchestra pit. This runway not only will be used by the actors as an added acting area but the singing and dancing choruses will avail themselves of it. This will also provide a closer communication between audience and actor and will end the conventional proscenium arch stage disadvantages of a thrust stage. It is the first time that such a ramp has been used in the old historic theatre.

Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and Wednesday nights are used for construction and painting of the large scenic pieces on the stage downtown. At other times during the week the stage crew is at work on small time-consuming items in the workshop opposite the S.R.O. Theatre at Wilmington College. Two such projects have been the making of ten chimney-sweep brooms for the dancers and ten binoculars of the 1910 vintage for the Ascot scene. Just recently, construction has begun on six chandeliers for the Queen of Transylvania's ball room.

Ann Fitzgibbon, professor of drama and speech at Wilmington College, is serving in the capacity of technical director for the production. Kay Teachy and Butch Huffman are the stage manager and sound technician, respectively.

Linda McWatty is the piano accompanist for the entire production.

Bob Alexander, vocal music director at Hoggard High School, is the music director, and Doug W. Swink, of Wilmington College's Drama and Speech Department is the drama director. These two have combined their talents before in last years' "Good News" and "The Fantasticks" presented by the WILCO Straw-Hat Theatre.

Civitans To Place Capsule on Campus

"Collegiate Civitan Club members wish to place on campus a 'time capsule' to be opened thirty-three, fifty, or a hundred years from now," said a letter written to the Board of Trustees by the Civitans for approval of their project.

The Board has approved the project. Civitans feel that this academic year is a memorable one in the history of the college since this is the twentieth year since the college began. "The 1967-68 year will not only see Wilmington fully accredited as a four year institution, but will also mark the retirement of two of its most respected members, President William Randall and Adrian Hurst, who has headed the Mathematics Department since its beginning," said club president Mike Michel.

"It is to commemorate these events and to honor these men," said Mike, that the project was chosen.

Tentative plans for the capsule call for it being a four-inch deep and three inch diameter canister of stainless steel. A microfilm record of campus life as well as history of the first twenty years of the college's growth would be placed in the canister.

"The sidewalk in front of the new library building is where we would like to place it," said Mike. "We feel that the library would be the center of the campus and the appropriate place to put the capsule," he added.

The cylinder would be marked by a plaque flush with the surface of the walk.

"The entire club is involved in the project," said Mike. Louis Adcock, club adviser; Eric Staton, John Hunt, Danny Grant, Terry Wortly, and Mike are the main members working on the project at this time, and form the committee working at this time.

"We are going to try to get people from different departments as well as from other clubs on campus to help in the suggestions about what to put into the capsule," said Mike.

Students To Elect May Court Nov. 29

Nominations for the May Queen and her court may be turned in to Dean Brown's office beginning Nov. 13. May Queen election will be conducted Nov. 29.

All nominations must be in Dean Brown's office by Nov. 21. Nomination blanks may be obtained from this issue of The Seahawk.

The May Queen must be a senior. Two attendants will also be elected as representatives from each class. A total of ten girls will be elected. The runner up for May Queen will serve as her Maid of Honor.

According to Ray Pacer, chairman of the Board of Elections, the only requirement for the election of the May Court is that "a student running for attendant must actually be in the class which they are supposed to be representing."

Pride

The new furniture in the Student Services building is certainly attractive as well as comfortable. BUT what is going to be the fate of this brand new furniture? After a few weeks will this furniture be in the same condition that the furniture (just recovered before school began in September) upstairs in the building is? In case you have not noticed, this newly recovered furniture already bears the marks of immature students.

It is a puzzle as to why students would write on furniture. In our homes, we do not take a pen and write on our furniture. Why should we do the same here. The Student Services building is OUR building. The furniture we see in this building is OUR furniture. Why should we mistreat it as we do? It is not everyone who is trying their best to prove that Wilmington College Students are immature. It is only a few. The responsibility of keeping this furniture in good condition belongs to US! It is time we learned to take pride in what we have. We, not the faculty, not the administration, not the Board of Trustees, are the ones who are going to be using this furniture.

Those of you who would not think of doing any such thing as writing on couches and chairs, ignore this editorial; it is not for you. You are mature now and don't need a lecture. It is the few who are not mature, the few who have not risen above the high school level of maturity that this editorial is for. Remember it — and remember to take pride in what you now have.

Seek

This campus is bursting with activities, just seek and ye shall find it. Each organization we have been in contact with during the last month has mentioned the fact that they were working on a project not just for their club members to participate in, but for the entire student body. ("To help School Spirit" was how they put it. There is no need for students this year to say there is nothing happening, enough clubs now exist on campus for students to find some activity they are interested in — and if there is not a club you are specifically interested in, why not start one? It would not take that much time to organize, and whatever time it took, it would, in the end, pay off for you as well as for others. Think about this.

Man

On this campus walks a man who is probably the least understood man today. Jokes are made about him, people laugh at him, call him names, but none of these people will take the time to understand what it is he has to do.

This man is trying to make money. In today's society, this is every man's main goal. Unfortunately, many people do not understand this man's goal — and his problems. This man is not trying to rob the students to make his money, he is just doing his job as well as he knows how — and he has the years of experience behind him showing him what to do.

We are talking about Frank Byrne, who is, as we said, the least understood person on campus. We do not profess to understand him, but we do recognize some of the problems he is faced with.

To run a restaurant — be it a drive-in restaurant, a fancy restaurant, or someplace as we have on campus — is not the easiest task in the world. Many things have to be considered such as the food bought, the quality of the food bought, the people preparing and selling the food — and the customer. We are the customers, and we are the ones who are, for the most part, dissatisfied.

When we stop to consider why we are dissatisfied, we see only our side of the problem. We do not take into consideration the number of students on this campus who have to be fed each day. Mr. Byrne is trying his best to help us have good food, for so a while, let's give him a chance to try without complaining each day about him.

Sounding Off

The Pigen

To the editor:

How many times have we said to ourselves or to others that, "this Pub is a pig-pen, with food placed all over the floor and tables, and the ashtrays being used for God knows what?"

Last spring several of us (the deans, three members of the Board of Trustees, and myself) conferred several times about the disgraceful condition of the place. After many arduous hours of talk and insurance that the students would take pride in new paint and furniture, they agreed. Placed in round figures, a total of $5,000 was spent on the entire building. For those of us who remember last year, it is an improvement almost beyond imagination.

But hold on, there are artistic creations through the medium of "Bic" ball point pen ink placed upon the nicely repaired furniture! I doubt very seriously this was put there to enhance the beauty of the chair or sofa. Why was it put there? What is it that makes one wish to idle away his time defacing the furniture? Why, when some people work to acquire better utensils for comfort and long use, it is so often destroyed by the unconcerned or the non-thinker? What good does it do to spill out names, dates, places and other nonsense on the new furniture? I could go on and on asking questions, but what would it solve?

Now, on the other hand, we have some new furniture directly from the factory. It is clean and fresh, ready to use. All this has obviously been building up to something. I have one request to make, and I speak for the Student Senate when I make it, and that is to try and take better care of our new furniture, and old. This building is OUR building and its good care is based upon our responsibility to take care of the things within its freshly painted walls. Let's try and keep it clean and new.

Dear Sir?

As a student of Wilmington College I believe the conduct of this so called newspaper is deplorable. The articles seem to be written by a group of low grade morons. You are writing to a student body of College students not French liberals.

Your article on the conditions of the Pub was insubstantial. You have put the blame on everybody it belongs. In Thor's name who do you think throws paper, drops ashes, spills drinks and like the belief "why use a trash can when you have the whole floor"? May the earth open up and take these hypocritically written lies down elsewhere.

Your statement on the food in the Pub was complete quackery. Only the best grades of meats and food stuffs are used. What nonsense did you say you live in anyway. The restaurant in the Pub has a very high sanitary rating isn't it a shame certain people don't have to have a sanitary rating also.

Just what do you think a Student paper is for? A student newspaper should only report the facts. The newspaper should help to unite the student body not divide it. The newspaper most of all should report school news not the so called EDITORS IN CHIEF'S OPINIONS.

by RANDY DEL LAGO

The Virtue of Selfishness by Ayn Rand

In one of the later plays of Eugene O'Neill, a disillusioned young Utopian is encouraged to reject an earlier, idealistic vision of man, for a more realistic view — of man as he is — and not merely as he would have himself appear. In this frame of mind, he thinks briefly of writing a book: "a frank study of the true nature of man... no matter how it shocks our sentimental moral and religious delusions."

Eventually, he proposed, the book would become "the foundation of a new morality which would destroy all our present hypocritical pretenses and virtuous lies about ourselves. By God, it's a fascinating idea."

Well, Simon never wrote the book, but — one century later — Ayn Rand did, and he was right: the idea is fascinating.

In this collection of nineteen essays (five are by Nathaniel Branden, her chief associate), Ayn Rand explains the 'objectivist ethic' — essentially, the structure and fabric for this new morality based on the 'self.'

Thus selfishness, here, means simply "concern with ones own interests." And yet this is not the spring of her philosophy. It real source is reason; and in the course of this book, in the most rational and stimulating essays, I think, available on any subject, Rand puts forth her fundamental thesis: if a man acts according to the laws of strictest reason, he will (of necessity) act in such a way as to insure, or promote, his own personal welfare.

From this — what is to Rand, an elementary premise — can be formulated the entire objectivist philosophy, ethically applicable to every aspect of existence: from common racism (which she deplores as merely the contemptible effort on the part of a certain kind of 'group conscious' individual to come to terms with his own secretly-felt sense of personal inferiority) to the very nature of governments and governmental systems (a devout capitalist, Rand describes graphically — and regrets openly — the rise of socialism in America, encouraging us to consider carefully the ultimate ends of such — so-called 'altruistic' — concepts as Medicare and many other public 'works').

In this small book, Ayn Rand has written sincerely — and with great clarity — about her 'objectivist' concepts. Her ideas (and I regret that I have not the space to discuss even one of them with any fairness...) are not merely interesting but important, especially to our generation.

She writes of giants (see her novels The Fountain Head and Atlas Shrugged) — but I fear that she does so in an age of Lilliputians, above whom her 'morality' must be lost out of vision, as when she says: "Morality is a code of black and white. When and if men attempt a compromise, it is obvious which side will necessarily lose and which will necessarily profit. Such are the reasons why — when one is asked: 'surely you don't think in terms of black-and-white, do you?' — the proper answer should be: 'you're damn right I do!'"

Frankly, I doubt if most of us would bother to answer at all.

Burrowing With Burrows

By CLIFF BARROW

Your favorite columnist could not make the peace march in Washington on the 21, but let him assure you that it was not from a lack of belief. All of his sympathies were there and if he had thought that there would have been any fresh results to be gained, he would have attended; but the only true fact to remain after the tear gas and denials is that the government continues to show its complete disregard for the people, and we all knew that long before the weekend was ever planned.

He believes that the war is wrong; and when, in two years, he is called upon to serve, he will not do so. First, he feels the war to be immoral, and being a moralist, he can not in good conscience take a part in it any more than Patrick Henry could live under British rule or suffer his fellow countrymen to do the same. Second, there are too many ways in which his country needs him and in which he could serve his country than to die senselessly on a battle field. Third, the only way to stop the series of wars that has continued for hundreds of years is to refuse to finish this one, and man can do without wars to prove his virility. Yet, for this, he will be considered a traitor.

He is not a traitor; nor are those who marched on Oct. 21. No one could love their country any more sensibly than they do; but they will not let this affection be cultivated in a blind sense toward a government which in our democracy should be a fresh growth every four years. Blind patriotism is the sort of unintellectual emotion that allows unsensitive men to make stupidity a normal condition in a time when it should be a rarity. As an American, meaning a person born and raised in this country but not the government, they will not let their land be so far from her basic beliefs that the two, country and government, become the same and the people be castrated in the process.

When and if any man should sacrifice his sensibilities in the direction of the false security of propaganda that all governments produce in order to perpetuate themselves with their land, he must and will lose his right as an individual to rule himself. He ceases to be an honest man and becomes unable to coordinate his feet between the ground upon which he should stand and his mind upon which he should rely. Morals must become laws rather than internal dictates, and laws are nothing but exterior influences which may be changed to suit impersonal whims. Then, the voice would be hollow to speak against the government, and the government would be empty to hear, and the land would be but a tapestry of what the Dutchman searched for.

Perhaps it is better to simply define a traitor. A traitor is a man who refuses to allow his nation a status quo. He insists that the government grow with the people and that the people grow within the capabilities of their land. He is one who is not afraid to step out and sound when the one attempts the pruning of the other and breeds the danger that his country may become a footnote of the past rather than a continuation on the future. With that definition, the marchers and this columnist are traitors. But they could never be ashamed in that company of history's men and America's greatest statesmen.

Chi Sigma Phi

Oct. 22-28, Chi Sigma Phi Sorority observed Founders' Week. This observance was in honor of the founding of the sorority, which took place a year ago.

Charter sisters were pledges for the entire week. As pledges, they had to obey the commands of the other sisters.

The week was high-lighted by a party on Friday night. Both Sigma Phi Kappa and Pi Sigma Mu Fraternities were invited. A picnic at Old Brunswick on Sunday afternoon ended the week.

The sorority held the coffee hour which followed the lecture of Madame Suzanne Labin.

On Friday, Nov. 3, they held a cake party for the student representatives who will sell membership cards for the North Carolina Symphony. Representatives from each school in the county were invited. Chi Sigma Phi will sell membership cards at Wilmington College.

The sorority is currently collecting food, which will be given to a needy family for Thanksgiving.

Sigma Phi Kappa

In order to raise money for their upcoming pledge project, the Sigma Phi Kappa pledges have been holding a number of money making functions. These include a series of car washes and doughnut sales.

According to Kappa brother Al Carrus, "Improvements on the Kappa House are moving along at a satisfactory rate, and plans are being made for an Open House to be held in the near future."

As academic accreditation draws near, the brothers on the Kappa National Committee are busy sifting through the correspondence already received from various national fraternities.

Recent Sigma Phi Kappa social activities included a hay ride, oyster roast, the Annual Hell's Angels Party, and the Chi Sigma Phi Founders' Day Party. A group of a dozen brothers and pledges attended the American 500 Stock Car Race on Oct. 29.

Upcoming socials include the I.F.C. Greek Week, a combo party, and a drive-in party.

Pi Sigma Mu

Pi Sigma Mu Fraternity held an Open House on Sunday, Nov. 6. Students, faculty, friends, and relatives of the fraternity brothers were invited.

Six students have been inducted into the Fall Pledge Class. They are Claude Graves, Ken Harrell, Frank Barber, Glenn Waters, Mike Reilly, and Dean McKittrick.

The week-end before Halloween, Pi Sigma Mu held a masquerade party. Brothers and their dates came dressed in traditional Halloween costumes.

"We are looking forward to Greek Week, and we are planning a wide range of activities," stated Pi Sigma Mu brother, Hugh Newkirk. Activities will include an I.F.C. Dance and a football game.

Alpha Chi Sigma

Alpha Chi Sigma recently had a doughnut sale. The club members went from door to door, selling the doughnuts to people in the community, in an effort to finance their future projects, which are currently being planned.

At the present time, a membership drive is being conducted. Events are planned to interest prospective members in joining the club.

Students Must Take Pride

"There is not enough emphasis which can be stressed for the protection of the new Pub furniture," said Pat Kent in answer to a Seahawk survey question concerning the protection and care of the new furniture recently put into the Student Services building.

"The people who harm the furniture will do it again no matter what is done," she continued. "But it is a pretty sad state of affairs when mature adult college students cannot take care of what is given to them for their own personal use."

One student advised not letting people sit on the new furniture while another student said "Don't allow people to use it. That is the only sure way."

"I feel that the attitudes of some students towards our property should be changed. To do this task, I believe that it would be stressed that the furniture is theirs and they should treat it as they would treat their own."

"I really don't know what type of measures can be taken to protect the new furniture, except for the students to realize that this is their furniture to use and take care of. If the students would grow up and act like responsible college students instead of high school kids, everything would work out."

"Make people of the college take pride in the things we have. You can never have anything better until you take care of what you already have," advised one student.

"The students must take pride in their Pub. With pride as the moving force the students will find the time to protect the new furniture. The best that can be done is the students talking among themselves and making everyone aware of his part."

BSU Now Plans Tutorial Project

"BSU wants to get the ball rolling," said club president Dennis Lennon about a proposed tutorial project the club hopes to begin in the near future.

In the Baptist Student Union the social actions committee state chairman recommended several different projects the local BSU chapters could undertake during the year. "Our local committee chairman decided a tutorial program would be one of the most constructive things we could do here in Wilmington," said Dennis.

If the project does come about, BSU will be working in cooperation with the local Opportunities Incorporated. "We will use their centers," said Dennis.

The project would involve tutoring children of the lower socioeconomic groups.

"We feel that we want to take the responsibility on to get it started, but it will not be just for BSU members. We want other students to participate as well as getting other clubs on campus involved with this proposed project.

The Purist.® An Original by SERO

There is only One Purist

...conceived by Sero
...made only by Sero

We are flattered that competition is making their version of the Purist. To be copied is to be honored. But like a great painting, there is only one original. And so it is with the Purist button-down by Sero.

The Purist is exclusively Sero. If it isn't a Sero, it isn't the Purist.

There are many Purist imitations on the market. Many manufacturers, in fact, are referring verbally to their shirt as the Purist.

The Purist is the registered trademark of Sero — and only Sero. There is no other. It was designed exclusively by Sero to offer the ultimate in shirt styling to the wearer of traditional clothing.

What makes the Purist more traditional than the others? The focal point is the collar. It is longer . . . the cape is fuller and the spread is wider for a more casual roll . . . the band is higher to show more shirt . . . and there is no button on the back.

No fads . . . no loops . . . no trivia . . . the Purist is purely traditional.

Every intricate detail in quality shirtmanship goes into the making of the Purist. Nothing has been overlooked. The finest fabrics . . . exclusive patterns . . . proportionate tapering . . . the seven-button front . . . single needle stitching . . . box pleating . . . these form the basic anatomy of the Purist button-down.

The Purist stands alone in the traditional field. Copy as they may, there is only one Purist . . . conceived by Sero . . . made only by Sero.

ON THE SIDELINES

with GIL HUGULEY

There are those on this campus who are attempting to discredit this writer by accusing him of bias. They say we do not write this column under accepted norms of reportage.

All we can do is feel sorry for the poor, deluded blokes. This column is exactly that, a COLUMN. As such, it will contain opinion. Opinion which may likely vary from your own.

We have our name at the head of this column, so that when we differ with you, you will know who to punch in the nose.

This is not intended to be a report, but rather a commentary on sports. As a commentary, there will be bias here. No, this is not an example of normal reportage—but then we never intended it to be.

One group tells us we favor the Athletic Department. Another tells us we are too hard on the A.D. It all depends on where you stand.

We are not going to choose sides—that's not our job. What we ARE going to do is call the shots as we see them, praise you for the bullseyes, and damn you for the misses.

We are going to attempt to serve the school, student body, and the Athletic Department. We may often deem it necessary to fire a literary broadside at any or all of the above groups, and by gosh, we will NOT be coerced by ANYONE to back down from a position we believe in.

We will say what we pretty well please.

Undoubtedly there will be those who will try to put us down, shut us up, but we can't do our duty as we see it and still keep everybody happy.

Right now this school is in a sports funk. Because no one was interested, we have no intramural football program. Because no one was interested, attendance at home soccer games averaged around 30.

People missed a good bet by not supporting our soccer team. The game is not difficult to watch, and it certainly holds one's interest.

To those who claim that soccer is not very exciting, or has little action, we would only point to Europe. European soccer generates such excitement and spectator involvement that riots are not uncommon following a bad call by an official.

We are not advocating riots, but we would have liked to have seen a little more spectator involvement in Wilmington College soccer.

Soccer is growing in popularity, but Wilmington College has let that wave of popularity wash over unheeded. Soccer season is gone, but it's not too late to get involved in other sports coming up this year. Wake up! Find out what you are missing! Whether it's soccer, wrestling, tennis, golf, basketball or baseball, give it a chance! It is hard to get interested in a sport without attending the games.

Open your mind and try a new experience. You might even like it better than living in your nice, warm, clamshell.

OOPS, MY MISTAKE: Seahawk Ace Phil Oakley on his way down after a spectacular collision with a visiting player from Pembroke.

SOCCER SEASON ENDS

Wilmington College ended its Soccer season last week, with a loss to East Carolina. The loss, however, did not dim the brightness of the finest season the Seahawks have had in the history of the Soccer Team. A Young sport at Wilmington, the teams seem to be gaining in experience and enthusiasm every year.

With a team of lettermen and seasoned veterans, Coach Sproles led the team to a 4 won, 4 lost season. This is compared to the '66 season's 3 wins and 6 losses, and the '65 season of no wins at all.

Improvement in the team this season was obvious in speed and scoring. Several games were lost last season due to lack of scoring and improvement was evident in the high scores of several games this season.

Coach Sproles understandably has nothing but praise for his defense, particularly Goalie Bob Vaughan, a Maryland native. Vaughan is one of the best goalies on the East Coast and has made many astonishing saves guarding the net for Wilmington.

Returning lettermen this year who were starters include besides Bob Vaughan; Dan Whisnant, Pete Daughtry, Elmer Maley, Steve Mundi, and Phil Oakley, who led the team in scoring for the season.

Newcomers to the team included Artie Green, Chamie Butler, Dayne Smith and John Leach. Backup players include Phil Saigh and Paul Livingston.

It was altogether a very fine season and Coach Sproles naturally was extremely proud of his boys. They played some fine games. Coach Sproles is looking forward to next year and an even better season.

With the end of the Soccer Season here at Wilmington College, athletic enthusiasts look forward to the upcoming Basketball Season. Unfortunately, although the Seahawks played the best season ever in Soccer this year, the turnout of fans was disappointing, to say the least. Not once were the stands full until the last home game, at the very end of the season.

Hopefully, things will be different next year, and Soccer fans will not be quite so scarce.

Maybe each game will find the bleachers packed with fans, backing up the Seahawks, . . . maybe they will find that Soccer can be as exciting as Basketball.

WRESTLER'S ANTICIPATE NEW SEASON

The Wilmington College Wrestling team has begun practice for the '67 wrestling season.

After a good season last year the direction of Coach Charles Sproles, the Seahawks are hoping for an even better one this year.

Posting a record 14-3 for the 1966-1967 campaign the 'Hawks ended the season with six straight victories. Undefeated on the home mat, the incomparable Seahawks were a tough team to beat as they blazed through their finest season.

To start the season off right the Seahawks meet the Bishops of Wesleyan on the home mat, Nov. 30. The 'Hawks defeated Wesleyan in a convincing 26-6 victory last year.

All of the wrestlers listed are returning wrestlers for the squad this year. New boys on the team are Chris Stone, Paul O'Neill and Chamie Baldwin.

With so many returning veterans of last years' outstanding campaign, Wilmington College stands a chance of being unbeatable this year.

Basketball Season Approaches Soon

Basketball Season is beginning to open up at Wilmington College with the team in practice sessions every afternoon in the Gym.

After a disappointing '66 season of 19 losses and 9 wins, Coach Bill Brooks is expecting a much better campaign this year, although the team is termed and independent and is non-conference, it appears to stand a good chance of being in the NAIA Tournaments, at the end of the season.

Returning players from last year's squad are Seniors Butch Budd (Georgetown, S.C.) and Frank Bua, (New York), Whitey Durham (Reidsville, N.C.), and Jim Hall, (Danville, Va.), have also returned, along with Wayne Johnson, Jerry Martin and Bill Baugh, all from Wilmington.

New players on the team are Jimmy Hebron, Chris Speciale, and Creig Walters, all from New York. Mike McQuary (Maryland), and Barry Mitchell (Atlanta, Ga.) have also joined the team. McQuary especially is impressive and will most likely be one of the starting players. Other newcomers include Neil Holloman, Whitey McKeever, and Joe Batts all from Wilmington.

The team has begun to get in shape by playing a practice exhibition game with Mt. Olive Jr. College Wednesday night, Nov. 1. The Seahawks won the match 66-80, which is hopefully an indication of the season to come.

Final standings for the 66-67 season were as follows;

Wrestler	W.	L.	T.	Pts.
Paul Baker	16	1	0	82
Jim Morrissey	15	1	1	59
Bob Elliot	12	4	1	53
Roy Jones	11	1	0	39
Ed Ratford	9	2	0	39
Dick Hudson	5	5	0	21
Bill Griffin	4	8	0	16
Ken Cobb	4	2	0	16

Shakespeare Exhibit Currently in Kenan

"You're probably the first class to see an original copy of the First Folio," Thomas McCall told his class in Shakespeare as he showed them one of the copies of the First Folio included in the exhibition now in Kenan.

"I'm very glad it is here," Mr. McCall said about the exhibition from the Folger Shakespeare Library located in Washington, D. C. The exhibition from the Library includes original copies of First Folios, two Quartos, as well as prints and playbills about Shakespeare himself, his plays, and London in his time.

"The whole show represents thousands of dollars worth of manuscripts," said Mr. McCall. The Folios and Quartos are taken out each night and put into a vault to insure their safety.

In addition to the exhibition from the Folger Shakespeare Library Mr. McCall has added items from his personal collection of Shakespeare portraits, busts, and figurines.

Also displayed in the exhibition cases in Kenan are an 1740 painting of Shakespeare, an 1840 hammered bronze of him, figurines and busts of Shakespeare, and also figurines of characters from the plays.

"I've always been interested in Shakespeare," commented McCall who owns recordings of 31 of the 37 Shakespeare plays. Mr. McCall bought his first Shakespeare recording in 1952. He uses these records mainly for his Shakespeare class to hear.

After becoming interested in the recordings, Mr. McCall started looking at the figurines, busts, and portraits of Shakespeare. "I bought my first piece in Philadelphia about ten years ago."

Most of the pieces he owns come from England. "Last week I mailed 150 letters," said Mr. McCall.

"It is just a chance to collect something I'm interested in," said Mr. McCall. "These things just come along, but they don't come often enough for me to go broke on them."

"Only today I received a letter from a town in Vermont offering me a statue of Orsino — and I've a statue of Richard III on the way from Canada."

About four years ago Mr. McCall switched from just collecting figures of Shakespeare to also collecting pictures of the characters in the plays.

Coke Party Begins Drive Symphony

Nov. 3 the Wilmington Chapter of the North Carolina Symphony Society, Inc. held a kick-off coke party for student representatives. These representatives, from the seventh grade through college graduate age, are the pioneer group in North Carolina.

The coke party was held in the Music Department in Kenan Hall at Wilmington College. Representatives were welcomed by Lloyd Hudson, of the music department. He was assisted by William Adcock and Miss Ann Darden. The representatives were taken on a tour of the Music Department. They were served refreshments by Chi Sigma Phi Sorority.

Student representatives were briefed in methods of campaigning for the North Carolina Symphony Drive in Wilmington. Membership cards for the Symphony are being sold at Wilmington College by Chi Sigma Phi Sorority. Student membership cards are $1. For adults over 23 years of age, single membership cards cost $3, and double membership cards may be obtained for $5.

The cards entitle the bearer to attend all of the concerts played throughout the state by the North Carolina State Symphony.

Circle K Sees Films

"We're having a film program right now," said Circle K president Ray Pacer.

Circle K members have been watching films after their meetings this quarter. "We have a film every week," said Ray.

"I think it is necessary to have something that will teach the students a little more responsibility, how to be good citizens and good adults," he said.

The club obtains the films from the Wilmington Public Library. These films, according to Ray, are open to all students, not just Circle K members.

"We have documentaries — educational type things," said Ray.

Dr. Shinn Digs In Israel

"Someone should not teach unless they know something about the subject," So Dr. Gerald Shinn, new faculty member of both the Romance Languages and Philosophy Departments, spent six weeks in Israel this summer on an archeological dig preparing for his course in Old Testament History.

The Dig, sponsored by the Institute for Mediterranean Studies, was headed personally by Dr. Y. Sharan Aharoni of the Hebrew University. It was located in Arad in the Negev and "was run like a slave camp—we were the slaves." "What we were looking for was 'ostraca' — and we found them," said Dr. Shinn. "Ostraca are broken pieces of pottery," he explained, which the ancient Hebrews used to write on."

Most of the ostraca found were mainly grain and supply lists, but two pieces were important in their relationship with Hebrew History.

The first concerned a mention of an Edomite invasion. "This was the first political information we had received from the ancient Hebrews," said Dr. Shinn. It dated back to 592 B.C.E.

The second ostraca dated back to the time of King Solomon, about 950 B.C.E. "This was just at the time the Old Testament was being written down for the first time," he said.

DR. GERALD SHINN

"The work on the dig was done with pick, shovel, and wheelbarrow. "Once we reached the floor level, we would go with potsh, ice pick, and brushes. "A Potsh," he explained, "is the Hebrew word for hammer, but it does not resemble a hammer. It is a triangular shaped digging tool."

Dr. Shinn was in Israel only three weeks after the Six Days War. "I wished I'd been there during the war, but you had to catch that war quickly." In fact, three weeks after the war, "it was like nothing had happened."

The only visible result of the war at the digging was that "many people had come to Israel to fight, and as they were certainly not needed as soldiers, were given to us to use as slaves in our excavation."

After he finished digging, Dr. Shinn spent one week traveling through Israel, although this week plus the five weeks of digging did not give him enough time "to know the country or the people. The ones I met living there were as nice as they could be."

Born in Charlotte, Dr. Shinn has lived all over most of eastern and Western North Carolina. He spent one year studying in Frankfurt Anuain, Germany. He was at Duke University studying for 12 years, and immediately before coming here was an instructor at Louisiana Junior College.

JUNIORS — Linda Nance (with back to camera), John Blair, Ray Pacer, George Hodnett, and Diane Sellers meet upstairs in the Student Services Building to continue making plans for the social after the first ball game.

Juniors Plan Social After Home Game

Since the first junior class project was successful — that is, to get juniors to attend their class meeting — they have gone ahead and planned a project for the year.

Their first project is to sponsor a bus trip to the out of town basketball game with Pembroke Dec. 16. Although the juniors realize this is during the holidays, they decided this was the only time they could sponsor a bus to an out of town game as all of the other games out of town are either on week nights or out of state.

Before school closes for the holidays, the juniors hope to have sold the tickets for the bus and game. If they are unable to sell enough tickets to charter a bus, the project will be dropped.

Juniors will start selling tickets for the trip and game this week. Tickets for the bus and game will cost around $3.50, according to George Hodnett, president of the class.

Their second project is to sponsor a social after a home basketball game. The first such social will be after the home game Dec. 9. If this one is a success, they are planning another for the home game Jan. 6.

Complete details for the social have not been worked out, according to George, but another meeting is going to be held Dec. 6 to finish planning. Posters will be put up around the school telling the students what to expect.

The main purpose of these projects, says George, "is to get up some school spirit."

Meier Appoints Martin Treasurer

Senior Class Senator Danny Martin has been appointed by Mike Meier, Student Body president, to serve as Treasurer for the Senate.

The need for a treasurer was first noticed last spring. At this time someone came to the Senate asking for money. The question was then raised about how much money the Senate actually did have and the overwhelming reply was "I don't know," according to Mike.

"Now, if anything should, this should point out why we should need a treasurer," said Mike.

The treasurer is separate from the secretary of the student body — as it has been done before. "The secretary has enough to do and we did not think it would be fair to her. She does enough without having the added burden of having to keep up with the Senate's money," Mike said.

According to the revised constitution, the treasurer will have to be appointed by the President of the student body within ten days after the spring elections. His appointment will have to be approved by a two-thirds majority of the Senate.

The treasurer will work with the student body President at the beginning of the year to recommend the budget for the various campus organizations.

The treasurer can be appointed at large or he can be a senator. Danny will issue a monthly financial report. "In this way we will know how much money we have pretty much of the time," said Mike.

In speaking about his new position, Danny commented, "I'll be placing a monthly report of senate expenditures on the bulletin board. I should think the students would be interested in where the money is going."

Inter-club Council Now To Meet Every Month

The recently revived Inter-Club Council met Nov. 16 with only six campus organizations represented.

This lack of representation was thought to be due to inadequate publicity about the meeting. Since the Inter-Club Council was inactive all last year, "Someone probably saw a sign and said 'Hey, a new club on campus,'" said Mike Meier, president of the Student Body.

"The next time we will know," he continued.

The next meeting of the Inter-Club Council will be Nov. 29 at 7 p.m. Before this time each club will be contacted and told to send two representatives to the meeting.

Business coming before the first meeting included pleas from BSU and Civitans for help with their projects.

BSU member, Ethridge Watters explained the tutorial program the club is presently working with. "I'd like all of the representatives here tonight to go back and talk to their clubs and see if any of their club members would be interested in working with this."

Ethridge stressed the fact that although the BSU started this program, it will definitely be open to any student wishing to help with it.

John Hunt, Civitan member, then told the representatives about the time capsule the Civitans plan to place on campus this year. He also requested help from the clubs on campus.

"There is only one catch," said John, "we need people to help us in gathering material for the capsule."

We are not trying to get all of the glory, we want other clubs to help us."

Civitans would like for each club to furnish a reporter who would contribute something from their club to be placed in the capsule. "We got the idea, but we would like others to help put it into effect."

"How often do you think we should meet?" Mike asked the group. Gay Godwin, representing Chi Sigma Phi, suggested "as often as needed," but Renee Hartman, representing The Seahawk, wanted to meet once a month.

John Hunt, member of the Inter-Club council before it became inactive, said that in former years the Inter-Club council had met "once a month."

It was then decided to meet the third Thursday of each month.

Renee suggested the Inter-Club Council plan a calendar so that there would not be as many conflicting meetings each night. "This calendar could be worked out by us," added Gay. The Council hopes to put such a calendar into effect beginning winter quarter.

"It has been brought up that the campus is in dire need of Christmas decorations," stated Mike. "Are you in favor of decorating the campus," he asked.

It was said that decorating the campus would be too big of a job for one club, but if all of the clubs shared the work and the expense, it would not be that hard a task to perform.

It was tentatively decided to place a decorated Christmas tree outside the Pub by the night of the Winter Festival Dance. It was also suggested that the lights for the tree could be turned on the night of the dance.

The Dance committee will be contacted about this idea.

Chris Deasy, also representing Chi Sigma Phi, told the Council that since it was reorganized, it would have to be responsible for conducting the Homecoming Queen elections. It was decided not to begin work on this until after the Christmas holidays.

The Inter-Club Council will meet again Wednesday night in order to discuss plans for decorating the campus for Christmas.

Brown, Cheek Travel To Attend Meeting

Mrs. Helen Cheek, dean of women, and Thomas P. Brown, dean of men, traveled to Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 11, to attend the Southern College Personnel Association. Held at the Andrew Jackson Hotel, the Conference had as its theme "Student Personnel Work, A Critical Mass."

The activities began Saturday afternoon with an Executive Council meeting. This was followed by a social gathering that night.

Special lectures and discussions were held in various groups throughout the conference, which lasted until Tuesday, Nov. 14. Of special interest to Deans, Brown and Cheek was a lecture by Dr. Gloria Scott, special assistant to the president, Agricultural and Technical University of North Carolina, Greensboro. She lectured on "Student Personnel Services in the Small Colleges."

Dean Brown also expressed an interest in a panel discussion, which was led by a group of college students. Their topic was, "Students Perceptions of Critical Campus Issues."

According to Dean Brown, "It gave us an opportunity to associate Wilmington College with other institutions as to the activities and participation of the students."

Out-Of-State Tuition To Increase Next Year

Out-of-state students at Wilmington College next year will be required to pay an increased tuition. A tuition increase from $130 per quarter to $170 per quarter was approved by the Oct. 31 meeting of the Board of Trustees of Wilmington College.

According to Dr. Randall, president of the college, the tuition was raised for out-of-state students because the state does not appropriate money for the educational expenses of out-of-state students, as it does for those residing in the state. The tuition was raised to keep these students from becoming a "burden" to the state.

Also, at the same meeting, the activity fee was raised from $16 to $25. The increase will take care of the operating expenses of the Student Services Building, which, the State has advised, is to be self-supporting.

The increase will also provide money for the Physical education and Athletic programs, drama, music and art. Part of the money derived from the activity fee increase will be used in building new parking facilities.

Not of particular concern to students already at the college, but of interest to prospective students, is the increase of the registration fee to $10. This, said Dr. Randall, is to discourage multiple registrations. When students apply to several different colleges, the exact number of students cannot be known until registration day.

Colleigates To Play For Winter Festival Dance

The Dance Committee reports that this year's Winter Festival Dance is being held Dec. 2 in the Student Services Building. "Its theme is a winter scene; it has nothing to do with Christmas," stated Dale Donahue, co-chairman of the Dance Committee.

According to Dale, "The decorations are going to be the best so far this year. The Dance Committee is going all out on this dance."

Dress for the dance will be semi-formal. (Party dresses or cocktail dresses for girls, and coats and ties — not tuxedos or dinner jackets — for boys.)

The Colleigates will provide the music for the Winter Festival Dance. Free refreshments will be served upstairs. Georgia Macris is heading the refreshment committee.

Dance Committee Chairman Mark Young expressed the feeling of the entire Dance Committee by saying, "I hope everybody comes."

Civitans Help To Organize Civinette Club On Campus

Civinettes will have their next meeting Nov. 30 at 7:30 in room 205 of the library building. All interested girls are invited to attend this meeting.

The Civinettes Club was recently organized through the efforts of the Civitan Club and Peggy Willard.

During Freshman Orientation, Civitans mentioned they wanted to organize a parallel girls service club and invited any girls who were interested to attend their meetings. Peggy was the only girl to accept this invitation.

"I talked to some girls," said Peggy, "and have been working with the Civitans. Thanks to them we were able to have our tea."

The Tea for the girls was given by the Civitans Nov. 15.

"I'd like to thank you all for coming out," said Civitan president Mike Michel in his welcoming speech to the girls.

"We think it is a good idea to have a girls' service organization. In his speech, Mike pointed out there was only one other girls' service club on campus at the present time.

"In order to be a service club, you will have to do projects for the community and campus," Mike advised the girls. He told them that the Civitans thought Civinettes could help the Civitan Club in some of their projects.

"We're here to help you organize the club," Mike stressed.

The girls still need several more members before they can apply for a charter. "I would like your help," Peggy told the girls at the meeting, "to help in getting some more girls to attend our next meeting."

It was mentioned that there were several other girls who wanted to join the club, but were unable to attend the tea due to other conflicting meetings.

According to Peggy, once the club is chartered, the club will contact the local high school Civinette Club and hopefully work with them.

VALUABLE — Mr. McCall places a copy of the First Folio in one of the showcases in Kenan. (Photo by Rell)

"You're probably the first class to see an original copy of the First Folio," Thomas McCall told his class in Shakespeare as he showed them one of the copies of the First Folio included in the exhibition now in Kenan.

"I'm very glad it is here," Mr. McCall said about the exhibition from the Folger Shakespeare Library located in Washington, D. C. The exhibition from the Library includes original copies of First Folios, two Quartos, as well as prints and playbills about Shakespeare himself, his plays, and London in his time.

"The whole show represents thousands of dollars worth of manuscripts," said Mr. McCall. The Folios and Quartos are taken out each night and put into a vault to insure their safety.

In addition to the exhibition from the Folger Shakespeare Library Mr. McCall has added items from his personal collection of Shakespeare portraits, busts, and figurines.

Also displayed in the exhibition cases in Kenan are an 1740 painting of Shakespeare, an 1840 hammered bronze of him, figurines and busts of Shakespeare, and also figurines of characters from the plays.

"I've always been interested in Shakespeare," commented McCall who owns recordings of 31 of the 37 Shakespeare plays. Mr. McCall bought his first Shakespeare recording in 1952. He uses these recordings mainly for his Shakespeare class to hear.

After becoming interested in the recordings, Mr. McCall started looking at the figurines, busts, and portraits of Shakespeare. "I bought my first piece in Philadelphia about ten years ago."

Most of the pieces he owns come from England. "Last week I mailed 150 letters," said Mr. McCall.

"It is just a chance to collect something I'm interested in," said Mr. McCall. "These things just come along, but they don't come often enough for me to go broke on them."

"Only today I received a letter from a town in Vermont offering me a statue of Orsino — and I've a statue of Richard III on the way from Canada."

About four years ago Mr. McCall switched from just collecting figures of Shakespeare to also collecting pictures of the characters in the plays.

Coke Party Begins Drive Symphony

Nov. 3 the Wilmington Chapter of the North Carolina Symphony Society, Inc., held a kick-off coke party for student representatives. These representatives, from the seventh grade through college graduate age, are the pioneer group in North Carolina.

The coke party was held in the Music Department in Kenan Hall at Wilmington College. Representatives were welcomed by Lloyd Hudson, of the music department. He was assisted by William Adcock and Miss Ann Darden. The representatives were taken on a tour of the Music Department. They were served refreshments by Chi Sigma Phi Sorority.

Student representatives were briefed in methods of campaigning for the North Carolina Symphony Drive in Wilmington. Membership cards for the Symphony are being sold at Wilmington College by Chi Sigma Phi Sorority. Student membership cards are $1. For adults over 23 years of age, single membership cards cost $3, and double membership cards may be obtained for $5.

The cards entitle the bearer to attend all of the concerts played throughout the state by the North Carolina State Symphony.

Circle K Sees Films

"We're having a film program right now," said Circle K president Ray Pacer.

Circle K members have been watching films after their meetings this quarter. "We have a film every week," said Ray.

"I think it is necessary to have something that will teach the students a little more responsibility, how to be good citizens and good adults," he said.

The club obtains the films from the Wilmington Public Library. These films, according to Ray, are open to all students, not just Circle K members.

"We have documentaries — educational type things," said Ray.

Dr. Shinn Digs In Israel

"Someone should not teach unless they know something about the subject." So Dr. Gerald Shinn, new faculty member of both the Romance Languages and Philosophy Departments, spent six weeks in Israel this summer on an archaeological dig preparing for his course in Old Testament History.

The Dig, sponsored by the Institute for Mediterranean Studies, was headed personally by Dr. Y. Sharean Aharoni of the Hebrew University. It was located in Arad in the Negev and "was run like a slave camp—we were the slaves."

"What we were looking for was 'ostraca' — and we found them," said Dr. Shinn. "Ostraca are broken pieces of pottery," he explained, which the ancient Hebrews used to write on."

Most of the ostraca found were mainly grain and supply lists, but two pieces were important in their relationship with Hebrew History.

The first concerned a mention of an Edomite invasion. "This was the first political information we had received from the ancient Hebrews," said Dr. Shinn. It dated back to 592 B.C.E.

The second ostraca dated back to the time of King Solomon, about 950 B.C.E. "This was just at the time the Old Testament was being written down for the first time," he said.

DR. GERALD SHINN

"The work on the dig was done with pick, shovel, and wheelbarrow. "Once we reached the floor level, we would go with potsh, ice pick, and brushes. "A Potsh," he explained, "is the Hebrew word for hammer, but it does not resemble a hammer. It is a triangular shaped digging tool."

Dr. Shinn was in Israel only three weeks after the Six Days War. "I wished I'd been there during the war, but you had to catch that war quickly." In fact, three weeks after the war, "it was like nothing had happened."

The only visible result of the war at the digging was that "many people had come to Israel to fight, and as they were certainly not needed as soldiers, were given to us to use as slaves in our excavation."

After he finished digging, Dr. Shinn spent one week traveling through Israel, although this week plus the five weeks of digging did not give him enough time "to know the country or the people. The ones I met living there were as nice as they could be."

Born in Charlotte, Dr. Shinn has lived all over most of eastern and Western North Carolina. He spent one year studying in Frankfurt Aniaun, Germany. He was at Duke University studying for 12 years, and immediately before coming here was an instructor at Louisville Junior College.

JUNIORS — Linda Nance (with back to camera), John Blair, Ray Pacer, George Hodnett, and Diane Sellers meet upstairs in the Student Services Building to continue making plans for the social after the first ball game.

Juniors Plan Social After Home Game

Since the first junior class project was successful — that is, to get juniors to attend their class meeting — they have gone ahead and planned a project for the year.

Their first project is to sponsor a bus trip to the out of town basketball game with Pembroke Dec. 16. Although the juniors realize this is during the holidays, they decided this was the only time they could sponsor a bus to an out of town game as all of the other games out of town are either on week nights or out of state.

Before school closes for the holidays, the juniors hope to have sold the tickets for the bus and game. If they are unable to sell enough tickets to charter a bus, the project will be dropped.

Their second project is to sponsor a social after a home basketball game. The first such social will be after the home game Dec. 9. If this one is a success, they are planning another for the home game Jan. 6.

Complete details for the social have not been worked out, according to George, but another meeting is going to be held Dec. 6 to finish planning. Posters will be put up around the school telling the students what to expect.

The main purpose of these projects, says George, "is to get up some school spirit."

Meier Appoints Martin Treasurer

Senior Class Senator Danny Martin has been appointed by Mike Meier, Student Body president, to serve as Treasurer for the Senate.

The need for a treasurer was first noticed last spring. At this time someone came to the Senate asking for money. The question was then raised about how much money the Senate actually did have and the overwhelming reply was "I don't know," according to Mike.

"Now, if anything should, this should point out why we should need a treasurer," said Mike.

The treasurer is separate from the secretary of the student body — as it has been done before. "The secretary has enough to do and we did not think it would be fair to her. She does enough without having the added burden of having to keep up with the Senate's money," Mike said.

According to the revised constitution, the treasurer will have to be appointed by the President of the student body within ten days after the spring elections. His appointment will have to be approved by a two-thirds majority of the Senate.

The treasurer will work with the student body President at the beginning of the year to recommend the budget for the various campus organizations.

The treasurer can be appointed at large or he can be a senator.

Danny will issue a monthly financial report. "In this way we will know how much money we have pretty much of the time," said Mike.

In speaking about his new position, Danny commented, "I'll be placing a monthly report of senate expenditures on the bulletin board. I should think the students would be interested in where the money is going."

Inter-club Council Now To Meet Every Month

The recently revived Inter-Club Council met Nov. 16 with only six campus organizations represented.

This lack of representation was thought to be due to inadequate publicity about the meeting. Since the Inter-Club Council was inactive all last year, "Someone probably saw a sign and said 'Hey, a new club on campus,'" said Mike Meier, president of the Student Body.

"The next time we will know," he continued.

The next meeting of the Inter-Club Council will be Nov. 29 at 7 p.m. Before this time each club will be contacted and told to send two representatives to the meeting.

Business coming before the first meeting included pleas from BSU and Civitans for help with their projects.

BSU member, Ethridge Watters explained the tutorial program the club is presently working with. "I'd like all of the representatives here tonight to go back and talk to their clubs and see if any of their club members would be interested in working with this."

Ethridge stressed the fact that although the BSU started this program, it will definitely be open to any student wishing to help with it.

John Hunt, Civitan member, then told the representatives about the time capsule the Civitans plan to place on campus this year. He also requested help from the clubs on campus.

"There is only one catch," said John, "we need people to help us in gathering material for the capsule. We are not trying to get all of the glory, we want other clubs to help us."

Civitans would like for each club to furnish a reporter who would contribute something from their club to be placed in the capsule. "We got the idea, but we would like others to help put it into effect."

"How often do you think we should meet?" Mike asked the group. Gay Godwin, representing Chi Sigma Phi, suggested "as often as needed," but Renee Hartman, representing The Seahawk, wanted to meet once a month.

John Hunt, member of the Inter-Club council before it became inactive, said that in former years the Inter-Club council had met "once a month."

It was then decided to meet the third Thursday of each month.

Renee suggested the Inter-Club Council plan a calendar so that there would not be as many conflicting meetings each night. "This calendar could be worked out by us," added Gay. The Council hopes to put such a calendar into effect beginning winter quarter.

"It has been brought up that the campus is in dire need of Christmas decorations," stated Mike. "Are you in favor of decorating the campus," he asked.

It was said that decorating the campus would be too big of a job for one club, but if all of the clubs shared the work and the expense, it would not be that hard a task to perform.

It was tentatively decided to place a decorated Christmas tree outside the Pub by the night of the Winter Festival Dance. It was also suggested that the lights for the tree could be turned on the night of the dance.

The Dance committee will be contacted about this idea.

Chris Deasy, also representing Chi Sigma Phi, told the Council that since it was reorganized, it would have to be responsible for conducting the Homecoming Queen elections. It was decided not to begin work on this until after the Christmas holidays.

The Inter-Club Council will meet again Wednesday night in order to discuss plans for decorating the campus for Christmas.

Brown, Cheek Travel To Attend Meeting

Mrs. Helen Cheek, dean of women, and Thomas P. Brown, dean of men, traveled to Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 11, to attend the Southern College Personnel Association. Held at the Andrew Jackson Hotel, the Conference had as its theme "Student Personnel Work, A Critical Mass."

The activities began Saturday afternoon with an Executive Council meeting. This was followed by a social gathering that night.

Special lectures and discussions were held in various groups throughout the conference, which lasted until Tuesday, Nov. 14. Of special interest to Deans, Brown and Cheek was a lecture by Dr. Gloria Scott, special assistant to the president, Agricultural and Technical University of North Carolina, Greensboro. She lectured on "Student Personnel Services in the Small Colleges."

Dean Brown also expressed an interest in a panel discussion, which was led by a group of college students. Their topic was, "Students' Perceptions of Critical Campus Issues."

According to Dean Brown, "It gave us an opportunity to associate Wilmington College with other institutions as to the activities and participation of the students."

Out-Of-State Tuition To Increase Next Year

Out-of-state students at Wilmington College next year will be required to pay an increased tuition. A tuition increase from $130 per quarter to $170 per quarter was approved by the Oct. 31 meeting of the Board of Trustees of Wilmington College.

According to Dr. Randall, president of the college, the tuition was raised for out-of-state students because the state does not appropriate money for the educational expenses of out-of-state students, as it does for those residing in the state. The tuition was raised to keep these students from becoming a "burden" to the state.

Also, at the same meeting, the activity fee was raised from $16 to $25. The increase will take care of the operating expenses of the Student Services Building, which, the State has advised, is to be self-supporting.

The increase will also provide money for the Physical Education and Athletic programs, drama, music and art. Part of the money derived from the activity fee increase will be used in building new parking facilities.

Not of particular concern to students already at the college, but of interest to prospective students, is the increase of the registration fee to $10. This, said Dr. Randall, is to discourage multiple registrations. When students apply to several different colleges, the exact number of students cannot be known until registration day.

Colleigates To Play For Winter Festival Dance

The Dance Committee reports that this year's Winter Festival Dance is being held Dec. 2 in the Student Services Building. "Its theme is a winter scene; it has nothing to do with Christmas," stated Dale Donahue, co-chairman of the Dance Committee.

According to Dale, "The decorations are going to be the best so far this year. The Dance Committee is going all out on this dance."

Dress for the dance will be semi-formal. (Party dresses or cocktail dresses for girls, and coats and ties — not tuxedos or dinner jackets — for boys.)

The Colleigates will provide the music for the Winter Festival Dance. Free refreshments will be served upstairs. Georgia Macris is heading the refreshment committee.

Dance Committee Chairman Mark Young expressed the feeling of the entire Dance Committee by saying, "I hope everybody comes."

Civitans Help To Organize Civinette Club On Campus

Civinettes will have their next meeting Nov. 30 at 7:30 in room 205 of the library building. All interested girls are invited to attend this meeting.

The Civinettes Club was recently organized through the efforts of the Civitan Club and Peggy Willard.

During Freshman Orientation, Civitans mentioned they wanted to organize a parallel girls service club and invited any girls who were interested to attend their meetings. Peggy was the only girl to accept this invitation.

"I talked to some girls," said Peggy, "and have been working with the Civitans. Thanks to them we were able to have our tea."

The Tea for the girls was given by the Civitans Nov. 15.

"I'd like to thank you all for coming out," said Civitan president Mike Michel in his welcoming speech to the girls.

"We think it is a good idea to have a girls' service organization. In his speech, Mike pointed out there was only one other girls' service club on campus at the present time.

"In order to be a service club, you will have to do projects for the community and campus," Mike advised the girls. He told them that the Civitans thought Civinettes could help the Civitan Club

"We're here to help you organize the club," Mike stressed.

The girls still need several more members before they can apply for a charter. "I would like your help," Peggy told the girls at the meeting, "to help in getting some more girls to attend our next meeting."

It was mentioned that there were several other girls who wanted to join the club, but were unable to attend the tea due to other conflicting meetings.

According to Peggy, once the club is chartered, the club will contact the local high school Civinette Club and hopefully work with them.

Council Meets Again

After a year's inactivity, the Inter-Club Council has been revived. Showing the necessity of such an organization on campus, the meeting began with only two items of business, but as the meeting continued more and more business was brought before the few representatives.

According to the old constitution which is still in effect, the purpose of the Inter-Club Council is to serve as a "club activity coordinating group." As part of its responsibility to the welfare of the students one of the first tasks of the council is going to be the preparation of a club calendar. This calendar should eliminate the many conflicting meetings on campus. One day a few weeks ago we noticed three clubs plus one Senate committee all meeting on the same night. The fact that there are so many nights such as this one makes it an impossibility for some students to happily and easily participate in campus activities. Of course, it is impossible to suit everyone, but since the number of campus organizations is not yet that grand, it would seem that the proposed calendar would be an excellent idea. It should be possible that all clubs would be able to meet with not more than two coinciding. If the Inter-Club Council can accomplish this one task, we would say they have done a great deal.

The Inter-Club Council will this year again be an integral part of campus activity. It should be each club's main duty to make certain they are represented on the council.

Juniors Work

The Junior Class has not sat back this year holding meetings to decide on a project, but they have already begun to work on their first project for the year. The main purpose of their project is to build up school spirit on this campus. To build up this spirit, the class is planning to conduct socials after home basketball games. To see if these socials would be wanted by the students, the class plans to have their first social after the home game Dec. 9. If enough students will attend this social, the class plans to continue to have them during winter quarter.

So far, the class plans to have free admission to these socials which would begin after ball games. We would like to suggest charging some admission — not in an effort to make money for the class, but in an effort to go back and 'build up school spirit.' Our suggestion is only that only students wishing to attend the social would have to pay a very slight admission charge (nothing over 50 cents). By doing this the basketball team would receive the support they should have, school spirit would increase, and possibly the Junior Class could make some money from the students who are determined not to go to the game, but would like to attend the social.

To discriminate between the students who have attended the game and those who have not, some sort of a ticket could be given to all Wilco students when they came to the game. At the door of the Pub following the game, these tickets would be presented for free admission.

The socials the class is planning are not going to be elaborate affairs. Music will come from a jukebox. But what is important about them is they are being planned. So students who are complaining there is never anything to do here can stop their complaints and come out to these socials.

We're Sorry

To be perfectly frank, we are tired of saying "We are sorry for coming out late" every time this year, but saying we are sorry is about the only thing we can do.

At the beginning of the year, we changed printers in hopes of getting a better quality of work on the paper. We believed most people will agree the newspaper does look better than it used to look, that is, when you have seen it.

We, ourselves, are probably more upset with this constant lateness than you are. After all, we are the ones putting out the paper, and we are the ones who take the blame when the paper does not appear on time.

In an effort to do something for you, we decided to see if we could work with the yearbook staff and board of elections in the May Queen elections. Before the election was held we were going to get pictures of all of the girls running for May Queen and run them in the paper so all students would be acquainted with them before the election. Unfortunately this little idea failed because the papers announcing the election appeared so late. (In fact, we rather feel as if the entire last paper was a complete farce.)

We are honestly trying, believe this. If you will just continue to support us a bit longer, we are certain to have straightened out all of our problems with our friendly printer so that you will receive the papers on the day you are supposed to get them. If you are reading this paper on the correct date, realize all of our problems are over. If not, well, you'll definitely know we are still beset with problems — and for that we are sorry!

STRAIT IS THE GATE,

by Andre' Gide

This is a most unusual book. It is a novel of great tension, yet of even greater restraint, that deals at once with the reality and the impossibility of an ideal love.

It is the story of two highly spirited young people, each of whom vows early to approach the other through the 'narrow gate' of virtue — as opposed to the 'wide' gate, of which it is said, "many there be which go in thereat," even though it "leadeth to destruction." That is to say, each resolves to strive toward perfection in order to better deserve the other's love.

The tragic element is discovered, however, in Alissa's eventual desire to extend this otherwise 'ideal' love, literally, into a religious passion. Deeply devout, she decides, with Pascal, that "whatever is not God cannot satisfy (her) longing" — and begins to fear that she has become an 'idol,' deflecting Jerome's love from God toward herself, and that she stands perhaps in the way of his ultimate attainment of perfect virtue.

Consequently, she denies her present love (and Jerome's) that both might realize an even greater love — an entirely spiritual love — in God; so that what, on one level, appeals as a ure and finely wrought tragedy, is also, in a very real sense, a tremendously affecting spiritual affirmation.

For when, after her death, Jerome (and the reader) are made to understand at last the complex nature of Alissa's passion, the 'love-story,' we find, has actually exceeded its own form and become a dramatic moral consideration of the very nature of love itself.

It is true that many of the premises — the sensibilities — that infuse this book may at first seem strange to you; but do not let this dissuade you from reading it. For within the pale he so carefully establishes, Gide convinces us — beyond doubt — of the rightness and inevitability of each word and incident.

And afterward, as we review novel, if we judge too harshly Alissa's decision, or if we sympathize too strongly with Jerome, we realize that it is because we are children of another time, another way of thinking.

And yet we must judge from our own vantage, must we not? — least we come to condemn ourselves for our own accidental placement in the present. I say this because I fear that we are too inclined to forget that different books — like different times — are informed by different tempers — and that each writer must demand individual consideration.

Certainly, I do not speak of writers who have not earned such consideration; but Gide has, and it is well worth the effort it takes to understand him.

(Andre' Gide was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1947. His other works include The Counterfeiters and The Immoralist.)

- THEATRE REVIEW -

Company Maintains Maturity

by Mike Cavanaugh

In choosing "My Fair Lady" as its first presentation of the current Theatre season, the Wilmington College - Thalian group demonstrated its increasing confidence and maturity.

The legendarily successful play requires the talents of a fully-developed theatrical company. The local theatre group's successes and failures in meeting these requirements provide a measure for determining the ability of the company.

If the reception of the audience is a criterion for judgement of the production, as indeed it must be, then "My Fair Lady" was an unqualified success. Thalian Hall was packed as it has seldom been, and the crowd was enthusiastic in its approval.

But the qualities which satisfy a Wilmington audience are not always those which are generally satisfactory to the Theatre with a capital "T." Wilmington loves a ham, someone who can get out there and revel in the attention of the playgoers, someone who is willing to break character to mock himself and his role and jab his elbow into the ribs of the watcher.

"My Fair Lady" assembled one of the best casts in the history of local productions. Considering that an actor was previously praised if he remembered all of his lines, the present assembly has made great sides in its art.

Del Lago was a fine Higgins. He managed to convey the paradoxical egoism and charm which the part demands, and his diction as the meticulous Professor Higgins was well in character. This portrayal dominated the entire play, and gave the production its finest performance.

Rosemary Salata was excellent as the cockney Eliza, and distinguished herself in the lighter moments of the role. The carefully comic handling of the Ascot scene provides the best example of her ability. Mrs. Salata's best musical numbers were those which she sang with Freddy and Professor Higgins. There were times, however, when her voice was inaudible in the first balcony.

Neal Bell presented a competent if sometimes staid Col. Pickering. Jere Hodgkin's Freddy Eynsford-Hill was somewhat marred by an immobile right arm, but he undoubtedly had the best voice in the play. Alfred Doolittle by Sam Garner was Wilmington's first choice among the cast, and was especially successful with the play's two best numbers, "With a Little Bit of Luck," and "I'm Getting Married."

Several outstanding performances by members of the supporting cast helped the success of the play tremendously. Pat Fuchs as Mrs. Higgins delivered one of the finest portrayals in the cast in a role that could easily have been overlooked. Kay Swink in a cameo appearance added expertise and professionalism to the "Little Bit of Luck" number. The chorus performed well and were particularly fine in the production scenes.

"My Fair Lady" was staged with a greater degree of professionalism than had yet been exhibited in Thalian Hall. The choreography filled the stage with movement and life during the production numbers, which is the essence of the good musical. Sets and costumes were even better than Thalian audiences have come to expect them to be.

"My Fair Lady" was, in fact, Musical Theatre. It was joyous, enthusiastic, and professional. It provided Wilmington not only with an enjoyable evening, but also with a glimpse of what musical theatre as an experience can be. As a measure of the ability of the Wilmington College-Thalian group, it proved that the company has attained a high level of maturity.

FINE ARTS - IN REVIEW

by Randy Del Lago

On Friday night, Dec. 1, at 8 P.M., the Fine Arts Committee will present its last program of this quarter: Sir Laurence Olivier's filmed production of Hamlet.

Probably Shakespeare's best-known play, Hamlet came to the screen in 1948 and, according to Parker Tyler, a noted film-critic, has remained the "best-dressed, most ambitious, and most credible" Shakespearean film ever made.

Filmed without a single ray of genuine sunlight, Hamlet remains a photographic marvel, suggesting by its very closeness an intensity that otherwise might have been lost in its transference from the stage.

But doubtless the greatest asset of the film must prove the presence of the star: Sir Laurence Olivier. Generally acknowledged the world's greatest actor, Olivier gives here one of his most widely acclaimed performances in the role of the tormented Dane.

This film, which won five

Academy Awards and numerous international awards, will be shown in the Kenan Lecture room of the Kenan Building. There will be no admission charge.

To show films, naturally we need projectors; and for allowing us the use of the projectors belonging to their departments, we should like to thank Mr. Allen of the Biology Dept. and Dr. Hulon of the Education and Psychology Dept. and thanks also to our projectionist, Jere Hodgkin.

For helping us with our live presentation this quarter, the dance performance by Ted Morca and La Conte, I would like to thank those members of Mr. Swink's Stage-craft class who helped; Diane Sellers and Tony Rivenbark, who assisted the dancers; and above all, Dr. William Randall, who gave us permission to hold the performance in Thalian Hall, providing just the right atmosphere for three such excellent performers.

Placement Office Helps Find Jobs

Seniors interested in finding a job after graduation should check by the Placement Office and talk to David Warner, head of the Placement Bureau on campus.

The Placement Office is prepared to help students to find a position in whatever field the student is interested.

"We try to make the seniors aware of the supply and demand of the labor market and how a student might fit in a situation with a major they might have," said Mr. Warner.

Services Are Free

"I think students should stop by and let us explain what we can do for them. Our services are free," he commented.

Seniors need to know that they are required to have a resume form. "This is a personal data sheet," explained Mr. Warner.

They should understand they can use the Placement Office as a informational service area where they can pick up application blanks.

"I also try to counsel them with techniques of being interviewed. We try to help them with any problems they might feel they are confronted with — how to write a follow up letter and acceptance letters. That includes helping them to make a decision about any job opportunity being presented to them."

Corporations are contacted by the Placement Office and are invited to send representatives to the campus to interview students interested in working with their firm.

Company Interviews

The interviewer who comes to campus represents the company as a whole. This, explained Mr. Warner, means that the interviewer can speak about all phases of the company, from selling to an office job.

The Placement Office not only requests certain companies to visit the campus, but also receives requests from companies for permission to come to the campus and conduct interviews.

"We've already had 12 corporations to visit the campus this fall," Warner commented.

"These same corporations are also after women," he said. "In today's labor market, positions for women do not much differ from men because of previous legislation from the government."

Men, Women Interviewed

Mr. Warner mentioned that one of the interviewers this year will be a man from the North Carolina State Department who will be interviewing with both men and women in mind.

Students are urged to come by and register with the Placement Office so Mr. Warner will know where their interests lie. In this way, Mr. Warner will be able to contact these students if they are unaware of specific interviews being scheduled in their particular field.

Interview schedules are posted in advance. Students must sign up for a specific hour to meet with the representative.

The interview schedules are posted on the Placement Office's bulletin board in the Student Services Building across from the Placement Office.

Read Bulletin Board

"The students must read or observe this bulletin board frequently to keep up with positions that are opening and to keep abreast of interviews being scheduled," he stressed.

Although the interviews are primarily for seniors, juniors can also take part. "We are trying to encourage juniors to take part in interviewing. This way it will let them take two shots at a company and will give the students an opportunity to see what it is all about."

Brochures and informational data from more than 50 companies are on file in the Placement Office for student use.

The Placement Office is a member of the College Placement Council. This organization publishes the College Placement Annual which lists corporations, their personnel needs, the proper channel for seeking employment by the corporations, and information of geographical locations of the jobs.

Salary Schedules

The CPC also issues a quarterly report on low, medium, and high salaries in the various industries. Mr. Warner explained that a student could look at this chart and "see what his salary would be."

"This year we are especially interested with seniors completing their SCAN application." SCAN stands for the Student Career Automated Network. This is a computerized system of colleges and corporations whereby a student is able to have his credentials looked over by a computer system.

In this way, students would have more opportunities for possible positions available other than by just interviews.

This is an experimental program and Wilmington College is one of the participating colleges. "There is no charge for this service," Mr. Warner emphasized. "A student might find something they had not even thought about."

Part Time Jobs

As well as finding positions for graduating seniors, the Placement Office also assists students in finding part time jobs in the area during the year. "Voluntary phone calls come to us asking if we have a student who might need a job. We then make this opportunity known to the students."

A listing of the part time jobs presently open can also be found on the office's bulletin board.

One of the most numerous requests the office received in this area is for baby sitters. "The most peculiar one we had was someone who called and wanted someone to make the end of bullets," he said.

But he commented, "We've really been successful with this thing."

IFC Celebrates Greek Week

During the week of Nov. 6 through 12, the Inter-Fraternity Council (I.F.C.), celebrated Greek Week. The week ended with the Second Annual I.F.C. Week-End festivities.

Pi Sigma Mu and Sigma Phi Kappa Fraternities, and Chi Sigma Phi Sorority, participated in the activities, which began Friday afternoon. At 2 p.m., there was a Chariot race between Sigma Phi Kappa and Pi Sigma Mu, with Sigma Phi Kappa emerging victorious.

The Kappas also defeated the Mus in a tug-of-war. Chi Sigma Phi assisted in this contest.

In a tennis match, held Saturday afternoon, Sigma Mu Fraternity defeated Sigma Phi Kappa 6-0. Their winning streak continued in the softball game which followed. The final score was 25-11. Gil Huguley was the winning pitcher. Pitching for Sigma Phi Kappa was Billy Huggins.

A pie-eating contest, scheduled for that afternoon, was canceled, due to fatigue on the part of the participants.

The Misfits provided the music for the I.F.C. Dance Saturday night. Held at the Armory, the dance was open to fraternity and sorority members, pledges, dates, and invited guests.

I.F.C. Greek-End ended Sunday afternoon with a football game between the two Fraternities. With a score of 26-6, Sigma Phi Kappa defeated Pi Sigma Mu. Robert Elliot was outstanding in the Kappa's offense.

Pi Sigma Mu

In appreciation of the parties given to Pi Sigma Mu Fraternity by Sigma Phi Kappa and Chi Sigma Phi, the Pi Sigs invited the other Greek letter societies to attend a pig roast held on Saturday, Nov. 18.

In addition to the pig roast, the Pi Sigs held a "stag" party the same week-end. The party took place on the upper Cape Fear River.

Pi Sigma Mu is planning an Alumni Week-End, to be held during the Wilmington College Homecoming. This week-end will give the old brothers an opportunity to see how Wilmington has progressed in the past few years.

A glimpse at the first annual Greek Week credits Pi Sigma Mu with victories in softball and tennis, while the Kappas were victorious in football, the Chariot race, and the tug-of-war.

Sigma Phi Kappa

"Activity around the Kappa house continues to increase," says Fraternity Brother Al Carrus, "and as the pledge period progresses, we are glad to report splendid progress among our pledges."

During I.F.C. Week-End of Greek Week, Sigma Phi Kappa participated in all of the activities. They were victorious in three of the athletic events, and lost two contests to Pi Sigma Mu.

Outstanding offensive players for the Kappa Football team were as follows: Bob Elliot, Joe Blackburn, Doug O'Hara, and Ed Kuborsak, who were all instrumental in the Kappa scoring effort. Holding the Mus to six points on the defensive line were Bill Huggins, Dwane Midgett, Carmen Aragona, Duffy Honafey, and Al Carrus.

The Kappas are formulating plans for their Winter Rush. Upcoming socials are a keg party, Tom Jones party, and band party.

BULLETIN BOARD — The secretary in the Placement Office, Mrs. Janice Medlin, adds new information to the placement bulletin board located in the student services building.

Nursing Students Organize Association

"The organization's purpose is not social, but is to serve as a student organization," said Connie Ferguson, newly elected president of the Student Nursing Association.

The club was organized through the initiative of the 13 second-year nursing students. First year nursing students will soon be invited to join the club.

The club is open to any student participating in the James Walker Memorial Associate Degree program.

The Club hopes to stimulate interest in graduate nursing programs and to serve as a link of communication between the student nurse and the professional organizations, according to Connie.

"We also hope to promote professional and social unity with the college and to promote a close bond among the student nurses," she added.

The first project of the club was to help the public health department administer the measles vaccine during a city wide clinic held recently.

Other officers of the club are Donna Padgett, first vice president; Lindy Raebly, second vice president; and Suzanne Golding, treasurer. Advisor for the club is Miss Dorothy Dixon.

'Hawk Cagers To Play 11 Games At Home

The Wilmington College basketball team opens its 1967-68 season November, 29, a Thursday. The first game is a home stand against Atlantic Christian College, rated as one of the south's outstanding small college basketball threats.

An added feature of the opening game is "Ladies Night" with all women admitted free when accompanied by a paying spectator. Wilmington College students will be admitted by their student activity cards. Game time at the college gym is 8:00 p.m.

The "Seahawks" 25-game schedule will include eleven home games.

ON THE SIDELINES

with GIL HUGULEY

Sitting in front of our Boob-tube on a Saturday afternoon, unshaven, feet up, with the day's sports pages strewn about our lounge chair, and Bud in hand, the announcer says: "Everybody's excited about football this afternoon—just listen to those sixty-five thousand screaming Tiger fans—'GRAAAAOOW!'"

Just sitting there, one question intrudes through the tube-induced stupor and tweaks us on the brain: "How many of those sixty-five thousand screaming Tiger fans know what's happening down there on the field?"

It really isn't such an idiotic question. Attendance at sporting events is rising, but there is nothing to indicate that true interest in sports is also rising. In fact, it appears that it is declining.

We base this assumption on the fact, that, as a nation, we are becoming more and more soft. We don't participate like we used to. It used to be that a kid learned the mechanics of sports by playing, but they don't play as much as they used to.

We don't play as much as we used to, so we are softer, so we go watch in increasing numbers? The only conclusion this can lead to is that the percentage of ignorant spectators is increasing.

Football is a prime example. Go to any game, anywhere, anytime, and there will be a large segment of the spectators who can't tell you the score, much less what color jerseys the home team is wearing. Maybe this is not a fair example, because football is traditionally a man's sport. And we will have to admit that the worst offenders at football games are the gals.

There are other sports (all of them) which have ignorant spectators — people who don't know how the game is played or even what the objectives of the game is. We are reminded of the UNC student who was asked how he thought the 1967 World Series would come out. He said: "I think the Tar Heels will win it." Honest Injun!

Something drives us to attend athletic contests, be they profession, college, or sandlot. . . and apparently it doesn't matter whether we understand the game or not. Is it the desire to be a part of the crowd that motivates us to fill the stadiums of our land with such lemming-like ignorance?

Whatever it is, it's a shame. We have found that it's much more fun to get involved. If one takes the time to understand just a little about the game, it makes it twice as much fun to watch.

Isn't it a little lonely sitting there in all your ignorant glory? Aren't you a little isolated from those around you? It must be lonely. You can't discuss the game. . . you're afraid to yell at the umpire because he might be right. In fact, about all you can do is ask your date, "How about some more popcorn?"

We've got basketball season fast-approaching here at Wilmington College. First of all, let's fill up the gym for all the home games. . . you'll like it, and after all, the more the merrier. Secondly, go— even if you don't understand basketball. If you don't know—ask. You'll find that the people who know most about sports are the ones who are most eager to share that knowledge with you so you too can enjoy the game.

Spectating can be fun, but ferociousakes, give it a chance! We'll guarantee that you'll be glad you did.

WEEDING — Hap Hazard, George Hodnett, Rod Andrew, and Rod McQuire work on one of their projects for the school to prove their worth to the school so that their organization will be recognized.

New Greek Organization Seeks Official Recognition

"I thought Wilmington College needed a third fraternity," said Hap Hazard, who is one of the founders of the organization now seeking recognition from the school as the Delta Epsilon Fraternity.

Hap believes a third fraternity on campus will give boys on campus a third choice. This is a step along the road to getting more fraternities. Eventually we will get more since the fraternity system will have to grow along with the school," said Hap.

"We're not trying to form something completely different from the fraternity system now present, but what we are trying to do is to start something in balance with what is already here."

Increase Competition

"A third fraternity on campus will strengthen the fraternity system as well as increasing the competition between the present fraternities and at the same time, reduce the rivalry," commented Ed Sooy, member of the organization.

"Another fraternity will provide a greater choice for freshmen desiring to join a fraternity and it will heighten the standards of the existing fraternities," Ed added.

To be recognized by the school the organization, according to Hap, is going to have to prove the value of the organization and be accepted by the Student Affairs Committee.

To prove their value, the organization is presently working on several projects involving the campus and the local community.

Donates Blood

Several weeks ago the boys donated 20 pints of blood to a young girl who was going to undergo heart surgery. "We felt this was necessary since there had been a call for blood for three weeks and only one pint had been given," Hap commented.

"We went to the City Parks commission to see if there was something we could do. They said there was a need for someone to help get rid of the poison ivy from Greenfield Gardens," Hap continued.

"Yes, we're going out there with gloves and spray guns," said Ed.

In this project, the organization hopes to have the aid of the existing fraternities on campus. "We are going to speak to the IFC," said Hap, "and see if we can bring all of our strength together."

Cleans Flower Beds

The organization also has a current campus beautification project which is weeding the flower beds behind Kenan and keeping up this area during the year.

"We are seeking to establish a system by which the Greek organizations of the year would be decided. This is to promote friendly competition between the fraternities and sororities—in hopes that it will better the existing groups," said Hap.

The organization is also planning to give a scholarship to some girl or boy—not necessarily a member of the organization—each quarter. We hope by establishing a scholarship other fraternities will follow suit and establish one of their own," says Hap.

"As we grow our scholarship will grow." The scholarship will be $33.33 per quarter. "We thought this was a reasonable figure," Hap asserted.

Creates Unity

Hap says that one of the main purposes of the organization is to help create better unity, to help incorporate the school, the fraternities, and the students. "We feel the community should come first, then the college, the other greek organizations, and last of all, the fraternity itself."

"We feel the greatest thing would be helping to do these other things—and then helping ourselves last,"—he declared.

"We feel as if we have a good constitution," said Hap. "This is because the other fraternities gave us the good points from their constitutions, and we combined these points within the framework of our constitution."

Once the organization is recognized as a fraternity, the boys hope to become nationally affiliated with Kappa Alpha, a southern fraternity.

Directories Appear Early

Telephone directories were out before January for the first time in two years. The directories appeared on campus sometime two weeks ago.

Chairman of this year's directory was junior Gaye Godwin. Gaye was appointed chairman last Spring by Student Body President Mike Meier. "Mike asked me if I would take the responsibility of doing the directory," said Gaye.

Gaye began work on the directory the first week of this quarter, when she chose her committee members. "I asked people I knew I could rely on."

Different letters of the alphabet were assigned to the committee members who copied the names, addresses, and phone numbers from the registration cards at their convenience.

"It didn't take the committee to get the names longer than a week. We didn't start doing this until the third week of school because we couldn't get into the office until then," said Gaye.

"I had two girls — juniors Gail O'Rourke and Jean Moore — do the typing and I proofread as best I could."

"I got pretty disappointed with the way things were done, so I didn't proof the entire thing," said Gaye. "Students did things like neglecting to put in their complete phone number — they would do things like leave out the last one or two digits of the number."

Gaye continued, "I'd have to dial the number excepting the absent number and substituting a number until I found out the correct number." When asked if this was not a lot of work, Gaye answered, "You'd just best believe it."

"People would not even put down their numbers at all, people I knew who had phones. I'd have to hunt the entire number down."

"People would also leave out part of their address as well as not put down their class standing," she added.

Due to the printing company, the telephone directories appeared on campus a week later than when they were supposed to be delivered. The company had promised to get them finished by Nov. 7, but I didn't get them until Nov. 13."

"I don't know how they did it," said Gaye, still speaking about the printing company, "but they left out the entire 'Mc' section from the directory. I have to apologize for that."

The cover of the directory, designed by sophomore Elsie Bosso, also did not come out the way it was planned. Credit to the Student Government was supposed to appear on the cover. "I told them when they did the work on the cover to call me and let me see what they had done, but they never called me. The first time I saw the cover was the day I picked it up."

"The only really good thing about the directory," said Gaye, "is that it appeared early this year."

"I've got a few recommendations for next year," stated Gaye. "One is that advertising for the directory begin before school starts. The club that is going to sell the ads for the directory should be chosen in the spring so that they can begin working on the ads early in September, at least."

"I would also suggest having an entirely different committee for proofreading. In other words, have two separate committees within the main committee."

Other members of the committee are Connie Branch, Ellen Dunn, Milta Grainger, Donna Lister, Brenda Shields, Kathy Bradley, Debbie Brown, Mary LeGwin, Mike Sheehan, Betty Smith, and Jeff Symmes. Circle K handled the advertising for the directory.

BSU Tutorial Project Open To All Students

Members of the Baptist Student Union began their tutorial project Nov. 18 by going down to the Opportunities Incorporated Center on North Fourth Street and working with the children in that area.

The social actions committee of the club, headed by Ethrage Walters, began this project. But although the BSU began this project, it is not going to be confined to club members only. In fact, the club hopes that any student in the school will help with the project.

The only qualifications for tutoring is just that the student should have a concern for these people he would be helping, according to Ethrage. "Most college students should be able to teach this age group because it is going to be children in the elementary age group and no higher than junior high."

"We want to do this because we are concerned with these people—not because we are concerned with ourselves," said Ethrage. "I think this is one of the main positive actions that we can take."

"What we want to do is to make this project a project of involvement. This means more than just a program of teaching children."

"We want to ask that anyone in the college can help," stressed Ethrage. Anyone that is interested in working with the BSU on this project should contact Ethrage.

The BSU does hope that once the project is started, enough people will volunteer to help with it so that it will never have to be dropped. "We will be doing more harm by going down there and getting the children interested and then dropping them than by never going at all."

"We are going also to take the children on field trips. The secretary at the center told us that some of the children, even though they live so near the ocean, have never actually seen it," he mentioned.

A budget of $50 has been set aside from the BSU treasury for this project and they may occasionally use money from the federal funds.

The tutors will be assigned by Ethrage to one or more tutees. "It may take a great deal of work," said Ethrage, "but we think it is a good idea."

At present, the tutors will only be working on Saturdays, but it is possible that at a later date, once the original tutors see how well the project is going over, that it may be expanded into weekday afternoons.

College Gains Accreditation

Wilmington College received word of its membership in the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Nov. 29. The accreditation of the college as a four year institution climaxed three years of work leading up to this goal.

The college was previously accredited by the Southern Association in 1952 as a junior college, but since 1963 the college has been operating as a four-year state supported school with junior college accreditation.

Self-Study Done

The first step towards gaining accreditation for the college began in 1966 when the departmental self-study reports were completed. These reports comprised a detailed study of each academic department by members of the department themselves and were submitted to the Association.

Students as well as faculty were able to examine themselves. In April of 1966 the study body assembled to complete a questionnaire which was used by the Association in its evaluation of all areas of the College as it affects the students.

In April, 1967, a special evaluation committee from the Association was on campus. This committee's appearance on campus completed the last leg of the college's journey towards accreditation.

tion.

Committee Visits

During the time the committee was on campus, it examined special activities, physical plant, student personnel, library, faculty, financial resources, education program, and purpose-organization and administration.

This fact-finding group for the Association was investigating faculty qualifications in terms of degree spread, number of doctorates, and grading system; financial resources compared to the Association minimum per student; and curriculum adequacy, majors, and degree requirements.

The committee was attempting to determine whether or not the College's administration and Board of Trustees have recognized the College's purpose and were moving towards it.

The last step in the journey towards the accreditation of the college was the annual business meeting in Dallas, Texas, attended by Dr. William M. Randall and Dean J. Paul Reynolds.

Requirements Met

Requirements of the Association demand that a four year college seeking membership graduate at least two, and preferably four classes before it can be considered for accreditation. To compensate for this ruling, the college's accreditation has been made effective retroactive to the first senior graduating class in 1965.

For students in member colleges, accreditation can ease acceptance to graduate and professional schools and transfer to other colleges, and it can also exert a major influence on graduates' employment opportunities.

To retain accreditation, the College will be re-examined by the Association every ten years, and must prove itself a continually improving institution, meeting the standards required of all members.

The Southern Association is a voluntary organization composed of 450 institutions in 11 states and parts of Mexico and Central America which seeks to preserve and foster quality education.

Nice To Have It Official

"We're fully accredited, no strings attached," was the message from Dr. William M. Randall, college president, late afternoon Nov. 29.

This message was given to the school by Mrs. Randall, whom Dr. Randall had telephoned from Dallas.

"It's a marvelous milestone," said Dean Helena Cheek, following the call. "Delightful. There is now no question of where our graduates can go to graduate school."

"We will definitely have more growth now," declared Dean Thomas P. Brown. "I'm very pleased and very excited for Wilmington College."

"I'm tickled to death," said James Price, business manager for the college.

"We're all delighted, it means a lot to us," said Dean Marshall Crews. It means more to graduates than anyone else, really. No one can question the quality of your education now."

"It's very nice to have it official," stated English teacher Thomas C. McCall. Mr. McCall mentioned how glad he was that the official accreditation was gotten while Dr. Randall was still president. "We were so lucky to have someone like him to come here when we were so little; I'm glad it came before he retires."

"Now I think we'll get more students," said Claude Howell, head of the Art Department, "we've known we were a good school, now it's official!"

Adrian Hurst, of the math department, was "certainly happy to know the accreditation committee has seen fit to certify us for four years' work. I certainly didn't know what the final action of the committee would be, but I have had a strong feeling that we would be accredited when the association met to consider that item of business."

Excited Crowd Greet Randall

The crowd was composed of excited students, faculty, and administrators waiting in the New Hanover County Airport last Thursday night to cheer Dr. William Randall when he returned from the Southern Association meeting.

Dr. Randall, as his wife commented afterwards, was given the "biggest recognition he's ever received."

Despite the plane being an hour late, approximately 250 people waited to sing the "Alma Mater" when Dr. Randall stepped from the plane.

Dr. Randall stood silently as the "Alma Mater" was sung, afterwards walking silently through the double line of people, stopping to shake hands with Adrian Hurst, one of the original faculty members, and to say "Thank you, sir," to the word of congratulations from Student Body President Mike Meier.

Before entering the terminal, Dr. Randall stepped into a waiting car from the Sheriff's department to say a few words to the jubilant crowd. "I'm very much touched, very appreciative. I thank you all for coming out to meet me. I'm very gratified."

Stepping from the car, Dr. Randall was presented with a gift from the Sigma Phi Kappa fraternity.

When Dr. Randall reached the inside of the airport, students stood back so he could see the sign proclaiming him as "The Greatest Seahawk of Them All!" The crowd did not want to believe Dr. Randall when he had said previously there were others who had worked harder than he had to achieve accreditation for the college.

Three cheers were given by the crowd for the man who had worked so diligently towards the accreditation of the college.

While waiting for the plane to come in, the crowd could hardly contain its nervousness and excitement. People continued going outside the airport to search the sky to see if the plane was coming and then rushing back inside out of the cold.

No one seemed to be able to stand still. The only time the general milling around stopped was when senior Sharon Blake and junior David Allen called for a practice singing of the "Alma Mater."

When a plane arrived, everyone rushed outside, only to turn back disappointed with the words "false alarm, wrong plane."

But when Dr. Randall's plane did arrive, everyone ran outside, each person trying to be in front to catch the expression on Dr. Randall's face when he saw the people come to meet him. One faculty member rushing to the front exclaimed, "He won't believe it, he's going to look around to see what celebrity has been on the plane!"

Dr. Randall afterwards said he had no idea such a reception was being planned for him.

The cheering waiting crowd at the airport was mainly organized during the day Thursday by David Warner, head of the college's public relations, and several students, notably Hap Hazard, who had several signs made as well as running off copies of the "Alma Mater" and finding someone to lead the singing of it.

"I was very surprised," said Dr. Randall as he left the airport.

Science Department Presents Lecture Series

by Carrie Davis

"This lecture series serves a lot of things. A lot of us like to talk," quipped Asst. Prof. Lewis E. Nance, when asked about the series of science lectures which are being presented by the Wilmington College Faculty.

These lectures, open to the public, are of special interest to upperclassmen at Wilmington College. Topics for these lectures are chemistry and chemically oriented physics and biology.

Mr. Nance, who scheduled the series, stated, "This series of lectures is oriented toward chemical phenomena. The subjects of the lectures are of a specialized nature in that one would probably not have scheduled time in the course of classroom work to develop the concepts fully. Also, they are oriented, in general, to the person who has finished some college chemistry."

The first lecture of the series, given by Dr. Daniel Plyer, was entitled, "Features of the Maleic Hydrazide Molecule Associated With Its Plants Growth in Inhibiting Properties." It was held in Hoggard Hall on Oct. 31.

Dr. Plyer discussed the relationship of the structure of MH and its derivatives with possible mechanisms of reaction with the plant cell that would cause inhibition growth. The value of this information is well used by the tobacco farmer who uses certain MH compounds to stop the growth of the tobacco plant and consequently stop sucker growth. Dr. Plyer has done extensive work in MH research.

The next lecture will be at 7:30 on Jan. 9. Presented by Mr. Nance, the lecture will be on the subject, "New and Old Quantum Theories of Atomic Structure."

According to Mr. Nance, "The quantum theory was 'uncovered' by Max Planck who was analyzing some data on black body radiation which refused to be resolved by classical methods. Planck arbitrarily pronounced that energy had to be released in bundles which were called quanta."

Planck did not believe his results and spent many years trying to convince himself that his mathematical results were physically valid. Other physicists were already convinced, and had done other work in which Planck's constant "h" popped up over and over again.

Further developments showed that Newton's classical mechanics theory was only an approximation, and that the quantum theory holds there. The structure of the atom from Nells Bohr to Irwin Schrodinger will be discussed by Mr. Nance.

A coffee hour follows each lecture in the series.

CAN YOU DO IT — Hap Hazard (l) and Bessie Cherry, and Mrs. Helena Cheek check with Miss Gwen Culbreth in the public relations office to see if she will be able to run off copies of the "Alma Mater" to be used at the greeting of Dr. Randall. (Photo by Reilly)

Accreditation

Twenty years ago Wilmington College was a county, tax-supported school without even a building of its own. Today Wilmington College is a fully accredited state supported school with a campus which is still growing and increasing in size.

In 1947 Wilmington College had 21 faculty members and only 160 students. Ninety-six men and women compose the faculty for the 1250 students on campus this year.

Wilmington College is growing. Accreditation of the college is only another step in the growth of the college to what could become one of the better schools in this state.

Accreditation, as president Randall said last year, is the stamp of approval placed on a college. But just because this approval is given, is no reason for the school to stand still. But there is little doubt the school will ever be standing still. Presently, two buildings are under construction as well as three other buildings in the planning stages.

Just as the school is growing by buildings, the curriculum is also expanding. Students now have an opportunity to select a major field of study from 12 different areas and a minor from 19 areas. Major programs in art, philosophy, engineering, science, library science, and home economics are expected to soon be added to the curriculum.

By 1969 the first dormitories are expected to be finished. These dorms will not only add to the enrollment of the college, but will be a good factor in getting more students involved with campus organizations.

In the year 2000 when the Civitan time capsule will be opened, it will be very interesting to see how much this college has changed from today to the future day.

Congratulations

The long awaited word came in last Wednesday: Wilmington College is accredited. Surely someone should be thanked and congratulated for this, but who should be thanked? Is it the administration, faculty, or students. Each contributed their share towards this goal. But, in behalf of the students, Congratulations, Dr. Randall!

Sing

It was interesting to note that no one seems to know the alma mater of this school. Many students remember hearing it sung during their Freshmen Orientation, but they have not heard it since. It was amusing during a chorus program last Spring that when the Chorus began to sing the words to the alma mater, people began standing up, but didn't know why they were standing. It has been suggested the alma mater be sung at ball games, led by the cheerleaders. In order for you to know the words, here they are:

Hail we proudly sing to thee who guides our green and gold.

Though future years may part us, fond memories we shall hold.

For our hearts will cherish all your service done.

All Hail to thee Alma Mater — Praise to Wilmington.

Here we stand as one together voices raised in song.

Our loyal hearts will praise thee as God doth lead us on.

For our hearts will cherish all your service done.

All Hail to thee Alma Mater — Praise to Wilmington.

From All Of Us

This is the last edition of this year. Look for us again sometime in January. We would tell you an exact date, but since we never seem to know when we are going to come out — despite our best efforts — we can't. But mainly we just want to tell you to have an enjoyable holiday and to come back prepared to show the same good spirit we noticed this quarter. And from all of us to all of you: Merry Christmas, Happy New Year!

To the Editor:

Cliff Barrows' column in the last issue of the Seahawk ("Burrowing With Barrows") was a frightening example of an earnest undergraduate imprisoned in words he doesn't understand. He has a good cause; he will refuse to serve in Viet Nam when his draft number comes up in two years. The central theme of the article is that this is not inconsistent with being a loyal American. We might very well agree with him, if we knew his reasoning, if any, is completely lost in garbled language. All one can gather from his labored and labyrinthine language is that he is not going to serve in the war because he doesn't want to.

Exhibit one (numbers refer to comments):

"As an American, meaning a person born and raised in this country but not the government(1), they(2) will not let their land be so far from their basic beliefs(3) that the two, country and government, become the same and the people be castrated(4) in the process.(5)

(1) Does the syntax mean that an American is not the government or that an American is not one who has been born and raised in the government? No one has ever been born and raised in that alien land called the Government because there is no such land.

(2) What they? a pronoun must have an antecedent, a referent — it must refer to something.

(3) A "land" does not have basic beliefs; people do. To what specific beliefs does he refer? I bet even Mr. Barrows doesn't know what he's talking about.

(4) To castrate a whole "people" — 200,000,000 strong — is probably a physical impossibility, certainly a biological one. The reader loses confidence in a writer who pushes two words together that don't belong together.

(5) What process? Mr. Barrows' penchant for abstract nouns without specific referents confuses the reader before putting him to sleep. Is he talking about totalitarianism? Fascism? Totalitarianism? If so, why doesn't he say so and explain what he means?

And then our columnist, who hangs up his shingle as an undergraduate "moralist", gives us this gem of ethical wisdom: "Morals must become laws rather than internal dictates, and laws are nothing but exterior influences which may be changed to suit impersonal whims." Our "moralist" is all for "morals" provided they are neither internal nor external Barrows is burrowing in his own verbal garbage. Is he talking about the need to legislate morality? Or is he talking about unwritten, universal moral laws?

He could have — indeed he could have — invoked the Golden Rule as formulated by Christ and Confucius (the latter put it very pointedly by stating it negatively: don't do to your neighbor what you wouldn't want him to do to you). Then, as a "moralist" he should have brought in Kant's categorical imperative: "act in such a way, Cliff Barrows, that you could want your action to become universal law." Then he should have debated the question raised by Jean-Paul Sartre's formulation of the golden rule and the categorical imperative: "If I refused to serve in the military, what would happen if everyone did the same?"

The latter question is inescapable in every moral decision. And the following questions are inescapable when the specific moral problem is the war in Viet Nam: (1) is this particular war justified in terms of national security? (2) is it inconsistent with the "law" of love? is honoring a diplomatic agreement more important than saving thousands of lives? (4) what are the alternatives?

But these questions — the real ones — Mr. Barrows neither answers nor even asks.

Burrowing With Barrow

By CLIFF BARROW

I received a letter this week about my last column that for a time completely perplexed me. It was sophomoric in intent, rambling and incoherent, purely amateurish in its efforts at criticism; yet, I have known and respected the author for quite some time. Dr. Lloyd Bishop is a very well educated man, per se in his pursuit of education, and terse and concise in his manner of criticism and explication. This forced me to search for the reason that would lead to such an unorganized and unprofessional treatment by such an intense young man. It was impossible that he not understand my article as he picked out for dissection the two most pregnant statements. Then, the only reason for a clumsy effort by a graceful writer must be in hopes for a reply, one that will underscore once again the major points to which both he and I are painfully aware.

A land is a section of ground upon which one lives; and, if he is lucky, was raised. He should come to love this land and what it has taught him to stand for. A poignant example in modern times, as far as America is concerned, is Woody Guthrie. He had traveled this country many times from coast to coast and knew it as well as any man could. From this knowledge came many songs that spoke of a living land, a land that was in its people. This America is a land of beauty and youthful strength, virtue and unshamed purity. It may also be — but not necessarily — a land of military might and the invincibility of the capitalist system. This is America, not just Guthrie's but everyone's. Yet, this love of land often led Guthrie into direct conflict with the government of the people.

Today there are those who would intentionally mislead the people into thinking that the government and the land automatically stand for the same principles. It is in this process, the intentional misleading, that would mentally castrate the Woody Guthries if it was allowed to continue. Hitler did this to 60,000,000 Germans in the '30's. He did not take away their ability to produce offspring. He diverted their true obligation to the land by denouncing all who questioned governmental policy as traitors to the Fatherland. He took away their right to think and dissent, castrating or alienating that one facet of man that makes him more than an animal.

This land has given us a set of morals. The government has given us a set of laws. They are not necessarily identical. Laws are chameleonic, movable with the fashions of time. The morals of America are not. They are made of the flesh and blood of the land that so awed the settler that he tried to make them into laws, those of equality, free speech, freedom of religion, freedom of assembly and protest, the obligation of government to the people, the obligation of the people to the morals which the land inspired. Yet making these laws did not make them easier to admit to. And enforcing the laws did less so as may be seen by the Civil Rights movement and this nation's reaction to it.

From here to the condemnation of war is a moral step. Some feel that these freedoms must be preserved at any costs. (It is a provoking thought to that ensnare one's self to the principle of freedom is to be no longer free — and a debatable one.) But I am Christian; and one of the basic tenets of Christianity is that though there are principles worth dying for, there are none worth killing for. If all mankind refused to serve the military, there could be no more war. Then, the reasoning out or rationalization of men's problems between themselves would be a necessity, not an alternative or fine and noble final note in history after the best of a generation has been buried under blood.

No amount of national security, no diplomatic agreements, no twisted law of love is worth one human life — more so to all Americans if the blood should be on the hands of America. There must be an immediate and unconditional halt to the bombing of North Vietnam; an immediate statement to the "enemy" that we are willing to discuss peace with any official, any time, at any place; an immediate end to all offensive actions by American and South Vietnamese ground forces; and, an immediate and, if necessary, humble plea to both Russia and Red China that they help persuade Hanoi to the conference table. These are not alternatives. These are the only true and honest manners by which America may end a war that she should never have been led into.

Fine Arts In Review

by Randy Del Lago

During the past quarter, the Fine Arts Committee has presented several 'vintage' motion pictures. Beginning in January, however, though we will continue to feature an occasional film 'classic', our main concern will turn to newer films, films of today and about today. The subjects will range from religion (THE SEVENTH SEAL) to politics (THE MOUSE THAT ROARED), from sex (L'AVVENTURA) to sociology (THE LORD OF THE FLIES). In fact, they will touch upon every contemporary concern and interest. And for this reason, I am confident that everyone will find something to his liking in those films of the coming months.

The first film of the new year, to be presented on Friday, January 12, at 8:30 p.m., is Ingmar Bergman's THE SEVENTH SEAL. This Swedish picture presents an incisive study of modern man, overwhelmed by the meaninglessness and despair of everyday life, yet nevertheless hesitant to relinquish all of his faith, all of his hope.

If you have not already seen our film presentations a habit, this would be an excellent time to begin . . .

Wilmington lived up to all hopes and the game was close . . . very close. But it didn't look that way at the beginning. Controlling the starting jump the Bulldogs jumped to an early lead which they held during the entire first half. At the half-time the score was an unpromising 53-41 in favor of the Bulldogs. The Seahawks were never more than 17 points behind throughout the game but just seemed to be unable to hold the

The second half was a different story, however, and the Seahawks came alive and rallied to tie the score at 85-85 with only 19 seconds remaining.

Jim Hall, a Seahawk starter, tied up the game with only 19 seconds remaining in regular play. The Seahawks took the ball on a bad pass with four seconds remaining but were unable to make their shot good. The game went into overtime and gave Coach Bill Brooks a chance to give the team some last minute instructions on strategy. At this time the crowd was shouting encouragement in a marvelous display of school spirit. The noise was deafening as the teams returned to the court to continue the game.

The Bulldogs took the lead at 85-87 on foul shots and Jim Hall came back with a goal to tie it up again at 87-87. The lead changed hands three more times as the period ticked away and the teams battled for the ball. Goals by Jerry Martin and Mike McQuay kept the Wilmington College hopes alive.

With less than 10 seconds left in the overtime, ACC went ahead on foul shots and the score was 94-93. Just as the time ran out the score was 96-93 and the disappointment of the Wilmington fans was apparent in the silence. The final minutes of the game had been too exciting and the letdown was hard to take.

Jim Hall and Mike McQuay each collected 22 points to lead the Seahawk offense in scoring, while Frank Bua netted 15. Jerry Martin collected 13 and Butch Bud accounted for 15.

Wilmington College goes on the road for its next two games of the season, meeting Oglethorpe University Dec. 2 at Atlanta, Ga., and Jacksonville University at Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 4.

Dr. WILLIAM WAGONER ... New College President

Succeeds Randall

Trustees Name Wagoner As College President

The Board of Trustees of Wilmington College ended months of speculation December 15 with the announcement that Dr. William Wagoner, 40, New Hanover County school superintendent, will succeed Dr. William M. Randall as president of the college.

Dr. Wagoner will be the fourth president of the college. He will assume the duties of the office June 30.

Dr. Randall, 70, announced his resignation from the post last February. He intends to continue teaching and do research.

Dr. Randall assumed the post in 1958, succeeding the late Dr. John T. Hoggard. The first president of the college was Thomas T. Hamilton, who held it during the late 1940s.

The announcement of Dr. Wagoner's selection was made by Wilmington Banker Fred B. Graham, who heads the college's Executive Committee. He said Wagoner was chosen unanimously by the Board of Trustees as "the best man qualified to become President of Wilmington College at this time."

Graham also cited Wagoner's "deep, broad, and varied" academic and scholastic background.

He added that prospective candidates for the post from in and out of North Carolina had been "carefully screened and considered" since February.

Wagoner is the youngest president in the history of the college. He took the helm of the New Hanover School System at the ripe old age of 34 in 1961, has seen it grow from 16,000 to 19,000 students. He is a proponent of public kindergartens and, like most other educators, higher teacher salaries.

The new president graduated from Washington, N. C. High School in 1945, just in time to serve in the Navy in the waning months of World War II. After a year of service, he was released and entered Wake Forest College (now Wake Forest University) where he graduated cum laude in 1949 with a B.S. in physics and chemistry. He did his practice teaching in Chapel Hill and, while teaching at Washington High School in 1950-53, earned his MA degree in history from East Carolina College.

He then became assistant principal at Elizabeth City High School and, in 1956, was principal of the Hattie Harrie Elementary School. That year he enrolled as a teaching fellow at the University of North Carolina. His doctoral dissertation was published by the North Carolina Institute of Government. The title was "County Commissioners and Public Schools of North Carolina."

In national educational affairs, Wagoner is on the central committee of the National Education Association to direct the Overseas School-to-School Program. Two years ago, he went to Athens, Greece, to visit and evaluate the school there which is New Hanover High School's sister school under this program.

He is also a member of the Board of Directors of the Association for the Advancement of International Education.

On the North Carolina scene, Wagoner has held a number of posts, including a current stint as president of the North Carolina Education Association's Division of Superintendents.

He was involved in controversy on the state scene when the N. C. Advancement School, of which he was Chairman of the Board of Governors, was totally revamped last fall by the State Board of Education.

On the local scene, he is a member of the Board of Directors of Family Service, and a member of Community Council, the Wilmington Kiwanis Club, and the Cape Fear Country Club.

Other organizations Dr. Wagoner belongs to include the National Education Association, the American Association of School Administrators and the Horace Mann League.

Dr. Wagoner is married to the former Madeline Hodges of Washington, who is a music specialist with the New Hanover schools. They have two sons, Michael, 14, and Robin, 10.

Dance Committee Plans Homecoming

"Green and Gold Day" Friday, February 2 will signify the beginning of this year's Homecoming festivities.

Other activities for this year's homecoming will include a film, a bonfire, two dances, and the Homecoming basketball game.

On Thursday night before Homecoming actually begins, the Fine Arts Committee plans to present the comedy The Mouse That Roared starring Peter Sellers in the Kenan Lecture Room at 8:30 p.m.

On Friday the cheerleaders will be wearing their uniforms all day to boost school spirit. During the day they will also be passing out copies of the cheers to be used during the Homecoming game so students will become familiar with these.

Also on Friday, the Dance Committee is urging that all students wear clothing in the school colors, green and gold. "This will also help to get up spirit," says Dale Donahue, co-chairman of the Dance Committee.

The dance Friday night will be held at the YMCA on Market Street. This dance will go from 8:30 p.m. - 12:30 p.m. The music for dancing will be furnished by the Tropics.

Also appearing that night will be The Drifters as well as the Robertson Brothers. "The Dance Committee is very delighted to present both of these groups for Friday night's entertainment," said Dale.

The cheerleaders will conduct a rally at the bonfire Saturday night at 7 p.m. The bonfire, many members of the Engineer's Club will be burned in the "South" parking lot.

Following the bonfire will be the Homecoming basketball game. The Seahawks meet with Auburn. During halftime, the Homecoming Court will be presented. The Homecoming Queen will be announced. Mary LeQuin, who is in charge of halftime activities, will be crowned. According to Mary, sophomore Hugh Newkirk will be master of ceremonies at that time.

After the game, a dance in the Pub will begin and last until 2 a.m. The Innmen will play for this dance.

Dress for the Friday night Dance will be casual clothes, for Saturday night the dress will be ties and coats for boys, suits for girls. Admission to the dances will be by ID cards. Only Wilco students, their dates, alumni and their dates will be admitted to the two dances.

Head of the Dance Committee is Mark Young, who is also heading the publicity committee for the weekend. Dale is also heading the decorations committee.

Nominations for Homecoming Queen must be turned in today. Election of the Queen will be Jan. 26.

Kenan Foundation Gives College Half Million For Auditorium

To build a 1,000 capacity auditorium, $5 million was presented to college President William Randall Dec. 28 by the Sarah Graham Kenan Foundation.

President of the foundation, Frank H. Kenan, has said the auditorium is to be erected on the college campus for use by the college, the city of Wilmington, and New Hanover County.

According to Mr. Kenan, the foundation hopes the auditorium, which is to be called the Sarah Graham Kenan Memorial Auditorium, will serve not only the college, city, and county, but also the people of Southeastern North Carolina.

"Others may contribute to this project for the purpose of adding additional equipment for use in the facility, subject, of course, to such contributions being acceptable to the original donor and the donees, or their successors, and the State of North Carolina."

When the auditorium is completed, it will become the property of the State since the college is state owned.

Use of the auditorium will be administered by a three-man committee composed of appointees, by the college Board of Trustees, the Wilmington City Council, and the New Hanover County Commissioners.

Dr. Randall has termed the gift "a wonderful thing."

The auditorium has been in the planning stages for more than a year and a half, and preliminary designs for the two-storied structure have been completed by the two architectural firms of Ballard, McKim and Sawyer and Leslie N. Boney Architects.

The building is designed along modified Georgian lines, conforming with existing Wilmington College buildings. It will face N.C. 132 to the left of the present Library Building.

"It is the earnest hope of the foundation," Mr. Kenan said, "that the construction of the building will be commenced as soon as possible, and it would be most gratifying if the auditorium is available for use during the year 1968."

Alan A. Marshall, member of the Board of Trustees and director of the foundation, said that a moveable screen in the auditorium will allow for either capacity audiences or smaller groups.

Clubs To Sponsor Girls

Nominations for Homecoming Queen must be turned in today. Election of the Queen will be Jan. 26.

Each campus organization may sponsor a girl for this honor. Any girl attending Wilmington College is eligible to be sponsored. Each organization is responsible for obtaining the approval of the girl they wish to sponsor.

By 4:30 today all nominations should be in Dean Brown's office. This nomination should include the candidate's name, the club sponsoring her, and the signature of the club president.

A notice will be posted after today listing all of the candidates and their organizations.

The organizations should campaign for their candidates for Queen. According to Ray Pacer, any public relations necessary to obtain votes for their candidates may be undertaken by the sponsoring organization. However, campaigning may not begin until after nominations are closed.

Posters may be placed in all buildings except in Kenan. Posters should not be placed on plaster, glass, or woodwork. There should be no outside posters.

Wallet sized photos of the candidates should be given to Ray so a poster containing the names and pictures of all of the candidates and their sponsors can be placed at the polls.

The Homecoming Queen election, says Ray, is a small, but very important part of the activities for the weekend. It's success depends upon your efforts and should be one of your major projects."

Civilians Continue Work On Capsule

The deadline for submitting material to be included in the Civitan time capsule has been set for Feb. 22. All campus organizations are invited to submit information about their club to the Civitans to put in the capsule.

The material in the capsule will be historically oriented, according to John Hunt, chairman of the project. "We are going to trace the beginning of the college right on up to the present day. The focus will be on this year since this is the year we were accredited, and also it is the year Dr. William M. Randall and Adrian D. Hurst, the only original faculty member remaining, are retiring," said John.

Clubs Submit Material

The Civitans are not going out to solicit material from the clubs. We would like to put in as much as possible from each club, said John. Civitans have decided the best way to approach this problem is for each club to have a reporter who would be responsible to furnish the material to the Civitans.

The material furnished to the Civitans should include the origin of the club, its past officers, members, and projects. The main point of the information should be about the clubs activities this year.

"We want to express our gratitude to the merchants who are helping us," John stated. "We've contacted several businessmen in town and have obtained pledges from them to get the materials we will need."

Materials Furnished

Wachovia Bank is going to furnish the necessary microfilm for the project. Furnishing the capsule is Hanover Iron Works. Designing the project is Henry Von Olsen. S & G Concrete is going to provide the half ton of concrete necessary for burying the capsule.

The time capsule will merely be a little slab of concrete with a stainless steel container inside holding a microfilm record of the college.

As well as the focus on the campus organizations and the college's growth, the Civitans hope to include a description of the average Wilmington College student, his likes, dislikes, average day, etc. "We are going to be looking all around to find someone who could be called the typical Wilco student," said John.

Publicize Project

At the present time the club is planning to formulate some type of documentary film on the college which we would show on television to publicize our project, and subsequently, the school. "We're hoping to get a lot of attention for this, state-wide, actually," John commented.

Once all of the material for the capsule has been submitted, it will be screened before a screening committee composed of Civitans as well as members from other campus organizations who have submitted material.

Civitans plan to have the project completed by Spring Quarter. "It is going to require a lot of work," said John, "and we are going to need as many people as we can to help us with it."

Adcock Gives Idea
Club adviser, Louis Adcock, originated the idea which he got while attending Louisiana State University last summer.

The capsule will be opened in the year 2000. Some Civitan members wanted to wait 100 years, according to John, but we decided the year 2000 would be best since we would all be around to see it.

Although all of the members of the Civitan club are helping with the project, the primary committee is composed of John, Mike Michel, John Blair, and George Holstein. Volunteers from the Senate who are working with the Civitans are Marian Loftus, Dennis Lennon, and Gaye Godwin.

Pi Sigma Mu

After celebrating Thanksgiving with a dinner prepared by Mrs. Creecy, the Housemother, the Brothers of Pi Sigma Mu began preparations for the Christmas holidays.

"This weekend, activity around the Pi Sig House will be virtually non-existent," said Denny McCaughn, "because the Brothers intend to dedicate the entire weekend to diligent study in preparation for Monday's and Tuesday's exams."

With the close of school, the Pi Sigs intend to do away with academic and dedicate the remainder of Dec. towards getting into the Christmas spirit. There will be caroling and parties throughout the holidays. The grand finale of Pi Sigma Mu's social life will be their Christmas Party, which will be held on Dec. 17.

Pi Sigma Mu is planning Christmas fund raising projects. The money from these projects will be used for the Fraternity, community, and school projects. Students and faculty members are urged to support these projects.

Chi Sigma Phi

"Now that the college has been accredited, we can step-up our plans to become affiliated with a National Sorority," stated Laurel Baker, Chi Sigma Phi President.

In line with these plans, the Sorority invited Mrs. Stephen Pugh for a return visit to Wilmington College and Chi Sigma Phi Sorority. Mrs. Pugh is a national officer in Phi Mu. She was accompanied by Miss Elaine Kruger. On Dec. 1, these officers showed the local sorority a film on Phi Mu.

Chi Sigma Phi plans again to help a needy family. Having taken a basket of food to a family at Thanksgiving, the Sorority plans to take gifts to the same family at Christmas.

Plans are also under way to send Christmas cards and small gifts to servicemen in Viet Nam. The project is being done in conjunction with Radio Station WABC in New York.

The Christmas tree under the stairs in the Student Services Building was presented by Chi Sigma Phi.

A final Christmas project, caroling at local rest homes and hospitals, is also being planned.

Seniors To Buy Silver Service

The Seniors decided to present the school with a silver service as their class project for this year at their class meeting Nov. 29.

A silver service, the class discovered, was something the school needed.

Also with a silver service, the class can buy as much towards it as they have money to buy. "It could be built up later, but for now, we are going to purchase only as much as we have money for," said Jerry Bron, class president.

Revenue to pay for the project will come from class dues. Each senior will pay one dollar each quarter, or three dollars for the year. This money will be collected during registration.

Scourby Not Scholar, But Loves Bible

by John Blair, Jr.

"In the beginning God created the Heavens and the Earth," began The Bible and so began Alexander Scourby, noted actor of the stage and television, in his lecture presented by the Faculty Lecture Series.

"I am not a speaker," continued Scourby. "I am a reader. I am not an expert on The Bible, I am not a theologian, I merely love The Bible."

Doug Swink, head of the Drama Department, introduced Scourby, who was dressed quite conservatively, but very neatly, and created quite a good impression on the estimated 500 people attending the lecture.

Scourby read from the King James version of The Bible because, as he said, "it has some of the greatest literature in the world." When reading The Bible, Scourby stated, one should first read a newer edition with more modern language and then turn to the King James version to see the full beauty of its expression.

Scourby picked different passages from The Bible in accordance to their beauty and not the spiritual significance. Scourby's selections included the creation, Saul's visit to the sorceress, Elijah and the priests of Baal, the 137th psalm, and the sixth verse of Isaiah and Jonah.

Speaking with Scourby after the lecture, he mentioned when planning his reading tour, his first choice was Walt Whitman, but he was told he needed at least two topics; therefore he chose the Bible.

Twenty years ago Scourby did a recording for the American Bible Association in which he used a rather bawdy story. After the record was sent out, this was caught and he was rapidly losing the good grace of the Association until a little seventy year old woman wrote in "after hearing Mr. Scourby's recording I feel twenty years younger."

Scourby emphasized the fact he was not a Bible scholar, but merely in love with its language.

Chorus, Wind Ensemble Performs In Concert

The Music Department presented the Wind Ensemble and College Chorus in their annual winter concert Dec. 5 in Hanover Hall.

The Chorus opened the program by performing the MAGNIFICAT by Marc Antoine Charpentier. Dr. Robert Melton, tenor, was the guest soloist with the chorus. Paul Roderick, baritone, and Loyd Hudson, baritone, shared solo responsibilities with Dr. Melton.

Miss Ann Darden was the accompanist for the Chorus.

The Wind Ensemble, conducted by William Adcock, played the TOCCATA FOR BAND by Erickson, PRELUDE TO CHRISTMAS arranged by Krance, THREE SONGS FOR CHRISTMAS arranged by Grudman, THE CHRISTMAS SUITE arranged by Harold Walters, THE CAROLE OF THE DRUM by Davie-Werle, and THE CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL arranged by LeRoy Anderson.

Kenan Foundation Gives College Half Million For Auditorium

To build a 1,000 capacity auditorium, $5 million was presented to college President William Randall Dec. 28 by the Sarah Graham Kenan Foundation.

President of the foundation, Frank H. Kenan, has said the auditorium is to be erected on the college campus for use by the college, the city of Wilmington, and New Hanover County.

According to Mr. Kenan, the foundation hopes the auditorium, which is to be called the Sarah Graham Kenan Memorial Auditorium, will serve not only the college, city, and county, but also the people of Southeastern North Carolina.

"Others may contribute to this project for the purpose of adding additional equipment for use in the facility, subject, of course, to such contributions being acceptable to the original donor and the donees, or their successors, and the State of North Carolina."

When the auditorium is completed, it will become the property of the State since the college is state owned.

Use of the auditorium will be administered by a three-man committee composed of appointees, by the college Board of Trustees, the Wilmington City Council, and the New Hanover County Commissioners.

Dr. Randall has termed the gift "a wonderful thing."

The auditorium has been in the planning stages for more than a year and a half, and preliminary designs for the two-story structure have been completed by the two architectural firms of Ballard, McKim and Sawyer and Leslie N. Boney Architects.

The building is designed along modified Georgian lines, conforming with existing Wilmington College buildings. It will face N.C. 132 to the left of the present Library Building.

"It is the earnest hope of the foundation," Mr. Kenan said, "that the construction of the building will be commenced as soon as possible, and it would be most gratifying if the auditorium is available for use during the year 1968."

Alan A. Marshall, member of the Board of Trustees and director of the foundation, said that a moveable screen in the auditorium will allow for either capacity audiences or smaller groups.

New Theatre?

Of what good is an auditorium to a drama department wanting a theatre? Wilmington college's drama department needs a theatre. The college drama department has needed a theatre for many year now. They have been forced, since the new campus was built, to make do without one, while still presenting top quality plays. For this, they deserve congratulations. When the Kenan Hall was built, a theatre was included in the blueprints for the building. However, this theatre never materialized in the completed building. What the drama department laudingly calls a theatre today is nothing but a badly built classroom! And before someone stops to say the college presents its plays along with the Thelians, this partnership is about to be ended.

The proposed auditorium is supposed to be used by not only the college, but also the surrounding area. It would seem that the "surrounding area" could find its own funds to build their own civic auditorium which it definitely needs. But a theatre and an auditorium are two different things. For the Faculty Lecture Committee the new auditorium is certainly going to be a better place to present a speaker than the gym was, but unfortunately, just a nice building does not make a theatre. A stage with seats in front of it is not a theatre, even if the outside of the building is modified Georgian architecture!

For an elementary school, perhaps, a theatre could be just a stage with seats in front of it; however, for a college drama department, as head of this department Doug Swink has noted, a theatre is a highly complex laboratory. The proposed auditorium to date has not met any of the true standards of this. Isn't it time for the Board of Trustees to begin worrying about the college — and not the impression the college has on the surrounding area?

Congratulations

The Board of Trustees should be congratulated in selecting such a fine man as Dr. William Wagoner to take over the presidency of the College after Dr. William M. Randall retires. It is especially nice to note that since Dr. Wagoner has been superintendent of the public schools in New Hanover County for several years now, the Board has been able to closely watch his activities and therefore truly know the man they are getting.

Parking Problems

Once upon a time a college was built. As the college grew, the number of students increased. One unfortunate thing about the college was that it had no dorms where the students could live on campus. This meant the students had to live off campus. Since the college was located in a rather remote area of the town, for the students to come to their classes, they had to find some means of transportation. They came, not on foot, not on a bicycle, but in cars. These cars created somewhat of a problem for the student and for the college, also. Where were the growing number of students going to park? Well, two parking areas were paved when the college was built, but these areas soon were taken over by the faculty and by the seniors. And, it must be admitted, there were a few other paved spaces, but only the students who were willing to get out of their warm beds an hour early were able to get their cars into these spaces. The rest of the students were forced to park in areas that cannot be termed the best parking areas in the world. In dry season, these parking areas created a film of dust over the cars, but in wet seasons, the students had to wade to and from their cars. This is a most definite problem facing this campus at this time! What is going to be done about the mud flats? Each rainy day students parking their cars in any of the unpaved (sand) lots on campus need to wear hip boots to get out of their cars. We are asking either the administration or the Board of Trustees if they can do something about this. We do know these lots are not going to be permanent, but until more money is appropriated for the creation of new parking areas which would be paved, what is going to be the fate of the sand lots now in existence. Could not a layer of gravel be put down to use during the present time. Why is it necessary for such lots to exist?

Sounding Off

To the Editor:

I want to congratulate Cliff Barrows on his second article on Viet Nam. It was much clearer and more concrete than the first one, which contained nothing but fuzzy ideas couched in ungrammatical language. As the fog lifted, I could finally see some specific ideas I could agree with. I shall save my praise for later so as to end on a positive note.

I am still baffled by Barrows' utter obliviousness to his inability to express himself clearly, to communicate, to get his ideas across. (One useful technique in communication is redundancy, a rather gross example of which can be found in the preceding sentence.) He still thinks that the two sentences I dissected are his two best. He says they are "pregnant" with meaning. I have asked more than a dozen intelligent people to read both sentences several times, and no one can make any clear sense of them. The sentences may well be pregnant, but the ideas Barrows so proudly fartered had to await delivery until the second article.

But anyway, hats off to Barrows for a greatly improved presentation of a delicate moral issue.

I was particularly pleased with the passage where he explains that while there are principles worth dying for, there are none worth killing for. I think this is true — with one troublesome exception: the principle of self-defense, or the instinct for self-preservation, as it is more often called, which is extremely complex on the international level. I was also pleased with his answer to Sartre's question: What would happen if everyone refused to serve in the military? He is right; there would be no more wars. But does this mean that we should attempt a unilateral "love-in," which would at the same time tempt our "enemies" and leave our country defenseless?

The agonizing thing about this moral situation is its irreducible complexity and ambiguity. I think the most moral solution would be for the United States to assume a purely defensive position (but a powerful one). I agree with Barrows' concrete proposals at the end of his second article, especially the idea of literally pleading for peace even at the expense of national pride.

The decision not to serve in the military should be a private one, unaccompanied by brass bands, noisy marches and self-righteous beating on one's breast. It should be done — if at all — with a full realization of the many conflicting implications of the decision. It should be done in anguish.

FINE ARTS - - IN REVIEW

by RANDY DEL LAGO

On Friday night, January 26, Rudolph Valentino rides again! In THE SON OF THE SHEIK. This silent film classic features the romantic idol of millions in his greatest role, as the tempestuous 'desert lover.'

And, on the same program: W. C. Fields and Mae West (one of the screen's greatest sex goddesses) in MY LITTLE CHICKADEE, a burlesque Western in which a Big City siren, in trying to 'take' the wild and woolly West, just about meets her match. These great film favorites will be shown together on January 26 as our second film program of the year.

I would also like to take this opportunity to recommend a film series that is going to be presented by three Episcopal Church parishes beginning on Sunday, January 21.

The films include:

THE BRIDGE (Jan. 21); THE LONELINESS OF THE LONG DISTANCE RUNNER (Jan. 28); IKIRU (Feb. 4); and HAND IN HAND (Feb. 11). The first three are of special interest.

THE BRIDGE presents a modern view of war; THE LONG DISTANCE RUNNER tells of a rebellious English boy who assumes near-epic proportions in his defiance of Authority; and IKIRU presents what is perhaps the screen's greatest portrayal of an individual's search for the meaning of life.

Having received every major international award, in fact, IKIRU is regarded as one of the very greatest motion pictures ever made.

These films will be shown in St. James Parish Hall at 7 p.m.

Our third film program will feature Peter Sellers (in three different roles!) in the brilliant screen comedy, THE MOUSE THAT ROARED; a sharp satire on power politics. The Grand Duchy of Fenwick, the world's smallest country, relies on its export of wine to America. When it finds it is losing its market to California imitation, it decides to declare war on the United States, with the idea of receiving substantial economic aid handouts after it loses. Their plan is frustrated, however, when the invasion of New York (with the 20-man army of General Fenwick, equipped with medieval armor and bows and arrows) is successful! This film will be shown on Friday night, Feb. 2. All of our films are shown at 8:30 p.m. in the Kenan Building.

Ever examined those six cards you fill out to register each quarter? You should.

There are eight places where you are instructed to fill in your name, including the front of each card and the backs of the cards for the "Office Of The Dean Men/Women" and the "Office Of The Bursar." Now perhaps it is understandable that the "Office Of The Dean of Men/Women" would want you to fill in your name twice. After all, if you use a different name on each side of the card, it is reasonable to assume that you are perhaps an unstable person who might be hostile to your environment and would bear further watching. Why the "Office Of Bursar" wants you to fill in your name twice remains obscure. Incidentally, the "Office Of Bursar" card also has a space on both sides for your telephone number. Perhaps the people in the "Office Of Bursar" have an aversion to turning over cards.

There is a space for your address on five of the cards. The one entitled "Student's Receipt" has no space for the address. Presumably, a person intelligent enough to be enrolled in college is unlikely to forget this handy bit of information. However, if he forgets his name, he need only look on his "Student's Receipt."

On the card for the "Office Of

The Dean Of Men/Women" there is a space with three lines for "Personality Traits" and three lines for "College Activities and Honors" but one is darkly warned "Do Not Write In The Space Below." Makes you feel sort of helpless, doesn't it? Do you have the feeling some shadowy figure in the "Office Of The Dean Of Men/Women," although perhaps totally unschooled in psychology, is gleefully filling in your "Personality Traits" and there is not one thing you can do about it?

There are two spaces on the six cards where one is instructed to fill in hobbies. Now it is understandable for the "Office Of College Relations" to want this information, because if you are elected to the May Court or win a scholarship, it makes it easy for them to hang out a press release, adding "In her spare time she enjoys sewing and skiing," or "His hobbies include golf and hunting."

But the "Office Of The Dean Of Men/Women" also has a space for hobbies. Now that is going too far. "Office Of The Dean Of Men/Women," I hereby serve public notice that my hobbies and interests are none of your damn business!

Next quarter, I'm going to put down something like hunting birds, stuffing hummingbird tongues, and collecting old pancakes. Maybe then, they'll quit asking.

Mike McQuay-Paced Seahawks
Over Roanoke With 17 Rebounds And 23 Points

HAWKS RIP ROANOKE MCQUAY, HALL STAR

The Seahawks, who suffered an 80-71 defeat at the hands of Roanoke College in December, made a comeback for their third win of the season.

With the exception of a couple of the situations at the offset Wilmington College was out front all night.

Mike McQuay, 6-6½ inch freshman and junior Jim Hall shared scoring honors with both sharpshooters scoring 23 points. McQuay produced 16 points in the first half and Hall hit for 15 in the first 20 minutes of action. At halftime the Seahawks had an impressive 45-29 lead.

With McQuay and Chris Speciale setting the pace with 17 and 8 rebounds respectively, the Seahawks led in the department 45-34.

Frank Bua led in assists for the Hawks who used nine players against the Virginians.

Guard Jerry Martin collected 17 points to add to the Seahawk winning total, as Roanoke suffered its fourth loss of the season against seven wins.

The Hawks hit on 34 out of 43 chances at the foul line compared to Roanoke's 31 out of 40. A fine exhibition was put on by the Roanoke leading point-maker, Frank Allen who missed only one free toss out of 16 tries.

Wilmington College led the visitors percentage-wise in shooting from the floor with 26 buckets in 65 tries for an even 40 percent mark. Roanoke with 10 for 30 in the first half and 14 for 39 in the second finished with 24 for 64, for a 37.5 percent mark.

Hall gave the home team a two point sendoff, with Allen coming through to tie it up immediately. McQuay's first bucket put the Hawks ahead, 4-2 but the 6 foot 4 inch Allen dropped another one for a 4-4 count. The first few minutes of the game were tense, back and forth, but after that the Seahawks were ahead to stay, with Roanoke never again coming within 5 points.

With 6:21 left in the first half, Wilmington College pulled away by nine points but the visitors battled back to within 5 points with the score 27-22.

Speciale's first goal, a corner shot by Martin, followed by his free toss and a two pointer by McQuay sent the local team ahead 34-22.

A couple of technical fouls called on Roanoke near the end of the half, helped the Hawks move out front by 16 points at intermission.

A fast ball game on the floor, the finish was decided by the battle at the foul line. Had the Hawks not scored almost point for point from the free throw line the game could have been close.

After tonight's game the Hawks travel to Augusta Georgia, and to Statesboro, Georgia, to play against Georgia Southern before returning home to face St. Andrews College Jan. 16.

What's Happening Brother

By WALT HEALEY, JR.

A year ago Bill Brooks was wallowing through his most horrid campaign since taking over the reign of head basketball coach at Wilmington College in 1951. The Seahawks had a fast start, finished third in their own 1966 Christmas tournament, and had a dismal second half. The final analysis was a 10-18 record.

The prognostication for '67-68 seemed "brighter" with the addition of Chris Speciale 6-7 and Mike McQuay 6-6½ to the 'Hawk frontline. This duo's job was simple — dominate the backboards. Even with the installment of Speciale and McQuay into a lineup with four seasoned veterans—Jim Hall, Frank Bua, Butch Budd, and Jerry Martin — the Seahawks managed to win only two of their first seven games.

"A right jolly old elf", as poet Clement Moore refers to Santa Claus, must have gazed hard at the Christmas letters that Brooks and his assistant coach Earle Allen sent him for the presents they wanted. Upon the return of the Wilmington College cagers to the hardwood January 4, then knocked off Roanoke College. Two days later they performed a similar feat against Campbell which brought their record to 4-5 overall and 2-2 in District 26 competition of the NAIA.

McQuay and Hall paced the 'Hawk offense against Roanoke in a so-so contest. The word for the Campbell victory is "impressive". Brooks had six of his players in double figures paced by Speciale's 19 point performance. McQuay, after recovering from a broken nose just before the holiday break, hit for 37 points and grabbed 26 rebounds in the two contest.

Whatever Old St. Nick installed in each of the ballplayers Christmas gifts he has certainly helped bring out some of the potential the 'Hawk ball club has. No matter what the final record may be Brooks and Allen should surpass last seasons ten victories and maybe then some.

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL OPENS

The 1968 Intramural basketball season opened up January 12 with nine teams participating. With coach Dave Miller as director the 1967 season was a great success ending with a three day eight team tournament.

The Turkey Buzzards, headed by the late Jim Kaylor, finished in a tie for second in the regular season but came on strong to win the turney by a seven point margin over the surprising drafties paced by Eddie Lewis.

This year Lewis has joined up with Sam Askew, Bill Franks and player-coach Wayne Barker to form a solid nucleus for the Born Losers.

Bob Vaughn has enlisted Chuck Lewis, Chuck Cuppitt and Mark Young for his Harlem Slowtrotters.

Harold Flinchmen and Jerry Rattlelade pace the Glory Stompers; two Gary's, Winters and Watkins, are the top guns for the Hot Dogs; the Civitan Chargers have come up with Ribert Wiard and Danny Grant; Pi Kappa Phi is led by Andy Futerelle; the other frat Sigma Phi Kappa has Charles Alexander as its fearless leader with Gary Holt and Joe Blackburn as his top guns.

The intramurals are a very important part of the college life. It gives a great number of athletes who cannot make the varsity squads a chance to play. Every effort should be made by the student body to help Coach Miller to have a successful program.

Drama Department Hopes For New Theatre Soon

The drama department is planning to build a new theatre soon. The department has been working on this project for some time now. They have been looking for a place to build the theatre and have found a suitable location. The new theatre will be a large building with a stage and seating for a large number of people. The department hopes to have the new theatre built by the end of the year.

'Antigone' Opens On February 16

After five years of joint productions, the Thalian Association and Wilmington College Theatre will present their final play "Antigone", on February 16, 17 and 18 in Thalian Hall. Curtain time will be 8:30 p.m.

A Sophoclean tragedy that was adapted by Jean Anouilh in 1944 and translated by Lewis Galantiere is a cry for a return to personal integrity in today's world.

The plot begins when two sons of Oedipus, the late King of Thebes, had started a civil war and both were killed. Their uncle, Creon, played by Charles Faust, becomes Regent and ordains that one of the brothers who had provoked the civil war be left unburied. Antigone, Terry Mahan, an individualist clinging to a higher law, covers the body of her brother with earth. Creon has her buried alive for punishment, which act brings about the death of his son, Haemon, played by David James. Eventually Creon's wife Eurydice, Berta Madeley, commits suicide, leaving Creon's world empty.

Antigone's sister Ismene is played by Pat Fuchs, and her nurse by Judith Andrews. The Chorus and Messenger will be played by Jim Potter and Randy DelLego, respectively.

The three guards are played by Tony Rivenbark, Michael Strong and Bill Wahlgren.

A unit set is being executed for this production of "Antigone" composed of converging steps in perspective with an island at its vertex. Charged with executing this austere setting are Carmen Aragon, Sam Askew, Al Carrus, Stephen Clemmons, Randy DelLago, Robert P. Elliott, Glenn W. Hodges, Virgil B. Huffman, Randy Hughes, Stacy Jackson, Davis Sanford, Joe Simard, and Joseph Williams.

Stage Manager for this production will be Aaron Fuchs, and Catherine Burruss, the production secretary. Technical Director is Doug W. Swink, with the make-up being executed by Joanne Conroy, David Day and Renee Hartman.

Students of Wilmington College will be admitted free upon the presentation of their Activity Cards. Thalian membership cards will be honored and tickets will be available at the box office.

Tryouts For 'The Firebugs' Begin Monday

Try-outs will be held by the Wilmington College Theatre on February 5 and 6 for "The Firebugs" beginning at 8:00 p.m. in the S.R.O. Theatre.

This play will mark the return of the Wilmington College Theatre, the winter play-producing organization of the Drama and Speech Department, to the college campus after an absence of five years.

The last production was entitled "Theatre: Avant-Garde", and was presented on May 16 through 18, in 1963 in the old S.R.O. Theatre located in Hoggard Hall. It was composed of three one-act plays: Albee's "The Sandbox," Ionesco's "The Leader", and Beckett's "Krapp's Last Tape."

W. Terry Rogers, who joined the Drama Department this year, will initiate the new series of three plays to be presented in the S.R.O. Theatre this season. Being an authority on contemporary European drama more than qualifies Rogers as director for this work by one of Switzerland's outstanding playwrights.

"The Firebugs", written by Max Frisch concerns itself with an astounding allegory about a careless Everyman who has permitted evil and destruction to insinuate themselves into his house, then to enthrall and finally to destroy the house. All of this brings into graphic focus today's complacency exhibited in our everyday life.

The cast calls for six males and three female roles plus extras. These try-outs will be open to college students and anyone wishing to participate in vital and live theatre.

This first production is scheduled for presentation on March 8, 9 and 10, in the S.R.O. Theatre before the end of the Winter Quarter.

'OUTLET FOR FLUSTRATIONS'

Complaints Office Now Open For Business

Trying to find a solution to student's complaints on campus is junior Bill Hume, Students' Representative.

Bill was asked by Dean Thomas Brown if he would accept the position. Told by Dean Brown that he would be serving the students and faculty if he would accept the position, Bill hopes to be able to iron out some of the existing campus problems.

Bill, whose office is located in the old radio room, stays in the office each day from 9:30 to 12:30. Here Bill plans to take comments and find a solution, either through the Senate or the administration.

"Right now we're run into a problem in that we don't want the students to feel as if they have been pushed into anything. We feel as if our best chance is to try and create student interest," said Bill in speaking of his new position.

Bill hopes to incorporate the help of all the clubs and fraternities on campus. He plans to go to the upcoming Interclub council meeting and possibly gain their support to help his plans.

The whole program, according to Bill, is still in the experiment stage. "Unless some sort of backing can be created, it will actually serve no purpose," he commented.

"Right now I'm in my office more or less to take comments and direct these comments to the proper authorities," he said. Bill has promised that if the complaint needs administrative changes, he will take it there himself.

Bill thinks the college, though he says to have heard others saying differently, is a radical change from high school. "We don't know how the students are going to take it. I don't want them to think I'm over here as a hall monitor as you might find in high school. I'm here to help the students."

One of Bill's first projects will be trying to do something about the conditions of the Pub. He is hoping to get the Interclub council and the fraternities interested in working with this.

Noting that the sophomores and freshmen seem to be doing most of the complaining, Bill said, "I'm sort of an outlet for their frustrations."

Senate Gives Money To Fix Equipment

Money from the Student Senate has been appropriated to repair the equipment in the old radio station.

WVPS, the college radio station, closed down in 1966 for "alleged infractions of rules for operating the station," according to the Seahawk of that year.

The station presently is in very bad condition. According to Student Body President, Mike Meier, "That last radio bunch relieved us of four speakers in the ceiling. Also, the radio in there and the record player are absent of any kind of wires."

The equipment, however, will not be repaired for use as a radio station. It is hoped, according to Mike, that the radio will be connected to a FM radio station. This music will play in the Pub during the day.

The record player in the station will be functional — when needed. Mike suggested that it might be used, as background music for a social function.

Responsible for the equipment will be Bill Hume, Students' Representative.

It will cost $350 dollars to repair the equipment, according to a man from one of the local electrical firms who was called in to assess the damages.

Fine Arts Committee To Present Pantomimist

The Wilmington College Fine Arts Committee will present Yass Hakoshima in concert at Thalian Hall on February 7. Curtain time will be 8:30 p.m.

Yass Hakoshima is the Japanese pantomimist whom Dance Magazine described as encouraging "an almost imperceptible energy to burgeon and gain momentum until he seems to throb with life-action."

It is an exciting display of concentration and control." Mr. Hakoshima was born and reared in Osaka, Japan. He has published a series of Haiku poems and calligraphy and has worked as a solo dancer with the Yokoyama Ballet Company in Tokyo. During the mid-fifties he specialized in classic Japanese dance and Noh movement.

His interest in pantomime began in 1955 when he was first exposed to Western mime work. The following year he became a member of the first Western Pantomime Group in Tokyo. Four years later, when in New York, he had the opportunity to study pantomime with Etienne Decroux, and modern dance with Erick Hawkins and Martha Graham.

Since 1963, Mr. Hakoshima has traveled extensively appearing in Germany, Western Europe, Canada and in the United States where he has performed at Pittsburgh, Denver, Michigan State University and Jacobs Pillow in Massachusetts.

Mr. Hakoshima's appearance on the Wilmington College Fine Arts Committee's agenda is being made under the auspices of the Association of American Colleges' Arts Program. This is a non-profit concert and lecture agency now over thirty years old. It selects and sends on tour cultural events which are designed to meet the special needs of college and university communities.

In addition to his performance at Thalian Hall, Mr. Hakoshima will give a lecture-demonstration of his art form to the Drama and Speech Department's acting class on campus in the S.R.O. Theatre.

This will mark the second guest performance brought to Wilmington College this season. The first was "Flamenco in Concert" with Ted Morca and La Conte with guitarist Benito Palacios.

There will be on admission charged to Mr. Yass Hakoshima's pantomime concert, in accordance with all of the productions presented under the auspices of the Fine Arts Committee of Wilmington College.

YASS HAKOSHIMA

Hurrah!

This is Homecoming weekend. Four cheers for that! Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah! It was strange to note that this year's dance committee made no grand statement about "This year's Homecoming is going to be the best yet." All of the committee's as far as can be remembered have said such. Perhaps because they said nothing this Homecoming will turn out to be one of the better Homecoming weekends in the history of the school?

Homecoming is really a very special weekend, the weekend everyone on campus anticipates for the whole year. This is the weekend when SOMETHING is really happening! Not only is there a basketball game which should prove to be exciting if the team does as well as they have been doing but there are also two dances. One of the dances actually has some entertainment in the form of the Drifters who made a record some years back.

Also as part of Homecoming is the bonfire, a homecoming tradition. The bonfire is where school spirit is supposed to be raised before the game. Stand up, school spirit, stand up and be seen! But remember school spirit is not just yelling along with the cheerleaders at a rally or a ball game.

But sermons aren't necessary today, enjoy the weekend!

Fraternities

The fraternities are the social life at Wilmington College.

In every social event, no matter how big or how small, the fraternities seem to play a role. A good example of this fact is Homecoming. Every aspect of Homecoming has the stamp of the fraternities on it.

It is easy to understand why this is so. Wilmington College is a commuter college in a community which, to be quite frank, offers the college-age person very little in the way of social life. We have nothing against going to the beach to drink beer. But once you get tired of this activity, your social life is zilch unless you belong to a fraternity or are dating someone in a fraternity.

The non-fraternity type of social life many campuses have is usually based on students who live on or near campus. It is not based on the life of the student who lives at home.

Fraternities, of course, are not very democratic institutions. They never pretended to be. This is not a criticism of fraternities because they are social institutions and never were intended to be for everyone. In contrast to the older fraternity systems in the state, Wilmington College has a dynamic system, attuned to the times. At least, membership is not limited to white, Anglo-Saxon protestant middle class students, even if no Negroes have yet been admitted. But they are limited to the social elite — the young man with the personality plus.

It is good that we have a fraternity system. Some social life is preferable to none and the fraternity members benefit from the brotherhood and companionship of fraternity life.

Hopefully, with the coming of dormitories, there will be social life for all the students.

Going to the beach every Friday and Saturday night to drink beer does get old after four years.

God?

"Dean Brown says we can't do it." Have you ever heard these words before. Keeping his paternal eyes on the activities of the college, Dean Brown seems to do what he believes is best for all of the students. However, Dean Brown, is not a god!

This fact: that the gentleman who is called the Dean of Student Activities is not a god might come as a surprise to many students. He's not a god. This fact should be stressed.

Too often students — or rather clubs and classes — plan projects which all members enthusiastically support, only to be told at the next meeting that "Dean Brown says we can't do it." Or perhaps in a milder tone, "Dean Brown says we can't do it that way, but we could try this..." Unfortunately too many projects seem to have been dropped because of all the "Dean Brown says..."

Lightning will not strike if a club continued with their project, even if they had to go about it in a slightly different manner from what they had planned. And — of course — they should remember to go through the proper channels. However, lightning might not strike if they skipped one or two channels. This isn't a high school.

Burrowing With Barrow

by Cliff Barrow

I no longer carry my draft or classification cards. The reason is that I was afraid I might fall dead on the sidewalks downtown and someone would look in my billfold and discover I was an American citizen. The nice thing about dropping dead like that is that no one could know one way or the other and they might think you came from some reputable country like Sweden or Switzerland. I am simply ashamed of being an American citizen. It has ceased to be anything less than comical.

Taking the American citizen as a type he is a weird set of misnomers. He is a man who believes in equality yet doesn't believe in open housing — it offends some sort of twisted freedom. "Every man is equal to me, but I wouldn't want to live next door to him." He believes in law and order, yet is willing to allow known criminals — those that bomb churches, homes, automobiles, burn crosses on front lawns, threaten families, for pursuing an academic standard — to run free, organize into little bands, and propose candidates for president. He is an honest person who passes off the misdeeds in congress by re-electing the same old crooks and minimizing the lack of ethics by the leaders of nations.

He goes to church on Sunday and Monday sends out bombers to terrorize a country half the size of the state of California. The fact that women and children are being burned, that children are being born today in Japan with gross deformities due to Hiroshima, that American soldiers are standing idly by, sometimes even helping, with the torturing of 15 and 16 year old boys who are prisoners of war doesn't bother him at all. It is a holy war and God is on our side. But he can't quite figure out why we, with God and Christianity, are still losing the war.

He believes in the freedoms. But he is strangely happy when Dr. Spock and Dr. Coffin are arrested for exercising their right to free speech, when a Southern judge (is there such a thing?) sentences Clifton Haywood to 10 years in prison for exercising his right of belief. He believes in the right to assembly, but feels they ought to arrest all those people who met in Washington. He believes in the right of free press and inviolability of the first class mail, but feels they shouldn't permit this leftist stuff to be sent out. He believes in right of the individual over the state, but also feels that every man owes his country his life. He believes in supporting his local police as long as they beat draft protestors and turn dogs loose on children and tear gas on those free assemblies, but not when they arrest him for drunk driving or exceeding a safe speed in a school zone.

He believes in the freedom of religion, but swears by the Jewish conspiracy and the fact that Rome is trying to run the world. He sets great store by an education, but suspects everyone who has one as a communist ripe to overthrow his government. He loves the free enterprise system, but hates the man with the money with a violet envy. He often quotes the melting pot theory, but instantly distrusts any man with an accent or an alien look.

Now what if I should die in another town where no one knew me. Worse. If I should die in Europe and they find a card saying I was born in Wilmington, North Carolina. That does type-cast me, doesn't it. And with a country of back woods fools. No sir. I would rather risk the sentence for not carrying the cards.

Sounding Off

To the Editor:

I wish to congratulate you on your first paper of the year. It came out on the date given on the paper itself. True it didn't come until four in the afternoon but it did come all the same. Also I want to commend you on your support of the students in our complaints about the waterhole parking lots.

I would like to know why the Music Department is never mentioned in the Seahawk? In this issue (1-19-68) alone are three articles and one editorial about the Drama Department. I am not saying anything against that but I wish that the Music Department would be mentioned at least being part of the college. This morning while talking with Mr. Hudson, head of the Music Department, I found out that no one has come around since the beginning of Fall quarter to find out if and what the Music Department is doing. Mr. Hudson also told me that he had written several articles himself, put them in the Seahawk mailbox but has yet to see them in print. So I ask you, with all your staff writers aren't there any that you can send to the Music department?

Also I wish to say something about your article on the Senate meeting. That meeting took place on Jan. 8, and you Madam Editor were present so I presume you wrote the article. My complaint is that the following Monday the Senate let the Cheerleaders have the money they asked for but your article left the situation hanging. I know the deadline for an article was the 12th of Jan. but as you wrote the article you could have changed the last paragraph because you undoubtedly saw the Cheerleaders selling tickets in the lobby and the Pub.

I am only complaining because I think you and your staff are doing a fine job and I appreciate it but things like these I have mentioned are important and should be reported before or as they are happening not two weeks later. I don't mean to hurt your feelings but I do think better reporting would be appreciated by all your readers.

New President Gives Views

by Catharin Knight

The newly-appointed president of Wilmington College, Dr. William Wagoner, is "quite excited about the idea of working with the college faculty and students," when he assumes his new position June 30.

When asked how being Superintendent of New Hanover County public schools has helped him prepare for this new undertaking, Wagoner replied, "All of life is a preparation for whatever you go into. No experience is useless. I'm a part of all I've met."

Wagoner has had much experience in dealing with institutions of higher learning, as his present position as superintendent has required that he work with individuals in college administration in many of the colleges and universities of the state, including Wilmington College.

Also one of the main segments of the public population that Wagoner is now serving is "college-bound." According to Wagoner, a large percentage of the pupil population he is now serving enters Wilmington College.

Wagoner has no definite plans or changes in mind for Wilmington College, but in effect, plans to wait until he assumes the new position and learns more about college affairs before attempting any changes.

However, Wagoner thinks that the role of the college in the next five years should be to "continue to offer problems of excellence in the liberal arts and the pre-professional programs with any special attention being devoted to the real needs of this part of the area of North Carolina."

In regards to student relations and activities, Wagoner feels that the "education of students is a joint venture between the teacher and the student... individuals should have as much freedom as they are responsible enough to handle."

As to the Seahawk's present independence from faculty and administration, Wagoner says it will continue so "if it is operating well and independently."

Wagoner plans to work closely with the administration in making projections concerning the number of students to be attending Wilmington College in the next five years. Although Wagoner is anxious to see the college grow, he feels that size should take second place to the quality of the education found here. He also has the strong desire and hope that as the college increases in size that everyone will be concerned about maintaining the high standards of the college.

One of his major responsibilities will be to get the message of the college students everywhere in the state and county. Wagoner feels that the dormitories soon to be built will do much towards attracting more out-of-town students. He also sees the college as having a bright future as far as summer session enrollment is concerned, with the nearby beaches acting as a bright lure.

At present, additions to the variety of majors at Wilmington College are being planned. Even more are needed, as the college is ever expanding. Wagoner thinks that the "number of courses should be governed by the needs and desires of the students." He said he would support the addition of majors where there is sufficient demand.

Concerning the recent accreditation of Wilmington College, Wagoner deemed it a "great milestone for the college." He wishes to "commend those individuals who worked so hard for this."

Greek Life on Campus

PADDLES — Clinton Hardee and Frank Barbee contrast the old and the new.

Societies Seek National Affiliation

"Sigma Phi Kappa has the distinction of being the first fraternity on the campus of Wilmington College," said Billy Hughes, Fraternity President. The Fraternity was founded in 1963. In 1964 it was recognized by the school.

The Brothers of Sigma Phi Kappa are currently making plans to become affiliated with a national fraternity. "Sigma Phi Kappa realizes that to go National takes time," Al Carrus stated, "But," he continued, "the choice of a worth-while national fraternity is well-worth the wait."

When asked what they were doing to prepare for national affiliation, Carmon Aragona replied, "We wrote the fraternities and informed them of the fact that Wilmington College had recently received its four-year accreditation, and that Sigma Phi Kappa, being a local fraternity at Wilmington College, expressed a desire to affiliate itself with a national organization."

Considering Three Fraternities The many fraternities which were contacted have now been narrowed down to three. These are Pi Kappa Alpha (PiKa), Kappa Sigma (Kappa Sig), and Sigma Alpha Epsilon (SAE).

Carmen Aragona stated, "We chose these groups because all three are ranked nationally in the top five and most major colleges and universities in the United States and Canada have a chapter. "We are now waiting to see what these three groups have to offer Sigma Phi Kappa," Al Carrus said.

Attend Convention

Three Kappas attended the Pi-Ka National Convention. Though they were invited by the National Fraternity to join upon the accreditation of Wilmington College as a four-year institution, Sigma Phi Kappa chose to wait. The Brothers said they are continuing to "financially, scholastically, and socially gear themselves to meet the demands of a national organization."

Chi Sigma Phi Sorority, the first, and at present, the only sorority on campus, is also making plans to become nationally affiliated.

Laurel Baker, Chi Sigma Phi President, stated, "We have considered several sororities. We feel that more investigation is necessary before we present a petition."

The local Sorority was founded in Oct. of 1966. It was recognized by the school in Jan. of 1967. Gaye Godwin, instrumental in the founding of Chi Sigma Phi, expressed pleasure at the growth of the organization. "I feel confident that before the end of this school year, we will have chosen the national sorority best suited for us, and with their help, will locate a house."

Correspond With National The Sorority Sisters have corresponded with numerous national organizations. Two of the organizations which expressed an interest in Chi Sigma Phi have sent representatives to visit the local Sorority.

The local Sorority will reveal no definite plans for immediate colonization with any national sorority. "We're still looking, deciding, and waiting for replies from Phi Mu and other sororities," stated the sisters.

Pi Sigma Mu Affiliates With Pi Kappa Phi

Fall Quarter of the 1967-1968 year ended, Christmas came and went, and a new year and a new quarter began. The advent of 1968 has special meaning for the Brothers of Pi Sigma Mu Fraternity, for it marks the beginning of their Colonization with Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity.

Pi Sigma Mu was founded in Jan. of 1964. It was organized by two Wilmington College men, who performed the initial steps toward making the fraternity what it is today. These two men, Dale Loughlin and Red Douglass, recruited a group of twelve men, from which grew the Brotherhood of Pi Sigma Mu Fraternity.

Recognized By College

In the spring of 1964, Pi Sigma Mu increased to seventeen Brothers. At this time, the Fraternity gained recognition from the college. These seventeen charter members were Octavius B. Battle, Robert Baxter, Charles Benton, James Brothers, Joseph Cavanaugh, Graham Dail, Thurston Davis, Red Douglass, Elmer Holly, John Hughes, Dail Loughlin, Tomas McNair, Jerry Robbins, Howell Spencer, William Tonz, Roger Webb, and Edward Wilson.

Dale Loughlin served as President of this pioneer group. Currently, an Honorable Archon presides over the rituals. Philip Galloway is Archon for the 1967-1968 school year. "By working together, we have achieved our colonization," stated Phillip.

Visited By Natural Fraternity Pi Kappa Phi sent representatives down to acquaint Pi Sigma Mu with the National Fraternity. Fraternity Brother Bill Kirby stated that the Beta Phi Chapter of Pi Kappa Phi at East Carolina University sent representatives. "Former Traveling Counselor, Bill Dicks, came down and told us some of the advantages of Pi Kappa Phi," said Bill.

The local fraternity also was visited by Ted Scharpstein. Ted, also a former Traveling Counselor, was President of District Eight, of which Wilmington is a part. Durwood Owen, Executive Secretary of Pi Kappa Phi, was another visitor to Wilmington.

Initiated As Colony

On Nov. 2, 1964, Pi Sigma Mu was initiated as a colony of Pi Kappa Phi. However, when Wilmington College became a four-year institution, Pi Sigma Mu lost its colonization because the college had not received permanent accreditation as a four-year institution.

According to the first issue of Sigma Sayso, the Pi Sigma Mu Newspaper, published in March of 1965, "It was decided by the members that having a house would speed up the process of gaining national recognition and bringing a closer relation among the brothers."

Moves Into Fraternity House

The fraternity chose a house at 3901 Market Street. Furniture was donated by Wilmingtonians.

In August of 1966, Pi Sigma Mu moved into its second house, this one at 719 Market Street. This ill-fated house was completely razed by fire on Feb. 4, 1967, during Homecoming Week End. Luckily, everyone escaped injury.

A few weeks later, the Brothers began the task of readying another house for occupancy by the Fraternity. Located at 3902 Market Street, this house is the one in which the Brothers still live today.

Much of the present furniture was also donated by townspeople. Bunks were purchased from Horton Salvage Company. A great deal of work went into this house. Comparing it to the house which burned, Pi Sig Denny McCaughn said, "It's got a much more favorable location." "But the size is inadequate; a growing fraternity needs a growing house," added Butch Huffman.

Participates In Sports

Ever since its formation, Pi Sigma Mu has been active in inter-fraternity, as well as inter-mural, sports. It is currently practicing for the up-coming inter-mural basketball season.

Pi Sigma Mu has had three House Mothers. Mrs. Keel had the distinction of being the Fraternity's first House Mother. A party is held annually in her honor.

Dec., 1965, Mrs. Melba Herring assumed the duties of House Mother. At present, this position is held by Mrs. Naldi Creasy, affectionately known by the Brothers as "Ma".

When asked about her position as House Mother, Mrs. Creasy replied, "I'm enjoying it. I'm delighted in being with them and am glad they're national. We're looking forward to reaping the benefits of Pi Kappa Phi."

Her reference to national affiliation was a result of the already mentioned colonization with Pi Kappa Phi. Their status as a Pi Kappa Phi Colony was restored Dec. 13, soon after the college gained accreditation. A tentative date for becoming a chapter is some time before the end of the present school year. Butch Huffman stated, "This is the foundation of a hard road to a greater goal of being a chapter of Pi Kappa Phi National Fraternity."

YEA SEAHAWKS — Laurel Baker, Sherry Southerland, and Jackie Braddy display school spirit.

Members Express Reasons For Joining Societies

"I first joined a Greek Letter Society for the sense of belonging one gets in such a group and to be able to participate in the activities of a sorority," replied Sara Rivenbark, in answer to the question, "Why did you join a Greek Letter Society?"

Sara, a charter member of Chi Sigma Phi Sorority, continued, "Now, however, I've found deep friendships and good times. Sorority life to me is a lesson in giving and receiving and learning to live with others."

Seeks Sisterhood

Chris Deasy, another Chi Sigma Phi Sister, expressed a similar reason for belonging. "I joined because I thought sisterhood was something I needed," said Chris. "Being an out of state student, I didn't know many people. I wish everyone could understand that Greek Letter Societies are not out for just fun and drinking."

A Brother in Sigma Phi Kappa, Terry Thorne, stated, "I joined a fraternity because of the great scholarship, brotherhood, and social life that is offered. Being hesitant at first to rush, I now see that it was well worth it."

One of his Fraternity Brothers, George Crouch, said, "Because of the lacking of social functions on campus, I figured that the fraternity would give me an opportunity to have more fun on the week-end."

Another Kappa, Marty Stillpass, answered the question by saying, "Brotherhood, Man. I mean, in a small school with no dorms, there's no social interaction between the students. Most of the students are from in town, and if you come in from out of town, one of the best ways to get to know people is through Greek Letter Societies."

Pi Sigma Mu Brother Elwood Whitman said, "I joined for maturity and responsibility."

Mickey Corcoran, a member of Pi Sigma Mu, stated, "It gives you a sense of identity. That is one of the reasons I joined. I thought the social advantages would be a little better."

Wants Better Social Life

Doug O'Hara, who is in Sigma Phi Kappa, said that he joined "for a better social life and for Brotherhood and betterment of the college."

June Grumbles, in Chi Sigma Phi, believes "the most important reason to me and any other true Greek Letter Society member is to obtain Sisterhood (or Brotherhood) with people from all walks of life."

STUDYING — Danny Martin and Terry Thorne prove that Brotherhood involves more than just social life.

BUDD, SPECIALE EXCEL AS 'HAWKS SURGE

BUTCH BUDD — 6-4 Senior Co-Captain has been key in pulling Wilmington to an 8-3 record with nine games to play.

WHATS HAPPENING BROTHER?

by Walt Healey, Jr.

"It's what's up front that counts. If you don't have it there you just ain't got it." No this is not a lung cancer commercial or a constructive English course. This is the Wilmington College basketball team — Butch Budd, Mike McQuay, and Chris Speciale — that has it up front.

It has taken three-fifths of a season but it's the first time since coach Bill Brooks Junior College clubs — Neil Johnson, Gene Bogash, Ken McIntyre and Ed Miasowski — were romping around the Brogren Hall hardwood that the front line has been able to take the pressure off the backcourt while still aggressively dominating the boards and scoring.

The 'Hawks have won five of their last eight since the visit by Rudolph and his red-suited friend a few weeks back. It started with the Roanoke and Campbell victories but was more evident against South Carolina Baptist and St. Andrews College — a well balanced scoring attack and rebounding up front.

McQuay, the 6-6 1/2 center, collects 19 rebounds and 23 points a couple of games. Speciale hits 30 points against Georgia Southern and six days later buckets 34 against St. Andrews.

Budd still reflected signs of the ankle injury that put him out of action for half the season last year. Suddenly against High Point the 6-4 Budd started moving better, following up his own shot and going towards the basket. In the last three games he has scored 57 points and grabbed 37 rebounds far above his previous averages of 8.6 points and 7.2 rebounds.

The result was Jim Hall, the best outside shot on the club, bangs home 11 of 13 against St. Andrews; Frank Bua nails seven of eight against the Knights the first time and totals 18 points in the two clubs second meeting.

The Seahawks have all five starters averaging double figures and sparkplug Jerry Martin almost makes it six with a 8.8 average. With ten games remaining on the schedule, already with an 7-8 record, could finish well above the break even mark but they must continue to move on the court helping each other out on defense and crash the boards. Coach Brooks' boys must remain "tough" with a "savage" instinct to go to the boards.

Campbell

The Seahawks put six men in double figures and held off a late Campbell College, to win their second game in three days, 82-78.

The 'Hawks took a seven point lead into the locker room at halftime, 43-36, but the Camels behind center John Marshbanks fought back to close the gap. Wilmington connected on several free throws at the end to ice the victory.

Chris Speciale, a 6-7 freshman forward, was high scorer on the night for the Seahawks with 19 points. Mike McQuay scored 14, Frank Bua and Butch Budd 13 points apiece, Jim Hall bucketed 12, and Jerry Martin 11.

The Camels' Gary Davis, scoring mostly in the first half, finished with 18 points. Dickie Waters had 13 and Allen McRae 12.

Augusta

Augusta College broke away in the second half to down Wilmington 90-72 in Georgia.

Steve Brown canned 30 points for Augusta to take the game's individual scoring honors followed by Bill Kinchen with 24, Jack Dortch with 16, and Ken Zimbardo with 12.

Jim Hall was the leading scorer for the Seahawks with 23 points, while Mike McQuay and Chris Speciale each accounted for 17, and Butch Budd connected for ten.

Wilmington trailed throughout the game, found themselves in the lead late in the first half of action, 31-30, but Augusta came back in the closing minutes for a 41-36 first half lead.

In the second half, Augusta poured it on, keeping the Seahawks at bay throughout the final twenty minutes.

Wilmington managed to close to within four points several times, but couldn't find the momentum to go ahead.

Georgia Southern

Georgia Southern College put six men in double figures to down the Seahawks 92-80.

Eldon Carmichael and Steve Buckler sparked the Georgia Southern Club with 17 points each, followed by John Helms with 14, Dave Westerfield and Roger Moore with 13 each, and Barry Miller with ten.

Chris Speciale poured in 30 points for the 'Hawks to take the individual scoring honors in the contest, followed by Jim Hall with 16, Butch Budd with 13 and Mike McQuay with ten.

Georgia Southern took control in the first half, and withstood repeated bursts by the 'Hawks which bought them to within one point, to take a 48-42 lead at the end of the first half.

St. Andrews

Leading by as much as 35 points in the second half the Seahawks easily downed the St. Andrews College Knights, 90-73. With Jim Hall hitting on 11 of 13 from the floor and Frank Bua seven of eight, coach Bill Brooke substituted his entire team with 12 minutes left in the contest. Hall finished the night with 22 points and Bua had 16.

Mike McQuay also tallied 16 points for the taller Wilmington squad and Wayne Johnson added ten.

Mike Hannas took high scoring honors with 38 points as he connected on 17 of 31 from the floor for the Knights.

The Seahawks took a 51-28 lead at halftime and never were in trouble.

High Point

John Littles and Tom Tatgenhorst combined for 46 points to pace High Point college over Wilmington 85-68.

Littles was the leading scorer with 24 points and Tatgenhorst had 22, Jim Witt followed with 19 and Mike Picka had ten.

Mike McQuay scored 23 points and Butch Budd nailed 17 as they were the only two in double figures for Wilmington.

The Bulldogs held a 36-31 halftime lead but outscored the Seahawks on the foul line 19 of 29 to Wilmington's eight of ten for the margin of victory.

South Carolina Baptist

Chris Speciale and Butch Budd combined for 60 points and 36 rebounds to give the Seahawks a 100-89 victory over South Carolina Baptist College of Charleston, S. C.

Speciale scored 34 points, a season high for a Seahawk player, and grabbed 20 rebounds. Budd banged home 26 points and pulled down 16 rebounds. Frank Bua followed in scoring with 17 points and Jerry Martin added ten.

Marion Salerni hit for 32 points for the Buccaneers, Dan Franz had 15, Mike Mauldin and Buddy Petit 14 each.

The 'Hawks held a 50-45 halftime lead but the Bucs fought back early in the second half to go ahead 63-62. Wilmington, lead by Speciale and Budd, gradually began to pull away and broke the late Buccaneer press.

Wilmington connected on 28 of 34 foul shots as compared to Baptist 21 of 32.

St. Andrews College

For the second time within a week the Seahawks trounced St. Andrews College 88-58.

Frank Bua paced the 'Hawk scoring attack with 18 points, Butch Budd followed with 15, Mike McQuay added 13 and Jerry Martin 11.

Jim Stralring was the leading Knight scorer with 13 along with Louis Fernandez. Mike Hannas was held to 11 points.

The Seahawks held a 43-30 halftime lead and both clubs substituted freely in the second half.

Mike Meier ('68), Student Body President, is congratulated by Pete MacQueen, III ('65) upon becoming Pete's most recent client at Wilmington College. Pete represents New England Life — the founder of mutual life insurance in America — and has provided financial security for many Wilmington College students.

Let Pete show you the important advantages of getting an early start with the right kind of insurance protection. A little now goes a long way later. Make sense? You bet it does. Give Pete a call he'll be glad to talk it over.

Senate Reviews 'Pot' Scandal

"I guess we can call it a scandal," Mike Meier, student body president, told the Senate at their Feb. 5, meeting.

He was speaking about developments stemming from the recent marijuana investigation in New Hanover County.

Giving the Senate an historical analysis of the problem, Mike began by telling the Senate about the visit to the campus of Carolyn Zimmerman, education editor for the Star-News Newspapers, when she interviewed members of both the faculty and student body on their opinion of drugs, especially marijuana.

In the story which appeared in the Star-News faculty member Thomas Seism claimed he was misquoted. The quotes in the story attributed to two other faculty members favored the legalization of marijuana. However, this story sparked the beginning of a series of events which has given Wilmington College's blackest eye in recent years.

Mike then read the statement from Wilmington City Councilman John Symmes, who said, "the recent arrests at Wilmington College should be viewed with alarm by the City of Wilmington and its citizens."

Mike pointed out that only one college student had been arrested.

The "gravest aspect of this tragedy," according to Symmes, was that three of the college faculty members favor the legalization of marijuana. This could "be interpreted as the sanctioning of harmful and illegal drugs by professors of a tax supported institution, where their position of trust and guidance could encourage students there and also in our high schools and junior high schools to engage in this harmful and illegal practice," according to Symmes.

Mike commented, "I never figured out how college professors could influence high school students."

Symmes believes, "The City of Wilmington should express its righteous indignation at this outrageous disregard for the minds and bodies of its children."

"The city has nothing to do with us," said Mike. Junior senator Marian Loftus asked, "Does Symmes know we are not a community college?"

"Now," asked Mike, "What can and should we do?" He pointed out the issue was no longer who does or who does not use marijuana, but free speech on the college campus.

According to Mike, the students of the college either give Symmes the dignity of a reply, ignore the attack and hope it will be forgotten, or if the attack is ignored, risk another such attack. "Shall we sit back and follow Dr. Randall's lead?" he asked.

The suggestion of President of the Senate Dave Warner to send a dignified delegation from the college to the City Council meeting and also to submit a prepared statement to the council met with the approval of the Senate.

The Senate then voted to accept the rough draft of a resolution which would be sent to all local news media (see resolution, p. 1). Because he feared it might be misquoted, Dale Donahue, sophomore senator, suggested the resolution should be notarized. This would be done, according to Mike, before being sent to the local media.

Senate Resolution

The following resolution was passed by the Wilmington College Student Senate at a meeting on Monday night, February 5, 1968:

After the events of the past week, and in order to create a better understanding between the college and the community, the Student Senate of Wilmington College states the following: We, the members of the Student Senate do hereby take a firm stand on the first amendment of the Constitution of the United States which insures the freedom of speech, press, peaceable assembly, and petition.

This statement neither supports nor condemns the personal opinions of any professor, administrator or student. We affirm only their right to state opinions without having either their character or position jeopardized. At the same time we recognize that no individual or group of individuals may alter college policy which is conditioned and controlled by Federal and State laws.

We are aware and appreciative of the fact that our college was born in and nurtured by the City of Wilmington and New Hanover County. Though there be one or two who would divide us, we, the Student Senate, pledge ourselves to right and honorable conduct in order that the City of Wilmington, New Hanover County, and the State of North Carolina may look with favor and pride upon our achievements.

WILMINGTON CITY COUNCILMAN JOHN C. SYMMES
"They All Missed The Point"

Symmes Challenges Profs On Drug Legalization

"This is the most serious thing to threaten our citizens in the last 100 years," stated City Councilman John C. Symmes in reference to the recent marijuana arrests.

A student-faculty delegation led by Student Body President Mike Meier saw Symmes fail in his attempt to have the statement he'd issued adopted by the City Council during their Feb. 12 meeting as the official statement of the Council.

Instead the council voted to request the police department to exert every effort to suppress the use of marijuana in the schools, excluding the college.

Symmes, who issued his statement Feb. 1 condemning the statements attributed to some faculty members regarding the recent use of marijuana, declared his statement represented the overwhelming sentiments of the city of Wilmington. He added, "I have been gratified by the numbers of people who have called telling me how glad they were to see my statement."

In reply to a question by Mike as to whether the matter was appropriate for discussion at the council meeting, Symmes answered,

"The City of Wilmington is concerned about the safety of its children. The children look to teachers for guidance. I don't think the professors were fair in their statements as such statements lead small children astray."

Mike told Symmes he was questioning the right of college faculty to "make any statement." Symmes denied this, but said they should not express such statements as professors of a college.

Saying he did not mean any disrespect to the college, Symmes stated, "We are all proud of the college." However, he did challenge the statements of the faculty members who said marijuana should be legalized.

"Cities exist for citizens," said Symmes, and anyone who threatens the safety of our children should be challenged. As long as I am on the City Council, I will challenge such statements."

Mike pointed out to Symmes and the Council members that parts of Symmes' statement was incorrect. At the time the statement was issued, only one arrest had been made involving a college student.

Marijuana Dispute Involves Students, Faculty, College Image

by MARTIN GRANT

About two years ago, an acquaintance of Wrightsville Beach Police Chief M. E. (Stinky) Williamson told a Wilmington College student that Williamson had said he was cooperating with the State Bureau of Investigation (SBI) in looking into the use of narcotics at Wrightsville Beach. The student told several others and they laughed at such an idea, attributing Williamson's statement to the megalomania, perhaps, of a provincial police official. Three weeks ago, the laughing stopped.

On January 19, Williamson and SBI Agent W. S. Hunt obtained a warrant for the arrest of Michael Monaghan, 18, of 12 Nathan Street, Wrightsville Beach and of Albemarle, charging him with "contributing to the delinquency of a minor" by having a 15-year-old girl in his apartment "in the late hours of the night and exposing her to immoral conduct". The immoral conduct" alleged in the warrant was the use of marijuana.

On January 23, Garland E. Odom Jr., an 18-year-old Wilmington College freshman, was charged with possession of marijuana.

On January 25, Agent Hunt obtained a warrant for the arrest of Phillip A. Kelly, 18, formerly of Wrightsville Beach, who had just been drafted into the U.S. Army and who was undergoing processing at Fort Bragg. The warrant charged Kelly with selling marijuana. He was arrested at Fort Bragg later the same day by Hunt, brought back to Wilmington and placed in the New Hanover County Jail under $10,000 bond. Kelly, who has never been a student at Wilmington College, has since been charged with several other counts of selling marijuana.

Hunt announced that the arrests were the result of months of investigation by his bureau, the Wrightsville Beach and Wilmington Police Departments and the New Hanover County Sheriff's Department. He also announced that more arrests would follow. They did.

Graham Batson and Michael Curry, students at John T. Hoggard High School, were charged with possession of marijuana. Batson has since withdrawn from Hoggard after the investigation of the marijuana cases brought to light the fact that he was a resident of Topsail Sound and therefore ineligible to attend New Hanover County Schools.

On February 1, Kelly, Monaghan, Batson, Odom, and Curry were slated for preliminary hearings in New Hanover County Recorder's Court. Kelly was being defended by Ira M. Lowe, a Washington, D.C. attorney employed to defend him by Miss Mary Adams, an employee of the federal government living in Washington. She is a former New Hanover High School mathematics teacher.

Batson was being defended by Wilmington Attorney Aaron Goldberger, Graham Phillips of Wallace was defending Odom, and Elbert Brown of Wilmington was attorney for Monaghan.

The hearing was postponed by Deputy Judge John Schiller after Solicitor John Walker said that more arrests would follow. The hearing is now slated for February 13.

Arrests since have included John P. Kuhlen, 20, of 117 Wrightsville Avenue, and Rudolph Konig Jr., of 111 Bordon Ave., a Wilmington College dropout, and Charles L. Robichaux, 18, a Hoggard student of 4110 Halifax Rd., all charged with possession.

Juvenile authorities were silent about charges against two juvenile girls involved in the case.

How many more arrests will follow was a subject of much speculation. Agent Hunt cheerfully admitted that he had "no idea" when the last arrest would take place. Sources close to the Wilmington Police Department said it was investigating as many as 50 persons for possible involvement in the charges.

All of the defendants were free on bond awaiting the preliminary hearings.

MIKE MEIER
... Defends Faculty

Morgan to Speak

A journalist whose career has spanned 36 years and who has risen from a newspaper reporter to one of the nation's top network news commentator's will speak here February 22.

Edward P. Morgan, who since 1955 has been Washington commentator for ABC, will speak on the subject: "Can We Preserve Individual Liberty In Today's World?" The speech is sponsored by the Faculty Lecture Series Committee. It will be held at 8:30 p.m. at Roland-Grise Junior High Auditorium because of "acoustical problems."

In 1966, Newsweek Magazine said of Morgan, "He is at his best as a radio news analyst, airing his perceptive—and sometimes indignant—opinion."

The Wall Street Journal said the commentator was, "... a very responsible guy—not a sensationalist. He offers analysis and honest interpretation."

Morgan began his career with the Seattle Star in 1932 after graduating from Whitman College. He then worked for United Press, Chicago Daily News Foreign Service, and the ill-fated Collier's Weekly. Later, he was a freelancer in Europe and in 1951 he went to work for CBS. He left them in 1955 to take his present position with ABC.

He has won numerous awards, including the Peabody and Alfred I. du Pont awards for excellence in radio commentary. He is a member of many organizations, including such divergent ones as the American Civil Liberties Union and the Museum of Modern Art.

Some May Speak

Wilmington City Councilman John C. Symmes seems to have the attitude that freedom to make statements, especially statements made under the color of one's office or position, applies only to himself and those who share his views. While we do not question Mr. Symmes patriotism or loyalty, it is fair only to point out that the freedom to agree with those in office existed in Nazi Germany and exists today under all of the dictatorships he so roundly condemns.

In reference to the specific statement made by Symmes, he says his statement reflects the "overwhelming sentiments of the City of Wilmington." Certainly it is true there was a number of people who agree with what he has said, however, from listening to him speak, it would appear that he believes his statement was accepted and believed by all. This is impossible.

Two college faculty members answering a question from a reporter from the local newspaper said they believe marijuana should be legalized. However, the issue now is no longer one of the smoking of marijuana illegally, nor is the issue the legalization of marijuana. The issue is one of whether these faculty members had the right to say what they believed. Or in simpler terms, the issue is one of free speech.

It must be said that these faculty members did not try to inflict their views on anyone else. It also must be said that these two people only voiced their opinion, a right granted to all citizens under the First Amendment to the United States constitution.

Granted the freedom of speech does not give one the right to yell "fire" in a crowded theatre, but it gives one the right to say almost anything else. But the right to make statements does not say these statements have to be popular and not untimely.

And just because a statement is not popular does not mean a person making an "unpopular statement" should be run out of town, as Symmes has said would have happened some years ago. Though Wilmington is largely a conservative, it is too sophisticated, we believe, to accept the idea of two college professors having to leave town for answering a question.

Symmes does say the statements are all right, just the college professors should not have made them as professors, which makes it extremely hard to understand.

Letter Policy

Since the last issue of the paper came out, The Seahawk received many letters to the editor. Unfortunately one of the letters received had no name on it, therefore, it was not used. This is a general reminder that all letters to the editor must be typed, double spaced, limited to 250 words, and signed. Names will be withheld by request. All letters to the editor are very much welcomed. These letters should be placed either in The Seahawk box located in the main office or either left in the Seahawk office (S-101) by the Wednesday following the day the papers appear on campus.

Burrowing With Barrow

by Cliff Barrow

"Nothing makes hotter newspaper copy than a good dope raid, especially if it involves college students. And few things are more upsetting to college officials than to see a page-one banner headline such as that which appeared in the 'Detroit Free Press' January 25 (1967), implicating Wayne State University: 'Lightning Raids Trap 56/ In LSD and Marijuana Ring/ Majority Are WSU Students'. The public's overreaction to marijuana is at least in part a reflection of the press' willingness to assume that pot is (1) a dangerous drug and (2) worth scare headlines."

The case as reported by David Sanford in the April 22, 1967 issue of The New Republic (Volume 156, Number 16, Issue 2734, pg. 12) is not unlike the case recently in Wilmington. The press used scare tactics and preyed upon the ignorance of its readers. WSU reacted exactly as Wilco, threatening dismissal and suspension for those convicted. But Wayne State has since changed. According to Mr. Sanford, "It (WSU) is not interested in helping cops entrap student users, it is not even going to tell students not to smoke pot. Rather, the university feels that its principal responsibility is to point out that society is not as broad-minded as Wayne State, that to sell a nickel bag ($5) of marijuana to a friend may be a favor for which one will pay with several years of his freedom." What does the administration of WSU know that the administration of Wilco does not? Probably the same thing that the students of this institution don't know.

I am going to examine the myth that is marijuana. None of the replies to the myth are mine. All of them come from the "Task Force Report: Narcotics and Drug Abuse" published by the United States Government in 1967 for The President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice. Hardly a fly-by-night organization, the results should stand up to the most stubborn "witch hunter" in our midsts.

(1) Myth: Marijuana is an opiate and therefore has the opiate characteristics on the body.

Fact: "Marijuana is equated in law with the opiates. None of the abuse characteristics of the two have almost nothing in common. The opiates produce physical dependence, Marijuana does not. A withdrawal sickness appears when use of the opiates is discontinued. No such symptoms are associated with marijuana. The desired dose of opiates tends to increase over time, but this is not true of marijuana. Both can lead to psychic dependence, but so can almost any substance that alters the state of consciousness," pg. 13)

(2) Myth: Marijuana leads to the use of heroine.

Fact: "There are too many marijuana users who do not graduate to heroine, and too many heroine addicts with no known prior marijuana use to support such a theory. More over there is no scientific basis for such a theory. The basic text of pharmacology, Goodman and Gilman, The Pharmacological Basis of Therapeutics (The Macmillan Company, 1965), states quite explicitly that marijuana habituation does not lead to the use of heroine." (pg. 14)

(3) Myth: Marijuana causes crime.

Fact: One likely hypothesis is that, given the accepted tendency of marijuana to release inhibitions, the effect of the drug will depend on the individual and the circumstances. It might, but certainly will not necessarily or inevitably, lead to aggressive behavior or crime. The responses will depend more on the individual than the drug. This hypothesis is consistent with the evidence that marijuana does not alter the basic personality structure." (pg. 13)

The report also made suggestions as to changing the laws concerning marijuana. (The law is the Marijuana Tax Act enacted in 1937. Main content is a tax of $100 per ounce on sale to an unregistered person.) Dr. Richard Blum on page 26 suggests, "A revision of penal codes so that marijuana acquisition and possession becomes a misdemeanor or only would not seem inappropriate." On page 126, Resnault goes even further: Neither use nor simple possession of marijuana should be the subject of criminal prohibition by either the Federal Government or the States."

There is the difference between Wayne State University and Wilmington College.

A little education is a wonderful thing, not above either administration, faculty, or students. It helps turn asinine actions into rational and educated ones.

"Gluck is a wild-eyed pseudointellectual. I say fire is dangerous and anyone who says the Tribal Fathers should consider legalizing it is a menace to the children."

Sounding Off

Dear Mr. Barrows:

Thank God! You have finally seen the light and decided to disassociate yourself with the Back Woods Fools. That is probably the wisest decision that you have ever made. I have some connections with these perverted people, and I assure you that they are just as pleased with your decision as you and I are. You did make one mistake in your article, though, but it was an understatement that I will try and correct.

The prisoners of war sometimes reach the ridiculously young age of fourteen and in some cases even thirteen. These boys (and girls, too) should not be subjected to the cruel punishment that war prisoners go through. We should just take away their rifles and grenades, paddle them maybe, and send them on their way. Who really cares who their leaders are anyway? If our troops are not prepared enough to cope with the situation when it comes up, hell with them. They shouldn't be over there in the first place. The South Vietnamese do not deserve any imperialistic help to achieve their freedom. We should pull out and let them fight their own war. (Actually they don't really want it. They just put their families with them in the perimeter bunkers and the cockpits of their World War II planes because they have suicidal tendencies.)

Oh yes, another thing I want to mention. You are so right about the concept of the individual's right over the state's. I suppose if we completely disarmed and sat down and talked, even pleaded, with the communist nations they would see things our way. Another thing that bothers me is all those idiots who started that war—what was it called? —back in 1776. They should have been committed or at least isolated from the general public.

I am deeply convinced now, however, with upstanding, rational people like yourself and your pen that the world will be a better place to live. "If it were not so, I would not have said it." One more thing. I have talked to those Back Woods Fools, and we will try to keep your identity a secret, but you will have to do your part if we are to succeed.

Fraternity

To the Editor:

I would like to congratulate you on your editorial dealing with the fraternities on campus. It is certainly an historical event when someone awards praise to the greek letter societies at Wilmington College rather than try to bring them down. So many times, the minute anything goes wrong, be it among the students or other, the fraternities (sororities) are the first ones that the finger is pointed at—there seems to be a certain prejudice against these groups. What I would like to know is why? Is it because of jealousy of the non-fraternity (sorority) people, or is it the old idea that "a bunch of people united are always up to no good," or could it be because there has to be a scapegoat, which elects the societies unanimously. If the students and faculty would probe deeper into them, and if they would take a little more time in understanding the Greek letter system they may find these societies to be a bit more worth while than they thought them to be. Of course the fraternities (sororities) are not perfect, and who is (?), but there are five on campus now, and it is inevitable that more are on the way as Wilmington College grows. I believe that these groups deserve more praise than they have received, and they should be recognized as a high form of democracy on the Wilmington College scene.

School Recognizes New Greek Societies

Sigma Phi Sigma and Delta Epsilon are the two new Greek organizations which officially invaded the campus Feb. 2.

Sigma Phi Sigma sorority began organizing during winter quarter of 1967 under the direction of sophomores Connie Branch and Betty Smith. The boys of Delta Epsilon came together during fall quarter with the encouragement of junior Hap Hazard.

Although it took the girls of Sigma Phi Sigma a year to get their official recognition; according to Connie, the girls wanted to be certain that what they did prepare did not have to be revised and also wanted to be sure the interest of the girls did continue.

Go Before Deans

Both groups went before the deans with a fully written constitution, but both were told they would have to have a list of objectives.

The sorority first went to the deans close to the end of spring quarter last year. At this time they were told a list of objectives would be required as well as their plans for the school and an account of their financial revenue. "They wanted something more concrete, more than just the constitution," said Donna Lester, president of the group. "It seemed necessary to have something they could see to prove we were really serious."

"We had to get a list of objectives," said Hap, whose group first went to the deans last quarter. "We weren't prepared for this." At this time the fraternities started their projects as the one on campus beautification.

Improve School Spirit

When the fraternity started on their projects, they noticed the lack of spirit on campus. Wanting to see what they could do to boost this spirit, they began to attending scheduled cheerleader's practices in order to learn the cheers. They also began a horn brigade for the basketball games.

"We didn't have to work on any projects," said Connie. However, Mrs. Helena Cheek, dean of women, did suggest to the girls they follow what was set down in the handbook. Connie mentioned how all of the girls in the sorority were active in other campus organizations.

Seek Official Recognition

After fall quarter began, the girls of the sorority again came together to seek official recognition as a campus sorority. Before going back to the deans, the girls wanted to be certain that what they had done was right so they would not have to change anything. Before returning to the deans the girls "went over everything with a fine tooth comb," Donna said.

"It's nice to be able to function officially," said Hap. According to Hap, the boys in the fraternity felt like they had come a long way, but realized they had a long way to go. "We don't intend to stop here."

"Everybody in the sorority couldn't be happier. Recognition has given all of the girls something to work for," Donna noted.

Seek National Affiliation

Immediate plans of both groups is to seek national affiliation.

"Mainly we are organizing the fraternity internally and then externally to try to get national affiliation," Hap stated.

As soon as Sigma Phi was recognized, the girls began to send out letters to national sororities for consideration for membership in their organization.

Sigma Phi Sigma girls plan to be available whenever the deans need them for some service.

"Now we can meet some of our goals," said Hap, "such as working with the Interfraternity Council as one of our reasons for banding together was to strengthen the Greek system."

Although both the Delta Epsilons and the Sigma Chi Sigmas wish to have a house, the Delta Epsilons see the gaining of this goal soon as they are working on one house at the present time.

Anticipate Rush

Both groups are eagerly anticipating Spring rush as a time to increase their memberships. "We are looking forward to increasing our membership as we feel as if we have a lot to offer the campus and believe we have a very valuable organization," Connie commented.

"We plan to be out in full force," said Hap, "we would like to have pledges and we believe they would like to have the opportunity in creating the policies of their organization."

"I'd personally like to thank everyone who's helped us; everyone in the fraternity expresses my sentiments in that," Hap concluded.

Donna mentioned that membership in Sigma Phi Sigma was open to both out-of-town and in-town girls as this would give each girl an opportunity to benefit from the others' experience. "This will give a better insight as far as friendship is concerned," she said. "With a group like a sorority you have to try harder to understand the members of your group."

Cheering Squad Sells Bus Tickets

"The trip was a big success," stated Diana Smith to the Student Senate Meeting. This was of course in reference to the bus trip a number of students took to La Grange on the twenty-third of January for a basketball game with St. Andrews.

Diana was reporting to the Senate in reference to the money given the cheerleaders to finance this venture. Diana said the cheerleaders could refund over $100 in payment for the $236 appropriated by the Senate. A second trip is being planned to Buies Creek for a contest with Campbell College on February 22.

Reaction to the first trip was favorable with most of the students expressing a desire to go on the second trip. The biggest complaint dealt with the trip itself. "They'll never make buses comfortable," said one knowledgeable student. Most of the complainers accepted this inconvenience as inevitable. Diana said both bus groups improvised and "seemed to enjoy themselves very much."

Diana said she was a little disappointed in the fact that the game tickets were one dollar a piece. "We didn't get a reply from them (St. Andrews) until the day of the game. We hope that the tickets at Campbell will be fifty cents," she said.

The cheerleaders had originally hoped to get enough students for one bus and then work on the second. Diana said the first bus was complete on the Friday before the game and the second at the game the next night.

This was done in one week and the cheerleaders are hopeful of a better success in the three weeks they have had, to sell tickets, before the Campbell game. The favorable reaction added to this extended time element is hoped to effect a larger turnout.

The busses will leave at 5:30 p.m. and, allowing for a two hour trip, will arrive in Buies Creek in time for the eight o'clock game. Diana said on the first trip they stopped on the way back for hamburgers. With all this taken into

Civilians Need Material For Time Capsule Soon

Members of the Collegiate Civilians presently are searching for volunteers to serve on the editing committee for the material to be placed in the Time Capsule to be placed in the sidewalk in front of the new library building.

According to Club President Mike Michel, all campus organizations should submit any material they would like to have included in the capsule by the Feb. 23 deadline.

Material to be placed in the capsule should be historically oriented. Civitan members are planning to trace the beginning of the college right up to the present day. The focus, however, will be on this academic year since this is the year the college was accredited and also the year college president, Dr. William M. Randall, and original faculty member of the college, Adrian D. Hurst, will retire.

As a suggestion from the civilians, clubs submitting articles should include the origin of the club, past officers, members, and projects. The main point of information should concern club activities this year.

Since the new library will be the center of the campus, this is where the capsule will be placed until the year 2000 when it will be opened. Plans for the capsule call for it to be a four-inch deep and three inch diameter canister of stainless steel. A microfilm record of all of the submitted information will be placed in the canister.

The cylinder will be marked by a plaque flush with the surface of the walk.

Any interested student willing to work with the Civilians should contact Mike.

Exhibition Display In Kenan Hall

Currently on display in Kenan Hall is the Sixth Annual Lower Cape Fear Exhibit. This exhibit is the only jury show in the eastern section of North Carolina, according to Claude Howell, head of the Art Department.

The exhibit, which opened Feb. 4 and which will be on display throughout the month of February, includes 48 works from the 219 which were submitted by 91 artists. These on display include 28 graphics and drawings, 44 paintings and four sculptures. In addition, there are eight works by the three members of the Art Department faculty. Their works are on display by invitation.

First prize in the show was awarded to Anne Wyche's woodcut, "The Beach." Second and third place awards went to Keith Lambert's welded sculpture "Decay of Man," and Thomas Hammond's print "Group IV" respectively.

In concert with the exhibit Mr. Potter, an art historian and artist himself, gave a lecture on the role of the gallery in relationship to the artist and community.

Mr. Howell said, "The Lower Cape Fear Exhibit has begun six years ago in an effort to upgrade the quality of works by regional artists." In this respect Mr. Howell feels the exhibits have been quite successful, as he has noticed a vast improvement from the first show in 1963.

The next exhibit, a two man show by sculptors Jack Mitchell and Donald Green, will take place in March.

Circle K Members Advertising Kiwanis Minstral

Circle K members have been placed in sole charge of placing posters advertising the coming Kiwanis Minstral which will be March 14, 15, 16. Also, Circle K members will be selling tickets to the Minstral.

Ray Pacer, president of Circle K, pointed out that some of the money made from the Minstral comes to scholarships for the college.

At recent meetings Circle K members have heard from Charles Williams, Federal Probation officer, and also Rev. Bill Flannagan, from Westminster Presbyterian Church, who spoke to the club about dedication, not just religious dedication, but all sorts of dedication, according to Ray.

Also, Circle K sweetheart Sue Lackey was presented with a Valentine gift by club adviser Thomas Lupton at a recent meeting.

Noe Happy About Lot Behind Hoggard

by CARRIE DAVIS

"Yes, we're getting ready to pave more parking lots," began Thomas Noe, when broached about the subject of parking problems on campus. "There will be paved parking for about 1400 cars," he continued. "Once these parking lots are completed, everyone will park in a parking lot."

Mr. Noe seemed most enthusiastic about a proposed parking lot in the woods behind Hoggard Hall. "It's going to be a 200 car lot. This lot in the woods is going to be one of the most convenient—very convenient for people going to Hoggard or Kenan."

New Building

The parking situation for the new buildings will be taken care of by two 200 car parking lots, according to Mr. Noe. One parking lot will be placed beside the library, and one will be beside the science building.

Improvements are also planned for present parking facilities. Mr. Noe stated, "We're going to enlarge the lot the seniors are using so it will accommodate about fifty more cars."

The lot termed the "South Forty" will be paved. It will provide parking spaces for 500 cars. Mr. Noe stated that two or three other areas are under consideration to be paved for parking. However, no definite plans have been made at present to pave those lots.

New Lots

The paving of the new lots has been approved by the Board of Trustees. "Mr. Price is going to Raleigh to try to get final permission to start on the paving of the parking lots. $75,000 will have to be borrowed to pave the ones designed now."

The new parking lots will require new roads on campus. "Mr. Noe said new roads will be put in, but he is not sure where. Approximately $100,000 will have to be spent on roads. At present, about $2,500 has been spent for new roads.

According to Mr. Noe, the new parking facilities will not be as convenient in some respects as the present facilities. There will be no parking in the dirt, either in former parking lots or the side roads. However, all of the new lots will have sidewalks leading from them and will be adequately lighted.

Faculty Lot Lost

Mr. Noe expressed regret that the present faculty parking lot will soon be lost. The architects feel it is needed for the cafeteria and to serve as an open passageway for pedestrian traffic to and from the new building.

When questioned about the number of parking violations this year, compared to past years, Mr. Noe said, "There are more tickets this year than ever, but we've got a lot of new students here this year that just don't want to learn." He said the most frequent offense is parking on the new road.

Parking Violations

Mr. Noe has issued a statement on parking violations. He reiterated the fact that students are not allowed to park in spaces marked with yellow lines. The one exception is the faculty parking lot, where students may park after 5:00 p.m.

Parking in the senior parking lot is always restricted to seniors. No one is allowed to park along the new road, which is a construction area.

Mr. Noe reminds students having parking tickets that fines double after seven days. His office is open daily from 10:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. He is sympathetic about the parking problem, saying "I realize as you do, that it is deplorable. It is anticipated that we will have paved parking for everyone by summer, but until then we will have to live with what we have."

SOMETHING NEW — Eithrage Warters, newly appointed vice-chairman of the ICC posts the ICC calendar for the month of February on the bulletin board in the Pub.

Rogers Announces Cast For 'Firebugs'

The cast for "The Firebugs" which will be presented in the S.R.O. Theatre on March 8, 9 and 10 has been announced by W. Terry Rogers, the director.

This play will mark the return of the college players to the campus. For their return a contemporary play by one of Switzerland's outstanding playwrights has been selected.

The cast of 12 was selected from open try-outs held in the S.R.O. Theatre on February 5 and 6. Mr. Rogers stated that he was "pleased with the number of students and townspeople who turned out to read for parts and I am most anxious to begin work with those selected for the roles."

The plot is concerned with Gottlieb Biedermann played by David James, and his wife, Babette, portrayed by Rosemary Salata, and their maid Anna, to be played by Donna West. Their actions and attitudes are revealed when they are confronted with a ruthless enemy.

This enemy is personified in two characters, that of Sepp Schmitz and Willi Eisenring, to be played by Robert Murphy and John Blair, respectively. Also in the cast are John Richardson, Tony Rivenbark, Michael Sampley, and Terry Worthley who will serve as the chorus of Firemen simulating the chorus found in Greek plays.

George Spelvin has been cast as the Ph.D. and Michael Strong as the Policeman. In the role of Mrs. Knechtling, Mr. Rogers has cast Helen Huneccutt.

Rehearsals are underway and the construction of the set has begun. Announcement of the sale of tickets will be announced at a later date.

Department Plans 'Night Of Opera'

Lloyd Hudson, chairman of the Music Department, is preparing another presentation of the chorus. The Music Department also experienced a rather hectic Homecoming Weekend.

The chorus, said Mr. Hudson, will put on a "Night of Opera" sometime. The evening will consist of pieces from the Broadway musical, The Music Man.

Six students took part in a recital the Friday of Homecoming Weekend. Sharon Blake, Paul Rodrick and Sylvia Parker sang solos, accompanied by Miss Ann Darden at the piano. In a piano duet Sylvia Evans and Linda McWatty played the Third Movement from Gershwin's Concerto in F, Harry McCabe accompanied on the Tymbany.

The Top Twelve sang for the Eastern District of the Episcopal Church at the Cape Fear that Friday evening. Nancy James did the choreography for the numbers from The Music Man.

Saturday night the Wilmington College Band played at the coronation ceremony. Dale Donahue, co-chairman of the Dance Committee, originally approached members of the band with the idea of getting a group together to play during the game. The playing, directed by William Adcock, was restricted to halftime.

Mr. Hudson spent the following weekend at Indiana University being interviewed concerning opportunities of acquiring a scholarship or fellowship toward his studying there this coming academic year.

SNEA To Hear Students

Student National Education Association members will hear exchange students, Ziola Rosa Alvan and Lousica Garcia, from South America at their next meeting, Feb. 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the lecture room of Kenan.

Miss Alvan and Miss Garcia will speak about the education policies and the classroom procedure of their countries and compare these with those of the United States.

Janie Braswell, SNEA program chairman, has asked that all members "please attend."

ICC To Repair Sundial

Meeting last Thursday night, the Interclub Council announced plans for fixing the sundial given by the class of 1967 and placing it back in front of Kenan.

Although each club had been contacted by Mike Meier, president of the student body and chairman of the ICC, attendance was poor, according to Mike, who was disappointed at the number of clubs (11 of the 21 campus organizations were not represented) having a representative at the meeting.

Mike announced that Eithrage Warters would assume responsibilities as vice chairman of the ICC. Secretary for the council is Renee Hartman. Volunteering for the post of treasurer was Terry Wortley.

Talking about the sundial, Mike noted that it was presently in the boiler room of Kenan. Placing it back where it belongs requires both cleaning it and money.

The fact that the sundial did not keep good time was discussed. However, this was said to be not important. Ray Pacer, Circle K representative, commented, "Whether or not it is a good project, or whether or not it keeps good time, it needs to be done."

Believing there was still some money left in the treasury from the class of 1967, Mike was going to check on this and also check into what had to be done to the sundial and report back at the next meeting.

Mike showed the ICC members present the Calendar he had purchased for the purpose of keeping up with campus activities and regulating campus activities. "This calendar will stop the problem of conflicting interests," he told the ICC. With the information given to him by the ICC members about their organizations, Mike will keep the calendar up to date. This calendar will be put up in the Pub.

ICC members heard a report from Eithrage Warters from BSU about the tutorial project now underway and also a plea from John Blair, Civitan, about clubs getting information in for the time capsule by the Feb. 23 deadline.

Adcock Speaks Monday Night

The third lecture in the current series of science lectures will be presented Monday night, Feb. 19, at 7:30, in Hoggard Hall.

Louis Adcock will be the featured speaker. His lecture will be entitled, "A Determination of Ionization Constants in Mixed Solvent Systems." "It'll probably be a discussion of how you use the potentiometric method," stated Mr. Adcock.

"This series of lectures is oriented toward chemical phenomena. The subjects of the lectures are of a specialized nature in that one would probably not have scheduled time in the course of classroom work to develop the concepts fully. Also, they are oriented, in general, to the person who has finished some college chemistry," said Lewis E. Nance, who scheduled the series.

Mr. Nance gave the second lecture of the series on Jan. 9. He spoke on the subject "New and Old Quantum Theories of Atomic Structure."

A coffee hour follows each lecture in the series.

FINE ARTS - - IN REVIEW

by RANDY DEL LAGO

On Friday night, February 23, the Fine Arts Committee will present the second in its series of contemporary films: Michelangelo Antonioni's L'AVVENTURA ("The Adventure").

Antonioni, whose last film was the widely acclaimed BLOW-UP, deals in L'AVVENTURA with the erotic decadence of the wealthy, leisure-minded class, a milieu in which open sex is much the same as open air: both sheltered settings for unrestrained pleasure-seeking.

The story itself springs from the mysterious disappearance of a girl named Anna during a pleasure trip by small yacht. When the party encounters an island off the coast of Sicily and disembarks, the girl either falls accidentally to her death from a cliff on the island, commits suicide, or (as later seems possible) is assaulted and kidnapped by some prowling smugglers. In any case, neither she nor her body is ever found.

The narrative then focuses on the people with whom Anna had been acquainted: Sandro, to whom "all women are the same... or, at least, seem the same," and Claudia, Anna's friend, who eventually takes the dead girl's place as Sandro's lover.

This film is a leading example of the new erotic candor in motion pictures. It is lusciously photographed and meticulously rendered with a sure, even audacity.

While it attained international fame at once, LA DOLCE VILTA nosed it out for the top prize at Cannes in 1960. In general, however, it is still preferred over Fellini's epic; and, in the international poll of film critics in 1961-62, it left LA DOLCE VITA far behind and was selected as one of the top ten foreign films of recent years.

L'AVVENTURA will be shown at 8:30 p.m., on February 23. Afterward, a discussion will be held moderated by Professor Anne Fitzgibbon.

SEAHAWKS OUT OF NAIA TOURNAMENT

Frederick College

Balanced scoring and a tight defense in the second half earned the Seahawks an 85-75 triumph over Frederick College.

Four 'Hawk starters wound up in double figures as they outscored the visitors 19-4 in the first ten minutes of the second half to take charge for the rest of the route.

Co-captain Frank Bua, with a variety of moves, hit on eight of 13 from the floor and five of seven at the line for 21 points.

Butch Budd, the other 'Hawk captain, contributed 17 points along with Mike McQuay. Jim Hall hit for 15.

Top gunner for coach Bob Hodges' Lions was 6-5 junior Dan Roberts with 25 points.

John Sumner nailed 15 points and Bob Jasper had 13.

The Seahawks record stands at 8-8 with this victory.

The lead changed hands regularly in the close of the first half before Budd hit at the free throw line to give Wilmington a 41-40 halftime lead.

After Frederick went ahead at the start of the second portion of the game, 42-41, McQuay, Hall, Bua and company took command of the contest behind a tough defense.

Wilmington limited the Lions to two field goals in fourteen tries in the first nine minutes of the second half.

Belmont Abbey College

Playing superb basketball at the beginning and end the Seahawks edged Belmont Abbey 79-76.

Wilmington started fast with Chris Speciale connecting on jump shots near the key against a Crusader zone. With Speciale hitting the boards and nailing six of the first 12 points 'Hawks got, Wilmington took an early lead.

Greg Patton, 5-9 guard for the Crusaders, connecting from all over the court moved his teammates past the Seahawks for a 41-39 halftime lead.

Leading 74-71 Belmont Abbey was charged with a technical foul for illegal substitution. The 'Hawks to possession of the ball and Jerry Martin and Jim Hall both hit clutch baskets in the final 60 seconds of the game.

Frank Bua was the leading scorer with 18 points. Hall had 16 points, Budd and Martin connected for 15 points and Speciale for 11.

Patton finished with 22 points for the Crusaders, Frank Zinke canned 17 points, John Bemby 14 points and Charlie Landrum sailed through 13 points.

Augusta College

Bill Denny, the Augusta College captain, halted a four game winning streak of Wilmington College with a sparkling 29 point performance, 26 coming in the second half, to give the Jaguars an 87-80 overtime victory.

Denny stunned the large Wilmington College homecoming crowd with his long jumpers in the second half. At one point he hit six straight shots to keep the Jaguars in the contest.

Augusta took a five point lead after the first half ended in a 37-37 tie. But Jerry Martin and Mike McQuay kept Wilmington in the contest.

With five seconds on the clock Butch Budd drove through the middle of the key to sink a lay-up and send the contest into overtime.

Wilmington gained an 80-76 lead in the overtime but a controversial decision by the referees and two lost possessions handed the Jaguars the victory.

Asheville-Biltmore College

The Bulldogs had five starters in double figures as they ran the 'Hawks off the court 108-85.

Guy Batsel scored 26 points to pace the Asheville attack. Lee Shuster added 19 points, Hugh McElhaney scored 18, Steve Lucas collected 15 and Chris Lee nailed ten points.

Mike McQuay was the only bright spot in the losing performance for the Seahawks as he scored 31 points and snarled 16 rebounds. Butch Budd scored 14 points, Frank Bua 13 points, Jerry Martin added 12 and Jim Hall 11.

Campbell College

Campbell College eliminated the Seahawks from any post-season tournament with a 78-70 victory. The loss dropped Wilmington three games behind pace-setter Asheville-Biltmore.

Playing without the services of 6-7 frosh Chris Speciale, out with a back injury, the 'Hawks fell 16 points behind and could not recover from that deficit.

Frank Bua paced the 'Hawk scoring attack with 24 points. Butch Budd and Jerry Martin each contributed 12 points and Mike McQuay ten.

Frank Zinke was high scorer for the Crusaders with 20 markers.

Greg Patton canned 17 points, Ed O'Brien 15 points, Charlie Landrum swished through 14 points and John Bemby had 12.

JERRY MARTIN scoring against Frederick College. Martin has been the sparkplug in the most recent Seahawk victories by coming off the bench and taking control of the 'Hawk offense.

SLOWTROTTERS, LOSERS IN DIVISION SHOWDOWN

By WALT HEALEY, JR.

By the time this article is printed the game for the number one spot in intramural basketball will have been played between the Harlem Slowtrotters and the Born Losers. Both clubs are 7-0 as I type this story.

At the same time the number three and four clubs, Invaders and Hot Dogs, will have met in their fight for tournament positions in the standings.

The Born Losers are coached by Wayne Barker and under his leadership have a number of games without the services of key players. Barker has the Losers throw up a full court press when the game is close and with ball hawks like Sam Askew and Eddie Lewis up front they thoroughly frustrate their opponents. The Losers front line has done a fine job especially on the offensive boards. Phil Oakley, Willie Franks, Steve Mundy, Donald Harrington, and, Barry Mitchell alternate giving Barker's club solid depth up front.

Head coach James Hebron of the Slowtrotters has instilled in his club the double "D"-depth and defense. The Slowtrotters perhaps have the best bench strength in the league and play a strong zone defense that usually limits the opposition to one shot.

Pete Eyer, Mark Young, captain Bob Vaughn, John Lynch are the guards for the Slowtrotters. Chuck Lewis, Chuck Cuppett, Walt Healey, Wayne Kellum, Jim Garner make up the front line. Brother Hebron has the Slowtrotters moving off the defensive boards and passing well.

The Invaders have lost only two contests and the Hot Dogs three. Parrish Croom, Sandy Dew, and Jim Atkins pace the Invaders offensive attack, while Russ, Ted Newton, and Gary Watkins carry the scoring load for the Hot Dogs.

The post-season tournament will get under way later on in the month. The first bracket will be the number one, four five teams. The second bracket will be the number two, three, six, seven clubs.

The Bulvkorses and the Civilian Chargers both forfeited two contests during the regular season thereby eliminating themselves for a possible tournament berth.

Standings as of February 11:

	Won	Lost
Harlem Slowtrotters	7	0
Born Losers	7	0
Invaders	5	2
Hot Dogs	4	3
Kappas	4	4
Pi Kappa Phi	3	5
Glory Stompers	2	6

WHATS HAPPENING BROTHER?

The key is practice. They play the game every day between November and March. It is time consuming for them, true, but most of them have a feeling inside that reaches its height each time they hear that beautiful sound-swish.

Most often they are lean, agile athletes, quite tall for the most part, above the average height of man today of five-eleven. Some are considered freaks by many, and rightly so, for their arms for the most part are longer, their hands bigger, and their wrists stronger. They run wind sprints to build up the endurance of their frame, which is constantly being hit by elbows, hips and legs of their opponents.

In essence it is a lonely sport because they do very little thinking on the field of battle. No, for argument's sake let us say that there is thinking by these people but the majority of the time they do things by reactions to situations as they arise.

They must sacrifice many things that normal people who play to watch them play do not have to sacrifice. In college and high school they are treated fairly well but as a professional their eating habits consist a majority of the time of hamburgers and such. The amateur on the other hand must cope with the infamous alumni association. The association has a great interest in a winning team but once the lost column starts getting filled it is back to traveling in cars instead of streamline busses to various arenas.

For all the pros and cons they do have one outstanding advantage over the bloody heathens who pay to watch them in action:

The credit belongs to the man in the arena — whose face is marred by dust, sweat, and blood; who knows great enthusiasms, the great devotion, and spends himself in a worthy cause; who at best if he wins knows the thrills of high achievement and if he fails at least fails while daring greatly so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who knew neither victory or defeat.

John F. Kennedy

ON THE SIDELINES

by GIL HUGULEY

Right or wrong, the general feeling about Homecoming was, "We wuz robbed!"

We hate to fan the embers of smouldering hatreds, but let's re-examine the closing minutes of that overtime.

With about two minutes left, Speciale stole the ball and was fouled by Augusta. Was Chris travelling before he was fouled? If so, did the official who saw Chris travelling stop the play before Chris was fouled? We don't think so.

Now any good basketball official will admit he makes mistakes, but just when is it proper for a call to be changed? It seems to us that it's somewhat like parliamentary procedure in which one cannot discuss a different question from the one currently on the floor.

It is a known fact that a foul call was made against Augusta, and it's generally agreed that the foul was called before the other official decided to call travelling on Speciale.

We recognize and admit that if Speciale was indeed travelling (and we aren't willing to admit it yet), then he could not have been legally fouled a few seconds later. However, that's not the point. The point is that it is the job of the officials to regulate the conduct of the game as it proceeds, not after seconds or minutes have passed. The players have enough on their minds without having to worry about whether or not the officials are doing their jobs. Would we have expected Chris to say, "Uh, Mr. Referee, I'm sorry, but I'll have to give up the ball. You see, I was travelling and since you didn't call it right away, I thought I'd better bring it to your attention." That would, in the strictest cause of the word be the honest thing to do, but it could be done only at the risk of blowing the ref's mind. On the other hand, the ref would not react kindly if Chris had informed him, "Sir, I respectfully submit that my worthy opponent here has fouled me and I demand satisfaction at the free-throw line."

We know it sounds like sour grapes, but it seems to us to have been a blatant case of bad officiating. So what if Augusta was 16 and 4. It was obvious from the way our Hawks played that they were "up" for the game. Augusta surely wasn't playing like a team with 16 wins under its belt. That one call got our boys so shook, or angry, or disgusted — whatever it was, it affected the way they played.

If we haven't convinced you, then we probably never will, but our boys deserve better than what they've gotten this season. They've worked hard when things looked pretty bleak — and everybody knows it's hardest to call forth that extra effort when the goal looks so far away.

Well fellows, you've got at least one guy who'll look back on that Homecoming game and always say, "We wuz robbed!"

MARIJUANA

New Hanover County School officials did about the only thing they could do under the circumstances: they pledged cooperation with law enforcement officials and declined further comment. This was also the course of action followed by Wilmington College President William M. Randall and Board of Trustees Chairman L. Bradford Tillery.

As it became increasingly clear that the marijuana arrests involved more than one "pot" party with a few friends attending, it almost seemed that Dr. Randall and Tillery were the only college officials who didn't want to comment.

On January 30, an article appeared in the Wilmington Star under the byline of Education Editor Carolyn Zimmerman, quoting Dean of Student J. Marshall Crews and Dean of Men Thomas P. Brown on possible disciplinary measures by the college against students convicted of marijuana - connected charges. Students who were convicted of such charges, the deans were quoted as saying, were subject to disciplinary measures which "could" include dismissal.

Only one of the first nine persons arrested was a Wilmington College student, but the events that followed found the college embroiled in more controversy than it has probably ever encountered in its 21-year history.

On January 31, an article appeared in the Star quoting several professors on the subjects of marijuana and legalization of marijuana. Assistant professor of political science Thomas E. Scism immediately announced that he was quoted out of context and misquoted and that he was investigating the possibility of a court suit against the Star-News

Newspapers, Inc. (See story elsewhere in this issue.)

Art instructors John Nygren and Tommy Sue Byrd were both quoted as being in favor of the legalization of marijuana. Neither has since claimed to have been misquoted. Nygren was quoted as saying that the marijuana laws were "archaic as hell." Miss Byrd was quoted as saying marijuana should be legalized, "but nothing else," presumably meaning she was not in favor of the legalization of LSD, STP, and other so-called mind-expanding drugs generally considered stronger than marijuana.

Dr. Granville B. Johnson, who teaches psychology, was quoted as being against the legalization of marijuana "until they do research to see what it does to people physically and mentally." Claude Howell of the Art Department was quoted as being against the use of drugs because he "believed in freedom." He went on to say that, "If you take drugs, you aren't free."

As might be expected in a community where the general climate of opinion is conservative, the story created more controversy. Wilmington City Councilman John C. Symmes issued a statement, printed in the February 2 issue of the Star, stating that the "gravest aspect" was the "news report that three Wilmington College professors stating that marijuana should be legalized." (Editor's note: Nothing in the news story could be construed to mean that three professors favored legalization of marijuana. Scism was quoted as being "indifferent" to drugs and he says he was misquoted at that. Miss Bird and Nygren were the only faculty members quoted as being in favor of the legalization of marijuana. Both are instructors, not professors.)

"This could be interpreted as the sanctioning of harmful and illegal drugs," Symmes was quoted as saying, "by the professors of a tax supported institution, where their position of trust and guidance could encourage students there and also in our high schools and junior high schools to engage in this harmful and illegal practice." The matter, he said, would be brought up at the next City Council meeting. The general climate of student opinion was that the city council has no authority over the college, a state-operated institution, and Symmes is a bachelor with no experience in any field remotely connected with drugs (he's in insurance), and therefore the matter was no business of his or the council's. (See story elsewhere in this issue.)

This statement created great indignation at the next meeting of the Wilmington College Student Senate. The result was a resolution authorizing the formation of a delegation, if deemed necessary at a later date, to appear before the Wilmington City Council protesting the Council's involvement in the matter and defending the freedom of the faculty to speak on any matter without interference. (See story elsewhere in this issue.)

The same issue of the Star which carried Symmes' statement had a story quoting several Wilmington physicians who were all of the opinion that marijuana should not be legalized.

Exactly what would happen to the students accused of possession of marijuana remained a matter of speculation. Recorder's Court has no authority to try felonies but only to hold preliminary hearings to determine if there is sufficient evidence to send the case to the Grand Jury. The Grand Jury then hears the accusations and determines if there is sufficient evidence to bring the defendants to trial in Superior Court. During the last term of the Superior Court, the grand jury returned true bills in every case presented, meaning all were sent to Superior Court for trial. Informed opinion is that all of the marijuana suspects will be tried, since only the State's side of the case is heard by Recorder's Court and the Grand Jury.

Kelly, if convicted, undoubtedly faces a prison sentence. Whether the District Solicitor will make an effort to send the rest of the defendants, mostly high school and college students, to prison, and whether a Superior Court judge will hand out active sentences, is strictly a matter of speculation.

The image of the college in the eyes of the community has undoubtedly suffered as a result of the publicity. The opinion of listeners calling an opinion program on a local radio station (WHSL) has been running strongly against the use of marijuana and against statements by college faculty members to the effect that it should be legalized.

Whether these callers represented a small fringe or whether they were simply the more vocal members of a majority who shared their views, is a matter of speculation. There was no one around last week, however, who would say the publicity has helped the college in the eyes of the public.

COUNCIL

Symmes' statement spoke of the "arrests at Wilmington College." Also two, not three, faculty members stated they were in favor of marijuana being legalized.

"I don't believe these faculty members should be jeopardized for saying what they believe," Mike stressed.

Mike explained that college policy regarding the use of drugs was set by state laws.

Symmes believed Mike and the students of the college had "missed the point." Anger was not being directed at the college, but at what concerned the city of Wilmington. According to Symmes, the statements by the professors were very harmful. He was sorry the college and the student body should take offense, but the welfare of the welfare of the city's children had to be taken care of.

Mike told the Council the Student Senate of the College believed the issue was not who used marijuana, but was a problem of free speech. "If this is kept up, our faculty will begin to feel inhibited to say what they feel."

Issues like this one will drive our good intellectuals away. We need them," Mike said.

Symmes told Mike and the delegation that some of the people who had called praising him for his statement were graduates of the best colleges and agreed that marijuana was a great menace and ought to be challenged. "I'm sorry to displease you."

Mike requested that Symmes statement just go on file, not go on record.

Councilman Luther Cromartie, who had previously welcomed the delegation saying how pleased the Council was to have them come to the meeting as was an example of the democratic system, said speaking of the delegation, "They know what is going on. We can't kid them. It would be remiss to go into this too deeply without their consent."

LUTHER CROMARTIE
"... Can't Kid Them"

Professor Considering Legal Action

(Editor's Note: Since Thomas Scism is contemplating a law suit, his attorney has advised him to "use common sense" in granting interviews and to avoid anything which might be taken as sensationalism. He had declined a request by a Wilmington television station to interview him but has consented to be interviewed by the Seahawk. He has read the following story and stated that he was accurately quoted. He was asked to read it in the interest of accuracy only.)

Thomas Scism, a Wilmington College assistant professor of political science has engaged an out-of-town law firm and is investigating the possibility of a law suit as a result of publicity in the Wilmington Morning Star, following recent arrests of a number of high school and college students on marijuana charges.

Scism claimed he was misquoted and quoted out of context in a story which appeared in the January 31, 1968, issue of the Star, under the headline "Wilmington College Professors Take Issue With Marijuana Policy, Law" with the overline, in smaller type "Contain, Protect Violators."

The "Contain, Protect Violators" overline completely distorts the point he made in the interview with Star Education Editor Carolyn Zimmerman, according to Scism. In the body of the story, he is quoted as saying "We should contain the excesses, but learn to live with them because they are young."

Nothing in the story, he says, even if the quotes were accurate, justifies the overline, which he thinks carries the connotation that he feels the college should protect violators from the law.

"If a student is arrested for driving too fast, he pays a fine and possibly has his license suspended," says Scism, "but the courts don't take away his driving privileges for life. This would be to destroy part of a man's life."

But, Scism says, if a student has violated the law and is punished by the court for a serious offense and the college later expels him, it may destroy his chances of getting an education forever, a development which would hurt him the rest of his life. Scism says what he said in the interview was that after the court has meted out punishment, the college should help him rather than punish him further. "I did not mean," he says, "that the college should contain and protect them from the punishment of the court," which is what he feels would be the impression the reader would get from the story.

On another point, Scism feels he was misquoted. The story included the following paragraph:

"He (Scism) characterized himself as 'indifferent' to drugs, saying 'I don't want my children taking it any more than I want them getting drunk.'"

Scism says that he was against the use of drugs stronger than marijuana and expressed violent opposition to them in the interview with Mrs. Zimmerman. He also said he told her he was opposed to the use of marijuana, but that he could not express an opinion on whether marijuana should be legalized because he knew so little about marijuana that he did not have enough information to form an opinion on whether they should be legalized. Since he did not have an opinion on whether marijuana should be legalized, he said, he stated in the interview that he was indifferent on the issue.

Scism says the law firm he has retained is studying all aspects of the case and if the members of the firm think he can successfully sue, he will do so. He said his attorneys have stated that any suit would probably name as defendants Mrs. Zimmerman, the editor of the paper, its publisher, and the Star-News Newspapers, Inc., the firm which publishes the Star.

Meier Reads Resolution Before Council

Wilmington City Councilman John C. Symmes stands at table as Wilmington College Student Body President and the council watch the Student Senate's resolution to the Wilmington City Council. Discussion between the students urged the police to "suppress the use" of marijuana in schools, excluding college, and commending the police on their work. Meeting ended peacefully with it obvious to everyone that Symmes and the students were not one iota closer to agreement than they were before meeting started.

PRACTICING FOR "THE FIREBUGS"
Terry Rogers Coaches John Blair, Jr.

'Firebugs' Opens Tonight

Wilmington College Theatre will present the contemporary play, "The Firebugs" by Max Frisch, on March 8, 9 and 10 in the S.R.O. Theatre. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

Max Frisch, the important German-Swiss dramatist and novelist, is the author of "The Firebugs" and it was first produced in the original German at Zurich Schauspielhaus on March 29, 1968. This represents Frisch's first excursion into the realm of "humor noir" and the Theatre of the Absurd.

Although "The Firebugs" is a sardonic commentary on a contemporary political phenomenon, it also shows the influence of the Absurd Theatre in the parodistic treatment of the subject and its resolute pursuit of the absurd.

"The Firebugs" or Biedermann and di Brandstetter, tells the cautionary tale of a highly respectable bourgeois Biedermann, a manufacturer of hair lotion, and his wife, Babette. These roles are played by David James and Rosemary Salata, respectively. Their house is invaded by a trio of shady characters, seemingly destitute. These three men are Sepp Schmitz, a wrestler, Willi Eisenring, a waiter and a Ph.D., who are portrayed by Robert Murphy, John Blair, and George Spelvin, respectively.

Biedermann suspects that his guests are incendiaries but he believes that they will not set fire to his house, if only he treats them nicely and has his maid, Anna, played by Donna West, serve them a special dinner of goose and red cabbage.

Two others in the cast are the welen Mrs. Knechtling, played by Helen Huneycutt, and the Policeman, played by Jack Lane.

The civilization that is being sacrificed to the fire is one in which "most people believe not in God but in the fire brigade." This play is framed by a burlesque pseudo-Greek chorus of firemen, who are constantly affirm their readiness to intervene. This bucket brigade is composed of Tony Rivenbark, John Richardson, and Michael Sampley.

W. Terry Rogers, professor of Drama and Speech at the college, is the over-all director of this production. Serving as assistant director is Helen Huneycutt with special effects and lighting being handled by Jack Gerock and Butch Huffman, respectively.

Charged with construction of the thrust-type setting for this thoroughly modern play are Carmen Aragona, Sam Askew, Al Carrus, Stephen Clemmons, Randy del Lago, Robert Elliott, Glenn Hodges, Randy Hughes, Stacy Jackson, Davis Sanford, Joe Simard, Joseph Williams.

Catherine Burruss is the production secretary, Anne Fitzgibbon, the poster design, and David Stone, the publicity.

Admission to this production will be by presentation of the Student Activity Cards or through the purchase of tickets for one dollar at the door. The box office opens at 7:30 p.m.

College Changes Admissions Policy

by JOHN BLAIR, JR.

Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, Dean of Faculty, presented a report, revising the entrance requirements, to the Wilmington College Board of Directors recently. Reynolds said the faculty had voted unanimously for the recommendation.

This resolution is stated as follows:

"The requirements for admission to Wilmington College are (1) graduation from an accredited high school, (2) a satisfactory score on the Scholastic Aptitude Test of the College Entrance Examination Board, and (3) a "C" average on all work attempted in senior high school. Students failing to meet the above minimum requirements but who can show evidence of ability to perform satisfactorily in college will be considered on an individual basis for admission.

A satisfactory score on the SAT consists of at least a 325 on both the math and verbal exams. This remains the same as in the past. Dr. T. V. Moseley, chairman of the History Department, claims that the SAT scores have been, in a number of cases, ignored, he hopes that this will cease to be true in the future.

J. Marshall Crews, Dean of Students, stated that the main reason for this revision was that students with below a "C" average were wasting their time in college. Crews also said that high school work is more indicative of a student's ability than is the SAT.

Dr. Granville Johnson, member of the Admissions Committee, said this measure will "not affect many students." He went on to say that this new set up is based on a survey showing that students who just meet these basic requirements have a 50-50 chance of making it. Dr. Johnson said the committee felt that this breaking off point was the fairest to both the students and the college.

Dr. Gerald Shinn, also of the Admissions Committee, felt that these new standards were fair. "They shouldn't be made stronger, but grades and SAT scores only show part of the student," Dr. Shinn said the college should add new measures but also keep the old ones. "A new measuring stick," he went on, "would be the BEV, or Biographical Environment Test. This way we can test things beyond how well a student can memorize." According to Shinn, the BEV would take things like jobs and the student's background into consideration. In this way the college could get a more comprehensive outlook on the prospective student.

Dr. Shinn stressed that a student's academic record is not the final yardstick, not as long as high schools teach memorization.

"If you have a competent Admissions Committee then you have no problems," said Dr. Moseley. So, apparently the rules may change but it is the human, individual element that remains the deciding factor.

Senate Approves Revised Constitution

After many months of debate during the Student Senate meetings, the revised constitution was approved by the Senate during their Feb. 26 meeting. The constitution will next go before the students who must ratify it by a two-thirds majority vote of those students voting.

"I guess that terminates my association with the Senate," said Hugh Newkirk, chairman of the constitution committee, after the Senate approved the constitution instead of waiting for the constitution to be gone over for grammatical errors first.

However, before the constitution was approved, several additional changes were made in it. The first of these changes concerned the necessity of having general elections during winter quarter to fill any vacancies in the class officer structure.

Chairman of the Board of Elections, Ray Pacer, suggested that instead of having to hold a general election to fill vacancies created when either a class officer had to leave his office, the president of the class could appoint someone to take this office.

Ray's suggestion was changed by Freshman class president Bill Harrell to read the highest ranking officer of a class appoint someone to fill the vacant office. However, this idea was not approved by many of the senators who felt this would not give the members of the class a voice in the selection of their officers.

George Hodnett, junior class president, disagreeing with both Ray and Bill's idea, suggested having elections to fill a vacant office during a class meeting to let the members of the class feel as if they were participating. This idea was endorsed by Junior Class Secretary John Blair, who urged that the class be able to give some sort of approval as to who their officers would be.

It was also brought out by Ray that in politics, there is no such thing as a person being drafted for office. If a person wants a certain position, he usually has himself nominated for such a position or nominates himself. "The people wanting to run usually find out what is needed to do to get elected."

"The class president is elected by the class and this means this person is responsible to the class," Ray continued. He also mentioned that the president of the class, if he has a job to be done, usually knows the best person to do it and could, therefore, appoint this person. "This would make for a more effective class," he stated.

Sophomore senator Barbara Halterman disagreed, "Even if a person would be good for getting one thing done, he might not get anything else done."

A compromise by Mike Meier, Student Body President, to leave it to the discretion of the class president to either appoint someone to fill a vacant office or either call for an election was suggested. This compromise was passed by the Senate.

Barbara, making the second change in the constitution, wanted the section concerning how often the Senate must meet to be changed. The constitution had stated the Senate would meet every Monday, instead of every other Monday as it now does.

After it was cleared that the President of the Senate could call a special meeting if it was necessary, the constitution was changed requiring meetings every other Monday as it exists in the old constitution.

Junior Senator Marian Loftus will work with Dean Thomas Brown and the members of the constitution committee to clear up the grammatical errors in the writing of the constitution before it goes before the student body. No date has yet been set for it to go before the student body.

DANCE

No definite plans have yet been made. The Dance Committee Co-Chairman, Dean Thomas Brown, will be a dance April 8.

It was decided to have this dance at the home of the Homecoming Queen and the Homecoming King. It had also been a tradition of the Dance Committee to have one dance at the home of the Homecoming Queen and the Homecoming King.

At this time, the date of the dance is undecided upon. It will be held on April 8 or 9.

Senate Refuses To Sponsor King

The Student Senate voted Feb. 26 to endorse the speaking appearance of Dr. Martin Luther King when he comes to Wilmington, but refused to sponsor his appearance since this would entail the contribution of money to the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, a Negro organization.

Although the senators declared they would be in favor of hearing Dr. King speak, they were most emphatically not in favor of allowing Senate funds to go to SCLC.

Good for College

Although as Junior Class Secretary John Blair, Jr. pointed out that the Senate members were elected as representatives from their classes and this was the time to think about what is good for the college and the community and the appearance of Dr. King was an excellent thing, the Senate did not agree.

Matter of Principle

Freshman Class president Bill Harrell agreed that the Senate members were the representatives of the students, but "we have just spent a lot of time building up our good will but no matter what we do, our contribution to SCLC will be misconstrued. It is all a matter of principle."

Board of Election Chairman,

Ray Pacer stated, "There's that segment of the population that no matter what action is taken, that action is going to be misconstrued."

Civil Rights Beneficial

"Civil Rights are often beneficial to whites as well as Negroes; we fail to realize this," commented Dennis Lennon, senior class vice president.

Since Dr. King is coming to town whether the Senate sponsors him or not, the Senate decided only to endorse his appearance.

GRADUATION

Plans for graduation are now being made, according to Dean Helena Cheek.

Dr. William Wagoner, president-elect of the college will be the speaker for graduation June 9.

Seniors must order their graduation announcements by March 14 at Kingoff Jewelers in downtown Wilmington.

Also during Registration for Spring Quarter seniors will be measured for their caps and gowns in the lobby of Hanover Hall. "Please come by and be fitted," urged Jerry Bron, senior class president.

Debating

The money for the Debating Team which, was never reorganized this year, remained exactly where it belonged in the beginning, in the hands of the Student Senate. If the members of the Senate would just begin formal organization into a negative and an affirmative team, Wilmington College would again have a debating society, it doesn't have much of a Student Senate, as evidenced by the last Senate meeting.

To begin, one student commenting on the dirty condition of the Pub was asked by another student why food could not be taken into the upstairs portion of the Pub. It is interesting to note that this same student asking the question was the one, who earlier this year, had been appointed as chairman of a committee on the Pub. But, of course, he had never formed a committee so the committee never met. But a great discussion did take place.

Another instance of the great loyalty of the Senate is the recent delegation of students which went before the Wilmington City Council. The senate was supposed to form this delegation (and when the delegation was suggested there was talk that some "undesirable" students might be on it) but, there were only three members of the Senate at the City Council meeting. However, one senator had the nerve to declare during the recent Senate meeting about the fact that when "We went out on a limb..." What exactly did he do to become included in this we?

The Senate certainly believes in getting things done. Another example is the case of the senator, when being told during a lengthy explanation about why there could be no assemblies on campus, jumped up saying something had to be done to change this policy. He was appointed to check into this, but he never got around to doing anything about what he said he was going to do. In fact, he did not take the first step.

But these are just little things, not to be compared with the incident of great magnitude which showed the debaters at their best: their refusal to sponsor the appearance of Dr. Martin Luther King on campus when he is in Wilmington, tentatively March 23. The majority of the Senators would not even consider this sponsorship because they would have to take from Senate funds money to go to The Southern Christian Leadership Conference, because this was a Negro organization. We would like to congratulate the Senate for sticking to their heritage, that is of being true Southern White Anglo-Saxon Protestants! And if it is true that they were indeed speaking for the majority of the Student Body, then there is truly no hope left.

The Senate should have most definitely voted to sponsor Dr. King. It is not often that a man such as Dr. King, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, comes near Southeastern North Carolina. However, this campus is lucky in having such an organization as the Student Political Activities Club who have agreed wholeheartedly to sponsor Dr. King so that those students who are able to wipe off the prejudices they are burdened with will be able to hear him.

But a discussion of Dr. King is not a discussion of the Senate debating society. In closing, it is no wonder that Mike Meier now turns to the InterClub Council when he wants something done.

Constitution

Yes, the constitution has finally been approved by the Student Senate. Work began on the constitution early fall quarter after plans had been made to revise it last February. Hopefully the constitution will be ready to come before the student body for the two-thirds majority vote necessary before it is ratified sometime before next fall quarter.

With the advent of exams, it is doubted that too much work will be done to correct the grammatical errors now present in the constitution before the beginning of next quarter. Then, as previously said, the constitution has to come before the student body. However, the chairman of the constitution committee, Hugh Newkirk, did not know how this was going to be done except to throw it into the hands of the Board of Elections. It would seem that this vote should be conducted by the members of the constitution committee since they are the ones in charge.

It was hoped that this issue would carry a special story explaining the changes in the constitution in order familiar with it before they are faced with deciding they are or are not in favor of it. However it seemed there were no available copies of the constitution, which, according to Chairman Hugh, have all disappeared. It is hoped that one copy of the constitution will magically reappear before the next paper.

'ANTIGONE'—TRAGIC?

by JERE HODGINS

On February 16, 17, and 18 the Wilmington College Theatre and the Thalian Association terminated their productions of the last five years with the performance of Jean Anouilh's "Antigone." Mrs. Anne Fitzgibbon, Professor of Drama at Wilmington College, directed the final joint effort.

"Antigone" had, as all drama does, both its good and its bad dramatic points. The forced perspective scenery, the rigid uniformity of costuming, and lighting yielded a certain tightness that the play needed, but also heaviness that made it hard for the audience to respond. That is to say, the tightness caused an unwanted heaviness on the fringe of the play and left a vacuum within. This vacuum made it necessary for the energy of the whole play to be transmitted by the actors themselves, which it was not. The interpretation, the direction, or the actors' ability was responsible for this failure.

Again it is a question of these three things which brings us to discuss the cast of "Antigone." The individuals in the cast were varied in their contributions. Tony Rivenbark stood out for his well performed part, not only for diction and movement, but for good overall stage presence which conveyed ease and naturalness. Jim Potter had the polish and grandeur his role called for. Charles Faust, who without mention had the best voice and voice control, hindered the others for that same reason. He left Antigone powerless because of the contrast in their voices. Antigone came to the audience as an indignant teenager who, upon beginning denied the right to wear make-up, defies her deep voiced, tyrannical uncle. Pat Futchs and David James also gave enjoyable performances. Judith Andrews, however, was not acceptable because of her costume along. Her acting ability was there, but it was covered and insulted by a ridiculous and poorly constructed costume.

"Antigone" was indeed "tragic" (not to be confused with "being a tragedy"). The production did in parts evoke feeling but this was an ephemeral feeling. It was not constant, it did not span the whole of the play; therefore, the deafened audience was left searching the stage for some hidden meaning of the high pitched scenes as the chorus told the respective characters' tragic ends.

Earnest Expression

by JOHN MEYLAND

I thought that an essay of instruction would be appreciated by a number of Wilmington College students. This essay is dedicated to anyone who has a distinct desire to sleep in class.

Step 1. Approach your class rather tired.

Step 2. Have a teacher that continually: mumbles in a monotone, ignores the class, and is verbose. At this point the chronic sleeper, if his professor has the previously listed attributes, will be slouched down in his desk; and diligently concentrating to extract some golden tidbit of knowledge from the professors jumbled presentation of the daily assignment. But after a brief lapse of time, complete fatigue slowly advances throughout your weary little form — causing your body to become lax. Consequently, the chin becomes indecorously amalgamated to the chest. Now, if you maintain this position for a prolonged length of time, you will eventually attract undue criticism and not a few sarcastic comments. So you accept the challenge and slowly straighten your contorted physique. Now you open a book — preferably one which pertains to the class in session — place your left elbow on the left quadrant of the desk surface (which is too small), and skillfully cup your hand against the brow. Simultaneously bend the head forward in such a manner that eyes are hidden.

Comment: Now the student that has conscientiously followed the prescribed steps has achieved the perfect — if not ultimate-position: since you have the appearance of an efficient student scanning the assignment. Perfect!

I have found this method of sleeping in class to be far superior to any other technique that has been formulated and tested. And it does look impressive to the professor, who is probably thinking, "why just look at him, the epitome of the attentive student."

FINE ARTS - - IN REVIEW

by RANDY DEL LAGO

On Friday, March 22, the Fine Arts Committee will present Peter Brook's film of William Golding's THE LORD OF THE FLIES.

The original screenplay having been rejected by Sam Spiegel, for whom Brook had originally intended to direct the film, Brook himself took the screenplay, modified it, and — financed by independent backers — finally produced the picture in 1963.

Filmed on an island off Puerto Rico with a non-professional cast, THE LORD OF THE FLIES emerges as a dark and powerful adventurer-horror fable about a group of British schoolboys who revert to savagery on an isolated tropical island.

Professor John Willis will moderate the discussion that will be held after the film.

Later, on April 5, we will present our second program this year of film classics. The first will be THE BLOOD OF A POET (1930), Jean Cocteau's first motion picture. This short film remains, essentially, an exercise in surrealistic cinematography which "lashes the senses," according to the New York Times, "with strange images (that) stimulate responses unheard of in less unusual films."

On the same program is undoubtedly one of the most celebrated films of all time: THE CABINET OF DR. CALIGARI.

This silent classic actually takes us into the mind of a madman to present a compelling narrative, played within a strange, expressionistic dream-world.

This 1919 German film, considered the predecessor of all so-called "horror"-films, is even more "modern" today than it was when it was first produced.

These films will be introduced by Professor Claude Howell.

Jordanian Student Likes College

"It's really a very good college," replied Ghazi Ali Bidwan, when asked his views on Wilmington College. "And Wilmington itself is a quiet, peaceful town, although sometimes too quiet. I think that Wilmington has the potential to be one of the leading towns in North Carolina."

These opinions are the result of four months observation by Ghazi, who arrived here Oct. 1. A native of Jordan, Ghazi is a former student of the American University of Cairo, receiving instruction from both English and American professors there.

Ghazi was in Cairo last summer during the five-day Arab-Israeli war. On the day war broke out, Ghazi's parents were visiting him at the university, and they heard about the war on the car radio.

Ghazi's father came to the United States to prepare for his family to follow. Ghazi, his mother, and his sister went to Amman, the capital of Jordan. They tried to return to their home on the east bank of the Jordan River, but could not do so legally.

Hired Guide

Since it was necessary to attempt to enter Jordan illegally, they hired a guide. When they had almost reached the first village, five Israeli soldiers met them and took all the money they had with them and forced them to return to Amman.

Ghazi feels his family was more fortunate than many of their fellow-Jordanians. Two hundred thousand people left their homes in the first two days of the war with only the clothes they could carry in their hands. Today, 185,000 are still in tents as refugees, and Ghazi stressed the fact that winters there are rough and cold.

Came to States

After two months, Ghazi and his family took visas and came to the United States.

He was anxious to leave the topic of Jordan and discuss his four months in Wilmington. "And now let's come to the states, because the present is much more important than the past."

When asked why he chose Wilmington, he replied that his family came to be near his uncle, who has lived here about 18 years. Ghazi's father and three of his brothers have American Citizenship.

Entered Wilmington College

Last quarter, Ghazi audited some courses at Wilmington College. Winter quarter, he became a full-time student, taking 14 credit-hours. He said about his courses, "I think if the English was my language, I would find the classes much easier."

For physical education, he is taking bowling. Though modest about his bowling average, he seems to be progressing nicely.

In his math course, he said he is, "not doing very good, but am in the middle. I like the French class and am doing good in it, compared to the other students, maybe because it is new for both the other students and for me."

Likes English

English is his favorite subject, but he laments, "Although I study English very hard, I am not making very good in it." However, he praises his teacher by stating, "Mr. McCall is a very good teacher. He loves his work. He tries to help all his students."

Ghazi contrasted the stores in the Arab countries with the ones in Wilmington. "They are well-arranged and well-organized," he said, referring to the Wilmington stores. "Here the stores are very big and contain so many different things."

"In Jordan, they are small and for certain kinds of things. You find them just for kitchen utensils or just for certain kinds of meats." However, he stated that about five stores in Cairo are designed like Wilmington's Belk-Berry.

The people of Jordan have a national dress, which Ghazi terms "very pretty." "Almost all of the old people wear it." Twenty years ago, almost everyone wore the national dress most of the time, but now, it is worn mostly for weddings and festivals. "The young people wear the most modern fashions found in Paris or in New York," stated Ghazi.

Ghazi refused to contrast girls in Jordan with American girls. He said, "It's not fair to make a comparison between the girls in the United States and the girls in my country, for the simple reason that each country has its certain customs, traditions, and culture, which gives the girls a certain quality."

Ghazi plans to get a B.A. Degree in English literature. "I might teach, but I don't think teaching would be my profession. I might teach for a year or two, but not for good."

Wants to Travel

He is interested in traveling and learning the customs and languages of other countries. This summer he hopes to go to Quebec, Canada, but will return to Wilmington next fall to continue his education.

Club To Give Chance For Expression

"To stimulate student interest in good government and to give them a chance to express their opinions," Andre Brousseau, member of the Mathematics Department, will organize a Young Republicans Club at Wilmington College.

"I feel response will definitely be good because many of the students at the college are conservatives or moderates," said Mr. Brousseau. "This club will give the students of different beliefs an opportunity to express their opinions and ideas."

Mr. Brousseau, recently elected president of the New Hanover Young Republican Club, hopes "the club will give students a chance to promote the ideals of good government, discuss information concerning political affairs, and take an active role in the establishment of sound government."

The club will advocate the use of chemical agents in Viet Nam. It is hoped that it will pass a resolution to oppose any 10% surtax on people until the federal government balances the present budget or changes its fiscal policy.

One objective of the club will be to train young people as effective political workers and cooperate in the election of the Republican Party's nominees.

"The New Hanover Young Republican Club is open only to residents of the county," said Mr. Brousseau. "The Young Republican Club of Wilmington College will give students from here as well as students from out of town a chance to voice their opinions because it is open to everyone."

"Membership is open to anyone who wants to come into contact with political ideas and to collect, analyze, discuss, and disseminate information of a political nature," said Mr. Brousseau.

Greek Lines

Pi Mu

The second Greek Letter Society on Wilmington College Campus to receive national colonization is Chi Sigma Phi Sorority.

Sunday afternoon, Feb. 25, the local sorority became the Gamma Kappa Colony of Phi Mu Fraternity. "The colonization was the culmination of many hopes and lots of planning by the Sisters of Chi Sigma Phi," stated Treasurer Kathy Bradley.

Chi Sigma Phi was inducted into the pledgeship of Phi Mu by a delegation from Atlantic Christian College.

Held at St. Andrews Covenant Presbyterian Church, the induction marked the beginning of a ten-week pledgeship, at the end of which the Colony will be inducted as a National Chapter of Phi Mu. Laurel Baker, Phi Mu Colony President, stated, "We feel that our colonization begins a new era in sorority life here, and that the opportunities offered women students for a more satisfactory college life are now unlimited."

Pi Kappa Phi

"Since Dec. 13, Pi Sigma Mu, Colony of Pi Kappa Phi, had anxiously been awaiting the week-end of Feb. 23, stated Fraternity Brother Robert Prince. Friday night, 32 Brothers went through the induction ritual of Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity.

Saturday afternoon ended the official chartering procedure. Saturday night there was a stag banquet at Fisher's Restaurant. It was held to let the school and community know that there is now a national fraternity on campus," explained Robert.

James R. Golden, the National Historian of Pi Kappa Phi, was the speaker. "Everyone present was quite impressed with his outstanding rhetoric ability," Robert continued.

The week-end ended with an open house Sunday afternoon. Visiting the Fraternity House were many Faculty members, students, and parents of the new Pi Kappa Phi Brothers, who helped them celebrate this momentous occasion.

Delta Epsilon

Delta Epsilon Fraternity recently elected new officers who are Ed Sooy, Master; Rooney Maguire, Keeper of the Annals; Jimmy Doss, Keeper of the Exchequer; Wayne Kellum, Pledgmaster; Bill Chapman, Sentinel; John Bates, Scribe; and Ed Norris, Keeper of the House.

The Fraternity is expecting an active Rush during Spring Quarter. John Bates, chairman of the committee delegated to find a Fraternity House, said that they were "running down all leads in an effort to find a House. We fully expect to have one in time for Spring Rush Week."

Sigma Phi Sigma

"Something big is going to happen at Wilmington College—something that our Sorority is going to do—because the whole student body is going to be invited," promised Diane Sellers, publicity chairman of Sigma Phi Sigma Sorority. "It will involve everyone and will offer something for all," added Connie Branch. The Sorority Sisters refused to elaborate.

Sigma Phi Sigma's first project was a car wash. It was held Saturday, Feb. 10. The Sorority netted $95 from this initial project.

An initiation celebration dinner was held by the Sorority on Saturday night, March 2, at the Holiday Inn. In addition to the Sigma Phi Sigma Sisters and their dates, Inter-Fraternity Council Members and their dates were invited.

Sigma Phi Kappa

"The Sigma Phi Kappa House has been really going for the past month," stated Kappa Brother George Crouch. Scholarship programs have been inacted in order for the Fraternity to be able to achieve better standards of school work.

Officers for the coming year will soon be elected. The Fraternity Brothers are currently considering who will be the best man for each office.

A few weeks ago, the Kappas took a trip to the mountains of North Carolina, where they "tried some John-Claude Killy tactics," according to George. "However," he continued, "none of them seemed to work. Almost everyone tried their hand at skiing on those slippery slopes. Everyone came back without any bones broken and ready to go next year."

SEAHAWK BASKETBALL SEASON ENDS IN SKID

The Wilmington College Basketball Team finished the 1967-68 season on an eight-game skid that left them with a 9-16 record. The Seahawks of Coach Bill Brooks dropped an overtime decision to Georgia Southern, 68-67; fell far behind Campbell College in the first half to go down 88-71; and lost at South Carolina Baptist, 93-82.

Coach Brooks lost two starters during the losing streak—Chris Speciale and Butch Budd. Speciale was ailing with a back injury and then became academically ineligible for the last three games. Budd re-sprained his injured left ankle midway through the Georgia Southern contest and was lost for the remaining games.

Mike McQuay, 6-6 center from Hyattsville, Maryland, came on strong in the later stages of the season to finish with a 14.6 scoring average and a rebounding norm. Jim Hall, Danville, Virginia, tied McQuay for the scoring leadership at 14.6 and was also the leader from field among the starters with a .489 percentage.

Frank Bus ended his four-year college career, two at Lenoir Rhyne and two at Wilmington College, with 1384 points. Bus, 6-2 guard from East Boston, Massachusetts, had the third best scoring average at 12.2. Speciale, Bronx, New York, had a 13.3 average in the twenty games he played.

Join a firm that'll give you executive responsibility your first day at work.

Now, that's a pretty funny thing for a civilian firm to say. A boss? Right out of college? The first day?

But the Air Force can make such offers. As an officer in the world's largest technological organization you're a leader. Engineer. Scientist. Administrator. Right where the Space Age breakthroughs are happening.

Or how about the executive responsibility of a test pilot clocking 2,062 mph in a YF-12A jet?

That could be you, too.

But you don't have to be a pilot in the Air Force to move fast. With your college degree you zip into Officer Training School, spin out an officer, speed on your way as an executive, in the forefront of modern science and technology. Right on the ground.

The Air Force moves pretty fast.

Think it over. A man's career can sometimes move pretty slow.

ON THE SIDELINES

The way the weather has been acting so wintry for the past few days, it's hard to turn one's thoughts to baseball, our great and glorious "National Sport."

Baseball brings visions of balmy weather, and (so the song goes) "Peanuts and crackerjacks." Well, lately the peanuts would have been frozen and the crackerjacks soggy, but nevertheless, the crack of the bat and the roar of the crowd will soon be heard across the land, from coast to coast, from peninsula to Puget, from sandlot to Series.

Unfortunately, the Major League season will soon be opened as President Lyndon Baines Johnson throws out the first ball. Imagine that! And this year there are even more stringent rules against the spitball!

Be that as it may, the mad chase for the league pennants will be on. Prediction: St. Louis will again take the National League pennant, but Boston will not repeat in the American League. Maybe Chicago, but we don't really think they are that much better than the Red Sox. (Our apologies to Wilmington College's Boston Blackie, Brian Black). Who will be top dog in the American League? We don't know, and don't care to guess.

Here at Wilmington College a few predictions are safe: Attendance at our games will be light. New Hanover High and maybe even Hoggard and Williston will draw bigger crowds.

We will not take the District 26 N.A.I.A. title unless our new pitching talent shapes up. Otherwise, only the Great Umpire in the Sky knows the winner.

AND EXTRA-CURRICULAR ACTIVITIES OF SPECIAL NOTE

Automobile racing history will be made a few miles from here on March 9. That Saturday at Rockingham, the first NASCAR Grand Touring race will be held at the North Carolina Motor Speedway. The Grand Touring division will provide sanctioning for the "sporty cars" such as Mustangs, Camaros, and Barracudas. Also included are some foreign sedans, such as the Porsche 911.

The first of the races, Rockingham's "Sandhill 250" will be a prelude to Sunday's "Carolina 500" for the big Grand National cars.

The "Sandhill 250" will be historic from another angle too. It will mark the first time that a woman has competed against men on the South's superspeedways.

Jacqui Smith, a 24-year-old redhead from Winchester, England, will drive a Buck Baker Camaro on March 9.

Miss Smith, a winner of 14 races in 60 starts in England and on the Continent, drives almost anything, from roaring 427 Cobras to screaming Mini-Coopers. We presume she wears something more flame-retardant when racing than the London miniskirt she had on when we met her.

The first Grand Touring Race should be quite a show — and what if that gal wins! There are going to be quite a few deflated male egos around Rockingham.

We recommend race weekend to you as a needed diversion from the humdrum. Certainly everyone is looking forward to hearing the race marshal say, "Ladies and Gentlemen — Start your engines!"

COACH MILLER PLANS SPRING INTRAMURALS

Coach Dave Miller, intramural director, plans to have a spring quarter program that will include softball, badminton, and tennis. These programs can only get underway if the student body is willing to take advantage of the opportunity and participate.

The softball program will be set up similar to intramural basketball.

Badminton and tennis will be dealt with differently. Coach Miller will assign two players to play and a date by which the match must be played. The participants can play when it will be convenient for both. Badminton nets will be set up in Hanover Hall throughout the spring quarter. There are six tennis courts available adjacent to "south 40" parking lot. There will be a meeting in the gym at 7 p.m. on March 21 for all those interested in taking an active part in spring intramurals.

SOUTHERN OPEN NEXT FOR 'HAWK WRESTLERS

The Wilmington College wrestling team closed out its season with an impressive victory of 18-13 over Atlantic Coast conference opponent Duke. Coach Charles Sproles' grapplers had an 8-5 record this year.

The Seahawks are planning to go to Atlanta, Georgia, March 8-9 for the Southern Open tournament. Following the end of the Winter quarter the 'Hawks will participate in the First Colonial Open tournament in Newport News, Virginia, March 16.

Last year in the Southern Open 128-pounder, Eddie Radford, finished fourth and 152-pounder, Robert Elliott, finished fourth in their respective divisions.

Coach Sproles was asked what the main differences were between this team finishing 8-5 this season and 14-3 a year ago.

"We had basically the same team back from last year, but the help I was looking for among the freshmen to fill certain holes did not come. While we failed to get new talent into the starting line-up, the majority of our opponents had stronger teams with ned added strength. This gave us stiffer competition.

"I hope to make the schedule a little better next year. We had a few cancellations and too many breaks between meets this season. In addition there is a possibility that The Citadel will be added to the schedule.

"The Duke meet was our best effort of the year, but to have as good a season next year as we turn.

had last year, we must add depth to our squad.

"The Southern Open will give the boys experience, but we are not well enough balanced, I do not think to win the team title. We should have a better showing of last year's third and fourth place finishers.

Co-captain Dick Hudson is the only senior on the team with the rest of the team expected to re-grow.

SLOWTROTTERS WIN TOURNAMENT, COMPLETE UNDEFEATED SEASON

The Harlem Slowtrotters held off a late rally by the Born Losers to win the intramural basketball tournament, 43-41, and finish the season undefeated.

This was the second two point victory for the Slowtrotters in the tournament as they defeated the Hot Dogs, 44-42, when Chuck Lewis hit a ten-foot jump shot with three seconds left on the clock.

In the regular season the Slowtrotters, coached by James Hebron, finished on top by defeating the Born Losers, 45-39, in the final game.

The Invaders clinched third place by downing the Hot Dogs, 51-49, in their final game.

In the quarter-finals of the tournament the Slowtrotters received a bye.

The Hot Dogs were pushed into overtime by the Kappas before Gene Russ's last second bucket clinched the win, 45-48. A well balanced scoring attack for the Hot Dogs was paced by Spud Piner with 18 points, Gary Watkins with ten, and, Russ with eight. Gary Holt took game honors with 23 markers. Bob Elliot added ten for the Kappas.

The Born Losers fast break blitzed the Glory Stompers, 78-55, behind Willie Franks, Eddie Lewis, and Steve Mundy's 54 point combined effort. Franks and Lewis each nailed 19 points and Mundy ten. Pete Skelchunes and Harold Flinchman each scored 16 points for the Glory Stompers with Jerry Rattalade canning 15 markers.

The Invaders had a little trouble with Pi Kappa Phi in the first half but pulled away for a 42-30, victory midway through the second half. Parrish Croom paced the winners with 12 points and Jim Atkins added ten. Denny McCaughen was top scorer for Pi Kappa Phi with nine points.

The Born Losers continued to blaze their way to the finals with a 60-29, pasting of the Invaders in the semi-final round as they placed four men in double figures. Ed Lewis was high scorer with 16 points, Barry Mitchell and Mundy followed with 11 points apiece, and, Franks added ten. Atkins and Sandy Dew each scored six for the Invaders.

If there was to be a most valuable player in the tournament it would probably go to Chuck Lewis of the Slowtrotters. He was the key to both the Slowtrotters success in the tournament along with the brilliant coaching ability of Jim Hebron. Hebron was given the reigns of the club after the first four games from captain Bob Vaughn and proceeded to discipline the Slowtrotter offense and instill "defense" into the minds of the players.

The Hot Dogs stalling tactics in the semi-finals against the Slowtrotters was counter-acted by Hebron having a full court press used by the Trotters to gain a, 44-42, victory on Lewis's last second shot. The Hot Dogs pulled away to an eight point lead in the middle of the second half but costly fumbles helped the Trotters come back and eventually win the game. Pete Eyer was the leading Trotter scorer with 15 points, Walt Healed added 12 points, and Lewis eight. Gary Watkins put on tremendous individual performance with 24 points for the Hot Dogs.

Wayne Barker, coach of the Born Losers, had his club ready to avenge a late season loss to the Slowtrotters by a margin of six points, but a 16 point first half performance by Chuck Lewis pulled the Trotters ahead at halftime by six points.

WHATS HAPPENING BROTHER?

by WALT HEALEY, JR.

Jim Murray, Los Angeles Times columnist, wrote recently: "... a series of degrading — I can think of no softer word — incidents have taken place in "amateur" athletics in the sovereign State of California ...

"Then, a young man ... got himself on page one (L.A. Times) by serving up demands on that institution on behalf of some athletes who were in that institution only because it chose to bend some of its own academic requirements downward to admit them in the first place.

"Who's at fault in these instances? Those arrogant kids? Their advisors?

"Hell no! The institutions."

Murray is blasting the colleges because they place too much emphasis on the athlete to win hence the athlete feels he deserves more than just a scholarship for an education.

The key word is scholarship. No matter how big or small it is the catalyst to a college education and athletics. What is a college education? A college education is what parents start preaching about as soon as they see their children start high school.

"Without a college education son you just can't make good in the dog eat dog capitalist world of America."

What more does an institution owe an athlete than the free ticket through its gates of higher learning? It owes the athlete the consideration of not placing a great amount of pressure on being the best in the area, conference, or nation. Murray's answer is:

"Let's stop the adoring alumni, the street corner fans, the rest of the coterie of perpetual sophomores from giving these kids a distorted idea that the world's greatest need is for dunk shots, touchdown runs, world record times, or service aces."

This is the institution's obligation to the athlete, what is the athlete's obligation to the institution?

Giving a hundred and ten percent is a quote often heard among people who judge athletes talents. To go out and win is fine but to send a head coach home at the semester break with a bleeding ulcer and the possibility of liquidation from his job should not be the object of an athlete.

Look at it from the coach's point of view. A basketball season gets underway with fifteen players that are coming around as the fall semester finals appear. "They are showing some good signs, passing that ball well and taking the good shot," he whispers to his assistant coach.

The whisper is all he has because six players including two starters become academically ineligible, which means they are below the 1.6 average the NCAA requires. The coach's hair becomes grayer and the athlete spends his last probable semester in college on probation.

A college institution should not be a playground like Parson's College but a place where the athlete can fulfill his obligations to the institute and at the same time acquire an education that only a percentage of American men complete during their lifetime.

An athlete is one of the elite on a college campus and should not go around with the idea that a scholarship means a passing grade and a diploma.

It all boils down to a sense of values. How valuable is an education to a person.

Hume Speaks To ICC Members

"You are the student leaders on campus," stated Bill Hume, Students' Representative, at the Inter Club Council at their last meeting as he presented the problem of what has to be done to improve the Student Services Building and asked the ICC members for help. "I don't have much to say," Bill began before going into a list of things that are going to have to be done in the Pub. First on Bill's list was the necessity of buying and having more large trash cans in the building.

After 9:30 in the morning, the cafeteria area is an eyesore. Bill believes the various clubs and fraternities should take turns in cleaning off the tables. "Girls need not be asked to do this," he said.

Also the walls in the Pub are very drab. The idea of a "paint-in" was suggested by Mike Meier, Chairman of ICC. This, he explained, could be done by covering a wall with heavy duty paper, supplying paint and brushes, and then inviting the students to come and paint. This could be done as an ICC social.

There are no game facilities in the Pub. "I've seen people batting cups around," said Bill. "If there were some game facilities we could cut that out." It was suggested that someone look into the possibility of getting either a ping pong table or a pool table plus some game sets such as checkers or chess.

Bill requested that each club member return to his Club with the suggestions that had been made and request help from the club members. "Something is going to have to be done, if noting is done — no, I don't want to talk about it," Bill declared.

Mike reported that he and Ethrage Warters, vice chairman of ICC, had investigated the sundial which is presently in pieces in the boiler room on Kenan. All of the original pieces are there. John Nygren, of the Art Department, has consented to weld it back together, Mike reported.

However, the Sundial discussion was again to be carried over to the next meeting.

EDWARD P. MORGAN
"... Among The Protestors"

Morgan Says Draft Unfair

by RENEE HARTMAN

"I'm trying to figure out what I'd do if I was a student," said the noted news commentator, Edward P. Morgan, in an interview before his speech Feb. 26 in speaking about the students protesting both the war and the draft.

"I think I'd be among the protestors in terms of the unfairness of the draft," he decided. Earlier, in speaking about the new draft policy by the government, Morgan has stated that in principle, the new draft ruling was a step moving in the right direction, however, there are still many inadequacies in the draft.

One basic factor about the draft was it was unfair to the student not in college as it was taking those people who mainly came from a lower income.

"In one respect, the new law changed the balance," Morgan believes, "but it was done too quickly and without considering the result in the graduate school system of teachers. This may cancel out the aspect of fairness from the new law. If it had been done gradually with a policy to take younger men first instead of the older, it would be fairer still."

Again in speaking about the demonstrations, Morgan said he thought "the students would make their points better in their opposition to the war if they could be more thoughtful in their objections."

But, he did concede that "there just are times — although rarely — when the law has to be broken."

"I respect mostly the motives, but not the methods," he said about the demonstrators.

When asked about the use of marijuana, Morgan said, "I am not an expert, but there is a valid argument that marijuana is not habit forming. He cited those who say marijuana is no worse than drinking, but said that is only part of the story."

"The organized market for marijuana is in the hands of the underworld and there is reason to believe some of it is spiked and this spiked marijuana will hook the people — and I am no expert — into doing one of two things, addict them into using not marijuana but something like heroin; or once having tried marijuana and seeing it to be harmless, say 'we didn't get much of a kick from that, let's try something else.'"

Johnson Organizes Psychology Club

Thursday night, Feb. 22, marked one more step forward in the progress made for increased extracurricular activities on campus.

Still in the process of formation, the Psychology Club met in the Pub with 15 persons present. The small number was due, in large part it is thought, to the 2-inch snowfall that forced the closing of classes on that day.

The purpose of the Psychology Club is to further the interest of psychology, and in connection with this aim, the meetings will feature programs with invited guest speakers, talking on related subjects to psychology.

The club was started by its advisor, Dr. Granville Johnson, Professor of Psychology. Recently he proposed the idea to his three classes of about 100 students combined. About 97% expressed a desire to have a psychology club.

Officers of the club elected Thursday night are: Harry Rimel, President; Ken Stewart, First Vice-President; Walt Denning Jr., Second Vice-President and Treasurer; and Martha Cowie, Secretary.

At present, membership in the club is open only to those students already having five hours credit in a psychology course with at least a "C" average. However, these requirements might later be changed, as the club is still more or less in the formative stage.

In connection with this, a committee has been named to draw a club charter. Bi-monthly meetings are now being considered. According to Vice-President Walt Denning one of the initial aims of the club is to comply to the Psi Chi Scholastic Fraternity, which is a national psychology organization. However, this will be virtually impossible until the fall of 1969, when the college will presumably offer a major in psychology.

Chorus, Band To Tour In Viet Nam Soon

Lloyd Hudson, head of the Music Department, has announced that members of the college chorus and college band will travel to Viet Nam during the Easter recess on a good will tour.

The purpose of the tour, says Mr. Hudson, is to show the boys over there a different picture of the American college student than what is often thought about them because of those demonstrating against the war.

Although the college is paying for a large percentage of the tour, band and chorus members are also having to raise money to make the trip possible.

Both chorus and band members are very excited about the trip, according to member Terry Wortley, junior. "We've sort of been discussing this all year," he said, "and now as the time comes nearer to Easter, we are really becoming thrilled about the thought of going to Viet Nam as an entertainment group."

Plus a series of car washes each week from now until time to leave, the members of the chorus and band will be selling bread and doughnuts to also raise money. They are also planning a tentative concert April 10 for which they will charge admission. This concert would be open to the public and the group hopes the City of Wilmington will come out and support them.

This concert will feature the songs which will be sung in Viet Nam. Part of the program will be concerned with songs about Easter, while the other half will be made up of American patriotic songs to give the boys in Viet Nam some inspiration, according to Terry.

Trustees Announce Required ROTC

The Wilmington College Board of Trustees, in accordance with the recent governmental decree, have announced that Wilmington College will go on a compulsory R.O.T.C. program beginning during the 1968-69 scholastic year.

President Johnson announced early in January that there were not sufficient numbers of officers entering the services to replace those leaving. "Apparently a number of young men are attending our military colleges for a free education, serving a few years and then getting out to take better paying positions outside. It is up to the colleges to take up this slack," the President said.

With the resultant poor showing among colleges, President Johnson proclaimed on January 27 that all colleges that do not immediately instigate an R.O.T.C. program will lose their accreditation retroactively to 1967. "I will not have some of our young men getting killed while others aren't. This, I feel, is the best answer to college deferments," he said.

A spokesman for the Board of Trustees said this organization had voted favorably for compulsory R.O.T.C. on February 16. "The following weeks have been spent in extensive organization," he said. "There has been a great deal to do but we are very happy with the results so far."

In accordance with the new government regulations, the Wilmington College R.O.T.C. detachment will be run by two officers and three enlisted men, who will handle the paper work. Heading this detachment will be Major S. O. Bronson and Lieutenant B. Hobbitt.

Major Bronson said this new military will affect all male students except next years' seniors and those students that do not pass an Army physical examination. "We hope to extend this opportunity to female students in about two years," Major Bronson said. "We feel that this is a step that has long been needed. This and non-R.O.T.C. training should eventually reach everybody and give the United States a vast military stockpile that will make us the strongest power on earth."

The administration and faculty refused to comment on these developments, but indications are that feelings are mixed.

Library To Serve As Art Museum

By announcement of the college trustees, the new Library Building will be converted to house the English and Foreign Language Departments and to serve as a museum and display area for the Art Department. The trustees and administration felt the present library facilities to be adequate for at least the next ten years, but suggested a thorough renovation to insure the best quality service.

The State Legislature's cancellation of library book and periodical funds for the next five years prompted the trustees' statement. The decision, which halts the collection between 40,000 and 50,000 volumes, will radically affect the library's future policies.

With no anticipated book acquisitions in the near future, the collection will be re-catalogued to the old Dewey Decimal system. Staff offices and working areas behind the circulation desk will expand when books recently received from publishers are shelved.

Renovation plans in the present library necessitate new stack and seating arrangements. Stacks and periodicals will cover the entire left side of the room; the seating area will be diminished to seat approximately 25 students. Because of the limited space involved, passes, specifying the times each week he will be allowed a seat, will be issued to each student.

Each student may check out only two books at a time and they are due back in one week. Fines will be raised and any student desiring more than two books must receive special permission from Miss Helen Hagen, librarian, accompanied by a note from his professor.

As in large university libraries, a student may not browse in the stacks. To secure a book, he must write the title, author, and call number on a card and ask a student assistant to find it. Books used in the library will be placed on a conveyor belt that will deposit them for re-shelving by a special electronic machine.

A proposed skylight in the roof of the present room will help to spare electrical costs. Daily hours remain unchanged, but any student studying at night may wish to bring a flashlight or candles.

Most periodicals will be stored on microfilm. Certain magazines such as Swansee Review and Fortune are exceptions. Books on reserve for certain classes, now housed at the circulation desk, will be recorded on tapes and may be heard at one of several audio arts booths.

Lennon Accumulates Gigantic Fine

A Wilmington College student this week paid an over-due parking fine which amounted to $3,192. Dennis Lennon, Senior said, "I paid the fine just in time; next week it would have doubled to $16,394."

Dennis was referring to the fact that over a period of time, parking tickets double in cost. The ticket in question had already doubled thirteen times. Once in 1967, on the usual date for doubling fines, Dennis's fine was overlooked. It remained at $1,048, instead of doubling to the expected $2,088. "I consider myself lucky," commented Dennis. "Still, I'm always afraid that the mistake will be realized and I will be charged for it."

"Sometimes my conscience hurts," he continued, "and I feel like I should turn myself in. After all, what differences does $1,024 make, after paying almost $10,000?"

Dennis received the parking ticket in 1964, when he was a freshman at Wilmington College. At the time, he was charged one dollar for improper parking. But when Dennis was negligent in paying the fine, it continued to double until it reached $256.

Then Dennis dropped out for a quarter, mistakenly thinking that the fine would be erased while he was away. However, when he returned, the fine was up to $512.

He later again tried dropping out of school, again hoping to have his fine erased. But like the first time, he found upon returning that his fine was still there, doubling several times instead of being erased.

And the fine continued to double, until this year, when it reached the $8,000 mark. "I finally decided it would be worthwhile for me to borrow the money and pay the fine," stated Dennis, "especially since I am a senior and the school will not let me graduate until all fines have been paid. I now have a whole quarter to borrow $500, so I can pay my fine for over-due library books."

It is not known what will be done with the parking fine money, but it is rumored that the money will be used to buy new traffic signs to be put on campus."

Pub To Become Restaurant

Beginning in September, the pub will become a restaurant instead of a snack bar, with a complete menu, and mini-skirted waitresses. In keeping with the architecture of the college, the decor will be colonial.

The announcement was made by the pub's management.

Applications are now being accepted for waitresses, of which there will be 50.

The menu, according to the management, will combine the best of American, Italian, French, and German cuisine. Part of the pub will be walled off to form a smaller Polynesian Restaurant with South Sea Island decor and food.

Sample items from the menu include Roast Sucking Pig at 80 cents per serving, Lobster Newburg at $1.25, 16-ounce Omaha beef steaks at 95 cents.

Although current state law forbids the serving of alcoholic beverages on campus an effort will be made to get the law changed.

A lobby, led by Dean Marshall Crews, will go to Raleigh at the next term of the legislature in an attempt to get a special law passed allowing the serving of alcoholic beverages on campus.

If the law is changed, the pub will offer a complete assortment of wines and beers. The management said it will sell premium beer for 15 cents per can, regular beer at 10 cents, and American champagne will be $2 per bottle.

In a prepared statement, the management of the pub said, "The way we look at it, service to the student should come first and our economic success comes second. We want to do everything possible to offer the student good food, even if we do not make profit."

Tuition Up

Effective with the first session of Summer School, tuition will go up slightly. Dr. Randall has announced. He said the increase was necessary because the state has withdrawn all its support from the college.

Tuition and fees for a regular load, which formerly totaled $91 per quarter will run in the neighborhood of $400 per quarter. Dr. Randall said he was sure the students would have no objections.

Team To Move To College In Fall

In the fall of 1969, the Notre Dame football team will move to Wilmington College, lock, stock, and barrel. The announcement was made by Coach Bill Brooks.

Brooks said he had been talking to the administration about acquiring the team for sometime. He said interest in intercollegiate football had declined so much in South Bend, Ind., that Notre Dame officials felt the team would not be an economic success there much longer.

Brooks said he tried to get a better team but "had to take what was available."

Brooks said he got the idea when Baptist College in Charleston recently made an unsuccessful attempt to acquire the Frederick College team.

Because football slates are frozen so far in advance, Brooks said, the first year the team will play some of the lesser known teams in the country.

Included on the slate are Sam's Schools for Boys, Attila the Hun Institute, Leland High School, Sitting Bull Military College, and the University of Surf City. Most of the games will be at home with the exception of the University of Moscow.

Howell To Start Club

Howell On Motorcycle

Claude Howell of the Art Department has announced the formation of a motorcycle gang.

"This is an organization Wilmington College has long needed," Howell said sitting astride his big black and chrome Dukati. The din of the engine made it difficult to hear him.

Howell indicated that any gifts made available to the club would be greatly appreciated. Items needed include old motorcycle chains, tire tools, slapjacks, and beer.

An organizational meeting of the club will be held in the Faculty Parking lot next Wednesday at 4 p.m. Interested persons should bring their motorcycles and any Nazi memorabilia they have available.

One of the planned activities of the organization is a trip to Faison to take over the town, slated for later this month.

Other organizers of the club include Adrian Hurst of the Math Department, Mrs. Mary Davis of the Office of the Dean, Mrs. Stanland of the book store, and students Dale Donahue, Pete Ambrose, Bill Harrell, Mrs. Edith Register, and Connie Branch.

Persons interested in joining are advised that club rules require each member to have his own motorcycle, four courses each in music and art. Potential members with no police record are advised to get one and have a certified copy sent by the police department to Mr. Howell.

Workmen Discover Capsule At Construction Site

A time capsule was discovered last Wednesday at Wilmington College. It was unearthed by construction workers who are currently building the new library on campus.

One of the workers stated, "We found the time capsule just under the surface of the ground. At first, we didn't know what it was, but then one of the men said it looked like that thing the paper said one of the college clubs was burying. We were afraid we had dug up their time capsule, but when we asked one of the students about it, he said it wasn't theirs."

The construction workers turned the capsule over to school officials. It was opened during a special assembly of the entire student body at Wilmington College.

At present, the mystery of the capsule still remains unsolved. The capsule, though seemingly well preserved, fell into little pieces when it was opened at the assembly.

Inside the capsule was what appeared to be a strip of some kind of animal skin. The skin was covered with tiny marks and drawings, which could not be read by anyone who was at the assembly.

Since that time, several hundred people have inspected the mysterious little skin, but all of them have admitted defeat. School officials are reportedly turning the skin over to experts, hoping someone will be able to interpret the message.

Speculation is that the time capsule is either all that remains of the history of an ancient town, or is an April Fool joke by some modern prankster.

Wilco Gets Bell Tower

Informed sources at Wilmington College reported that a bell tower is contracted to be constructed on campus in the near future. College officials who visited the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and North Carolina State University in Raleigh, state that the proposed bell tower here will be patterned after those at the universities.

It is not known what prompted the action of College officials in proposing the construction of the bell tower. Unofficial word, however, is that funds for the bell tower are being donated by the 1968 Senior Class. The seniors refuse to comment on the project. "It is not up to us to tell anything about the tower," said the spokesman for the seniors.

Work will be begun on the bell tower late this spring. It is hoped that the tower will be completed by the end of the 1968 fall quarter. The bell tower will be completed before any other buildings on campus are begun. Wilmington College officials feel that the bell tower will be very instrumental in encouraging students to attend Wilmington College. "All that is needed now, stated one official, are dormitories and a football team."

The proposed bell tower will be a mammoth construction, towering over all the other buildings on campus. Tentative plans include putting the tower in the middle of the campus, beside the arboretum.

Class To Build Campus Theatre

Students in Kenan Hall should not be alarmed as they hear the sound of hammers and of bricks falling. It is only the sound of Head of the Drama Department Doug Swink's stagecraft classes knocking out the back wall of the present S.R.O. Theatre to enlarge it for Mr. Swink.

For many years, Mr. Swink, who is the head of the Drama Department, has been promised a theatre on campus. This promise has never been kept. The recent money gift from the Kenans is going to be used to build an auditorium which will not be able to function as a theatre, according to Mr. Swink. Mr. Swink has now decided to stop listening to the promises and to do something himself about getting a theatre.

Mr. Swink decided his present stagecrafts class would be perfect to help him with his project. These students build the elaborate sets for the college productions and Mr.

Swink believes that with his aid, they will be able to do the work necessary to building the theatre.

The class does most of its work with wood, not bricks; therefore, the theatre will be built out of wood. Once the bricks are knocked out of the back wall, wooden walls will be put up. From the outside, the enlargement to the building will be painted a bright magenta as this is one of Mr. Swink's favorite colors and also the class happens to have a lot of this paint left over from painting a set some years ago.

Once the theatre is enlarged, an additional 200 people will be able to come and see the college productions. At present, only 150 people can be seated in the S.R.O. Theatre.

Plans for the building have been drawn up by Mr. Swink and Terry Rogers, member of the department, with the aid of one of Wilmington's lesser known architectural firms.

Cheek States Dorm Rules

Dean Helena Cheek has released the rules and regulations which will become effective when the new dormitory opens for women students.

"Because the college will be responsible for all students living on campus, it was decided to have dorm curfew regulations," stated Mrs. Cheek. Students may not leave their rooms after 11 p.m. during week days and 1 a.m. on weekends. Also rooms may not be left before 6 a.m. in the morning. Every night at that time the head resident will check each room to see if the occupants are present. "The administration feels all precautions should be taken to safeguard the college's reputation," explained Mrs. Cheek.

Campus curfews will be in effect for women residents. Before leaving the campus, girls must sign-out on cards stating the date, time, escort, and place they are going. Each girl must sign-in also with penalties for those who do not. Also each girl must introduce her escort to the head resident before leaving. Dorms will be locked at 10:30 p.m. during the week and 12:00 p.m. on weekends. Anyone returning after this time will have to contact a campus security man who will then let her in. A record will be kept and after three late returns the girl will be brought before the dorm council.

The dormitory will be represented on campus by an elected council. This council will have an executive member who will conduct all house meetings and assist the house mother. The secretary will attend the Senate meetings and ICC. The judicial members (3) will be responsible for checking signing outs and for administering penalties.

The whole council will try more serious cases such as thefts and repeated lateness.

All dormitory residents will have closed study every night from 7 to 10 p.m. Girls must either remain in their rooms or must be in the library. If they go to the library a slip must be signed and given to the head resident.

"Since the parking situation has reached such tremendous proportions," stated Dean Crews, "we have decided it will not be necessary for the women residents to have cars." However, the ICC has petitioned the administration to allow senior women to have cars on campus.

"For the undergraduate residents, the college offers many extracurricular events on campus so that transportation will not be needed anyway," stated Dean Crews.

CURTAIN'S UP — Tonight Look Back in Anger, the play by British author John Osburn opens in Thalian Hall. The play is directed by college student Randy Del Logo and has as its principal characters, three Wilmington College students: Jere Hodgkin (L), Judy Andrews, and Benly Sullivan.

Board Approves Faculty Promotions

The Wilmington College Board of Trustees March 26 announced the approval of the promotions of nine faculty members and the approval for tenure of 12. Four of those approved for tenure were among those promoted. All the approvals were unanimous.

Promotions to the rank of associate professor were approved for ment.

Assistant Professor

Promotions to the rank of assistant professor were approved for Mrs. Elizabeth Pearsall of the English Department; Glenn Long of the Mathematics Department; and Mrs. Judith Lewis and Mrs. Virginia Braxton, both of the Physical Education Department.

For Tenure

Approvals for the tenure included Dr. Doss, Dr. Sparks, Dr. Moseley, and Dr. Heidelberg Hernandez. Other approvals for tenure included Thomas McCall, assistant professor of English; Dr. Antolin Gonzalez del Valle, associate professor of Spanish; Rolla Nelson, assistant professor of physics; Claude Howell, assistant professor of art; Walter Biggs, assistant professor of biology; William Adcock, assistant professor of music; Carl Gay and Walser Allen, assistant professors of history; and Dr. Frederick Hornack, associate professor of chemistry.

Contracts Approved

Three-year contracts were renewed for three assistant professors: William Lowe, who teaches German; Lewis Nance of the Chemistry Department, and Mrs. Betty Stike of the Education Department.

Allen Visits Roman Ruins

Between March 8 and 14, Walser Allen, Assistant Professor for History and Philosophy, traveled 9,200 miles. The occasion was a six-day trip to Rome, Italy.

The trip was given to Allen by the Administration of Wilmington College. It had been available to the college administration by HAFO Distributors free of charge.

This was Allen's first visit to Italy, but he had previously been to other parts of Europe.

During his six-day stay in Rome, Allen's group took several sightseeing tours to places of historical and artistic interest, including the Vatican museum, Sistine Chapel, St. Peter's Cathedral, the Roman Forum, the Presidential Palace, the Olympic Stadium, the Trevi Fountain, among others.

Allen visited the Roman forum by both night and day, but found it by night "most impressive in the eerie light of night-time illumination. One could visualize the ancient Romans treading the stones and steps of the forum where the columns of the Temple of Saturn and the Temple of the Vestals and the Temple of Castor and Pollux still stand," he said.

Allen went on two excursions outside of Rome — one to the town of Tivoli, site of the vast ruins of Hadrian's Villa, the winter residence of one of the early Roman emperors — and the other to Naples, Mt. Vesuvius, Pompeii and Sorrento.

The ruins of Pompeii were "most impressive" to Allen. Forms of the ancient populace, made of plaster casts taken from molds, could be seen in them useum there. In some of the buildings of the town, the original wall decorations had been preserved, and in one instance, an ancient fountain was turned on for the visitors.

On their last night in Rome, members of the tour were entertained at a Roman banquet in the ballroom of the Cavalieri Hilton Hotel. The decor was early Roman, and everyone wore togas.

Allen was greatly impressed by the variety of Rome. "The trip was a marvelous opportunity to observe the variety of cultural epochs evident in the 'Eternal City' and to study their historical significance," Allen said.

The city is a heterogeneous mixture of buildings of many different periods of time and constitutes many architectural styles. For instance, from out of the crowded shopping district, one suddenly comes upon the Pantheon.

While in Rome, Allen was also granted a private interview through the courtesy of Wilmington College President Dr. William Randall, with his Eminence Eugene Cardinal Tissaint, Dean of the College of Cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church, who is also a scholar in the Semitic languages.

Fitzgibbon Announces Cast For Coming Production

Wilmington College Theatre announces the cast of "Under Milk Wood" by Dylan Thomas, that will be produced on April 26, 27 and 28 in the S.R.O. Theatre. The play is under the direction of Anne Fitzgibbon, professor of Drama and Speech.

Originally conceived for radio presentation, "Under Milk Wood" is essentially plotless, an evocation of one day in the lives of inhabitants of a simple fishing village, a sort of Welsh "Our Town." The fact that there is no real dramatic pattern is overshadowed by the quality of the writing itself.

Like Saroyan, the Welsh poet, Dylan Thomas has a fascinating world all his own, and it is equally full of lyricism and sensibility, though it is anchored a good deal more firmly in the realities that most of us know. Among Thomas' gifts that are invaluable in this chronicle of simple folk is his capacity for differentiating between affection and pretension, between the heart-warming and the mawkish, and between characterization and mere caricature.

Those sharing the female roles are Abbe Godwin, Donna West, Sue Fulcher, Marion Saffo, Pat Fuchs, Lenore Hagan and Gaye Godwin. The male roles for this production will be shared by the following actors: Tony Rivenbark, Terry Wortley, John Blair, Marc Pope, Craig Redwine.

Also in the cast are John Richardson and Judy Andrews as the first voice and second voice, respectively. Cast in the role of Captain Cat is David James.

Noe To Get Added Space

Of the new buildings going up on campus the smallest and least publicized is the one behind Hoggard Hall. This is to be the new Physical Plant Building, so named "to change our image," said Mr. Noe, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. Noe said the new building is not to replace his present one but will serve to alleviate the crowded conditions in the Maintenance Department.

partment.

"We will convert some of the present building to house some of Mr. Swink's material." This is a much needed move as it might allow some other group to use the Pub for storage and it will move Swink's materials closer to the Kenan Building. This material, of course, would consist of props and other items used by the Drama Department.

The building will house most of the Maintenance Department, including Mr. Noe's office. This building will be used a good deal by the students as it will serve as the place to pay traffic fines.

Beside this building will provide an area for a carpenter shop and a garage for college vehicles. There will also be room for a central store house.

Mr. Noe said, "As you can tell the building is prefab. We hope it will be completed in about a month." The building will be 5,000 square feet in area and is costing $28,000. "We are hoping to have enough money to brick the building in. The main purpose of this would be to keep the architecture in line partially with the style of the college."

This will be the beginning of a complex. "We hope to have four or five buildings behind Hoggard in the area we presently occupy. The first of these will be the Electrical Housing Plant."

Senate Endorses Bonds

At the request of Linda Hill, head of the Wilmington Youth Corps, the Student Senate passed a motion endorsing the passing of the proposed New Hanover County school bond issue that will come before the voters May 4.

Miss Hill is helping with the voting drive for the bond issue and according to Mike Mier, student body president, wanted the Senate help in the movement to get people out to register and later vote.

"If we do endorse this, what does this involve on our part?" junior senator Gaye Godwin wanted to know.

"Some industry on your part," Mike replied. "Some posters may be and just publicity in general."

Miss Hill believes, said Mike, that the endorsing of the bond issue by the college Student Senate will add prestige to the movement.

Also at the Senate meeting, 100 dollars was allotted the SNEA for four delegates from their organization to attend the state National Education Association meeting in Charlotte this weekend.

Before the meeting ended, Mike told the members, "I want you to feel free to call me. I'm worried about what might be going on out here. I just thought I would let you know." Mike is practice teaching this quarter.

Students Start Scott Group

A Bob Scott for governor campaign organization has been established on the campus of Wilmington College. The college students supporting Scott will work in conjunction with other young Bob Scott supporters in the area.

Gaye Godwin has been appointed head of the Wilmington College group. Gaye encourages all interested students to "either contact me or go by the Scott Headquarters." Special meetings for young people will be held at the campaign Headquarters at Hanover Shopping Center every Thursday night at 7:30.

For the first time, voting machines will be used in some precincts in New Hanover County in the May Primary. Voters are included to visit the Scott Campaign Headquarters to learn how to use voting machines. College students will help demonstrate the use of these machines.

Students will also assist with services such as telephoning prospective voters, manning the Campaign Headquarters, and acquainting citizens of New Hanover County with the new voter registration.

Bob Scott says, "North Carolina's strength is in its people. To their advancement I am dedicated." The statement is quoted from a pamphlet which, along with other information and campaign material, can be received from Bob Scott's Campaign Headquarters and is being distributed by various members of Scott's Campaign.

Decision

Lyndon Baines Johnson, at an hour when his country was in its greatest peril, did the only thing which might lead it out of a war which is destroying it and bring the resources being used in that war to bear on the problems facing us at home. He deserves the thanks and admiration of the nation.

Police

Before the end of the winter quarter, one biology teacher told his class that for the first time since he had been on the faculty of the college the equipment in the biology lab was being kept under lock and key because of several things which had been suddenly reported missing from the lab.

When a reporter from The Seahawk asked this teacher about these missing items, he was told to see another member of the biology department who reported only one thing being taken during the twelve years he had been on the faculty.

In recent months, though, the biology teacher was not the only person to mention the disappearance of certain items without any idea of whom the "borrower" might be. However, when questioned about these things, no person questioned would say anything definite.

It would seem as if no one wants to talk about these thefts — if they can be called that — because they cannot prove there have been thefts. This seems illogical.

In an article in the Wilmington Star-News, Dr. William Randall was quoted as saying that campus thefts are "getting to be very bad. The security of this place is just not good."

When questioned about this statement, Dean Marshall Crews commented, "It's a wonder someone has not walked off with the whole place yet with the little security we have."

Dr. Randall has requested to the Board of Trustees of the college the addition of a campus police force for the increase of the security on campus.

With the increase in the size of the campus, it is supposed that this will become the next necessity, although would it not also seem that for the same money spent for the hiring of campus police, more faculty members possibly could be hired? After all, no one has "walked off with the whole place yet."

Every Spring, with a sinking feeling, I ask what is there to celebrate after the Azalea Festival? Sort of a bleak picture isn't it? More than a month and a half of the quarter left stretching out before you into the long corridors of time and the festival behind you. Rejoice, I have a solution.

After the most exhaustive research, I have come up with something to celebrate on each day for two weeks after the festival.

Anyone who wants to have a party or an excuse to cut class now has this handy list. Just rationalize that you have to celebrate or take a holiday because of the importance of the date.

Take April 21, for instance. On that date John Muir, the famous Scottish-American naturalist was born. Who could possibly go to school or fail to have a party on the great occasion of John Muir's birthday? See how it's played? Good. And so:

April 22. Arbor Day in Nebraska. Have a tree-planting. A weed-planting will do if the date is to be celebrated at the beach.

April 23. Edmund Allenby, the British commander in Palestine during World War I was born this date in 1861. Have a party for someone you know who is Jewish. If you don't know anyone who is Jewish, have a party for someone of English descent.

April 24. Charles Sprague Sargent, the American dendrologist was born this date in 1841. Have a party and look up "dendrologist" in the dictionary.

April 25. Anzac Day in Australia. This party can run for two days. Celebrate part of it on our time and part on Australian time.

April 26. Alexander Duff, the Scottish missionary to India was born this date in 1806. A challenge to your originality: how does one go about celebrating Alexander Duff's birthday?

April 27. Norman Bel Geddes, the American Industrial designer, was born this date. Have a factory party.

April 28. Maryland ratified the Constitution on this date. Have a party and shoot fireworks and sing "The Star Spangled Banner." It was written in Maryland.

April 29. Lorado Taft, the American sculptor, writer, and lecturer was born this date. Have a party and invite anyone who has ever had English, art, or public speaking.

April 30. Pierre Terrail, Chevalier de Bayard died this date in 1524. This man was a knight who was around waiting to die and the Middle Ages ended and the Renaissance started. Can you imagine anything worse? Have a party with a King Arthur motif.

May 1. Child Health Day. Have a party and invite a healthy child. If you are male, I suggest a healthy female child from your age to about two years younger.

May 2. Hudson Bay Company organized this date in 1670. Have a party and exploit some Indians. Since the nearest Indians are in Lumberton, this will take all day. You could go all the way, though. There are some Navajo Indians living near Yuma, Ariz.

May 3. Poland adopted a constitution in 1791. Have a party and serve Polish ham. Serve something else too, or it will be a very dull party.

May 4. Barolommeo Cristofoni, the Italian harpsicord maker was born this date in 1655. Be generous. Throw a banquet for every Italian harpsicord maker in South-eastern North Carolina.

Seahawk Review

Theatre Returns Home

by RANDY DEL LAGO

March 9, the return of the Wilmington College Theatre to the Wilmington College campus was celebrated in what will henceforth be, in one incarnation or another, its permanent home: the SRO Theatre.

The play presented was Max Frisch's BIEDERMANN AND THE FIREBUGS; and if the quality of this production is in any way representative of what is to follow, then the Wilmington College Theatre can soon expect to take its place among the best college theatres in the State.

I support this statement with three aspects of last night's production: the play itself, the direction, and the acting.

THE FIREBUGS is precisely the kind of play that both our actors and our audiences are badly in need of. The statement is universal; yet the style in which it is made is so new and exciting that it commands—at once—both thought and recognition; while, at the same time, it entertains completely, involving us in a nightmare-circus in which we are made to perform, in a sense, along with the actors.

The play was directed by W. Terry Rogers, the newest member of the College drama department.

Utilizing for the first time the limited facilities of the SRO to their fullest advantage, Mr. Rogers was able to create, at one moment, an atmosphere of total chaos; while, at another, one of quiet brooding horror.

This — along with his willingness to interject the most blatantly comic devices into what were, otherwise, the most harrowing scenes — is indicative of a tremendous directorial control; one that was nowhere more clearly evidenced than in the "Ghost" sequence, in which the entire cast rose to a brilliantly effected, total climax.

As for the acting, it was always interesting and, often, excellent.

Helen Huneuett (Mrs. Knechtling), George Spelvin (the Ph.D.), and Jack Lane (the Policeman) were all convincing in their parts; especially Mr. Lane, who evinced — in a small role — an excellent sense of comic timing.

Of the two Firemen, John Richardson exhibited the greater restraint; while Michael Sampley was, at moments, almost too intense. Tony Rivenbark, as the humorously didactic Chorus Leader, was excellent — preserving carefully that perfect balance between cynicism and comedy.

Interestingly enough, it was the two Firebugs themselves who presented both the most exciting and the most dissatisfying performances of the evening.

In a production that emphasized — throughout — a carefully ordered preciseness of presentation, John Blair stood out as the least controlled actor on the stage, his language and his gestures wavering often between "casual" and just plain sloppy.

Robert Murphy, on the other hand, converted his relaxed manner into the most unaffected performance in the production. Against an often stylized background, Mr. Murphy's realistic approach was both startling and, frequently, unsettling.

The play's other "best"-performances came from the female members of the cast. Donna West was both convincing and vital as the demonic Anna; while Rosemary Salada, looking haggard and maternally as the infirm Mrs. Biedermann, was completely effective in her pathetic defense of her own (and of her husband's) well-being.

As for David James (Biedermann), since he was on stage more than any of the other characters, it is understandable that his performance should command the greatest scrutiny.

Even though Mr. James' ability to 'hold the stage' is incontestable (his vocal and physical surety compelling the attention of the spectator); yet, in contrast to Mr. Murphy's approach (which, more than anything else, emphasized understatement), David's movement and delivery seemed, at times, self-conscious and strangely mechanical.

The final movement of the play, however, brought the entire cast together. It was excellent—as, indeed, was the overall production.

The minor difficulties remained precisely that: minor.

What is most important is that those responsible for THE FIREBUGS presented us with one very exciting evening of theatre-of-a-kind all too rarely seen on local stages.

Bookstore Functions To Serve All

The quarter begins . . .

The bookstore is crowded.

By CINDI LOEPER

Managing a bookstore can be a hectic and exhausting job. However Mr. Ruth Stanland, college bookstore manager, says, "My love of my relationships with the students keeps me going."

After the initial quarterly supply of books are purchased, students come into the bookstore for pencils, pens, notebooks and similar items. Not everything in the bookstore, however, costs money. "I have become a lender of umbrellas and scissors, and I even can supply a dictionary for a brief last minute check over a paper," says the bookstore manager.

The main responsibility of the manager of the bookstore is to order, stock, and sell books and supplies. In June Mrs. Stanland begins to acquire requisitions from teachers so she can begin ordering for the fall quarter. All colleges are ordering books during the summer, and it is imperative to order early. It took nearly five years, but the faculty is "fairly good" about placing orders on time, according to Mrs. Stanland.

Books begin arriving in July. All available space in areas near the bookstore begins to be filled with cartons of books. By registration day, however, all of the books have been shelved in alphabetical order by subject and course number. Also, lists of the books are prepared by subject and course number for the students. This list also includes the price.

"One year we tried to let the students get their own books," Mrs. Stanland remarked. "We labeled all of the shelves according to subjects. Then we passed out book lists telling where to find each book. These lists were given to the students as they entered the bookstore. But it didn't work. The students ended up wandering all around the bookstore."

"I am living for the day when more room is provided for the bookstore. There is just not enough room to provide everything people want," said Mrs. Stanland, who cheerfully admits not having the best facilities possible at this time.

According to Mrs. Stanland, the space for the bookstore is not adequate. More courses are continually added requiring the ordering and stocking of new books. In addition, more room is needed for the stocking of new books which arrive every quarter until unsold books can be removed and returned.

To assist Mrs. Stanland in serving approximately 200 customers every day, Mrs. Stanland has Juniors Susan Watson and Wayne Johnson and Senior Pamela Long.

Their motto is, "The bookstore is a service to the students." Mrs. Stanland says, "All of the students I've had have been outstanding and made contributions."

Not every student who comes to the bookstore knows what he wants. Mrs. Stanland recalls the day an art student came in: "He wanted to buy canvass for a picture, but he didn't know what size he wanted and he didn't know how many stretcher strips he needed."

When students have formed the customary long line to buy books at the beginning of the quarter, nerves in the bookstore are somewhat tense. During one of these trying periods, a girl entered the bookstore. "She asked for a certain type of art paper and I got it. Then she asked for a brush. Then again she asked for something else. Finally, I just stood where I was and yelled to her to see if she wanted anything else."

During another chaotic registration period, Mrs. Stanland was working in the bookstore with only one student assistant. The line the phone kept ringing. Finally, said Mrs. Stanland "she threw up her hands and, left as if I was drowning."

The bookstore now has a no refund policy (except on damaged books.) Before it went into effect, a student would come in and buy a paperback book, read it that night, take it to class and then return it, saying it was the wrong book. Mrs. Stanland said.

Mrs. Stanland came to Wilmington College five years ago after twenty years as a civil service accountant with the federal government. She likes her present job, she stated, saying, "It boosts my ego because somebody is always speaking to me."

The student assistants all like their work. As Wayne Johnson put it, "It gives me a chance to do something constructive and be helpful at school."

The bookstore is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:15 p.m., but is usually closed one hour for lunch. Mrs. Stanland said she and the students working there are always willing to help students as much as possible with their needs but requests for such things as turpentine, Alka Seltzer, or playing cards cannot be met because the need is not great enough. "But if you need to have a check cashed or to use the phone directory, come in to the bookstore and take advantage of all the services it renders," says Mrs. Stanland.

Sigma Phi Sigma

"The biggest thing at Wilmington College ever, was the Las Vegas Party, said Diane Sellars, Publicity Chairman for Sigma Phi Sigma." We felt that because of the major participation of the faculty with the students, the student-teacher relations would be greatly strengthened. We want to thank all of the faculty members who helped us so much," she continued.

"The skits were only part of it, though because now gambling (just playful, of course) has come to Wilmington College with the Las Vegas Party."

A civic and a service project are scheduled for the first of May. Diane stated, "We are hoping to add to the workers making our community a better place by helping others."

Phi Mu

Laurel Baker, President of Chi Sigma Phi, Gamma Kappa Colony of Phi Mu, reports that "the Fraternity's colonization is progressing nicely. We hope to become a chapter sometime in May," continued Laurel.

Under the supervision and direction of Mrs. David Warner, Alumna Advisor and Pledge Director for the Wilmington College Colony, the Fraternity Sisters are currently learning pertinent information about Phi Mu Fraternity. The Phi Mu car wash, scheduled for Saturday, March 23, in the Senior Parking Lot, was postponed due to unfavorable weather conditions. It will be held at a later date. At present, however, a definite date has not been set.

Pi Kappa Phi

When the winter quarter came to a close, Gamma Theta Chapter of Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity initiated fifteen new members into their active chapter.

Among these were Claude D. Graves, K. Glenn Waters, Dr. B. Frank Hall, John W. Baldwin, James O. Carter, Charles M. Coleman Jr., James W. Gerock, George O. Hardie Jr., William J. Harrell, Hubert S. Hufham Jr., John U. King III, William A. Marlowe, Patrick D. Piner, Michael E. Sheehan, and Robert K. Wiard.

Sigma Phi Kappa

Sigma Phi Kappa Fraternity began the month of March by electing new officers, reports Sigma Phi Kappa Brother Al Carrus. Outgoing President, Bill Huggins was succeeded by Carmen Aragona; Adair Graham was relieved by Bob Berg; Duane Midgett became treasurer; and Kenny King became the new secretary.

Al Carrus became the new social chairman, replacing Doug O'Hara, a recent graduate. Danny Martin turned over the pledge-master's duties to Charles Alexander.

The Fraternity reports that "The affiliation committee has made excellent progress toward reaching our goal of National Fraternity affiliation. Kappa Sigma alumni will meet with the chapter on April 2. A national representative of Tau Kappa Epsilon will visit Sigma Phi Kappa on April 6. "Sigma Phi Kappa is in for a great change soon," stated the Brothers.

Delta Epsilon

Delta Epsilon's Brothers are currently preparing for what Delta Epsilon Brother Bill Chapman says, "we hope will be a very good rush. Among our other plans, there is a beach party planned during the Azalea Festival week-end. Parties are scheduled for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday.

Delta Epsilon had a car wash for a fund raising project last week. "This car wash was a smashing success during the last hour," stated Bill.

Several Brothers of the Fraternity have been going to Chapel Hill for the last few week-ends to talk with some of the National Fraternities at the University of North Carolina.

The Delta Epsilon scholarship is now being processed. All eligible students are urged to apply.

WHATS HAPPENING BROTHER?

By WALT HEALEY, JR.
Sports Editor

A fourth dimension has rendered pre-season speculations by connoisseurs about the potential effectiveness of the Seahawk baseball team fraudulent.

Through the first six games coach Bill Brooks' pitchers have allowed only two earned runs in 54 innings for an 0.33 average per game.

This series of victories includes three triumphs over NAIA District 26 opponents. Last season Wilmington finished with a 22-12 record comprising a 17-7 mark in their first year of NAIA competition.

The reason the experts have been foiled is because of the Koufax-Drysdale duo of Pete Eyer and Chuck Cuppett. Both are 2-0 with 0.00 earned run averages.

Eddie Lewis and Jim Harris teamed up for a victory and Jimmy Harris notched one with Harris's help.

Without a shadow of a doubt the Seahawk club could give any college or university baseball team a game. Unlike some sports where one persons presence means defeat to the opponent in baseball there are usually many hero's over a course of a season. Right now the Wilco hurlers are playing the role.

The three eagles in the outfield spots who cover Brooks Field as well as any combination in America are Sam Askew, Sandy Dew, and Jim Hall. Askew and Dew were All-District 26 selections a year ago with .368 and a .333 batting averages respectively.

No one could ask for a finer wall of granite at third base in Pete Daughtry. Paul Livingston at the keystone corner and Jerry Martin are presently the top batters on the team, and, first baseman Wayne Johnson lead the club in home runs and runs batted in a year ago.

Brooks and his assistant coach Dave Miller have come up with a top-notch catcher in Jim Atkins who wheels a hitting bat as well as a strong arm.

But all teams need depth and the Wilmington College team has it. There are no seniors on the roster and seven juniors and all are experienced from last year.

NIT Note: Duke University received a lesson in old-fashioned schoolyard basketball when they lost to St. Peters.

'HAWKS NINE WIN FIVE STRAIGHT

The Seahawks baseball team is off and running as they have won five straight games while compiling an 0.20 era. including three shutouts.

The schedule:

April 6—ACC—Away—2 P.M.

April 9—Campbell—Home—7:30 P.M.

High Point

The Seahawks defeated Ray Bloose, winner of the final game in the Pan Am games last year, 1-0 as the 'Hawks opened their 1968 season with a District 26 victory.

Chuck Cuppett went all the way allowing only three hits, walking none and striking out two. Cuppett defeated the Panthers last season 1-0 in 17 inings in the playoffs.

Jerry Martin and Sandy Dew each collected two hits against Bloose who struck out eight. Wayne Johnson had a double.

S. C. Baptist

Pete Eyer, a transfer student from Louisburg Junior College, zipped a two-hitter against South Carolina Baptist College in Charleston as the Seahawks registered their second consecutive 1-0 victory.

Eyer struck out three and walked only one while facing only 28 batters.

Wilmington scored the one run in the sixth inning. Sam Askew, who batted .368 last season while making the All-District 26 team, lined a single to right and advanced to second as the Baptist rightfielder Jim Morris bobbled the ball.

With two out Jim Hall singled in the winning run of losing pitcher Fred Dyches.

S. C. Baptist

for the second time in two days with a 7-1 victory.

The duo limited the Charleston club to three hits and Harris allowed the first earned run to be scored against the 'Hawks after 26 scoreless frames.

Wilmington got on Eddie Dowling for six runs and reliever John Sigman for one in the third and fourth inings.

After scoring two in the third Pete Daughtry and Jerry Martin tripled back to back with one down in the fourth. Eddie Lewis banged home Martin, Sandy Dew singled and Sam Askew walked to load the bases after Paul Livingston struck out.

A grounder to short stop Tom Cuffino was thrown away and three runners came across on the error.

ACC

Chuck Cuppett hurled his second complete game and gave up an unearned run as the Seahawks took their fourth straight, 3-1, against Atlantic Christian College.

Cuppett struck out six to bring his mark to 2-0.

Wilmington scored single runs in the second, fourth and sixth inings against ACC starter Ernest Meneely.

A single by catcher Jim Atkins in the fourth scored Wayne Johnson with the winning run.

Pete Daughtry's sacrifice fly in the sixth scored Jim Hall with an insurance run after Hall had singled and moved around to third as the ball went past Gerald Waddell for a two base error.

ACC

Pete Eyer whipped his second shutout of the season, past ACC, 6-0, and extended his scoreless streak to 18 inings.

The Seahawks now 5-0 collected nine hits with Paul Livingston getting two including a double and two runs batted in. Sam Askew had a double and two rbis.

Eyer struck out 13 ACC batters, walked two and allowed only three hits.

Jimmy Johnson teamed up with Jim Harris to hunt a four-hitter against Wayne State as Wilmington won 9-1 extending its winning streak to six games.

Committee Sadly Says: May Dance On Campus

Can the plain, sometimes drab, generally dirty Pub be transformed into an appropriate place for a formal May Dance? The Dance Committee hopes this will be possible as no place off campus could be found to have this dance.

"We tried every available place in town," Dale Donahue, chairman of the Dance Committee, emphasized. "We went to every hotel, every restaurant, every country Club, and every lodge hall in town, but they were either already booked or too small."

"I'd rather have it in the Pub than having a place that was too small."

"When we went to the Country Clubs in town they said they were sorry but no outside members could rent them," Dale reported.

To compensate for having to have the dance on campus, the dance committee plans to go all out on the decorations for the night of the dance. Dale reported that so far over $100 has been spent on decorations.

"We will attempt to make the Pub look as nice this year as it did last year for the May Dance."

Dale would not, however, disclose what the decorations would be like.

Just as the committee could not find a place off campus for the dance they could also not get the band they wanted. However, the booking agency used by the committee has promised that the band for the dance is going to be just as good as the one they had wanted to get.

Playing for the Dance will be the Tip-Tops of Atlanta.

The Dance will be in the Pub from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. on Saturday, May 11.

Dress for the dance will be formal which, as Dale explained, will mean dinner jackets for the boys.

Admission to the dance will be by I.D. cards.

Also for the dance free refreshments will be served by the committee.

And, of course, the May Queen, senior Katharine Proctor, will reign over the dance. During the dance she and her court will be presented. No definite plans have yet been made as to how this will be done. Sophomore June Grumbles will be in charge of this.

"We're really going all out to make this dance a success," said Dale, "and we hope the students will attend it."

Faculty Committee Considers Semester System

"A semester system at Wilmington College is being considered by a faculty committee," said Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, dean of faculty. This idea has not yet gone to the faculty as a whole but the committee is expected to approve it.

"Even if the committee and the Board of Trustees decide to convert from the quarter to the semester system we won't consider putting it into effect before 1969, or more probably 1970." This would affect those students who are now sophomores or juniors intending to spend more than four years at Wilmington College.

"A semester system would consist of two 15 week periods instead of the three ten week periods Wilmington is now using," continued Reynolds. There are two ways of working the first, or fall semester; begin in August and end in time for Christmas, or begin in early September and end in late January. Christmas would divide this second possibility by putting a two week vacation about three weeks before final exams.

Major subjects will carry three credit hours instead of five, and courses with labs will be four instead of six. The elementary and intermediate language courses will continue to count as three credit hours but will meet three days a week plus two lab periods. All of the major courses will meet a total of three hours a week.

One of the main problems in switching to a semester system will be converting a student's credit hours. Each hour taken under the quarter system will count as two-thirds of an hour under the semester system. Five hour courses will then rank as three hour courses.

"Instead of taking three courses for 15 hours the student will take five," Reynolds said.

"I have taught and studied under both systems and I prefer the semester. The main benefit to the student is in that he only attends class three times a week for each course. The student has more time to absorb the material and can budget his time for extra activities.

Students Form Biology Club

"To create an interest in biology and to create a closer relationship between members of the Biology Department," was said by Horace Johnson to be the purpose of the Biology Club, the newest student organization on campus.

Formed at the beginning of Winter Quarter, the organization is open to junior and senior biology majors. It was formed by a group of these students. Dr. Parnell stated, "It's interesting to note that this group is a group that has been founded entirely by the students. Of course, the Biology Department is behind them, but we think it important that they were the ones that began the club."

Horace Johnson is Biology Club president. Other officers include Stephen Wright, who serves as vice-president, and Janie Braswell, who is the Secretary-treasurer.

The organization has applied for membership in the North Carolina Collegiate Academy of Science, and expects to receive their membership sometime in the near future. The Club plans to be represented at their convention, which will be held at Greensboro in May.

'Under Milk Wood' At S.R.O. Tonight

Dylan Thomas' "Under Milk Wood" will be presented by the Wilmington College Theatre on April 26, 27 and 28. Curtain time will be 8:30 p.m. in the college's S.R.O. Theatre.

The famous Welsh Poet, Dylan Thomas, was the subject of a play himself. The play entitled "Dylan" was written by Sidney Michaels and first presented at the Plymouth Theatre in New York in 1964.

During his third visit to America in 1953, "Under Milk Wood" was afforded a reading presentation at the Kaufmann Auditorium of the Young Men's Hebrew Association on May 15 and 29. Dylan himself read the parts of the First Voice and the Rev. Eli Jenkins.

As soon as Thomas returned to Britain the B.B.C. urged him to complete the work without further delay. By omitting some projected ballads and unfinished material, he was able to supply a finished version at the end of October. On the 9th of November, 1953, a few days after his thirty-ninth birthday, Dylan Thomas died in New York.

"Under Milk Wood" in its entirety was first broadcast on January 25, 1954, produced by Douglas Cleverdon with a distinguished all Welsh cast. It met with immediate success and was repeated two days later. Since that time "Under Milk Wood" has been claimed by the theatre as its exclusive off-spring.

The roles of the two narrators whose position in this poetic drama is to unite all the vignettes will be played by Elenore Powell and John Richardson. David James will portray the role of Captain Cat.

The women in this production will be played by Sue Fulcher, Pat Fuchs, Abbe Godwin, Gay Godwin, Lenore Hagen, Marion Saffo and Donna West. The male roles will be portrayed by John Blair, Marc Pope, Craig Redwine, Tony Rivenbark, and Terry Wortley.

Director of this second presentation in the S.R.O. Theatre of the season will be Anne Fitzgibbon, professor of Drama and Speech.

Ga. State President To Lecture April 29

Dr. Noah Langdale will present the sixth lecture in the Wilmington College Lecture Series on Monday, April 29, at 7:30 p.m. in the student Services Building.

A native of Valdosta Georgia, Dr. Langdale received an A.B. degree from the University of Alabama, an L.L.B. degree from Harvard University Law School, an M.B.A. degree from Harvard University Graduate School of Business Administration, and an L.L.D. degree from the University of Alabama.

While in College, he received numerous awards, including the outstanding student award. He was varsity tackle on the championship University of Alabama football team, and graduated Phi Beta Kappa.

As a Lieutenant Senior Grade in the Navy, Mr. Langdale served in both the Southwest Pacific and North Atlantic. He also taught Naval subjects at the University of Georgia, and was commander at the Naval Air Transport Bases in the Philippine Islands and in Indonesia.

After practicing law in Georgia, for seven years, Dr. Langdale is currently President of Georgia State College in Atlanta.

Dr. Langdale's topic will be "The Future of Higher Education in the South," with a discussion of political implications and overtones.

"The faculty of Wilmington College is expected to attend the lecture, and all students and the general public are also invited," stated Mr. Walser Allen, who is in charge of the Lecture Series.

Office Conducts Program Of Research

The Office of Institutional Research at Wilmington College is presently conducting a comprehensive program of research to identify and characterize the student body.

The Office, which was established in 1967, is under the direction of Allen J. Barwick. It is under the sponsorship of the North Carolina Board of Higher Education and is strongly supported by it.

The first phase of research will be the identification of problems, part of the gathering of data to establish trends, changes and the general academic climate and a system to start this feedback information.

The second phase will be research to use the findings of phase one.

The questionnaires are being administered under phase one. The seven scales of Family Independence, Peer Independence, Liberalism, Social Conscience, Cultural Sophistication, motivation for Grades, and Family Social Status.

The report of the results of this questionnaire will be published and put in the library and Office of Institutional Research for the students' reference, not earlier than May, said Barwick. The title of the report is "Profile of the 1967 Wilmington College Freshman Class."

There will be no personal identification of the student in the report. The results will be shown by charts, scales, etc.

Included in the report will be a comparative analysis between the four subgroups: New Hanover County Male; New Hanover County Female; Non-New Hanover County Male, and Non-New Hanover County Female — and the Faculty members, fellow students, curriculum factors, fellow students, curriculum

factors, fellow students, curriculum and other topics related to Wilmington College.

This "gives the student an opportunity to let the school have it," said Barwick.

The 150 students selected will be sent a letter from Barwick, asking them to come by and fill out the questionnaire. It is not compulsory, but Barwick hopes the students will participate.

If the student doesn't come by the office within five days, another one will be selected. It only takes 30 minutes to complete the questionnaire.

A third questionnaire is to be administered to the faculty at the next faculty meeting if the questionnaires ordered arrive in time.

This will give the faculty members a chance to sound off on Wilmington College also.

Hope

It does seem that the color of one's skin should be relatively unimportant in today's world. It also seems that people should remember the Civil War was fought not one year ago but over 100 years ago. However, in the South both of these facts seem to have been forgotten.

Three weeks ago Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., a leader in the Negro movement to gain equal rights for the members of his race, was assassinated. His death was followed by tears, jeers, and rioting.

Members of the redneck white community laughed at his death and wondered only why it had not come sooner. But concerned whites and Negroes throughout the world mourned the death of a truly great leader of the nonviolent movement towards equality. Unfortunately there seemed to be those militant Negroes who saw his death as cause for unexplainable rioting causing much grief on the part of concerned whites and Negroes, but those rednecks only laughed (somewhat fearfully) and said "That's all They're good for..."

It was strange that on this campus, this seat of apathy, the only show of spirit on the part of a majority of students was to try to pull the American flag from its mourning position of halfmast because the man for whom it was flying was a Negro. Of course, these students probably felt that if a man is a Negro, if his skin is black, that he really is not a man and therefore, if someone is not a man, why show the consideration of flying the flag at half mast as a sign of national mourning.

But luckily for this campus not everyone is such as to believe the nonsense these first students obviously believed because another large group of students rallied to do what was ordered by the President of this country and succeeded in keeping the flag in its proper position during the day.

In closing, if those students who were standing on the porch of the Pub that day can equal the achievements of Dr. King by the time they are 39 we would wish to congratulate them; however, it is very doubtful these students will. There is more hope for the "flagpole sitters."

Revived

Coach Charles Sproles has revived tennis on a club basis this year. There are 12 candidates out for the team and coach Sproles has been trying to attain matches with a number of colleges and junior colleges in the area.

"As long as the tennis team remains as a club we can play anyone," said athletic director Bill Brooks. "Last year we had to cancel a full schedule because of the lack of interest among the students, so this year we waited until we were sure we had some people to play."

"If the interest remains we will probably make tennis a varsity sport and try to make up a schedule for next year."

Gary Shell and Tim Jordan were named co-captains of the team. These two players have helped in getting other players out on the courts. This interest must remain if tennis shall resume its spot as a varsity sport at Wilmington College.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

This letter will seek to explain the events surrounding Monday the eighth of April, for I am almost positive that most of you are concerned.

The most vociferous advocate of non-violence since Mahatma Gandhi was dead. The President of the United States, the Governor of North Carolina, and the Administration of this college ordered the flag flown at half mast to mourn the loss of this leader. Yet there were those who, in the name of "American Democracy," took it upon themselves to disobey these orders. This is somewhat strange, inconsistent and even paradoxical, for while attacking one set of Stars and Stripes they were waving smaller replicas of the same flag. Why?

This group claimed that the American Flag had not been flown at half mast for a civilian before. But was not Winston Churchill a civilian and only an honorary citizen. Did not Martin Luther King rank among the greats of the world. I think so.

The events which followed were spontaneous and, taken in the right context of events on other campuses, they were somewhat ephemeral. But they happened and it was actually no surprise, except for the size of the group which gathered around the flag pole to uphold the Presidential order.

Who were these people who sat upon the grass while the others stood by waving a confederate flag? Supporters of Dr. King?

Yes. Determined, thinking students? Yes. The real products of the "New South" which George Brown Tindall shows is still emerging? Yes. Defiers of the "savage ideal." Yes. Students who's minds wonder when men will except other men? Yes. Lovers of the South. Maybe. Haters of the South? I doubt that.

Freedom for them takes on a special significance. For them freedom includes all people. There is no need for one to be the dominant color to have it. This, then, is what they wished to express and did.

This group was not the precipitator of the crisis, but yet they were the first to make an attempt at bringing the conflict to an end. But to no avail, for the other group cheered as if victory had been achieved which caused the determination of the grass sitters to rise and they immediately sat back down. The cheering stopped. Finally an agreement was reached and it was over.

We have discussed the ideals of the grass sitters, but what about the other group, the ones who stood upon the steps? They waved the American Flag and the confederate flag.

The reason for the now obsolete confederate flag is somewhat confusing to us. We dare say they were not schooled in their Southern history, thus, not knowing the principles for which that banner once stood. Then, too, why use a flag while all the time talking about "loyalty to America," that manifested the ideas that would have torn this country asunder. What ground did these people have upon which they could stand? When asked they exclaimed that they were tired of sitting back and letting everyone run over them.

They, in short, did not have an order from the President of the United States to obey. They had no law. They were just vociferous.

But the grass sitters can understand them. The only problem is they cannot understand the grass sitters, and furthermore, "understanding" is a word about which they know nothing. But the grass sitters still have hope for them, and maintain that their attitudes toward other men will be changed. How long—we know not. Up until that time, however, their attitudes will still be that of the Dixiecrats of 1948. V. O. Key Jr. in his book SOUTHERN POLITICS placed the proper description upon them. He called them "the antediluvian reactionaries and malodorous opportunists." Their attitudes are certainly antediluvian and certainly malodorous.

A Master Of Choice

To the Editor:

It is a shame—no—it is a hypocrisy—that people on both the left and the right are so quick to judge one's actions without listening to reason. Instead they follow their own emotions and become so enraptured with the dialogue of the moment that they tend to equate everything which is not of their peculiar thinking with some ultra philosophy so that those of the liberal side yell "Bigot" and those of the far right side welcome a new found leader.

I pretend to be neither. But I did profess to feel with conviction that the flag should not have been lowered. Not because it was for a Negro. This did not matter. But because the President said "All flags on Federal Installations will fly at half mast." Wilmington College is not a Federal Installation.

However, I was wrong. Col. Glenn Long of the Mathematics Department, remaining a scholar when all else were yelling emotionally on one side or the other, researched the problem. His findings were that it does not matter where the American Flag is flown, it shall be in accordance with Federal law. And the President, as Executor of Federal Law has the authority to say how it shall fly.

We had a choice—we could fly as directed or not at all. We chose to fly. So be it.

Droopy Drawers

To the Editor:

Who will forget that day of days, when the sun dripped blood and a fiery cross appeared in the heavens and liberals gathered around the flag pole jealously guarding it and the rednecks pranced like apes on the steps of the Pub: all because the flagpole had droopy drawers. But Zeus looked down and disapproved mightily and caused a water sprinkler to be placed about the flagpole and all was well then because the prancing apes did not want to get their Gant shirts wet.

Too Much Status Quo

To the Editor:

There are some who judge themselves authorities on a problem or complex of problems that has infested our entire culture. Lurking beneath the symptoms is a disease more insidious, threatening and divisive than its past diagnosis has belied. The problem is race; its symbol is color; the disease is HATE; its symptoms are all the factors and fractions that interacted and interlocked in THE CRISIS OF THE UNKNOWN ASSAILANT.

Some have charted the problem and have predicted the increasingly painful agony of its progress: Gunnar Myrdal, W. J. Cash, V. O. Key, C. Vann Woodward, James Silver, Donald R. Mathews, James M. Prothro—Martin Luther King, Jr.

But the sickness of centuries has been ignored as if it were non-existent. And indeed there is no urgent voice crying for help — if your skin is white. In the heat of political battles long past there were created myths which upon acceptance by dominant (or dominated) society, have been perpetuated and elevated to "Holy Writ." If your skin is black, however, there is a recognition at an early age that you are somehow different. And it is manifest everywhere.

Where is the justice of such a society? Granted this injustice now permeates the nation but its origins were in the south.

Because of recent defense of the flag, I have been accused of:
1) not being objective about race.
2) acting like a liberal. As there has been a defense of the flag there shall also be an exposition and defense of the motives.

I have taken a stand for equal rights for all people. If that is not objective — so be it! To be objective, one must take views from all sides and weigh the issues on their merits. This I have done! Formally and informally, I have weighed the views: past, present, and trends.

I am tired of those whose perspective is such as to conceive that events occur in a vacuum, that the validity of a different time and place continues forever unchanging. I have studied the authoritative works. The scales have too long been tipped against the Negro. Distribution of rewards equally to both groups will not heal the wounds and balance the scales. The South has too long consisted of lip service, middle of the roaders who, despite their egalitarian views, don't want to rock the boat. But how can one straighten a listing boat without rocking it.

In the book, STRIDES TOWARD FREEDOM, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. tells how, while working in an integrated plant, he realized that the poor white is as much exploited as the Negro. As I am an advocate of equal rights and equal opportunities for all races, I am against those who would knowingly deprive the less fortunate for opportunistic (objective?) reasons. The infamy of the South on this count has been articulated at the shelf filled length. This leads me to accusation number two.

My action and energies have been directed at frustrating further exploitation of Southern people by a relatively small group of individuals. If, in order to do this, my actions are construed as liberal — so be it. The dominant mood of the South has always been conservative, but if conservatism is so right and affective, why is the South the poorest region in the nation? The political structure of the South has been stagnant with race baiters and stand patners of the status quo. There is even now a certain "conservative" candidate for governor of North Carolina who has stated that the "problems of the ghettos are exaggerated." What can a millionaire know about the real problems of the slums? If being against malodorous opportunists and antediluvian reactionaries is being liberal — then that I am proud to be!

ON THE SIDELINES

by GIL HUGULEY

Those of you who can remember the Wrightsville Beach Fish and Water Sports Festival of last spring may also remember that one of the activities was a crew race on Bank's Channel. East Carolina University came down with both their varsity and junior varsity teams, coached by Andre Brousseau. The opposition didn't make it, so East Carolina put on an exhibition between the varsity and the jayvees.

The crowd, maybe 10,000 both afloat and ashore, loved it. To the uninitiated, the speed of a racing shell is nothing short of awesome. We were on board the CALYPSO V, a beautiful, fast motor yacht of about 45 feet, and we were having to turn 2300 r.p.m. on both engines to keep up with the shells. We don't know what our exact speed was, but the CALYPSO V was almost on the step at full plane.

Recently East Carolina, Virginia Polytech, The Citadel, Jacksonville University, Alabama, and the University of Tampa got together and formed the Southern Rowing Association to promote and schedule competition among the schools. Coach Tim Tyler of Jacksonville was named President and Andre Brousseau became the Association's first executive secretary.

It is interesting for Wilmington College to note that Andre Brousseau is no longer teaching at East Carolina but is teaching here.

Andre, along with a small group of adherents, is working quietly to lay the ground work necessary before attempting to form a crew at Wilmington.

Admittedly, initial cost is a problem, but once surmounted, operations cost are lower than for most other athletic teams. A pair of new shells and oars go for around $5,000, but there are used shells around for much less.

Crew is an ideal sport for Wilmington College, as we are so intimately involved with the water. The heritage of the City that breathed life into this institution is tied to the water completely. The water built this city and the college; therefore it is entirely fitting that we return to the water for athletic competition.

Crew racing is a great spectator sport. At a meet, a holiday atmosphere permeates the crowd. Dress is casual, bermudes or swimsuits being the rule. Whether one sits on the shore or rides the waves, the parties develop, the radios sound with Rock, everybody cheers and everybody beers.

Anyone interested should contact Andre, or coach Brousseau as we maybe should start calling him. At this point we can guarantee nothing, but we feel that the probability is high that Wilmington College will have a rowing team in the near future. We certainly hope so.

Golfers Perfect, 5-0, In NAIA

Coach Earl Allen's golf team won its seventh meet in eight outings with an impressive 22½-4½ victory over NAIA opponent St. Andrews College. The Wilmington record in District 26 competition is 5-0. Mike Allen, a freshman from Wilmington, N. C., fired a two-under par 69 in the number one spot to take medalist honors and moved four strokes in front of team captain Paul Bergen, Wilmington, N. C., in overall strokes. The Seahawks will play in Greenville against East Carolina University Tuesday, April 16. The District 26 tournament will be held in Boone, North Carolina, this year with the NAIA Nationals at Bemidji, Minnesota, June 4-7.

PITCHERS DOMINATE SEAHAWK BASEBALL

It has been an odd week for the Wilmington College baseball team. Last Friday, April 12, sophomore Jim Sanders threw 75 pitches, hurling the first perfect game in the college's history. Sanders, a Florence, South Carolina native, did not allow a ball out of infield in the seven-inning game, while he struck out ten California State batters in the 1-0 victory.

Coach Bill Brooks' club then lost three straight—one to California State, 3-1, and two to NAIA foe Belmont-Abbey, 4-2 and 4-1. The two losses inflicted by the Crusaders left Wilmington with a 6-2 District 26 record. The 'Hawks then came back with two upsets over East Carolina University, 5-1 and 2-1, which brought the Wilmington season record to 14-4.

The Wilmington pitching staff has a combined earned run average of 0.52, and the team's fielding average is .971.

Wayne Johnson and Sandy Dew lead the club in hits with 18 each. Johnson is batting .300.

Sam Askew, Kenly, N. C., blasted a 385-foot home run off of East Carolina righthander Vince Colbert in the 2-1 twelve-inning victory. It was Askew's first of the season.

Wayne State

Jimmy Johnson and Jim Harris teamed up to twirl a four-hitter against Wayne State as the Seahawks won their sixth straight, 9-1.

Sam Askew, Pete Daughtry, and Paul Livingston collected two hits apiece off loser Bruce Finlayson.

The 'Hawks scored three runs in the third and sixth innings as they unleashed a ten-hit attack against Wayne State.

Lynchburg College

Wilmington College scored five runs in the eighth inning to topple Lynchburg College 5-1 for their seventh straight win.

Until that time lefthander Ken Holt had limited the Seahawks to only one hit. Chuck Cuppett, who won his third game, gave up an unearned tally in the fourth inning while allowing only four hits.

Williams College

Pete Eyer hurled his third straight shutout on a two-hitter against Williams College in a 7-0 win. Eyer struck out ten and walked only three.

Sandy Dew, Jim Atkins, and Pete Daughtry each had two hits. Gene Russ blasted a two run single in a four run seventh inning to seal the victory.

Eyer faced 28 batters in the game.

Williams College

Williams College took advantage of the silence of the Wilmington College bats to snap the Seahawks eight game winning streak 4-1.

Jim Sanders was tagged with the loss as he yielded three runs and seven hits in three innings.

Lowell Davis came on in relief for Williams and allowed only one hit over the last two innings. The 'Hawks only managed four hits for the afternoon with Wayne Johnson getting two.

St. Andrews College

Jim Atkins blasted a double, triple and a home run in pacing the Seahawks over St. Andrews 10-2.

Chuck Cuppett won his fourth game giving up his first two earned runs. Cuppett's earned run average is now 0.50.

Wilmington collected a season high of 13 hits with Cuppett, Sandy Dew, and Paul Livingston each collecting a pair.

Atkins batted in five runs for the day.

Colby College

The Seahawks put on a late rally and squeezed past Colby College 3-2. Ed Lewis pitched one-hit ball over the last five innings to pick up his second win.

Lewis, Jerry Martin, and Wayne Johnson each had two hits.

Johnson led off the eighth inning with a pop up which was dropped for a three base error. Jim Atkins singled to score Johnson. Atkins was eliminated on a fielders choice which left Jim Hall on first. Hall stole second, went to third on a pass ball, and scored on a balk for the go ahead run.

ACC

Pete Eyer won his fourth game going 11 innings to edge Atlantic Christian College 2-1. It boosted the Seahawk record to 11-1 and a 6-0 NAIA slate.

Sam Askew singled, stole second and scored on Wayne Johnson's single.

Eyer limited ACC to three hits while striking out seven. The run was unearned and Eyer's era is 0.00 for 38 innings.

Askew and Johnson each had two hits in the contests.

Jim Sanders resting between innings of California State game. Sanders hurled a perfect game against the Vulcans of Pennsylvania, the first in Wilmington College history.

Godwin Heads Political Club

A group of students, under the leadership of Thomas Scism, recently organized a Student Political Activities Club.

SPAC was formed during the fall quarter of the current school year. The founders of the organization state the objectives as being, "To Heighten the interest in the political processes." In the absence of an active Young Democrats or Young Republicans Club on campus, SPAC serves all students interested in politics, despite their political affiliations.

Gaye Godwin is the president of SPAC. Other officers are Bobby Bohannon, vice-president; John Blair, corresponding secretary; and Terry Wortley, secretary-treasurer.

One of the main projects of the organization was the sponsoring of Dr. Martin Luther King's proposed appearance at Wilmington College. The members express regret that Dr. King was never able to visit the college. "One of the goals of the organization is to present both sides of controversial issues. That was one of the reasons for wanting to bring Dr. King here," explained the members.

Gaye stated that several members of the organization are participating in a gubernatorial campaign. Others, under the leadership of Bobby Bohannon, are working in conjunction with the SEAHAWK Staff in an effort to determine the presidential preferences of the student body at Wilmington College.

Levy Studies In England Before Coming To College

Dr. Jack Levy, new member of the Chemistry Department, comes to Wilmington College after a year of research in England.

After Graduating from Duke University, Dr. Levy received his M.A. and Ph.D. from North Carolina State University in Raleigh. He then traveled to England to do a year of post doctorate research at Cambridge under the direction of Dr. F. G. Mann.

Dr. Levy gave his reason for going to England as Dr. Mann is the leading authority on heterocyclic phosphorus compounds. Dr. Levy explained, "This is a branch of organic chemistry. Our research involves the preparation of new compounds, which were never prepared before, and their properties."

"There is a practical interest in this, one of medicinal value. Although no one knows in advance what will be found, they may have some unexpected importance. There is reason to believe certain of these compounds may have biological activity."

Dr. Levy, with Drs. G. O. Doak and L. D. Freeman of N. C. State have just published their third paper in a series devoted to synthetic methods developed for the preparation of new heterocyclic phosphorus compounds. When the preliminary studies are completed, and the best synthetic methods have been determined, a large number of presently unknown compounds will be prepared and tested for their biological activity.

Mentioning the difference between here and England, as far as his research work went, Dr. Levy said, "We plan in advance more than they do. They work day by day." Dr. Levy thought it would be the other way around since there is the impression that the "British are very meticulous."

Dr. Levy also noted, "We tend to get a broad education in undergraduate schools. In England the undergraduate specializes as we do in a graduate school. Their courses are mainly in their major and related schols. However, their pre-undergraduate schools are more rigorous and broad."

"Students I came in contact with were not as narrow as one might expect. They did retain an interest in liberal arts subjects." Dr. Levy did say the students he had met were chemistry students.

Dr. Levy, who has always attended large schools, looked forward to the opportunity of coming to a small school, to see if it had the advantages I'd expect." Dr. Levy hoped to find a closer relationship between faculty and student and believes he has found this "simply because the classes are smaller."

Club To Request Social Science

The newly organized Psychology Club reports plans for drafting a petition to request a major in social science at Wilmington College. A major in this field would involve courses in psychology, sociology, geography, and political science. Ken Stuart heads the committee which is working on the petition.

The Psychology Club has held only four meetings, but its members believe much has been accomplished. "We have had up to 20 students at each meeting," stated Secretary Martha Cowie,

"which we feel is pretty good for a new club."

A tentative charter has been drawn up by the group. Corrections and additions will be added at the next meeting.

A guest speaker, Mr. Yates, from the Du Pont Plant, explained to the group how personnel are hired. Dr. Darwin Newton, from Wilmington College, has also been invited to speak.

The secretary invites all students who have at least five hours in psychology to join the club. The next meeting will be held Thursday night, April 25.

Sigma Phi Kappa

The initiation of five new brothers was one of the first things on the Sigma Phi Kappa agenda this quarter. The new initiates were Bob Elliot, Ed Kubovsak, Gary Hult, Ken Cobb, and Rodney Shackleford.

On Saturday, April 5, the brothers of Sigma Phi Kappa, being the chairman of the Wrightsville Beach Cancer Drive, sold some 250 balloons to raise money. This practice, along with door to door solicitations will continue through the end of April.

The following Sunday, the Kappas were big brothers to 20 of the boys from Lake Waccamaw Boys' Home for the day. Among the activities were morning church service, a cookout, a movie, and a curfew-cancelled tour of the Battleship.

Pi Kappa Phi

Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity at Wilmington College held its Spring Rush as scheduled on April 1 and 3. The Spring Rush Party took place at the American Legion Home on Third and Dock Streets, Friday April 5.

Sigma Phi Sigma

This quarter marked the first Rush of Sigma Phi Sigma. The Sorority had a tea on Monday, Apr. 1, for the first Rush event. Their second meeting was an informal one at Ellen Dunn's home on Thursday, April 4.

Joy Lewis was Rush Chairman.

Delta Epsilon

"New at the fraternity game of Rush, Delta Epsilon came forth with some new ideas," stated Delta Epsilon Brother Hap Hazard. The only formal Rush by Delta Epsilon was planned around the Rush Banquet of April 4.

Phi Mu

Mrs. Margaret Nesbitt, Alpha District Collegiate Director of Phi Mu Fraternity, recently visited the Wilmington Colony of Phi Mu to assist with Rush Week. While in Wilmington, Mrs. Nesbitt was the guest of Mrs. Dave Warner, Pledge Director for Wilmington's Phi Mu Colony.

A Ribboning Ceremony was held Thursday, April 11, to induct the new pledges. Girls from the Kappa Zeta Chapter of Phi Mu, at Atlantic Christian College in Wilson conducted the Ribboning Ceremony, which was held in the Student Services Building. The Wilson Chapter is the Sister Chapter of the Colony in Wilmington.

Chadwick, Newkirk To Head Student Body Next Year

Running on a platform to improve cooperation between the college and community and to promote a better image of the college to the general public, Gary Chadwick captured the student body presidency by a commanding margin over opponent Terry Wortley.

Hugh Newkirk defeated write-in candidate Bobby Bohannon for the vice-presidency and Sara Rivenbark, running unopposed, was elected student body secretary.

Gary stated in his campaign speech that the president of the student body is the true representative of the college and must promote college functions. In any matter concerning college affairs, the student body president should be involved, he added.

According to Gary, student apathy is a problem to be approached gradually until the entire student body is willing to work together for the betterment of the school.

Sara, who presently holds the office of secretary, wants to continue working with the Senate. "I've seen the Senate progress from what THE SEAHAWK calls a 'statute garden' to a debating team — and I consider that progress."

Leading the senior class next year are Robert Prince, president; Tim Jordan, vice-president; and Millie Bowden, secretary. Millie, running against Diana Smith, was the only opposed candidate.

Senior class senators include Andy Futrelle, Clark Peterson, Jack Sheehan, Sharon Blake and Jerry Hartgrove.

Write-in candidate Bill Baugh won the junior class presidency over announced candidate Dale Donahue. Billy Dalton, newly-elected vice-president "feels qualified for the position" and plans to do "what is expected of me to the best of my ability."

Junior secretary is Joyce Lane. Senators are Chris Deasy, Barbara Halterman, Georgia Macris, Ann Stephens and Sherry Southerland.

Hoping to profit from experience as freshman class president, Bill Harrell was re-elected to serve as the sophomore class next year. He was opposed by George Holston.

Other class officers are Robert Wiard, vice-president; Marilyn Gooden, secretary; and senators Jimmy Carted, Chic Coleman, Bill Johnson, Nancy Lewis, and Elaine Walker.

Judicial Council members include announced candidate Terry Wortley and write-in hopefuls Joanne Conroy, Jimmy Doss, Gil Huguley, and Pamela Ward.

In the presidential primary, Democratic candidates received 143 votes, Republicans, 173; and write-in candidate George Wallace, 63.

In the Democratic party, Robert Kennedy received 54 votes; Eugene McCarthy, 49; and Hubert Humphrey, 40. Richard Nixon polled 124 votes and Nelson Rockefeller 49 in the Republican race.

Voting percentages for the classes were 53.25% for the senior class, 60% for the junior class, and 35% for the freshman class. Four hundred and sixty-one students voted in the election or 42.6% of the student body.

Senate Approves Constitution

May 22 has been set as the date for the student body to approve the new constitution. A three-fourths majority of those students voting must approve the new document.

Plans to rewrite the constitution were begun in the spring of 1966. Actual work, however, did not begin until this fall.

Chairman of the constitution committee was Hugh Newkirk.

The constitution was approved by the Student Senate at their May 6 meeting.

Newspaper Appears on Campus

Parody Of Hawk Published

A parody of the Seahawk was published and distributed on the campus Tuesday, as the Seahawk deadline neared.

The paper was one page mimeographed, back and front. It was entitled the "Seasquawk."

Renee Hartman, the Seahawk executive editor was in class and was not available for comment.

Three other staff members of the Seahawk thought the parody was well done and funny.

The major characteristics of the Seahawk which were satirized in the sheet were its heavy coverage of fine arts and drama.

Another criticism the parody made was the lack of news coverage of the incident involving the flag after Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s death. The Seahawk did not carry a news story about the incident in the last issue but devoted most of the editorial page to letters to the editor involving the incident. The long lead editorial was also devoted to the incident.

"I thought it was funny and I was flattered they cared that much to do it," said Seahawk News Editor Martin Grant. "They were right about the flagpole thing. . . . We should have had a story. . . . However, they were a little unfair about our objectivity. The fact is that we didn't get any letters to the editor from any conservatives about the incident, or we would have published them. We've published every signed letter to the editor we've gotten all year."

"The people who did this knew what they were doing," Grant said. "I wish they would come forward because we would like to have more fraternity people and we would like to have some conservative staff members."

"The fine art people and their allies" are the only students who have volunteered to work on the Seahawk," he said, "and we have had scholarships go begging for lack of someone to work on the paper."

He said that by "come forward" he meant that the parody did not carry the names of the students who put it out.

The parody carried several features which had nothing to do with the Seahawk. It attacked alleged overcharging of sales tax in the pub, suggested that different campus organizations be in charge of raising and lowering the flag, and gave a mathematics problem.

It also attacked the election board for not putting the names of other "announced candidates" on the straw ballot for president. It suggested that George Wallace, Dick Gregory, and Harold Stassen should have been on the ballot.

Straw-Hat Theatre To Try Something New

For seven summers the WILCO Straw-Hat Theatre has presented one play during the college's summer school session. The past two summers it has been able to mount two productions in that same time. This marking their tenth summer. It is felt that even more should be offered.

Six shows are their aim for this season; three of them will be musicals. All of them will be mounted in the air-conditioned S.R.O. Theatre in Kenan Hall on campus. The plays will be presented for six nights, Tuesdays through Sundays, beginning July 2 and running through August 11.

The productions and their dates will be:

- July 2 - 7 — "The Fantasticks"
- July 9 - 14 — "Barefoot in the Park"
- July 16 - 21 — "A Thurbur Carnival"
- July 23 - 28 — "Stop the World, I want to Get Off"
- July 31 - Aug. 4 — "Mary, Mary"
- Aug. 6 - 11 — "Two for the Seesaw"

The Straw-Hat Theatre is bringing onto the college campus seven professionally competent actors who will form the nucleus of this resident summer stock company. The rest of the roles will be played by either the college students and/or residents in the county to be cast from open try-outs.

In order to initiate such a program, the Straw-Hat Theatre needs a certain amount of financial backing as the royalties alone on all six shows will run over $1,000.00. Because it is felt that such a venture will benefit not only the college, but the entire community, they are earnestly requesting support from everyone.

Following are the means by which an organization or individual may contribute to what is felt to be a worthwhile project: Sponsor: $100 or more (3 tickets per show for each $100) and publicity and program listing.

Patron: $25.00 for 1 ticket per show and program

listing.

$35.00 for 2 tickets per show and program

listing.

Individual Season Ticket: $8.00 for all six shows.

"We hope that individuals or organizations in the community will see fit to sponsor us in some way so that Wilmington and the college can boast of a summer stock company and the future of it can be assured," stated Doug

W. Swink, Chairman of the Drama and Speech Department.

VOTE MAY 22

"Though Future Years may part us, found memories we shall hold!" — Dr. and Mrs. William Randall stand with their grandchild Steve and the Allen Randall in front of the portrait presented to the college by the Allen Randall in memory of Dr. Randall. "He always looked to the future and that is what we will do. We are proud and I am proud to accept this portrait to add to his memorial," said Student Body President Mike Meier in accepting the portrait for the student body. The portrait, painted by William C. Fields, will hang in the new William Madison Randall Library.

BSU Members Attend Spring Retreat At Beach

Spring retreat and a new approach to fund raising are the current projects of the Baptist Student Union.

The BSU spring retreat is this weekend at the First Baptist Church beach cottage at Wrightsville Beach.

Following the installation of officers Friday night, BSU members will participate in a "Happening."

Mrs. Anne Fitzgibbon, of the Drama Department, will lead the discussion after the "Happening."

A bonfire on the beach will conclude the activities for Friday night.

Saturday's activities will begin with a book study on the book It's Worth Your Life by Bill Dyal.

There will be a business meeting in the afternoon to plan programs, projects, and speakers for next year as well as the pre-school retreat for next year.

Saturday night a coffee house setting will provide the atmosphere for poetry readings and singing.

The main thing of the weekend according to Ethrage Warters, who is vice president of BSU, will be the folk worship. "The folk worship is really going to be great. It is going to wind up our year."

To raise money for BSU's summer missions project, the club is now selling tickets for students who wish to eat "with their favorite professor."

This means that the teachers would, at their convenience, provide a meal for one or two students in their home.

According to Dennis Lennon, club president, letters were sent to the 77 members of the faculty asking them if they would participate in their project.

"Unfortunately, I have received replies from only 15," said Dennis, who also noted that three teachers did send donations.

Student tickets to eat will be on sale for the remainder of the year.

Money from this project will go to Listen (Love Impels Sacrifice to Every Need) which is a state Baptist Student Union project. This project is directed toward issues or areas of vital social concern. Students from campuses throughout the state will be taking part.

Response

At approximately the same time letters went out from the Department of Institution and Research to 150 students and from the Baptist Student Union to the 77 teachers making up the faculty of the college.

The letters to the students asked them to come by the office of Institutional Research to answer a questionnaire about college. This letter stated the students had been carefully selected to take this questionnaire.

The BSU enclosed a card, self addressed and stamped, for the teachers to use to reply either yes or no about whether they would help the BSU in their current fund raising project. The BSU was asking if these teachers would take a student into their home for a meal one night.

Dr. Gerald Shinn has been taking time during his classes to administer the questionnaire since not enough students took the time to come by and answer the questionnaire.

Only 15 teachers were kind enough to reply to the BSU. There seems to be something wrong somewhere.

Good Work

Rejoice! For once on this campus something has been done. The Greek societies and business department organized during the election and were able to elect their slate of candidates. Now they have come out with a newspaper of sorts. They should be congratulated. Of course, for how long they are able to keep up their good works is another matter.

Getting out a newspaper is not an easy job, this the staff of the Seahawk knows. But the Seahawk staff is rather proud of itself this year in that they have done something — just what they have done may be questioned, but at least, they know their efforts are being read.

And, one last thought: Wouldn't it be horrible if everyone agreed with everyone else? Think about that for a while.

Capable

Despite what many people must have been thinking last Friday when the election results were known, The Seahawk is not opposed to the new student body president and vice president.

Both Hugh Newkirk and Gary Chadwick are capable leaders. Just how well they will be able to put their capabilities to work next year when they are faced with the responsibilities of their offices is another question.

Both boys seem to have a genuine interest in student government and in Wilmington College, which, said Gary in an interview before the election, "I love."

However, we must criticize the way the campaign these boys conducted was run. Neither boy ran on any sort of platform as could be judged from their campaign speeches.

What these boys plan to accomplish next year with the cooperation of the Student Senate is unknown, because they made no attempt to make it known.

But for the doubts about these boys, we can only say we hope for the best and also hope they can follow the fine example of Mike Meier and this leadership during this year. They can only try. And we wish them success in whatever they try to accomplish.

To the Editor:

I resent the fact that college students, especially those involved in so called "politics," resort to throwing slanderous accusations toward someone or some cause that they are evidently not fully aware of. Yes, I'm talking about the numerous assaults about the "flagpole incident" in the latest SEAHAWK.

I don't believe the issue was treated in a unbiased way. For one thing, two of our student leaders had to resort to calling a few of us, "antidulvian reactionaries," and "malodorous opportunists." I would challenge the fact that the real meaning of these phrases never even registered in their minds. Furthermore, I contend that these students are even more hypocritical than the ones who yell "Bigot" and "liberal" at the drop of a hat. Yes, these the stars and stripes that day on the eighth of April, not because I am a redneck, but because the flag is not normally flown for civilians. Mr.— contends that Dr. King ranked as one of the greats of the world. He even went so far as to compare him to Winston Churchill, a man who dedicated his life to the ambassadorship of the world. I ask you, is there really a comparison between the two? I think not.

Maybe Zeus did cause the water sprinkler to be cut on Mr. Homer, but that gives you no right to call us rednecks anymore than it gives you the right to call the bearded "flagpole sitters" liberals.

And you Miss—, who are you to say that you and your bunch of castaways have a better chance to right the wrongs of the world than those who stood on the porch of the Pub that day?

And you Mr.—, have you really looked in to what that millionaire really knows about the conditions of the ghettos. Well, do you? I doubt it.

In closing, I hope the civil rights authorities on page two of the last SEAHAWK can find one philosophic "So be it" in my slanderous accusations. I contend that I am not a white racist, but just a body who cannot see lowering a heritage to please a bunch of half wit, brick throwing rioters.

Concert Misbehavior

To the Editor:

We are writing this letter in regard to the concert given by Jay and the Americans on Thursday night, April 18, 1968, and to those people who plan to attend other such events in the future. It was a good concert and the only possible complaint could have been about the delay, which was not the fault of Jay and the Americans. We feel that a very bad impression was given to those who were visiting Wilmington at the time.

The behavior displayed at the concert was very discourteous to the group performing as well as to those who put much time and effort into getting such a well-known group to appear in the Port City. Such things displayed were the mass exit before the completion of the concert, constant mumbling that hindered those who wanted to hear, and especially appalling were the actions of a certain young man who thought that his impudent remarks should be heard above the really worthwhile concert being presented. This type of behavior reflects badly upon Wilmington as a whole.

Do the people who attended the concert for other purposes besides listening to it realize how rude such behavior was to Jay and the Americans, and how embarrassing it was to those in the audience who were trying to enjoy the good concert being presented? These actions displayed bad hospitality and may possibly hinder Wilmington in bringing in other good groups in the future. We realize that Jay and the Americans were getting paid for their performance but even the most generous payment would not make up for such rudeness.

We are students who are attending college outside of Wilmington. After talking to students at Wilmington College and other colleges, we have found many who feel the same way about this concert and also previous similar activities which have been given to the public. Isn't there undoubtedly some improvement needed concerning such social behavior when attending social functions???

Noe Recieves Letter

(Editor's Note: The following letter was received by Thomas Noe, Superintendent of Building and grounds.)

Dr. Noe:

Due to your eagerness to prevent anyone from putting a toe-nail on your (weeds) grass several cars have run onto your stupid stobs. The wierd wires become entangled in apparatus under the cars and cause much frustrations not to mention the expense and embarrassment.

We the student body would appreciate your immediate attention in this matter.

Thank-you.

(Mr. Noe has asked that his reply be given.)

Dear "Anonymous" Student Body,
Your frustrations are mine.

Everytime someone runs over one of those stupid posts or breaks a cable my department has to repair or replace it. The "Weeds" grass is yours as well. My department tries to preserve it so that YOUR school grounds will look nice. If you would just be a little more careful in your manipulations of your car you might just miss those wires and posts.

I would like to go on record as objecting to the posts and cables myself, but if they were not there we would have cars parked all over the lawn. I have every hope that if we have sufficient parking facilities in the fall that these unsightly objects may be removed.

Good Grief

By ED BISHOP

Mentor and savior of Wilco campus was recently seen weaving upon the down-trodden blades of grass between the pub and the library. Alas! The water sprinklers are to no avail against the thousands of feet that cripple, maim, and kill these precious weeds. Where is that All American pride? Let's make this SAVE A WEED WEEK. In the name of Zeus, Buddha, Christ, or any other available deity, let the grass grow. Grow, grass, grow! Oh god, isn't it good? Wow! . . . while groovin' out on the sidewalk, Mentor noticed the wild and wooly look in the eye of Thrasymachus and his surf friends. Weird! Wilco students let it all hang, once the spring arrives, or so it seems. The book shelves are as full as the bars on Wrightsville; classes have that lean and hungry look; sandals, sluds, and surf are the order of the day. . . . The Full Dish seen floating across campus throwing flowers and sipping banana brandy. . . . Children of light. . . . Applications are now being accepted for the WILMINGTON COLLEGE police force. Salaries will be paid according to the number of arrests made each month. Criminals will be housed in the new physical plant until room can be made in the S.R.O. Theatre. All persons interested in applying for our new enforcement branch are asked to do so before May 20. In order to assure a feasible salary for our new patrol force, applications are also being taken for those interested in being criminals. . . . IF YOUR CHILDREN EVER FIND OUT HOW LAME YOU REALLY ARE, THEY'LL MURDER YOU IN YOUR SLEEP. Frank Zappa. Have a happy . . . Keep that fan mail pouring in! Good Grief!

Tony Rivenbark moved through his characters well, especially Mr. Pugh, and even the tourist despite the poor blocking in the guidebook series.

Bryan Jones, as Rev. Eli Jenkins, was in total command throughout the play as was David Jones.

Jones probably contributed more than any other actor to an overall effect.

Craig Redwine was not consistently good in all his characters but greatly enhanced the production by his portrayal of Mog Edwards and Waldo. Donna West was distinct and complete in each of her characters.

Abbe Godwin was new and fresh and transmitted this freshness to the play. Sue Fulcher was excellent. The scene between Captain Cat and Rosie Property was the most effective casting scene of the play. Overall, the play was enjoyable.

The set was good and the individual actors provided the success it enjoyed.

Faculty Members Select Work To Appear In Art Show

By JENIFER SMITH

Approximately 250 pieces compose the current exhibit in Kenan Hall. These pieces represent the work of Wilmington College art students and are being displayed as the Tenth Annual Student Art Show.

Consisting of paintings, drawings, prints, designs and sculpture, these works were chosen by the Art Department faculty members solely on the merit they showed. Qualities judged were color, shape, texture and value.

Aimed to enable the student of art to learn the techniques of proper presentation (including framing and matting) and display (as the students also hang and arrange their pieces), the show provides an area of study for the student as well as a fine exhibit for the viewer.

New to the history of the student show is the media of sculpture represented this year, the pieces display the use of several materials: plaster, clay, and expanded iron. Executed by students James Pridgen, William Hansen, Marty Murray, Michail Reilly, Eleanor Saunders, and Tommy Hodges, the sculptures add a fresh aspect to the traditional exhibit.

The paintings are works of Hilda Echols, Peggy Jolls, Iris Smith, Helen Traister, M. B. Darrs, Anna Aycock, and Allene Boone.

Design students, Etheridge Walters, Rebecca Shuford, Cheryl Williamson, Marrin Tadlock, Vicki Shaw, Harry Sloan, Harry Knickerbocker, Benjamin Sullivan, Edna Smith, Fran Burke, Sue Flynn, Barbara Langston, Hollace Blakeman, Brianne Batson, Sheron Gray, Alice Bulluck, Kathy Ames, Patricia Dixon, Linda Skipper, Ruth Hodges, Elaine Cooper, Wallace Ambrose, and Thomas Hughes, are represented in the show.

Prints by Linda Skipper, Hollace Blakeman, Patricia Dixon, and William Llooy are also a part of the exhibit. George Hardy, William Marlowe, Wilma Wittrock, Wayne Spivey, Peggy Jolls, Elaine Cooper, Emma Finely, and Marrin Tadlock are the students displaying drawings.

'The Cage' To Close College Theatre Season

W. Terry Rogers, professor of Drama and Speech, has announced the east of the forthcoming Wilmington College Theatre's production of Mario Fratti's "The Cage." This production will be mounted in the S.R.O. Theatre on May 24, 25 and 26.

"The Cage" is one of the latest plays written by the contemporary Italian playwright, Mario Fratti. In this powerful drama the main character, that of Cristiano, stands out as the little man, who is sensitive and not without talent, who lives lonely and afraid in a world that is already too large and brutal for him.

In the role of Cristiano is Randy del Lago. While Pat Fuchs plays the part of his sister-in-law Chiara, who tries her own method of freeing him from his cage. Her husband, Pietro, will be acted by David James.

Others in the cast are Rosemary Salata in the role of Cristiano's mother and playing the parts of Nella, his sister, and her fiancée, Sergio, are Abbe Godwin and Jerry Hodgins, respectively.

The two delivery boys who at the outset of the play taunt Cristiano, will be portrayed by Tony Rivenbark and Stanley Wenbourne.

The performance of "The Cage" is the third and final presentation by the Wilmington College Theatre upon returning to the campus since February of this year. This will draw to a close the 1967-68 season.

Campus May Queen Becomes Local Celebrity

By CARRIE DAVIS

"I don't mean to be trite or corny," began May Queen Catherine Proctor, when asked the question, "How does it feel to be a celebrity?"

"But it's a big honor to have been selected by the student body at Wilmington College to be their Queen," she continues. "It is not everyday that a girl can represent her school and be given the opportunity to be in the May Court. And this is one of the big things, next to being crowned, that I look forward to."

In November, Catherine was elected to be the 1967-68 May Queen. She reigned as queen at the May Dance on May 11, at which time she was crowned.

As May Queen, Catherine represented Wilmington College in the North Carolina Azalea Festival at Wilmington.

Catherine attended all the functions with Azalea Queen Linda Crystal and the other members of the Queen's Court. "I found Linda Crystal to be a very charming, gracious person. She was very friendly and down to earth," commented Catherine.

Catherine and the May Queens from the other colleges and universities of this state who composed the Queen's Court were escorted by Midshipmen from Annapolis. James Kern was Catherine's escort. She attended various parties and dances with him throughout the weekend, and he escorted her at the Azalea Queen's Coronation on both Friday and Saturday nights.

"I enjoyed the Azalea Festival, especially the parade, Catherine stated. She was both amused and pleased to hear "Miss Proctor" shouted by voices in the crowd at various points along the parade route. She finally realized these voices belonged to some of the students at Roland Grise, where she practice taught last quarter.

Catherine continued, "It really made me feel good to see the students from Wilmington College and know that I am their queen. If I were not a queen when I got on the float, I felt like one when I got off."

Chorus Presents 'Night Of Opera'

The Wilmington College Chorus put on a "Night of Opera" May 14 at 8 p.m. in the New Hanover High School Auditorium.

Pieces included in the performance was selected from standard opera literature and included: the "Bridal Scene" from LEHENGRIN by Wagner, the "Coronation Scene" from BORIS GODUNOV by Musorgsky, the "Vesper Scene" from PAGLIACCI by Leonville, and a number of waltzes from the FLEDERMOUS by Johann Strauss. The finale was taken from the Broadway show THE MUSICMAN by Meredith Willson.

Singing with the chorus were two soloists. One of these, Brenda Taylor, is a student. Miss Taylor is a senior at John T. Hogard High School. The second soloist was Paul Rederick.

The accompanist was Ann Darden, Instructor of Music at the college. Mr. Hudson conducted. Something new was tried in that two students acted as stage directors. These were Linda McWatty and Betty Frink.

Delta Epsilon

Delta Epsilon Fraternity recently assisted the Circle K Club with its sale of programs during the Azalea parade.

The fraternity also helped during the unveiling of Dr. Randall's portrait, by aiding in guest parking.

The Spring Quarter Pledge Class is as follows: Charles Eyre, Alfonso DePolco, John Munroe, Wayne Spivey, and Dennis Massengill.

Pi Kappa Phi

The men of Gamma Theta Chapter of Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity held their semi-annual election of officers on April 29, 1968. Leading the undergraduate chapter for the next six months will be: Andy Futrell, Archon; Elwood Whitman, Treasurer; Clinton Hardee, Warden; Herbert Dempsey, Secretary; Pat Piner, Historian; and Jack Sheehan, Chaplain.

The installation of new officers was held on May 6, 1968.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

"It's been a long wait, but well worth it!" is Al Carrus's statement of the general opinion of the brothers of the former Sigma Phi Kappa Fraternity. Sigma Phi Kappa is now affiliated with the Tau Kappa Epsilon International Fraternity.

TKE, at present, has 237 active chapters in 41 states and two provinces of Canada.

It will probably take Sigma Phi

Kappa through the summer months to prepare a satisfactory petition for charter. The TKE will likely become an active chapter in the early fall.

Sigma Phi Sigma

Diane Sellars, Publicity Chairman for Sigma Phi Sigma, reports that the sorority "is planning to go national very soon. We are hoping to have arrangements completed in a few weeks."

The sorority held a car wash on May 18, as the latest fund-raising project.

A cook-out was recently given for the pledges of Sigma Phi Sigma."

To The Editor:

I am one of the original "flag-pole sitters" who wishes to give his impressions on "birth of human passion at Wilmington College or perhaps "Salute To Old Glory," would be more appropriate as a theme for the tragic and comic events of that day.

First of all let me say that on the day of Dr. Martin Luther King's murder and for several days following, I was in a state of extreme disbelief and depression.

There is a saying that "one doesn't miss his water until the well runs dry." This adage sums up my general state of emotion during this time. I believe that most of the people who sat around the flag pole were in fact, individuals, who were trying to express their consciousness of the gravity surrounding the assassination, and more than this, people who embraced the general principles of Dr. King's non-violent philosophy and movement. There are some who try to tell us that because Dr. King was a civilian he did not deserve to have a national day of mourning in his behalf.

This is without a doubt the flimsiest excuse for not paying homage to a great American that I have heard. Dr. King was THE leader who held the Negro masses and the non-violent pragmatists of all races in the U.S.A. together, when the black militants all around were renouncing their faith in white America and in non-violence as an effective technique for gaining human dignity and understanding.

Then, I think of those poor, half-informed souls who stood on the steps of the Pub that day. Many of them took the entire episode as a chance to have some fun, not realizing what repercussions were involved. Others knew exactly why they were standing on those steps. It is to those people I will direct my remarks, so that they will know my feelings about the situation, THOSE WHO KNEW.

I am tempted to strike out at those UNTHINKABLE creatures with a barrage of epithets. This would probably cool my ire, but little would be solved. This incident leaves a bitter taste in my mouth because of its obtrusive display of backwardness and bigotry. If this were meant to be indicative of the spirit of the "New South," let me say that the "South shall fall again," into greater abysses of hate and misunderstanding.

When are we going to stop fighting the CIVIL WAR? Must our gallant "boys in gray" fight forever? If we must fight a war, why don't we update the scene about 100 years and direct our attention to Vietnam. I have never held a warm, sentimental feeling for the Confederate flag, and the more I see it on the bumpers of cars, the more I feel it belongs THERE, instead of flying from a flagpole or being waved vigorously like a pennant by some ONE HUNDRED AND THREE YEAR OLD STUDENT. It should serve as a reminder that those COTTON PICKING days are over, and we must live our lives as true individuals, abandoning old traditions when they hinder the progress of human understanding. The two major races cannot live together without knowing each other. I think the "flag pole sitters" have taken the first step in the direction of understanding. We have made a commitment by "rallying around the flagpole."

Many did not choose to take part either way. There will always be those who are apathetic and those who cannot come to a decision. To these I would say reevaluate your present position and take part in what's going on. Don't fall into the rut of indifference; have an opinion and make sure it's what you want to believe in, not just majority opinion.

Finally, let me say that there is HOPE, there has been progress, there will be more understanding, but let's not wait until another great man dies until we do something; we may not get another chance, can we afford to? I think not.

William A. (Bill) Franks Jr.

Thanks

To the Editor:

This is to express my sincere appreciation to the individual students and to the student groups who helped the faculty and staff in the program for the Presentation of the Portrait of Dr. William M. Randall. Without your help, it would not have been possible to make the occasion so dignified and enjoyable.

I should like to thank the Delta Epsilon Fraternity for their help with the parking and Linda Rivensbark and the Alpha Chi Sigma members for the planning and serving of refreshments, and the Top Twelve for their musical renditions.

The Stagecraft classes did an excellent job in preparing the frame and veiling for the portrait.

The speech of acceptance of the portrait for the student body as presented by Michael Meier was exceptionally well done.

It is a continuing pleasure and privilege for me to work with you, the students, of Wilmington College.

Sincerely,
Mary D. Bellamy

Inactive Speaks

To the Editor:

I am usually a very inactive person as far as the affairs of Wilmington College are concerned, but I honestly feel I must speak out even at the risk of verbal ridicule. The election speeches as a whole were very promising; but after Hugh Newkirk gave "this monologue of approval of the SEAHAWK," I was stuck with a feeling of bewilderment. Why is it that all one hears at Wilmington College are gripes, gripes, gripes? If it is not the food in the Pub, it is THE SEAHAWK! Hugh, if you and the other "interested" members are so dissatisfied with THE SEAHAWK, why haven't you gone privately to Renee Hartman or some other member of THE SEAHAWK staff to complain? Why wait until a day such as today to attack the people who make THE SEAHAWK what it is? (By the way, what was the purpose? Were your comments to be taken as promises for improvement of the paper or a personal display of your dislikes?) No, you did not address any one person, but how do you think Renee Hartman, Carrie Divie, John Blair, and other members of THE SEAHAWK staff felt after your speech. Rather than denouncing the paper and its staff, I think they should be given an overdue word of appreciation for doing the job they have done. Hugh, have you ever gone into the publication's room to ask if your thoughts and ideas could be of any help? How often have those written articles to be printed or helped with the typing? If you and the others who are so eager to "call names" have offered and given aid and assistance to THE SEAHAWK staff, then you can make such disparaging remarks, and you might even be justified for being "down right" rude. If the above be true, then I have misjudged you; and I will be the first to apologize.

Sorry, no pen name,
Catherine Proctor

Surprise Attack

To the Editor:

I attended the campaign speeches last Wednesday and was surprised to hear Hugh Newkirk, student body vice-presidential candidate, attack the SEAHAWK in a very emotion and unwarranted manner. After speaking briefly with both Hugh and Renee Hartman, SEAHAWK editor, I feel that the controversy itself originated out of a personal conflict — SEAHAWK criticism of how Hugh Newkirk has handled the constitution committee. In this light his statements were unsuitable material for a campaign speech; moreover, Hugh failed to connect them in any way with his political plans. At the assembly Renee was given no chance to defend herself and the newspaper.

In his speech Hugh chiefly attacked SEAHAWK policies and the editorial page. Looking back over this year's issues, I do not see that any department or organization has received an excess of publicity in proportion to its activities. The only article I would consider biased were the pictures of the Homecoming Queen candidates in which one girl was placed on the front page while the others were on the back. To be fair, I seldom agree with the editorials myself. Since this policy falls within the realm of the editor, perhaps a permanent editorial board might be elected to assist in formulating future policy. Yes, stories could be more explicit and are sometimes needlessly wordy, but much writing deserves credit — such as the reporting on the marijuana issue earlier this year.

It is easy to criticize a newspaper, especially when we fail to realize how much energy goes into publication, not to mention the tremendous responsibility placed on the staff, inadequate as it is. The criticism voiced in Hugh's speech would have been more appropriately expressed through the SEAHAWK itself — the most effective vehicle for self-expression by the student government, as well as the staff. Student Body President Mike Meier has used this medium efficiently all year. Ultimately, if we (myself included) care enough to make ourselves heard, policy is not determined solely by the editor-in-chief but by the general consensus of the student body.

Our Turn To Speak

By RENEE HARTMAN,
JOHN BLAIR, JR.,
CARRIE DAVIS,
MARTIN GRANT

THE SEAHAWK is the newspaper for the Wilmington College campus. This newspaper is the spokesman for faculty, administration, and students. In this newspaper, as in any newspaper, only the editorials, columns, or letters to the editor may take a stand on any topic.

Any other story in the paper must be completely objective. If it was not completely objective, the purpose of the newspaper would be lost. The purpose of a newspaper is to report what is news in a completely objective manner.

Reporting what is news in an objective manner has been the purpose of this newspaper. Saying what we believe about an issue is done in the editorial columns.

Anyone who wants to criticize what is said in the newspaper has an equal opportunity. As long as a person hands in a signed letter to the editor, this letter is used. If the person wants to have his letter appear without his name on it, this is done so long as the editor of the paper knows who wrote the letter.

Also, any person who wishes to write for the paper is welcome to do so. Of course, he must realize that he would have to write any stories in correct journalistic form. But not everything is done as it should be done. Not as many letters to the editor are handed in as we would like to have. The staff of the paper is not as large as it could be.

And now, that these general facts have been explained, we would like to take this opportunity to answer a few charges leveled at us by one of the campaign speeches last week since we did not have the equal opportunity at the time.

Hugh Newkirk stepped to the speaker's platform and after a few introductory remarks got down to serious business: the business of hitting out at THE SEAHAWK in every way possible.

We laughed when he started to say "Seahippie" since that was changed the name of a repudiated edition of THE SEAHAWK that was found on the floor of the newspaper office after the last edition of the paper.

And to Mr. Newkirk and whoever else helped in the preparation of that clever "repetition," we would like to apologize because the print in the editorials are larger than the print of other articles in the paper. The print for editorials is ten point type as opposed to the regular eight point. And if Mr. Newkirk and his sympathizers would care to come and visit in the newspaper office, any staff member would be glad to show him copies of other college newspapers where this same policy holds true. And, for that matter, any newspaper has the type for editorials larger than other type.

Also, Mr. Newkirk, notice there are several letters to the editor on these pages. There was only one letter received this year that was not used. This letter did not have a signature nor could the writer be located. (We tried to find that person we would like to note). Because that letter was not signed, that letter was not used. This is a policy of every newspaper.

And, Mr. Newkirk and those others of you who might not possibly like the editorial page policy of this newspaper, remember this policy is set by the editor and the staff of the paper. On the editorial page of this paper are the editorials as well as any columns and letters to the editor (those few there are). We know there are those of you who do not like people who write under another name, but what would you do if you knew this person's name? If you didn't like what he said, would you go up to this person and punch him in the nose? Having a pen name is fairly common in the writing field and having one does not especially mean the person is hiding behind it.

But there is one question we would like to ask: Is writing behind a pen name any worse than standing up in front of an attack against the newspaper and the people who form the staff of that paper?

You, Mr. Newkirk and your sympathizers, all had the equal opportunity of writing a letter, a simple letter, and voicing your criticisms of the paper and the way it is run. You had your opportunity. You also had the opportunity of coming by the newspaper office and saying "I would like to work on the newspaper." BUT DID YOU?

No, you chose the more subtle mode of attack: direct attack. Direct attack when there could be no answer, no answer until later, that is. Well, you were clever, that must be admitted.

Well, let's stop being clever and let's stop being subtle. Let's get out and fight now — now and not later. It is our sincere opinion that some people shouldn't be allowed — but why should we say it, let's quote that friend of freshman English students, Mark Twain: "Human beings can be awful cruel to one another."

And you, Mr. Newkirk, were cruel.

Apology

To the Editor:

In the recent election, there was some confusion as to who was supporting whom. We, the undersigned, wish to clear up this confusion.

Supporting the list proposed were the Brothers of Pi Kappa Phi, the Brothers of Sigma Phi Kappa, affiliates of Tau Kappa Epsilon, International, and many students of the Business Department. An error was made in the wording of the statement. Contrary to what was printed the Business Department did NOT support any candidates, and to them we offer our most sincere apology. To the Sigma Phi Sigma Sisters, Phi Mu Sisters, and Brothers of Delta Epsilon we also offer our sincere apology for including them on this list. This list only supported candidates. It did NOT mean to INCRIMINATE or DEGRADE an individual candidate. These errors were entirely unintentional and can only be chalked up to the fervor and excitement that this election caused.

We honestly hope that these people will accept our apology because it is our sincere effort to make amends.

FOG

The fog comes on little cat feet.
It sits looking over harbor and city on silent haunches and then moves on.

Carl Sandburg

The fog creeps in then fades away, but the spirit of discontent among people lingers on for an indefinite period. This period also may include the resurrection of a "bad attitude" in baseball.

This attitude can be seen coming, silently creeping throughout the atmosphere of a dugout or a playing field. The air reeks with disunity — disunity that can break a ball club's morale completely.

When the heckling between teammates turns from friendly jokes to open ridicule or when players group together in cliques that tend to exclude all except the inner sanctum the fog of indifference sets in.

The writers print their stories about the professionals. At the end of the 1967 major league baseball season Jim 'Mudcat' Grant of the Minnesota Twins and Cleve Boyer of the Atlanta Braves both gave explosive opinions about certain teammates to the news media.

Each year in the major leagues it seems that at least one team is hit by this phantom spirit. Those teams which do not survive its presence over the lengthy season are at the mercy of the writers and their pens.

In college this is not unusually supposed to happen because even though the players are human they are not receiving cash payment for their play; they are receiving an education. An education that only they can transpose into a diploma.

Baseball, like any sport, activity, or work, is a team effort. Any sword that tends to hang over the ball players heads for a lengthy period has no other alternative but to destroy them.

An old adage says "one bad apple can destroy the whole barrel." That is all it takes, one person who suddenly becomes aware that he dislikes the way another is playing the game. Maybe it is the attention a player receives or maybe the opposite is the cause, a player who can get the job done without the observation of all the people. Antagonist commences to breathe envy.

Whatever the case may be the only way to fight it is to face it. To gain the right attitude, to overlook another faults or gifts, to gain the competitive attitude again is the only way to overcome the period of darkness.

The answer does not lie in breaking training rules. "To be a winner you have to say "no" to pleasures that an athlete cannot afford."

It takes a mature human being to seek revenge by doing things that might hurt a ball club and by the time a ball player reaches college this maturity is supposed to have been developed where he can get along with people.

'Hawks Number One

TOP NAIA IN TEAM PITCHING AND FIELDING

The Wilmington College baseball team has the distinction of being the number one team in the National Intercollegiate Athletic Association polls in team pitching and team fielding.

The Seahawks of Coach Bill Brooks had an earned run average of 0.82 and a fielding percentage of .971 as of April 23. Pete Eyer and Chuck Cuppett are among the top 25 pitchers in the nation in earned run average.

The baseball team finished the regular season behind the six-hit pitching of sophomore Chuck Cuppett with a 4-1 victory over High Point College last Friday night.

The victory upped Coach Bill Brooks' Club record to 18-8, as they prepared for the District 26 NAIA Independent Play-offs to be held at Wilmington's Brooks Field May 9-11.

The victory over the Panthers was Cuppett's third in a row over High Point. Cuppett's personal string of 32 scoreless innings against the Panthers ended when an unearned run was scored in the seventh inning.

Earlier in the week, the Seahawks dropped a 6-2 decision to powerful Pembroke College. Ed Lewis suffered his first loss of the season and gave up the team earned run average lead to Pete Eyer. Lewis now has a 1.61 ERA; Eyer is at 0.52; and Cupper lowered his to 0.73. The team earned run average is 1.08.

Wilmington finished the regular season with a team batting average of .221 and a team fielding average of .965. Wayne Johnson was the leading hitter for the Seahawks with a .272 average.

Wilmington will meet St. Andrews College at 5 P.M. in the first round of the Independent Play-offs for District 26, while Pembroke College is scheduled to go against Campbell College at 2 P.M.

The "Zip Twins" have won 13 of the 18 Wilmington victories. Eyer, a junior, has yielded four earned runs; and Cuppett, a sophomore, six. They have combined for 143 2/3 innings, striking out 121 and walking only 27. Eyer has four shutouts, and Cuppett has one.

Eddie Lewis, sophomore left-hander, has given up four earned runs in 27 2/3 innings for an 1.08 mark. Catcher Jim Atkins and Pete Daughtry lead the team in extra base hits with five each.

Jim Hall has been wielding the hottest bat among the Wilmington players in the last six games. Hall, who is in the midst of his poorest season, raised his average a hundred points to .204 in the spree.

Wilmington's record in District 26 play of the NAIA is 9-4.

Special Bulletin

Coach Bill Brooks announced that Wilmington College's Brooks Field has been accepted as the site for the 1968 National Intercollegiate Athletic Association Area 7 baseball playoffs. The dates of the double elimination playoff have been set for May 23, 24, and 25.

Districts to be represented include: District 24—Kentucky and Tennessee; District 26—North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia; District 28—West Virginia; and District 29—Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association of North Carolina and Virginia.

The teams will have personnel numbering 20, which will include 17 players. The Area 7 winner will go to the NAIA Championship in St. Joseph, Missouri, June 3-7.

Campbell College

Chuck Cuppett belted a 375-foot home run and hurled a seven-hit shutout as the Seahawks defeated Campbell College, 6-2.

Sandy Dew, Jim Atkins and Cuppett each had two hits in the contest. Cuppett's record is now 6-1 on the season.

Wilmington scored runs in fourth, seventh and eighth innings. Sam Askew had two runs batted in.

Pembroke College

Undefeated Pembroke College in

NAIA play downed the Seahawks 6-3 at Brooks Field.

Jim Coffin bested Pete Eyer, who suffered his second loss of the season.

Jack Campbell had two of the 'Hawks' six safties while Sandy Dew drove across two runs.

Campbell College

Pinch Hitter Allan McRae dumped a two out, two strike double to the opposite field in the top of the ninth inning to give Campbell a 3-2 victory over the Seahawks.

Jimmy Johnson worked the first eight innings for the 'Hawks but left after walking two in favor of Chuck Cuppett. Cuppett walked a batter then the next batter hit into a double play—home to first. Cuppett went one and two to McRae when the tall righthand batter hit a pitch on the outside of the plate down the right field line.

ECU

East Carolina University avenged two defeats by Wilmington with a 3-1 victory.

Left-hander Mitchell Hughes scattered seven hits for the Bucs as he evened out his record at 2-2. Jim Sanders suffered his second defeat in four decisions.

Jim Hall, Wayne Johnson, and Harold Flinchman each had two hits for the Seahawks.

S. C. Baptists

Pete Eyer hurled his fourth shutout of the season with a five-hit 4-0 victory over South Carolina Baptist.

Wilmington took advantage of two Baptist errors as Freddie Dykes gave up only four hits to the 'Hawks.

It was Eyer's fifth victory of the season.

St. Andrews

Chuck Cuppett won his seventh game in eight decisions as Wilco topped St. Andrews 3-2.

Jim Atkins paced the Seahawk attack with two hits and two runs batted in.

Cuppett walked three batters and struck out 12 Knight hitters. John Thorn had two of the hits off of Cuppett.

No Reason To Get Excited: Randall

"One of the marks of an educated man is that he doesn't get emotionally involved until he knows or has the evidence for or against," Dr. William Randall, college president, told the committee of students from the Monday, May 20 information meeting for concerned students.

"But we do," he continued. We ought to know the value of facts and evidence. We've done a pretty poor job of teaching if our students can't distinguish the difference between inference and fact."

Meeting with Dr. Randall was Ray Pacer, chairman; Mike Meier, Gary Chadwick, Renee

Hartman, and deans Thomas Brown and Mrs. Helena Cheek.

Ray, explaining the reason for Monday's meeting, stated, "A few of us got together. The main stimulus being the quarter and semester system change we'd heard about and we decided we would like to know what is going on."

"I can tell you," replied Dr. Randall.

According to Dr. Randall the college operated on a semester system until the University of North Carolina and East Carolina University changed to the quarter system.

At this time the college was still a junior college. Many of the graduates went to one of these institutions after finishing here. For this reason, the college changed to the quarter system to make it easier for the transfer students.

However, when U.N.C. returned to the semester system, the faculty of Wilmington College voted to remain on the quarter system.

At the present time, certain members of the administration and faculty are proposing a change to the semester system.

During a recent faculty meeting a straw-hat vote was taken on the proposed change. Forty-four members of the faculty voted for a change to the semester system while 41 voted against the change.

"This is a tie and no conclusive results can be taken from it. I'm not going to say what I think is better since about 40 agree with me and about 40 don't," Dr. Randall commented.

Dr. Randall stressed the fact that no change will take place without further thought and consultation to all concerned including students.

The only thing that is being done now is investigation.

When Mike commented that "the students tended to fear, after hearing about the faculty vote that a change was going to take place, that we weren't being consulted and thus, were being treated as puppets."

"There is no reason to get excited since there will be no change in the foreseeable future," Dr. Randall replied.

After Ray had mentioned the lack of communication between the various groups on campus, Dr. Randall answered, "Every group has been told that the door to this office is always open. Students are free to attend the Board of Trustees meetings as well as the faculty meeting (See RANDALL on Back Page)

Trustees Set School Policy

"You'll be taking your own authority away," Dean Helena Cheek told the Student Senate at their last meeting as a group of Senators and interested students attempted to take article VIII, Section 7 out of the new constitution.

This group was led by Ray Pacer who objected to Section 7 since it places the student in double jeopardy.

This article states: Any student who commits an act which is illegal and unlawful according to the rules of the school as established by the Board of Trustees or which is illegal and unlawful according to the statutes of the City, the County, the State of North Carolina, or the United States of America, shall be liable to prosecution before the Student Appeals Board.

Supporting the double jeopardy idea was John Blair, junior class secretary, who said, "The idea of the student body trying a student body is still a topic of no campus is double jeopardy."

Chairman of the constitution committee, Hugh Newkirk, said this section was put into the new constitution the way it was in the original constitution.

"The only reason for putting this in," said Bill Harrell, freshman class president, was to protect the name of the school."

It was mentioned that when a person is arrested for any crime, where he went to school is usually mentioned. This might create a bad impression about the type of students attending the college.

Dean Brown pointed out that the Board of Trustees has set the policy for the school. "If John Doe is found guilty, he won't be tried again, but he might be subject to some form of disciplinary action. And we want to do what you recommend. If you take it out of the constitution, you will take away your say-so."

Despite a motion to remove the section, it remained in the constitution.

New officers for next year were sworn in by Linda McIver, Judicial Council member.

The meeting was turned over to Hugh Newkirk, who as vice president is speaker of the Senate, who said, "This is the first time I'm able to address you as speaker of the Senate. I can say to you to keep in mind Mike Meier's (See SENATE on Back Page)

Department Plans Recital

The Music Department of Wilmington College will present Miss Brenda Taylor and Mr. Loyd Hudson in recital on Monday, June 3, at 8:00 p.m. in Room 114 of the Kenan Building. Miss Ann Darden, instructor in voice, will be the accompanist and Austin M. Wortley, III will assist.

The primary work for the evening will be the Baroque Buffa opera "La Serva Padrona" by Giovanni Battista Pergolesi.

"La Serva Padrona" was written in 1733 and produced at the Teatro San Bartolomeo at Naples. This work is in the form of the opera buffa and served as a model for all succeeding Italian composers who chose to use this Italian comic operatic species. "La Padrona" is commonly recognized as Pergolesi's chef d'oeuvre.

Miss Taylor, a student of Miss Darden, will sing the role of Zerbina, Mr. Hudson will sing the role of Doctor Pandolfo and Mr. Wortley will play the mute role of Scapin.

There will be no admission charged for the recital, and all students, faculty and townspeople are cordially invited to attend.

Concerned Students Meet, Plan Course of Action

Attracted by posters asking if "Wilco students are now being ignored", approximately 25 students met May 20 to "plan the course of action."

The reason for the meeting was the proposed change to a semester system for the college, according to Ray Pacer, who called the meeting.

According to Ray, the students are the largest body in the school and would be the ones most affected by the change.

At present the structure of the college resembles a triangle. At the top is the administration, the faculty rests in the middle while the students are at the bottom.

"The faculty is advised as to what goes on, but the students hear by rumor," said Ray.

"The three groups actually go their separate ways. This is a detriment of the system as a whole."

Ray proposed another triangle with each group getting equal representation. "All three need to work together for the betterment of the school," he added.

According to Ray he has found quite a bit of support among the faculty. "They think the students should be consulted," he said.

"We've got to push to get the ball rolling. Only when we do get pushing and get organized will we be able to get anything done," he commented.

"What we need to do," suggested Tim Jordan, junior, "is to start taking positive steps to get more communications."

Senior John Blair suggested setting up a committee composed of faculty, administration, and students which would meet at set times during the school year.

Freshman Wayne Whitehead mentioned that "the whole thing is that the faculty, administration, and students don't communicate. We should go out and demand to know, to get some facts in here."

"They do have the power," Ray admitted, "but it is not up to us to go begging to them for information."

"If there is something to hide there's something wrong somewhere," junior Harry Kruckowski pointed out.

Harry also suggested as one (See MEETING on Back Page)

Wagoner To Deliver Graduation Address

Graduation for the class of 1968 will be June 9 at 4 p.m. in Hanover Hall. Dr. William Wagoner, president-elect of the college, will deliver the graduation address.

Immediately following the graduation ceremonies, all graduates and their guests are invited to the President's Reception in the Student Services Building.

Each graduate is requested to bring not more than three or four guests.

All seniors must pick up their cap and gown during the week of June 3-7 in the office of the Dean of Students. Graduates are asked to wear dark shoes with their caps and gowns.

To pick up caps and gown, seniors must pay their $7.50 graduation fee.

Seniors must report to Hanover Hall Saturday, June 8 at 9 a.m. for a practice for graduation. "This practice will not last terribly long," said Dean Helena Cheek, who is in charge of the graduation exercises.

Seniors should be in the small gym by 3:15 June 9 to prepare for the "line-up," said Mrs. Cheek. Following the ceremony, seniors should return their caps and gowns to William Guest, assistant to the business manager, in storage room 1 one the left corridor above the gymnastics room in Hanover Hall.

During the exercises the John T. Hoggard Metal will be presented by Adrian Hurst, retiring member of the mathematics department. This award is presented to the student who in the opinion of the members of the faculty has shown the most improvement during his years at the college.

Minister of the First Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Jerome Jones, will give the invocation and benediction.

Faculty Marshall for graduation is Dr. Frederick Hornack. Student Marshall is Barbara Wentz. Ushers are George Hodnett, Bill Baugh, Linda Rivenbark, and Ann Stephens.

Aiding Mrs. Cheek with plans for graduation has been Jerry Bron, senior class president.

Meier Leaves Personal Postscript

"I've a personal postscript," President of the Student Body Mike Meier told the Student Senate May 20 as he gave the first "State of the College Address."

"Being your president is the one honor I will always remember with happiness."

The Senate this year felt their way into the darkness of legislation hoping for something positive. Mike felt as if this goal was reached. "It is now up to the new ones, who I hope, and am sure are and will be more progressive than we have been."

"We have pushed the College into a position where the community no longer thinks of it just as a college, or a place to send the kids after high school. We have had controversy to surround this year which is the sign of an active campus."

Mike pointed out that there had also been frustrations. He mentioned that respect for the Pub has not increased nor are class meetings well attended and student government "as a governing body is still, a topic of no importance."

"We must look to the future, however. There still remains much work to be done."

The students need a Bill of Rights, an elected committee to supervise the Pub, a Student Lecture Committee, and to maintain the Inter Club Council.

The Student Bill of Rights would insure the students of "their basic academic rights in and out of the classroom. You have seen the need for it when you would sit in a class and out of fear of jeopardizing your grade, you did not express your feelings on a matter or what you thought of a political event."

The committee to supervise the Pub would be the governing body of that section, subject to the Student Senate, and would be responsible for maintenance and general welfare of it.

"I am convinced that students would look for those speakers who are more controversial in reputation, thus surrounding the campus with an attitude of free expression, and thus generating interest," said Mike concerning the Student Speaker Committee.

"Our campus is expanding. Every inch of it will give the new student body president a pain in one spot or the other," said Mike.

"But the task is there, not by (See POSTSCRIPT on Back Page)

FOR THE WORK WITH THE CONSTITUTION — "I'm surprised. I'm the last one I expected to get it." Hugh Newkirk was awarded the Senate's award for outstanding service during the year.

Farewell

It is with somewhat mingled feelings that we are sitting down to write this, our last editorial as editor of this newspaper.

On one hand, we are rather glad to be leaving, to be getting away from it all. But leaving something that has become part of your life for such a long period of time is rather sad.

It will be nice to be a student again and nothing else but a student. No longer to have to worry with the daily frustrations of the campus newspaper will indeed be pleasing. But then again, these same frustrations have made this year more interesting than what it could have been.

Becoming editor of the paper is rather easy. As newspaper adviser Thomas Lupton has pointed out, the editor of the Seahawk is usually anyone who will do the work. Some people are fools enough to think they can do it.

There is so much that we could have done with the newspaper. We remember the plans made again and again. We remember all of the stories we are going to write which never did get written. But we also remember what we have done — and this gives us some small measures of joy.

We know now there are those Wilmington College students who are not content to be called "student stagnants" as we called them last year. We know there are those students who are out working for a better school and a better community. And we know also that we succeeded in our very first goal: to make you angry. In this, we believe, we have succeeded far and beyond our wildest dreams.

It is sometimes hard to write about an issue knowing that what you are saying is not going to be liked. But sometimes people need prodding and sometimes truth must overshadow prejudice. And sometimes there isn't enough room to say all of what is necessary. And sometimes the words won't come.

Perhaps our goals were too high in some cases, perhaps we sometimes forgot that Wilmington College is still only a small school (but growing) stuck down in neglected southeastern North Carolina, perhaps we forgot that sometimes students don't have any spirit or any loyalty to their school, perhaps we forgot that some people just don't care. And most importantly, perhaps we forgot that one person can't fight against hundreds of others. And all of these things must be remembered.

The next editor will discover all of these things and more. And these are things he must discover for himself.

It has sometimes been wondered if those critics of the newspaper knew just what it meant to put out a paper — and we sometimes wondered what our teachers thought when we didn't show up for class.

Putting out a paper is work. There is no other word to describe it. It is work involving time of which there sometimes isn't enough. Deadlines roll around even before the last paper is out. Nothing seems to be happening on campus until the day before the paper is supposed to be at the printer. Then there are the days when there simply isn't enough time to sit down and write about all that is happening — or either there isn't the space to put it.

But there are many nice associations coming from this work. First of all the staff, which has been small but extremely loyal in all that we did. And we thank them — as well as all of the people who collected in the newspaper office during the day. They sometimes served as inspiration. And thanks to our adviser, Mr. Lupton, who has often been more advised than advising, but always ready and willing to help. And to all of the faculty members who gave their support. And to all of the members of the administration — even to those with whom we have argued upon some occasions. And thanks to those members of the newspaper professions who have cheered us along.

And also, thanks to those fraternity people who made us realize that the newspaper is being read — because this is what we wanted to do.

It's all been fun, but it will be nice to relax for a while.

... always able to stand back and evaluate the situation before leaping into the fire. Mike Meier, student body president 1967-1968 ... a leader always.

'The Cage' A Volatile Combination

By SUE FULCHER

One doesn't "enjoy" a play of the caliber of Mario Fratti's THE CAGE. One is involved intellectually and emotionally, which is the highest tribute this reviewer can offer. "La condition humaine" is dramatized in the framework of vivid, realistic staging.

The opening scene, were it not for the man in the cage, easily could have been cut. We have been spoiled by the usual excellence of Mr. Rivenbark's acting ability so we were disappointed by his sporadic, ill-defined gestures, his poor command of lines and character and/or his lack of understanding them. Stanley Winborne appeared to be even more uncomfortable in his role. The man in the cage hates mediocrity, and mediocrity was the tenor of the first scene.

The stage came alive when Rosemary Salata, the Mother, entered. Mrs. Salata's well modulated voice and well controlled movements translated superbly her ability to create a character physically and intellectually.

The lovers, first scene, were beautiful, but the image was shattered when Nella, Abbe Godwin and Sergio, Jere Hodgkin, opened their mouths. Sergio's simplicity and sympathy were characterized weakly and clumsily by inconsistent speech patterns and uncoordinated movements. The depth of Nella's facial expression was not carried through by vocal presentation.

Pietro, played by David James, was just that — "played". The bitterness was feigned, the anger and violence were uncontrolled, and the strength, in spite of the bruises on Chiara's arms, was utilized poorly. Mr. James did handle himself tastefully and without awkwardness in the bedroom scene.

At the end of Act I Pat Fuchs, as Chiara, sizzled in hot pink as grease on a grill. From then on the play belonged to Christiano and Chiara. Chiara's lovely, little body and beautiful delivery were directed to maximum effect with the exception of one poorly blocked scene. Chiara's character could have been captured in one isolated moment had her face been visible during or after Christiano's kiss.

Randy Del Lago as Christiano, or is it Christiano as Randy Del Lago, gave the most profound performance of his college career. Totally immersed, he WAS Christiano. In this reviewer's opinion Randy Del Lago is a dramatic artist par excellence.

THE CAGE — Fratti, Rogers, Del Lago, Fuchs, and Salata — the word, the direction, and the actors: a volatile combination.

It is with sadness and regret that we say "au revoir" to Mr. Del Lago and Mrs. Salata. They leave an emptiness that will be hard to fill but a challenge to those who will try.

Good Grief

By ED BISHOP

Springtime fantasies bound about the nature trail as mentor and friends expound the beauty of nature. Later that same day thrash-macy and cohorts were spied sitting on the roof of the pub; Thrash-mashy recounting the beginning of the time from his banana brandy laden tongue.

Return with us now to those thrilling days of yesteryear, Tommy Terrific rides again.

As you will remember, in the beginning was the sea and from the sea sprang the land, and between the highways and housing projects sprang the campus full grown from the head of an itinerant sea-hawk. And it was good.

Then from the slime and the dust of the earth — leaving garbage, pollution, smog, and hundreds of other valuable artifacts — came man, and he was called Tommy. Tommy Terrific for short.

And Tom called the many vile and terrible creatures before him to name them, and he did — the seniors, the juniors, the sophomores, and even the innocent babes and beasts did he give names. And it was good.

But Tom was not content, and by exposing himself and removing a rib, he procured a most amazing animal and called it "her".

And Tommy and Her were as happy as rabbit until Her discovered the tree of presumption, and by a twist of a snake obtained an apple from this dowsy dicot. And it was bad. Not only was it wormy, but the landlord raised hell and cast them forth from the garden.

Years passed, and after much grooving among the briars and bushes, Tommy and Her had a child, and he was called Noe.

And Noe built an ark and turned on the watersprinklers. It sprinkled forty hours every week until Noe sighted land and named it America after Leaf Erikson. At this point mentor passed out leaving his listeners a bit bewildered as well as deprived of their booze.

Sounding Off

To The Editor:

The time has come to call a halt to the infamous name-calling that is going on at our college. No progress will be made unless we lay aside our PETTY GRIEFS and work together for the benefit of all. There is no substitute for unity!

I only hope that our students will be as concerned next year as they have been in the past few weeks. We have many bridges to cross; the lack of communications between students, faculty, and administration, we should demand a greatly expanded budget for 68-69, pub conditions are intolerable, social functions are few and far between. All of these conditions can be improved if WE are willing to make an effort.

Let us rechannel our pent-up inhibitions in a positive direction. Sincerely,

Hugh C. Newkirk, Jr.

Recruiters Visit Campus

"Things over here aren't as bad as they sound," says returned Peace Corps volunteer Clark Luikark.

Luikark and Mike Sherrill, another former volunteer in the Peace Corps, were on campus last week as recruiters for VISTA.

Luikark was teaching high school in Nigeria and Sherrill worked in Ghana during their work with the Corps.

"It was exactly like high school here," said Luikark. "They were all studying for an exam which was sent from England. Their school system was based on the English system."

"In Nigeria we were really well liked. The volunteers work on a people — to — people basis. Therefore they do not come into that much contact with the state officials."

Luikark, who will be working in the field for VISTA said that in the Peace Corps "the volunteers are well received and the atmosphere is pleasant; however, volunteers working with VISTA may find it hard to become accepted and this acceptance must come before the volunteers are able to do anything."

"In the rural areas the people are suspicious and passive and in the urban areas there is even a lot of tension, so it is a very hard job — although all the more satisfying," he commented.

Sherrill, who worked in Ghana for the Peace Corps for two years and then another year in the program Teachers for West Africa, said that Ghana was the first black country to gain independence and wanted, therefore, to expand their school system drastically.

He was teaching math and physics on the secondary school level.

"The Peace Corps is trying to do two things, supply middle level manpower and community development."

"There is also the idea of getting to know another culture." He believes you should "not approach an African tribe with a critical attitude."

"For instance, in their society over there they practice polygamy. This led to a stable family with fairly high moral values. Something like that may not be right for us in our society, but it works for them, so why should we criticize."

Their reception to us was extremely hospitable. If we would ask someone for directions, they would take you there. This seemed to be their general attitude toward strangers."

"Africa is probably quite different from what most people envision about Africa," Luikark thought, "The Peace Corps was really great and it is now finding a job that is just as great."

"As a volunteer you are free to develop any kind of a program you want. And as a volunteer you really discover what kind of working situations you can work with and whether you need supervision or can work on your own."

Speaking about VISTA Sherrill said, "VISTA came after the Peace Corps began when people said why send people overseas when we have problems over here. It is a very good way for people to get involved."

When Luikark first started recruiting for VISTA he was surprised "that not more people were excited about VISTA. It was kind of disappointing in a way to find out people didn't care about anything except themselves."

Applications for VISTA have been left in the Placement Office.

Statistics Finds 'Typical' Student

"This was just a project putting into practice what we're learning about collecting and analyzing results we get from data," explained Math teacher Thomas Lupton. He was referring to a recent assignment which he gave the fifteen students in his statistics class. Mr. Lupton added that the assignment was not specific. "Just do a study of what you've learned in here," he told his students. He did require them to include at least fifty students in their random sample. Everything else was left to the discretion of the individual students. They could conduct surveys of their own choosing, questioning the student body as Wilmington College about any subject which could be computed in numerical figures. "Sometimes when you leave it up to the students, they do more work than is actually required," stated Mr. Lupton. "Some of them did more than I expected them to do."

The results of the survey revealed what the class considers "the typical Wilmington College Student."

In terms of age, a typical married male student is 22. The average age of the single men who were polled is 22.76.

The typical male tends to weigh 170 lbs., measures 5' 11" tall, and wear a size 1.66 shoe.

Shirt size of the typical male is 15.65. He wears a size 32.72 inch belt. The distance which he drives to school each day is 5.98 miles.

The amount of money which the typical male carries in his pocket, $9.64, differs sharply with the amount of money carried by the average Wilmington Coed, who carries $4.84.

Four different samples were conducted on the shoe sizes of girls. Each sample showed that the girls wear approximately a size 7.

If a girl at Wilmington College is single, she will be 20.4 years of age, according to the survey. Married girls tend to be 24.

Mr. Lupton and his class found it interesting that the surveys revealed more information about boys than about girls.

The mean of the combined ages of the men and women students, both married and single, is 22. The mean of the combined ages of married students is 21.58.

One student in the class checked the daily sale of gasoline at a local service station for a week. He discovered that a daily average of 11.54 gallons of gasoline was sold.

A baseball player polled the baseball team to determine the average weight of the team members.

According to Mr. Lupton, "his findings verify the fact that athletes are a little more solid." The average weight was found to be 184.23.

Several students told of amusing incidents which occurred during the survey.

One pollster, who was asking students how much money they had with them, found a boy who did not have any money, and had to loan him a quarter.

Students surveying heights said they felt that boys tended to say they were taller than they really are.

GOOD LUCK — Renee Hartman, outgoing editor of The Seahawk, welcomes John Blair, incoming editor, into the newspaper office.

Blair To Head Seahawk Staff

New editor of The Seahawk for next year will be John Blair, Jr. His appointment to this position was recently approved by the Student Affairs Committee.

"We've had a number of complaints this year about stories being biased. I know we didn't, but the big thing next year will be to prove that they are not," said John who has had two years of experience of working with The Seahawk.

John first came to the Seahawk as the writer of the column Random Thoughts. This year John has served as Feature Editor and reporter for the paper.

John commented, "Some people have complained that they have not gotten proper coverage. Next year we will try to do more of what is proper coverage."

"We will base our coverage on not the size of the organization, but what the organization does."

Carrie Davis will continue as Managing editor next year and Walt Healey will again serve as Sports Editor.

Any students who are interested in working on the paper should come by the newspaper office when school begins again in September. Positions will be open at that time.

Advantages-Disadvantages

A change from the quarter system to a semester system is now being investigated by a special faculty-administrative committee. The advantages of a semester system include:

Two preregistration, registration, and exam periods as opposed to three on quarter basis. Classes meeting on alternate days make possible two days or evenings for preparation for both students and faculty. Many text books seem to be organized for semester sequence courses. Flexibility of loads more satisfactory for faculty. Physical education activity course schedules can be arranged to usurp only one sequence.

Amount of total credit per term for students can be more flexible (students can arrange to take almost any number of hours between 12 and 18). Only one break between terms where students may drop out, as opposed to two on the quarter system, should result in a greater average of FTE's for the academic year. Since our allocations for numbers of faculty positions, amount of money for supplies and equipment are allocated on the basis of average full-time equivalent students, these provisions should be considerably enhanced. On the basis of this year's experience we would probably have three additional faculty positions authorized if we had been on a semester basis. The cost of postage and printing should be reduced with two terms rather than three during the academic year. Since vacations come during the term on the semester basis, more time for students to do significant library work would be realized. Transferring to a semester system offers excellent opportunity for curriculum revision. A semester system would provide a full week's break between terms and a spring vacation of a week possibly during Holy Week. It would further provide ending the spring term before June 1, making possible job opportunities at the beach to begin at the opening of beach season. A longer exam period would be provided. A slower pace for students in course work would provide better opportunity for development of faculty-student rapport and would perhaps reduce the number of failures. The longer term and the schedule of classes on alternate days would enhance the time for assimilation of subject matter. Since more than 80% of senior institutions in N. C. are on the semester system articulation with the other institutions would be better. It is understood that the semester class schedule would involve Monday, Wednesday, Friday sequences and Tuesday, Thursday sequences, and no classes would be held on Saturday. The disadvantages: Christmas vacation interrupts the term as opposed to occurring between terms on the quarter system. Some people feel that the three weeks of the semester following Christmas vacation tends to be a "lame duck" session. There are those who would argue students do better with the concentration in fewer courses per term.

Phi Mu Receives Charter

In a special installation ceremony on Saturday, May 18, Gamma Kappa Chapter of Phi Mu was chartered as the second national fraternal organization on the campus of Wilmington College.

The Wilmington Chapter was founded in 1966 as a local sorority, Chi Sigma Phi. Phi Mu colonized the local sorority in February of the current school year, making it eligible to become the 104th chapter of Phi Mu National Collegiate Fraternity for women.

At the installation ceremony, pledges of the Phi Mu Colony were initiated into full Phi Mu membership, becoming charter members of the Gamma Kappa Chapter.

Twenty-three students were initiated. In the same ceremony, three special initiates — Mrs. Walter Allen, Mrs. William Randall, and Mrs. David Wells — also joined the sisterhood of Phi Mu.

Mrs. Randall is the wife of Wilmington College President, Dr. William Randall. Serving as one of the Fraternity's advisors, Mrs. Wells is the wife of a professor in the English Department. Mrs. Allen's husband is an associate professor of history.

The charter members were presented to the campus and community at a tea on Friday afternoon, May 17.

Guests included parents of the sisters, the College Faculty and Administration, and representatives from various college organizations.

Saturday's installation was held in the chapel of St. Andrews Covenant Presbyterian Church.

Four girls from the Phi Mu Chapter at Atlantic Christian College, which is Gamma Kappa's Sister Chapter, were present to assist with the initiation.

Mrs. Landon Freear, of Fort Worth, Texas, was the installing officer representing the Phi Mu National Council. She is a former national president of Phi Mu and now represents her sorority as the National Panhellenic Delegate. She is serving her second term as chairman of the College Panellenics Committee of NPC.

Assisting Mrs. Freear was Mrs. L. Caldwell McGarity, of Monroe, Ga., District Collegiate Director of chapters in North and South Carolina; and Mrs. Richard Dana Hamly, of Charleston, S. C., assistant District Alumnae Director for Georgia and North and South Carolina.

Dr. William Randall was the speaker for the installation banquet on Saturday night. Toastmaster for the banquet was Wilmington College Public Relations Director David Warner.

Mrs. David Warner received special recognition at the banquet from the newly-initiated sisters. As a Wilmington Phi Mu Alumna and Pledge director for the Colony, Mrs. Warner was instrumental in the chartering of the Wilmington Group.

The installation week-end came to a close Sunday morning when the new Phi Mu Sisters and visiting national officers attended church services at St. Andrews Covenant Presbyterian Church.

March 8, 9 and 10 saw the return of the Wilmington College Theatre to their home in the S.R.O. Theatre. The play was "The Firebugs" and it was directed by W. Terry Rogers.

"Under Milk Wood" by Dylan Thomas quickly followed and was presented on April 26, 27 and 28. It was well received enjoying two full houses. Ann Fitzgibbon, the director of this production, stated that "We now have to train the Wilmington audiences that quality productions are being given out here."

Phi Kappa Phi

The Brothers of Pi Kappa Phi held a gathering for alumni on May 24.

During the first week in June, the Pi Kappa Phi Brothers plan to send their House Mother, Mrs. Naomi Creasy, to the National Convention for House Mothers in Oklahoma City.

Four Brothers, headed by Archon Andy Purrelle, are being sent to the Thirty-Second National Convention, which will be held at Virginia Beach in August.

This will be the first time that a fraternity at Wilmington College has been represented.

Interannual softball found Pi Kappa Phi battling for top honors.

The Brothers also participated in a whaleboat race at Wrightsville Beach.

Delta Epsilon

Delta Epsilon Fraternity's officers for the coming year are: Master, Ed Sooy; Keeper of Exchequer, Jim Doss; Sentinel, Bill Annals, Jim Staslos; Bill Chapman; Scribe, John Bates; Chaplin, Ed Thompson; and Pledge-master, Wayne Kellum.

The officers were elected in the Fraternity's latest semi-annual elections.

Delta Epsilon assisted in the sale of tickets for the NAIA District Playoffs, which were held May 25.

Theatre Enjoys Active Season

The Wilmington College Theatre has experienced another successful year and has undergone considerable change.

The beginning of the 1967-68 season found the Wilmington College Theatre busily working in one of their most ambitious productions, that of the Broadway musical "My Fair Lady". This play was presented in conjunction with a local little theatre group at Thalian Hall. The show played to standing room audiences for three nights in November, receiving a standing ovation on their final night.

On February 16, 17 and 18 the college players presented the Jean Anouilh's "Antigone". This marked the end of five years of mounting their productions on the downtown stage.

There are those who contend that the quarter system presents a better opportunity for sequences of courses.

There may be some argument for students to complete a course in a shorter length of time, particularly if he is not vitally interested in it.

that proved to be the dramatic highlight of the season.

Dr. William M. Randall, Scholar, Author

By MARTIN GRANT

He leaned back in his chair.

His eye wandered past the interior of his plush office to the outer room, where members of his staff were busily going about their duties.

"I don't know," he said, "I guess I thought the job would be a challenge. I thought something could be made of the college. Some people here thought the college was going to fail."

William Madison Randall.

The man is a legend far beyond the borders of New Hanover County and North Carolina.

His reputation as a scholar is known from Cairo, Egypt to Chicago, Ill., and from Accra on the Gold Coast of Africa to Orange, Va.

Had he attempted the intelligence assignment Dr. Randall completed during World War II, the James Bond of spy fiction would have seemed a bumbling school boy.

When Congress decided to turn a two-year trade school into what is today the Merchant Marine Academy, Randall was asked to take a major role.

When it was decided to catalog the library at the Vatican in Rome, Randall, at 27, was one of the scholars on the team.

When a corporate vice president was needed by the venerable old Sneed Stack Company, which built — among other things — the Library of Congress, the firm's president chose not a businessman, but Dr. Randall, who had spent virtually his entire life as a scholar.

Author, teacher, administrator, researcher . . . the list goes on and on.

Suffice it to say that Dr. Randall, who retires this week as president of Wilmington College, has never been a banker, a lawyer, or a doctor of medicine. Then name virtually any other general type of honest work where the intellect is important, and the chances are Dr. Randall has done it.

William Randall was born in the Detroit suburb of Belleville, Mich. on August 16, 1899, the son of a Detroit specialty printer and publisher.

He attended high school at the old Central High School in Detroit. The building in which he attended classes is now Old Main on the campus of Detroit University.

He graduated from high school in 1916 — at the age of 16.

His father thought he was too young for college and sent him back to Central High for a year of post graduate study.

This put the young Randall out of high school just in time to serve as a private in the Army during the waning months of World War I.

Fresh out of the Army, he enrolled in Detroit Junior College, from which he transferred to the University of Michigan, where he obtained his bachelor's degree in general linguistics at the age of 20.

He went on to graduate school in linguistics at Michigan.

While he was working on his master's degree, he helped with the reclassification of the library at Michigan. In those days, library scientists as such were even rarer than they are today.

He obtained his master's at Michigan in 1924 and enrolled in Hartford Theological Seminary to start to work on a doctorate.

In 1928, he went to Rome to help with the Herculean task of cataloging the Vatican Library.

The books at the Vatican had never been classified — they had been acquired as needed and then allowed to accumulate.

The collection included books which dated all the way back to the Middle Ages.

Dr. Randall's family and close friends are amused by the fact that while he was at work at the Vatican, he had access to perhaps the smuttiest collection of pornography in the world — the books banned as obscene by the Roman Catholic Church.

The books had been carefully collected by the church so it could pass judgment on them, and they are still housed at the Vatican with the books which were collected for more scholarly purposes.

The cataloging of the Vatican Library was a project of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, which was headed by Nicholas Murray Butler, who was also president of Columbia University.

The project represented a compromise between Butler and Pope Pius XI. Butler agreed to use the Carnegie money to get the cataloging done and the Pope agreed to open the library to scholars from all nations.

Dr. Randall returned from Rome and the next year finished his doctorate in Islamic philosophy and went to work as a professor at the University of Chicago.

In 1930, Dr. Randall founded Library Quarterly, a scholarly journal still published today at the University of Chicago. He was also its first editor, a post he held until World War II.

In 1932, he authored The College Library, the first of three books he was to publish.

He coauthored Principles of College Library Administration with F.L.D. Goodrich in 1935 and edited Acquisition and Cataloging of Library Materials in 1940.

The year his first book was published, he was made a full professor. He was 33 years old at the time, extremely young to attain that rank.

During the 1930's Dr. Randall went to the Middle East twice on fellowships, both times to do research on Arabic manuscripts, photographing and studying them.

He went once on a fellowship provided by the General Education Board and once on a fellowship provided by the American Association of Learned Societies.

In May of 1942, William Randall went to war.

He was commissioned a major in the old Army Air Corps, which is today the Air Force, and sent to Cairo, Egypt, as a liaison officer with the British for the Air Transport Command.

Intelligence Department of the War Department, the budding organization which was to become a world wide operation, responsible for gathering all the intelligence information for the entire War Department. Dr. Randall was transferred back to Cairo.

Cairo in the winter of 1943 was a spy novelist's dream. King Farouk, younger than most of the graduate students Dr. Randall had taught in Chicago, sat on the Egyptian throne.

The young monarch had been educated in Italy and when he went to Egypt to ascend the throne, he surrounded himself with Nazis and Nazi sympathizers, many imported from Italy.

The British had put political pressure on Farouk and most of the Nazis had been purged from the palace hierarchy in 1939.

Many of the Nazis, however, were still in Cairo, gathering information for Berlin.

Dr. Randall was one of about six men, not counting clerical workers, whose job it was to keep the Pentagon up to date, not just on Egypt, but on the entire Middle East.

Randall attended both the Yalta Conference and the Tehran Conference. He was one of a large number of experts in different fields who attended to be instantly available in case President Franklin D. Roosevelt needed some information.

Later, Major Randall was promoted to lieutenant colonel. He is now a colonel in the Air Force Reserves.

school to train badly needed merchant seamen to man the ships to transport the war material turned put by the vast industrial complex of the United States.

It was originally a two-year school, but by 1948 Congress had decided to turn it into a four-year college — sort of a Merchant Marine Annapolis.

This meant the college had to be accredited.

Dr. Randall worked in setting up the curriculum and dealing with the accreditation committees. His title was Academic Dean.

Two years later, the Academy was a fully accredited institution. One year after that, Dr. Randall quit.

He intended to take a year off . . . perhaps write a book. Fate had already chosen him for Wilmington College.

In September of 1951, Dr. Randall and his wife started on a trip to see their son David in Savannah.

The second night of the trip they spent at the old Hobbs Motel north of Wilmington. Dewey Hobbs, when he found out Dr. Randall was an educator, talked to him enthusiastically about the new college here.

Hobbs told him it was a two year school . . . just been started for about four years . . . a combination trade school and junior college.

The next morning, about ten miles south of Wilmington there was a tragic auto accident and Dr. Randall moved into the first home he was to occupy in Wilmington — James Walker Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Randall was not seriously injured in the wreck, but his wife was. Her spine was broken and she developed other complications. She never fully recovered and died in 1953.

The word that there was an educator of national prominence in Wilmington spread like wildfire.

And it was the best kind of educator.

Unemployed.

Hobbs made the suggestion that Dr. Randall be asked to take a position with the college. So did R. C. "Doc" Savage, a highway Spencer had made it clear when he took the job that it was just temporary, and that he wanted to get back into secondary education.

The last man to be the permanent dean had left to become a high school principal in Savannah. He also had made it clear that he saw no future in the struggling young college.

The job which Dr. Randall took was, indeed, a challenge.

The college was located in the old Isaac Bear building on Market Street.

The catalog of the college at the time Dr. Randall went on the payroll listed about 40 faculty members, but catalogs can be misleading.

The college actually had about nine full-time faculty members and 160 students.

The other "faculty members" were part-time . . . some taught one or two classes at the college and were also on the faculty of New Hanover High School, which was across the street.

The college did not grow very rapidly at first.

It became a fully accredited junior college in 1952. After that, things began to pick up and then the growth rate skyrocketed.

In May of 1954, Dr. Randall married the present Mrs. Randall, who is the sister of a former history teacher at Wilmington College, Miss Mildred Johnson.

Dr. Randall had two children by his first marriage, Duncan Randall, who teaches at Wilmington College and David Randall, who manages a television station in Savannah.

Mrs. Randall had a son by a previous marriage, Robert S. McGee, who is now working and going to graduate school in Chicago. He is studying library science.

In the first few years with Wilmington College, Dr. Randall did virtually everything, from writing the catalog to listening to excuses from students to telephoning to see why Mr. So and So did not show up to teach his class.

Dr. Randall says he did not feel as if he had a particularly hard job when he was dean, but his family and friends remember it differently.

They remember all the long hours, all the troubles, all the tension which goes into building a college and they thought he had a damned hard job. They still do.

The college continued to grow and prosper and, in 1957, something happened which was to speed its growth rate.

The North Carolina Legislature passed the Community College Act.

The Act, which was passed to aid Asheville-Biltmore College, Charlotte College and Wilmington College, did three things.

— It provided that any public community college which wanted to could become a state institution.

— It authorized local bond issues to be matched by state funds for capital improvements at these colleges.

— It authorized the state to gradually take over the cost of operation of these colleges from local authorities.

Things really began to move at Wilmington College after the Community College Act was passed.

The voters were offered a bond issue in 1958. Did they want to spend $600,000 on a new campus for the college, with matching funds from the state? They did.

With the $1,200,000, the college bought its present 610 9/10 acre campus.

As Dr. Randall points out, the campus is twice the size of the kingdom of Monaco and three times the size of Vatican City.

From 1959 on, the college was busy building the first three buildings.

By 1961, the college had hopelessly outgrown the Isaac Bear building. Classes were being held up until 10 p.m. in some cases.

In the summer of 1961, the college moved.

In 1963, the Legislature authorized the North Carolina Board of Higher Education to make Wilmington a four year college "When the Board thought it was feasible."

The Board thought it was feasible immediately, and the college started building the junior and senior classes.

Its first class graduated in June, 1965.

In November, 1967, came the final achievement — the one Dr. Randall was hired to accomplish — Wilmington College became a fully accredited four-year institution, with accreditation retroactive to the first class.

This development meant every class could say it graduated from an accredited institution.

There had always been an unspoken agreement between Dr. Randall and the Board of Trustees that he would stay on until the college was accredited.

Dr. Randall kept this agreement.

But he announced his retirement as soon as accreditation was virtually certain.

As a replacement the Board of Trustees chose Dr. William Wagoner, 40, the young man who has directed the New Hanover County schools for the past six years.

Dr. Wagoner, a capable educator and a champion of such things as public kindergartens, has a reputation built almost entirely in North Carolina.

What sort of a man is this to follow Dr. Randall, the internationally known scholar? Is he good enough?

Strangely enough, although only the future will tell for sure, Dr. Wagoner may have been the wisest choice in the world.

The college is accredited now; its officials no longer will have to deal almost daily with accreditation committees of scholars from Atlanta.

Dr. Randall, so capable of dealing with accreditation committees, has been replaced by a man with proven ability in the fields most important to the college now — Wilmington and North Carolina politics.

And, if the college is going to grow, money from Raleigh is the most important fertilizer it can have.

Dr. Randall remembers the past few years fondly. "I had good public support," he says, "Nobody was against the college. That was like being against the flag or motherhood."

It was not quite like that. There were people who said things privately to Dr. Randall which made his blood boil. What he meant was there was no public criticism.

But, no matter what the problem — from labor union speakers on campus to professors whose ideas were unpopular with the local populace — Dr. Randall stood up to the critics of the college.

In doing so, he earned the respect and admiration of his staff and of the professors and students who understood what was going on.

And the respect runs as deep among those who disagreed with him as with those who thought he could do no wrong.

Dr. Randall will be 69 in August. His appearance and energy are those of a much younger man.

He says he plans to work in the library, do a little teaching. "And enjoy life, I guess." His family and friends feel he deserves the rest.

AT MERCHANT MARINE ACADEMY

patrol dispatcher, who heard about the wreck. A lot of other people probably made the suggestion, too.

In less than a week — in fact while he was still in the hospital — Dr. Randall became the dean of the college.

Dale K. Spencer, who is still in secondary education here, was the temporary dean before Dr. Randall took the post.

'I Have Taught All My Life' -- Hurst

By CARRIE DAVIS

"I have taught all my life, with the exception of five years during the war," began Professor Adrian Hurst.

"For a portion of that time, I taught special courses to better prepare the men for the war effort," he continued.

Pointing to a plaque over his desk, Mr. Hurst stated, "Basically, that has been by guide since I've been teaching. The Plaque offered the following challenge:

Let us take up the torch of learning where our predecessors have been forced to put it down and push it forward into the realm of the great unknown, ever searching for those eternal truths which will help to make the world a better place in which to live.

A native of Duck Creek, North Carolina, Mr. Hurst, graduated with a B.A. Degree from Old Wake Forest College in 1926. In 1931, he received his Master's Degree from Teacher's College, Columbia University.

Mr. Hurst's early teaching experience was in high schools in Raleigh and Piedmont North Carolina.

Then, from 1941 until 1946, Mr. Hurst was employed by the North Carolina Ship building Company at Wilmington.

"During this time, it became known that I was an experienced teacher, and for that reason, I was asked to teach special courses designed to help with the war effort," stated Mr. Hurst.

He continued, "My work at the ship yard was terminated August 9, 1946. Not many days after that, I was asked if I would consider teaching freshman math for the University of North Carolina when it was operating a 'Center' in Wilmington."

The Wilmington "Center" was one of ten centers in North Carolina designed to accommodate G.I.'s recently returned from the war.

"During the year that this was going on," explained Mr. Hurst "a vote was taken to see if New Hanover County wanted to tax itself to support a junior College.

"The vote carried by a large majority, and the University Center at Wilmington was converted to Wilmington College."

Being asked to teach at the newly founded Wilmington College, Mr. Hurst agreed to remain at Wilmington until Christmas of the first year.

"Well, I'm still here. I had no idea in the beginning that I'd be here now," Mr. Hurst said.

Mr. Hurst explained that he occasionally tries to inject what he calls "five cents humor" into his lectures when he has a class that will accept it.

One of his favorite jokes is the story of an early student, whom he asked, "Is it alright if I call you 'Edna'." The girl replied, "You may call me 'Miss Jones', if it's alright with you!"

He also remembers the boy who made a special trip to the college on a Saturday to give Mr. Hurst a test which he forgot to hand in the day before.

The amusing fact in this story is that the man was still dressed in his pajamas and bath robe.

When asked what he considers the biggest change in Wilmington College since its founding, Mr. Hurst replied, "Well, of course the biggest change is the change in the buildings, grounds, and faculty."

"There hasn't been a great change in the attitudes of the students," he added.

"Of course, when we started, the school was predominately men, and there has been a gradual increase in the percentage of women."

Mr. Hurst believes there has been a change in the philosophy of some members of the faculty.

"When we were beginning, there were just a handful of us old-line experienced teachers. Nearly all of us had had experience teaching high school.

"But as the school has grown in age and matured, people have been added to the faculty who probably have never had any experience with high school teaching, and who approach the situation in a more sophisticated manner."

In reply to a question concerning the future of Wilmington College, Mr. Hurst replied, "I see no reason why Wilmington College will not continue to grow as it has in the past."

"I see no reason why it won't receive University status as a branch of the University of North Carolina, if that is what the trustees want."

"On the other hand, if it wants to remain an independent school, I think it will continue to grow, but not as fast as if the trustees elect to push for its acceptance as a part of the university system."

Mr. Hurst gave a vehement "no," when asked if he favors a change to the semester system.

Several of the members of the present faculty are former students of Mr. Hurst. These faculty members include Mrs. Isabel Foushee, Mrs. Dorothy Dixon, Bob Olsen, Earl Allen, Dave Miller, and Walter Biggs.

After retiring from teaching, at the end of this year, Mr. Hurst hopes to do a little research and other studies with the seafood producing areas.

"I have ideas concerning the construction of a net which will catch shrimp without destroying so many immature fish."

"I shall always be interested in our seafood producing areas, and hope someone will come up with ideas that will greatly improve the ugly situation in which our commercial fishing interprise of our state now finds itself."

In 1965, Mr. Hurst was appointed to the Commercial and Sports Fisherman Advisory Board.

Strong To Spend Year At University Of Lyon

By RENEE HARTMAN

Sophomore Michael Strong will spend his junior year at the University of Lyon in southern France.

Michael will be taking part in the University of North Carolina's year at Lyon program.

Forty students from North Carolina colleges and universities will be taking part in this program. Michael will be the only student from Wilmington College.

"I was inspired to enter the program by two men in the French Department," said Michael, "Dr. Jackson Sparks and Dr. Lloyd Bishop. Both men presented a very encouraging report about the program and suggested that I apply."

Michael has been studying French for eight years and has never had the opportunity to speak it outside of the classroom.

"I can speak it pretty well and can understand it. I do have sloppy grammar, but that is something you get through practice."

"Part of the challenge for the for instance, taking a science course which is being taught in French," he said.

When Michael first arrives at the University of Lyon, he will take a five week cram course in French courses. This will include 25 hours of instruction a week in grammar, conversation, literature, history, and culture of the French people.

Following this cram course, the students will have two free weeks during which time they can travel — "depending on their finances," Michael commented.

"The system of education over there differs from ours in that the students meet with the professor of a subject only once a week. There is very little required reading curriculum, research work, and then one final exam at the end of the semester," Michael explained.

"Another thing, over there, when the French student graduates from Lyon, he has what is equivalent to a masters degree here. The level of instruction is higher over there," he continued.

"This part of the challenge is in addition to the language barrier." Michael will be staying in a dormitory with French students. There is a virtual absence of Americans in Lyon, said Michael, meaning that the students in the program will have to speak French.

The program students will sail as a group on the S.S. France August 29. They will land in Le Harve and then spend several days in Paris before taking a leisurely train route to Lyon, according to Michael. The students will return in June.

Michael comes to Wilmington College after two years as a midshipman at the Naval Academy at Annapolis. He has also served three years in the U.S. Marine Corps.

"I didn't like it," Michael said referring to Annapolis. Michael was in an engineering course primarily and wanted a liberal arts program. Also at the end of two years Michael would have had to pick up an additional five year obligation to serve in the Navy.

When Michael entered Wilmington College this year, he had to repeat his sophomore year since he did not have credits in the liberal arts.

Michael, who was born in Boston, Mass., has spent five years in Bermuda and two years in England.

For three summers Michael worked in the British Merchant Marine on board the passenger liner Queen of Bermuda, which, he says, is a medium size British liner.

Michael came to Wilmington partly because "my grandparents retired here and partly because of all the people I met while in the Marine Corps."

With majors in political science and French, he is looking for government work, perhaps in the foreign service.

President Makes No Rash Pledges

"I don't see myself making any rash promises," said newly elected Student Body president Gary Chadwick.

"I think Mike's speech has given me some good ideas and I plan to follow through on them," said Gary in reference to Mike Meier's State of the College speech at the last Senate meeting of the year.

Gary hopes to see a Student Bill of Rights next year as well as having a student lecture series.

Gary believes that while in office he will see things that will need to be done and he plans to "do these things as quickly as possible. Those things that can't be done at the time, I will hope the next administration will follow through."

"One thing that we have already stated on is closer communication with the administration. I hope to see to it that the students get all of the information that they are entitled to having."

Gary plans to have talks at specific times—maybe once a week — with different members of the administration including the president of the college.

Gary has appointed Jerry Ramsey as chairman of the Board of Elections. Jere Hodgkin will serve as the Fine Arts Committee chairman and Clinton Hardee as the Dance Committee Chairman. These appointments, Gary noted, are pending the approval of the Senate.

"I plan to work closely with these committees and I think they could serve as a cabinet. If I needed anyone else's advice, I would go and ask them," Gary says.

He also plans to go to as many Senate meetings as possible.

Again saying he did not want to make any rash promises, Gary commented, "I am doing that intentionally since I don't want to promise something I can't get done."

WHATS HAPPENING BROTHER?

By WALT HEALEY, JR.

The 1968 baseball season is over. The Seahawks failed to defend their District 26 title with a double lost to Area 7 champions Pfeiffer College, 7-6, 5-1, in the play-offs. Coach Bill Brooks' club finished with a 21-11 record. It is as simple as that.

"Hey you! The student body. That ain't nothing to be ashamed of."

Wilmington College has a full time enrollment of some 1250 students, give or take a few wizards. Imagine 1250 HUMAN BEINGS with minds, who roam around the Wilco campus from 8:30 A.M. till about 2:30 P.M. After they leave the college, its activities never cross their minds until maybe 8:30 A. M. the next day.

Where the hell were you during the baseball season. What does it take to sit in the stands and watch a nine-inning baseball game especially when the home team happens to be one of the finest in the National Athletic Intercollegiate Association (NAIA).

Chuck Cuppett, affectionately known among his teammates as "the old man", won nine games and threw goose eggs at powerful Pembroke to turn the tide in the Independent play-offs which Wilmington went on to win. Pete Eyer won two games in two days in the same play-offs. Jim Sanders hurled, what oddmakers now put on the board as 28,000-1, a perfect game against Williams College of Massachusetts.

Wayne Johnson went on an unbelievable batting streak in the latter part of the season to finish with a .316 batting average. Eddie Lewis, Jimmy Johnson, Jim Atkins, who lead the club in runs batted in, slick fielding Pete Daughtry and Paul Livingston and the rest of the crew had a fine season with semi-empty stands to applaud them on.

Indeed there are probably many valid excuses. But 1250 of them. Sorry about that only 1225. The baseball team and its fans have excuses.

Coach Bill Brooks was named the NAIA District 26 coach of the year and he was quoted as saying that a great deal of the Seahawks' success belongs to assistant coach Dave Miller. Can anyone of you 1225 non-fans, or should I say non-participants, realize some of the sacrifices they and the members of the team make? Practice six days a week between two and half and three and half hours a day. Travel two hundred miles for a night game and make it on time for 8:30 A.M. classes the next day.

This attitude of yours has been seen in other activities on campus, which includes volunteering to do work on the campus newspaper, join different organizations, intramural sports activities, varsity sports, even in participation in the student government, which I might add includes turning out to vote in the few elections that are held during the academic year.

Hats off to the work the fraternities do in certain areas especially the recent taking of two ads in the Area 7 baseball playoff programs, and the hustling they did to try and find other ads along with a handful of other students.

Next year the outlook is even better for the baseball team and especially so for the basketball team, which had a poor season. The golf team won eleven out of fourteen meets, the wrestling team and the soccer team both had commendable seasons, and the tennis club performed in a manner that they do not have to hang their heads.

Professor John McCormick, whose article Score One For Today's Students appeared in a recent issue of Sports Illustrated summarizes it best for me:

"The students today are an entirely different breed from those in the '30s is no news to no one. They no longer have to tell their fathers to go to hell because they assume that he is already there, along with the rest of the family — though they are happy enough to cash monthly checks from the lower depths . . . The question of sport vs. Intellectual life does not arise anymore. It would never occur to the present generation of students even to debate the subject. Students attend or do not attend college football games without any sense my generation had of taking a stand. Sport, in brief, has become a normal, natural part of life, including student life, and that is probably exactly as it should."

I know this much, 1225 students do not occupy the Wilmington College library at any one period. To be truthful, probably the only time it is filled to its small capacity is during final exams better known as cram week.

ings."

"The avenues are always open to them," he pointed out.

Saying that since he has been at the college only 30% of the student body has voted in student body elections, Dr. Randall said, "I do not believe the elected student body officers really represent the student body."

Dr. Randall mentioned that one gentleman who was here with the accreditation team last spring pointed out that "we don't have student spirit. No group of Wilmington College students can group themselves together and call themselves Wilmington College students."

"You are interested in doing something here, however the large majority of students have no solidarity," he continued.

"The only suggestion has been to get the two million dollars necessary and build a good student union. Students have got to build the student union themselves — or find some friend who will build one for them."

Dr. Randall said the state will not give colleges the money to build dorms, cafeterias, student unions, or parking lots.

The reason for the increase in the student activity fee is because of this. The state gave the college money to build roads, but the college has to build parking lots themselves.

When the idea of college assemblies held at specific times was brought up, Dr. Randall wanted to know where such an assembly could be held. "The only place to put 1,000 students is the gym — and you can't hear there."

"If students find something lacking, their complaints will be considered," he said.

"If you believe a group of students other than those who are elected as representatives to serve as liaison we'll do it," Dr. Randall told the committee. "One thing I won't do is to appoint them because immediately I'd be suspect."

"If you want to go ahead — it is up to the students — elect your committee. Your biggest problem is with the students," he continued.

Gary stressed, "Just the fact there was an effort is important. We believe just this group here today will help to make the rapport better. We were working on strictly rumors."

"There is one way to stop a rumor," said Dr. Randall. "Go to the source and then you are stuck with the answer."

"This is a public institution. We have no secrets, everything is an open book."

"The work remains to be done," he concluded.

shied away from. We have tried not to shy away from our task whether it be downtown, in the office of the Deans, or anywhere we have tried to meet and conquer our tasks. We feel like we have."

"I have but one thought to leave you. Seeing us all in here reminds me of what Thomas Jefferson said in his 'First Inaugural' after a long hard battle to defeat the Federalist in 1800. He said 'we are all Federalist . . . we are all Republicans.' This, in essence, is what we are."

"We are all freshmen, we are all seniors, we are all sophomores, we are all juniors, we are Wilmington College."

Before beginning his speech, Mike thanked the various people who have helped him this year. The first persons he mentioned were "that damn if you do and damn if you don't pair, the Deans, who haven't said a word in six months."

"My second personality," said Mike in thanking Ray Pacer for the work with the Board of Elections.

"The best darn dance committee chairman," thanks went to Dale Donahue; and "a darn fine job," to Gaye Godwin for her work with the telephone directory.

And to the person who's given the Student Senate more publicity than I can remember — and I've been out here five years," Mike thanked Renee Hartman.

And thanks to just all of you, just the whole group. It's made a very good year."

goal of bringing pride to Wilmington College."

"We have a new group in here. We're very enthusiastic — hopefully, we're very enthusiastic," he added.

"I only hope we can do half as much as has been done in the past," he continued.

"I can only hope, too, that getting this office has not offended anyone and that we can work for better things together since that is the only way to get anywhere."

"What we have here is a failure to communicate," said Ray Pacer in explaining the purpose of that afternoon's "protest" meeting.

"We were not as much interested in the quarter or semester system as we are about the communications on campus," he said.

The Student Senate decided to petition Dr. Randall to let him know "we want information," said Hugh. They also sanctioned the working of Ray's group.

THANK YOU — Doug Swink accepts a check for $100 from Mrs. Anne Mason, president of the Wilmington Woman's Club as Mrs. Marcelle Austin, project chairman, looks on.

Women Give Boost To Theater

The WILCO Straw-Hat Theatre's project for the forthcoming summer of presenting six shows in six weeks received a boost when The Wilmington Women's Club became their first Sponsor.

Mrs. Anne Mason, president of the Wilmington Woman's Club and Mrs. Marcelle Austin, the projects chairman, visited the college campus and presented Doug W. Swink, chairman of the Drama and Speech Department, with a check to aid the WILCO Straw-Hat Theatre.

The college group is actively engaged in raising enough money to launch this summer program. Royalties alone on all six shows will run over the one thousand dollar mark.

"We feel that such a venture as this will benefit not only the college," stated Mr. Swink, "but will add still another attraction to the vacationists in the SENClad area."

Any individual or organization wishing to aid the WILCO Straw-Hat Theatre or seeking further information regarding the summer program, may do so by contacting Doug W. Swink at Wilmington College.

Crews Answers Q. P. Questions

In answer to the large number of questions concerning the quality point system J. Marshall Crews, Dean of Students at Wilmington College, has tried to clear up a few points.

"At the end of every term we check the grade averages of all students and inform them of their standing." This is especially important this quarter in that a certain average will be necessary to re-enter Wilmington College in the fall and it will be necessary that some students attend Summer School at Wilmington.

"If a student does not have this quality point average, a letter will be sent to him before June 11, which is registration day for the first summer session."

Crews said, "I would advise everyone who is concerned about their quality point average to come by the Office of the Dean of Students and I can give them some idea of how they stand."

There has been a lot of confusion about transfer students. "Any student who transfers to Wilmington College will be placed in the Q.P. chart according to the number of hours attempted (not necessarily passed) at his other school."

"One important point to remember is that it is possible for any student to stay on probation and remain in college until he graduates, but he must have a 2.0 quality point average to graduate."

If a student is going to attend summer school to raise his Q.P. average he is advised to take one course as "two five hour courses each term in summer school are considered an extremely heavy load." Crews said, "I would advise every student to read pages 44 and 45 of the new catalog on Retention, Dismissal and Readmission."

means to end the communications problem, having the minutes from all meetings, whether they are from clubs, faculty, or administration, posted in one central place on campus so people could look at these to get an idea of what is happening.

"One or the other of the groups must initiate the action. There has got to be a positive action," he continued.

"We are going to have to work with what we have and then expand," said John.

New Buildings To Open Some Day In Future

by CATHARIN KNIGHT

Library and chemistry-physics buildings, which have been slowly appearing on campus this past year, still aren't ready for occupancy.

Miss Helen Hagin, librarian, says the moving date for that building isn't known. The hold-up are the stacks. They haven't gotten here yet. Slated for completion by the first session of summer school, 1968, or soon thereafter, exact completion is unknown, leaving past college president Dr. William Randall holding the bag.

Rolla Nelson, head of the Physics department, predicted the chemistry-physics building will be ready for occupancy in "perhaps two weeks, or by October 15." The building was to open this quarter.

A two story structure modified Georgian, the library is surrounded by a covered walkway, formed by areas. The center of the interior is open and glassed in, creating a spacious effect.

Interesting features in the building will be a smoking study, a room where students may bring a typewriter to aid in studying, a microfilm reading room, and a rare books room for special collections which will be housed under glass.

Handicapped students and staff will have elevator privileges. An outside book drop will be constructed for quick deposit of books.

Besides group studies rooms, there will be seating in individual cubicles, commonly called carrels. Tables will be arranged among the stacks, Miss Hagin said, and the tables will seat a maximum of four.

Two reference desks will be located downstairs. "It is hoped that someone can be sitting here at all times to help students seeking information," said Miss Hagin.

She thinks one of the most important things a college library can do is to help the students learn to use its tools.

Just inside the door, new books will be displayed in a lounge area. Another lounge area will be at the glass covered rear of the building. This is behind the periodicals. The music room, plans to have controlled console of tapes and record players. Upstairs is an area for children's literature, complete with a juvenile table and low swivel chairs in blue upholstery.

There will also be a conference room, seminar rooms, Dr. Randall's office, and faculty lounges. Behind the staff lounge, is a small kitchenette, for serving light refreshments at board meetings etc.

Downstairs will be carpeted in green, as well as the free-hanging stairway. A varying color scheme will be carried out. Antique gold and terra cotta will predominate in the upholstery.

"We hope very much that the students will enjoy going over to and using the library, but will not disturb the people with their talking," said Miss Hagin. If the library is abused, measures will have to be taken, she added.

The new library has a capacity for around 175,000 books. It will open with about 50,000. It seats 550 to 600.

"We hope that it's going to be very functional and that it will be a place that the students will really enjoy," said Miss Hagin.

Seniors Want Lot, But Noe Says No

by CARRIE DAVIS

"The reason we did away with the senior lot is because if we had had a senior lot, the seniors would be restricted to parking in that lot, only," Stated Plant Engineer Thomas Noe, when asked why the present Senior Class has been deprived of its traditional parking lot.

"By doing away with the senior lot," he continued; "it gives all seniors parking close to the buildings where they have their classes."

However, many seniors, indignant at the loss of their senior privilege, disagree with Mr. Noe. These students are of the opinion that their status as seniors is worthy of a certain amount of distinction.

They feel cheated at being unable to enjoy a privilege for which they have waited three years.

Among those seniors disagreeing with Mr. Noe is Kathy Bradley, who asked a pertinent question, "What other privileges do we have for seniors out here? What else differentiates the students who have struggled through three hard years?"

"Many other seniors feel as I do, that if Mr. Noe were to allow us to concur with him, we could work out many of his excuses, oops, 'problems,'" Kathy concluded.

"I think it's the worst I've ever seen," stated Sandy Dew. "I've been for three years and didn't park there, just waiting for the day when I could."

Genia Williams stated simply, "Oh, it disgusts me!"

"I think it's awful for two reasons," said Al Carrus, "mainly because I have to walk a lot further. Also, upper classmen should have some privileged."

Mr. Noe mentioned the fact that the campus is growing, and explained that a lot near new buildings that would be convenient for some students would inconvenience many others.

He wants all seniors to be able to park near their respective classes, and feels the present system will enable them to do so.

"We are enlarging what used to be the Senior lot to accommodate 214 cars," Mr. Noe explained. "We are paving a lot that will accommodate about 98 cars behind the administration building."

Both of these lots will be completed Oct. 1.

Mr. Noe continued, "On the seventh of Nov., we will complete the lot in the woods behind Hoggard. That will accommodate about 250 cars."

When these first two lots are completed, part of the present faculty lots will be converted into student parking. Upon the completion of the library and science buildings, the old faculty parking lot will be used for students until the cafeteria is begun.

"We have two lots that are in excess of 200 cars each over by the library building," he added.

Mr. Noe urges students to pay strict attention to the traffic regulations stated on the back of the Wilmington College Motor Vehicle Registration.

He stressed the rule which states that students' cars found parked within spaces marked with yellow lines will be towed away at the owners' expense.

UNC-W Possible, To Know Oct. 28

by BILL STOVER

A drive to make Wilmington College part of the Greater University of North Carolina began in the early 1960's, and now, nearly nine years later, the question of whether Wilmington College will receive "university status" is about to be answered.

October 28, has been set as the date on which a special committee designated by the Board of Trustees at the University of North Carolina, will be presented a feasibility report drawn from a study which has been going on for several months.

This committee will make recommendation to the executive committee of the trustees. If the board agrees that Wilmington College is ready for the move, the first battle has been won.

Final approval on the admission of Wilmington College into the consolidated system has to come from the State Board of Higher Education and the North Carolina General Assembly.

The material under study, gathered by this college's administration and presented to the committee in Chapel Hill is thorough and comprehensive.

Included in the report are enrollment figures — now, and those projected; the overall education programs; the physical plant; a faculty and administration study and survey; projections of growth, potential enrollment, and future plans for expanding the campus.

A first-hand look at the college and its facilities was made in July by the coordinator of the study committee, Dr. A. K. King, vice-president of UNC at Chapel Hill.

His comprehensive study dealt with what the Greater University could expect from Wilmington College if accepted.

Dr. King talked to local educators, businessmen, and local citizens, in hopes of finding out more concerning what Wilmington could offer a unit of the university.

The overall study was outlined in a 1963 statute passed by the North Carolina Legislature, and done through the cooperation of the local college and the administration of the University system.

Both parties agreed that the step was most certainly worthwhile and the study began in the early part of May. One of the holdbacks which plagued the final approval of the move was rectified in September with the approval of funds to construct residential facilities on the campus.

Now, with the approval of $1,055,000 by the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for the building of dormitories, one more step towards the direction of "university status" has been taken.

The funds will be matched with an equal amount appropriated to the college by the N. C. Legislature last year.

With Wilmington College's reputation for high standards and good teaching, its strive for continued growth and expansion, and the attitude of all those associated with the college, the present administration agree that the potential of including Wilmington as a unit of the university in this area is without question.

Theatre Can Boast Despite Financial Worries

Wilco's Straw-Hat Theatre can boast of having produced six plays this summer instead of one or two as in previous summer seasons. And looking back at the summer season, Doug Swink, chairman of the Drama and Speech Department, has said, "Really, it was a success."

However, had Mr. Swink been asked if the season would be a success when it first began, he would have had a hard time answering the question. Financial support, or rather the lack of financial support, would have been the factor influencing his answer.

Although the department received a large measure of their initial financial support from the Wilmington Women's Clubs, this initial support only covered so much. Closing the season soon after it began was contemplated, according to Mr. Swink; however it was decided to continue on a show to show — or actually night to night — basis.

"Then surprisingly enough, the next to the last play Mary, Mary, the whole audience picked up and cheered us financially," said Mr. Swink, who was not certain whether this success was due to the fact that many people knew the show or that the summer program was itself catching on.

At this time, the drama department is planning another summer season for 1969 similar to this last one. Mr. Swink has been told by Dr. William Wagoner, college president, that he would like to see the program continued.

"The experience gained from working in summer stock is invaluable," said Mr. Swink. "I was glad to see some of our own college students availing themselves of the responsibility."

The nucleus for plays was provided by six University of North Carolina students whom Mr. Swink has commended as "performing excellently, conducting themselves superbly and were absolutely trouper in the true sense of the word."

When asked if the summer stock season here at the college could be carried out by just the use of local talent, Mr. Swink declared that it could if these people had no other commitment.

Mr. Swink also commended the director for three of the plays, Gary Weathersbee, another UNC student. "Gary did a magnificent job as did the stagecraft classes who formed the backbone of the crew."

Dance Dance Dance

Plans for the annual Freshman Dance have been released by Clinton Hardee, Chairman of the Dance Committee for 1968-69.

Scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 12, the dance will begin at 9:00 p.m. and end at 1:00 a.m. It is termed by Clinton as a great chance for Freshman to get acquainted with the school and with the upperclassmen.

No admission will be charged for the dance. However, students are required to present their I.D. cards at the door of the Student Services Building as they enter the dance.

These cards will be made the previous Friday.

The dance, dedicated to the freshman, is open to all Wilmington College students and their dates. However, no tags will be admitted.

Dress for the dance is school skirts or dresses for the girls, and school clothes for the boys. It is requested that slacks or Bermuda's not be worn by the girls, nor "hippie clothes," by the boys.

The "Baccords" will provide the music for the dance. They are a soul group with two singers and a 5-piece back-up group.

Clinton promises, "The band will be great! The Dance Committee encourages everybody to attend."

But while the finishing touches are being given to the new William Madison Randall Library, the present conditions in the library daily grow more cramped as the work piles up on every available desk top, book shelf, and cart.

Greek Lines

Delta Epsilon

During the summer, the brothers of Delta Epsilon Fraternity moved into their new house at 3906 Market Street.

The brothers are currently arranging their furniture in the house.

"We got a lot of furniture on our drive, and we only need a few more articles," announced John Onoff, house chairman. "We need two beds, an icebox, and a few dishes," he continued.

Davis Sanford, another fraternity brother, stated, "The brothers are looking forward to a very successful Rush this fall."

Pi Kappa Phi

"This past summer gave way to many changes around the Pi Kappa House," states fraternity brother Denny McCaughn.

The first floor of the house was repainted, and for the most part, remodeled. Committees were revamped, and new ideas were brought forth by the National Convention held at Virginia Beach.

The social calendar for 1968-69 includes 3 Rush parties, 2 trips to other chapters, the annual Ma Keel Party, and the Rose Ball.

"All in all, Pi Kappa Phi expects a very good year," predicts Denny.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

"The big news around the TKE Fraternity is the new house in which occupancy was taken during the latter part of the Summer," reports Al Carrus.

"Everyone in the brotherhood is really thrilled with its acquisition."

George Crouch added, "The Tekes have plans to make it an ideal house. This quarter will prove to be another eventful one for all in the house."

On the agenda for this quarter are various band parties, hayrides, and the annual Hell's Angels party.

As more books are changed from the Dewey system of classification to the Library of Congress system, new areas must be found for these books as well as for the new books which arrive. All available wall space seems to be filled with new book shelves to make room for these books.

Librarian Mrs. Catharine Walls works at the one new piece of library equipment, the new card catalogue which is almost four times as large as the old one.

Librarian Miss Betty Sue Westbrook works at her desk . . . or actually in air since no clear space could be found on her desk.

Meanwhile, Miss Helen Hagan, head librarian, sits in her office, no less crowded than the other working areas of the library, and dreams of the new, more spacious quarters for her staff.

And sometime soon, this building, The William Madison Randall Library will make the conditions of the present library — for the librarians as well as the students looking for a quiet place to study — all seem like a bad dream.

Pannellenie News

The Wilmington College Pannellenie association adopted a constitution Aug. 26, 1968.

This year the officers are Susan Long from Phi Mu, President; Ellen Dunn from Sigma Phi Sigma, vice-president; Irene Wall, from Phi Mu, Secretary-Treasurer.

Pannellenie Council members are Laurel Baker, Phi Mu; and Susan Howell, Sigma Phi Sigma.

According to President Susan Long, "The Council members were very pleased with the attendance and interest shown during Freshman Orientation."

"The Council urges all freshman, transfer students, and upperclass women interested in Sorority life to attend the forum, which will be held Wednesday, Oct. 30, from 6:30 p.m. until 8:30 p.m. in the Student Services Building.

This forum is devised in order to acquaint non-sorority women with the fraternity system.

"MULLET SEINERS," BY INK BY CLAUDE HOWELL

Faculty Presents Show

Wilmington College Faculty Show, first of eight art exhibitions planned, opened here October 2 in Kenan Hall.

A five medium exhibit of oils, glass, metal and ceramics, artists John Nygren, Tommy Sue Murphy, and Claude Howell, chairman of the Art Department, are the first faculty members ever to exhibit on campus, in their own show.

The exhibits, sponsored by the college Fine Arts Committee, have been planned to show the result of student work in the arts, the art of the state, area, and what is being done in the nation in art today," Howell said.

Of the shows two will be juried, he said. They are the Seventh Annual Lower Cape Fear Exhibitions, January 5 thru 31, and the Associated Artists of North Carolina, slated for the second thru 28 of March.

November's show will consist of paintings by Ron Taylor and opens on the third. It will remain on display in Kenan Hall until the twenty-ninth.

In December, 2-11, students in area schools will show their work in an exhibit called New Hanover County Public School Art. All mediums will be represented, from crayon to oils.

The January exhibit, Howell says, has not been contracted. Notice will be given later.

Two shows are scheduled for April. Opening first, on the sixth is a Special Fine Arts Festival Exhibition.

April 10-30 the Eighth Annual Arts Travelling Exhibition will be on display. Howell says both shows will run through the 30th.

Annual Student Show, May 4-30, ends the series.

It represents the type of work being done in all of the college art department courses. Variety keynote this show, as students present work done in ceramics, sculpture, life drawing, art composition, water colors, pen and ink, and other drawings, collages, mobiles and paintings.

A Potpourri, this show is one of the student's favorites. Not only will they have an opportunity to show the public their work they also find the exhibit educational, as criticisms will be expressed by viewers during the month.

All Art Show exhibitions are in Kenan Hall, and open to the public any day and time of the day, until, the building is closed after night classes, which vary.

Attendance has been good for the present show. "Why, I've seen townspeople wandering through the exhibit area from early morning until night. They just seem to come any time," Howell observed.

Wilson Admires Campus

"My first physical impression of Wilmington College is that it's well organized and laid out," stated John D. Wilson, after only two weeks as a sociology instructor at the college.

He continued, "It's new and this leads to a more emotional feeling that it's more progressive and has a good future."

As a part-time instructor, Mr. Wilson is teaching only one class. Though he admitted, "Actually, this class is the only contact I've had with the school," he has been able to form an opinion about the student body.

"I think the students as a whole could be matched with any other students on any university or large college campus," stated Mr. Wilson.

"I feel it's a much friendlier campus than any other college or university campus I've ever been to," he added, "and I am impressed by the concern of the individual students on the part of the professors."

Besides teaching at the college, Mr. Wilson works full-time at the Southeastern Mental Health Center in Wilmington. His official title is "Administrative Director."

"That's hard to explain," Mr. Wilson confessed, when asked what duties that title entail. "Right now I'm doing both psychiatric and administrative work."

"We see patients comprised of individuals who are suffering from a temporary minor depression to patients with a full blown psychotic break with reality."

"We have about 350 cases and average 35 new cases a month."

Pay for visits to the center is determined by the patients' incomes. "You call it a sliding fee scale, whereby charges are based on the income and the number of people in the family being supported by the income," explained Mr. Wilson.

"Right now, cost ranges from 0 to $15 per hour."

In addition to Mr. Wilson, the staff at the center is composed of a psychologist, a psychological assistant, a mental health nurse, and a part-time psychiatric consultant (psychiatrist).

There are also 2 secretaries.

The center also works closely with Wilmington College. It is hoped that in the future it will be possible to offer the students counseling and therapy at the college.

S.P.A.C.

The Wilmington College Student Political Activities Club, S.P.A.C., held their first meeting Wednesday, October 9.

The main topic of business was the election of officers. John Blair, Jr., conducted the voting, and offices were filled as follows: President, A. M. Wortley, III; Vice-president, Jack Di Sarno; Recording Secretary, Dale Donahue; and Corresponding Secretary, Mary C. McGirt.

The purpose of this club is to discuss politics, political activities, local and national, and stimulate students interest in various areas.

S.P.A.C. meets the second Wednesday of each month, or when called by the president. Membership is open to every student on campus, interested in politics. There are no dues, though contributions for various affairs are requested during the year.

Member, John Blair, said "S.P.A.C. is interested in all interested students, regardless of political views.

Senate

The Wilmington College Senate held its first meeting on the thirtieth day of September. A. M. Wortley, III, swore in all members of the senate who had failed to show up at any previous swearing in ceremony. It was made known to the senate that Junior Class President, Bill Baugh, had, after all, transferred from Wilmington and that position was vacant.

President of the Senate, Hugh Newkirk, announced that the senate would follow its own rules this session.

It was announced that Miss Hagen, Chief Librarian, would like all the clubs and activities at Wilmington to turn in comprehensive histories of their projects and so that a record of these could be kept. The Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority announced that they would take care of this to the extent that they would accept this date for Miss Hagen. The sorority stressed that it was not assuming the responsibility of contacting each of the clubs for their histories.

Two committees were formed to look into senior parking and clothes hooks for halls and classrooms.

Chairmen for the following boards and activities were sworn in: Fine Arts, Jere Hodgins; Board of Elections, Jerry Ramsey; and Dance Committee, Clinton Hardee.

It was announced that the library will be open on Saturdays. This is being done by the Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority.

Mr. Newkirk asked that his position be supplied with a gavel. Another committee was formed to look into this.

The next business handled was concerning the budget. The only discussion prompted was in re-

Howell, Murphy, Nygren Have Pieces

That the ceramics, sculpture, paintings and other works in the Faculty Show in Kenan Hall are representative of some of this nation's best pieces of art, cannot be denied.

A skilled craftsman in a variety of materials, sculptor John Nygren is a graduate of the University of Nebraska with a bachelors degree in fine arts.

Cranbrook Academy of Art later awarded him a degree as master of fine arts.

reference to the Fine Arts Committee.

There was no change and the budget was passed as follows: Telephone Directory, $350; THE SEAHAWK, $2,900; Senate Treasury, $550; Fine Arts, $3,000; Drama Department, $750; Social Events (dances etc.) $5,500; Fladging, $6,500.

Mr. Hodgins had originally submitted a request for $3,500, an increase of $500 over the previous year's budget. Mr. Hodgins asked the senate to consider adding this much to the Fine

An exhibiting artist regionally and nationally, Nygren got a National Merit Award in the Craftsmen USA 1966 exhibit at the Museum of Contemporary Crafts in New York City.

Nygren's work has been exhibited at the National Invitational Exhibition for the Crafts at the University of Mexico Art Museum. His work was also shown at the Wichita 19th Annual Decorative Arts and Crafts Exhibition in Kansas.

Arts Committee for a much needed projector and an Azalea Festival Show. This would be a traveling art show that would be held on the Sunday of the festival. To get the show Jere said the committee would have to assure that at least one hundred dollars worth of items would be bought. A committee was formed to look into this.

In comparing this years budget with last years, the Dance Committee was the only function to receive a noticeable increase.

RAMPS

It has been brought to my attention that the present facilities on this campus for handicapped persons are nonexistent.

This is especially true for those students in wheelchairs. Ramps and elevators have been constructed in the new Library Building to alleviate this situation but nothing has been done so far to the older buildings.

It would hardly take much effort or even much imagination on the part of the "Physical Plant Engineer" to construct wooden ramps into each of the buildings.

The initial planning that went into these buildings failed, entirely, to take wheelchairs into consideration. Not only do the buildings lack ramps and elevators but, also, the doorways to the restrooms are too small for a wheelchair to get through. There is little that can be done in the way of various labs on campus. These include the science and language labs.

I do not feel that it would be asking too much to build ramps on each of the buildings, as the new Library Building is the only one already possessing one, and to try and take a little more consideration of handicapped students.

COMMITTEES

The Wilmington College Senate held their first putative attempt at a meeting a few weeks ago and the main business on the agenda, seemingly, was the formation of committees.

Every time a motion was made the most obvious way to get around discussing it was to form a committee. A conservative count of the new committees centered on five.

Committees formed were:

1. A committee to look in Senior parking.
2. A committee to look into hanging clothes hooks in halls and classrooms.
3. A committee to look into buying a gavel.
4. A committee to look into the possibilities of a Fine Arts projector.
5. A committee to look into the possibilities of helping to sponsor an Azalea Festival Art Show.

Apparently the easiest way to run a senate is to shelve everything that cannot be immediately resolved. We can easily find this exemplified in our national government and now in the student senate.

The President of the senate has been renowned for his knowledge of parliamentary procedure, and this fame has apparently gone to his head.

One major difference noted between this years senate and last year's is the amount of support the Student Body President enjoys. Last year's president had to struggle with every bill he, or his few supporters, tried to bring forward. Now it is different. The apparent difference lies in the persons serving as members of this senate. They are all members of the same interest groups and therefore will tend to vote the same way.

Something that we feel needs to be pointed out is the fact that the senate seems to be entirely stacked in favor of the present administration. This can be either a bad or good development. Only time will tell. We only hope this will not be a Rubber Stamp Senate.

PRINTERS

We would like to take this opportunity to make an announcement and an apology.

The apology first. We would like to say we are truly sorry for the tardiness of the first paper. This was not our fault, however. Our ex-printer seemed to be more interested in other things than in the well-being of THE SEAHAWK.

This leads us to our announcement. We are, as of the paper you are now reading, making a switch in printers. The new printers will be Lawrence Newspapers in Garner, North Carolina. Lawrence Newspapers does nothing but handle school papers and we anticipate a greater amount of cooperation on their part.

Though they are located outside of town and we must mail in our copy, Lawrence has promised us a faster publication time. It will now take only a week to print the paper instead of the week and a half it took our former printer so the news promises to be more like news than like history.

PAINTERS

Other exhibits of Nygren's work have been at the Gallery of Contemporary Art in Winston-Salem, at Michigan Artist-Craftsman shows in Detroit and Birmingham, Michigan as well as at the 30th Annual Crafts Show in Rockford, Illinois.

Newport News, Virginia is also exhibiting Nygren's work in the James River Juried Show at the Mariner's Museum.

Included in the exhibits are ceramics, glass, and sculpture.

Painter Mrs. Tommye Sue Murphy, exhibiting artist in this state, Texas and Georgia, got her fine arts degree and masters degree from the University of Georgia. She has exhibited with the Associated Artists of North Carolina, Asheville Museum of Art and the Raleigh Museum of Art and in AANC Traveling Shows throughout the State.

A Murphy painting is also exhibited in the Catholic Student's Chapel at the University of Georgia.

Claude Howell, head of the art department, has five recent oil paintings on exhibit for the first time.

Titled "Sun Tan," "Bathers," "The Beachcomber," "Country Store," and "Farmers' Picnic," Howell's paintings, stark and realistic, depict the personality of the coastal area.

Howell's scenes were taken from sketches by the artist over the past 20 years on the beaches and in the fishing villages along the North Carolina coast.

An award winning artist for almost 30 years, Howell began his string of honors in 1940 when he won the IBM Purchase Prize during the third annual North Carolina Artists' Exhibition at Person Hall Gallery in Chapel Hill.

Since then he has won five other purchase prizes and awards in the N. C. Artists and Associated Artists of North Carolina shows, in addition to more than 16 awards in gallery shows in Washington, Virginia, Georgia, and in Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Raleigh, Rocky Mount and Greensboro.

Howell has exhibited in galleries throughout the United States, including the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. and the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

He was an instructor at the North Carolina Governor's School in 1965, and is credited with illustrations in at least two books by North Carolina authors.

Adcock Heads Music Dept

Under the direction of Mr. Adcock the music department seems to have a most promising future. The talent transcends that of normality and the spirit is towering. It seems that the many years of determined work has paid off for the students. Though only one concert is planned for the near future -- The College Chorus, December 2, at Temple Baptist Church. Mr. Adcock explains that "we haven't been together long enough to get things ironed out" then with a spirit of enthusiasm he stated "after we see what we have we will schedule the events as they come."

Already the "Top Twelve" have received several requests for performances but have had to reject them for lack of practice. They sound excellent but you have to be sure. The accompanist for the group is Miss Linda Batchlor. For those whose mind is void of music terminology and procedure, as mine, the group is divided into four sections, consisting of: soprano, Sharon Higgins, Dianne Braak, and Brenda Taylor; alto, Sherron Blake, Linda Rackley, and Dru Farrar; tenor, Eddie Thompson, Claud Page, and Terry Wortley; bass, Paul Rodrick, William Persall, and Edward Earl Lockamy. This group is under the direction of Mrs. Anne G. Darden and Frank Honey.

The question may arise as to what happened to Mr. Hudson. Well he is now at the University of Indiana working on his doctorate in music. We wish him success. Mr. Adcock is doing a fine job as acting head of the department. Our compliments to you. There has been a fortunate addition to the staff this year, Mrs. Simons, instructor in piano and teacher of music education. The best of luck to you, Mrs. Simons.

The music department at Wilmington College is one of which every student can be proud. Every one in the department works to achieve excellence and if this type of spirit prevails the goals are infinite.

Kappa Tau Epsilon

Since school has started, the Tekes have been occupied with getting out and meeting new freshmen, sophomores, and upperclassmen for the first rush of 1968-69," stated George Crouch, a Tau Kappa Epsilon Brother.

"After much preparation, the week rolled around with a big turnout for the Smokers at TKE House," continued George.

After rush, the Tekes planned week-end entertainment for the rushees. Friday night a party in honor of the rushees was held at the TKE House.

The Saturday night party was held at the Edgewater Club, where the Sounds of Tyme provided the music.

The Tekes plan to devote the remainder of fall quarter to school work, pledge training, and an occasional party.

Prince On Parking

I have been approached by several seniors who feel very strongly that a Senior parking lot should be re-established.

It pleases me very much to say that we will be able to have a senior parking lot but that we (the seniors) will have to take care of it. This includes policing the area to make sure that only seniors will be using it.

The seniors will have to wait until the latter part of October before this can be completed.

I would like to say that I am personally pleased to see that some seniors are proud enough of their status not to want their only privilege taken away.

An announcement will be posted around the campus a week prior to the time when a senior parking lot will become open to only seniors again.

Noted Scholar To Present Shakespeare

The Fine Arts Committee of Wilmington College will present Mary Godwin in "Favorite Women from Shakespeare's Plays" Friday night, October 18 at 8:30 in the Roland-Grise auditorium. All college students are urged to attend. No admission will be charged. Miss Godwin will present several scenes in appropriate costume portraying Portia from "The Merchant of Venice," Lady Macbeth from "Macbeth," and Rosalind from "As You Like It."

Mary Godwin, the daughter of a Judge, was born in England. She began her career as a concert pianist, studying under such great teachers as Tobias Matthay and Gustav Holst. Though at an early age she obtained her degree at the Royal Academy of Music and won many open awards, she decided to forsake her promising musical career for the stage. She worked with Dame Sybil Thorndike, Sir Lewis Casson, and Sir Tyrone Guthrie. The classical theatre being always her great love, most of her stage work has been in Shakespeare. She and her husband - Earle Grey - went to Canada on a British Council Sponsored tour and remained there to found Canada's first professional Shakespeare Company and Festival in Toronto, which they organized and operated for ten consecutive years.

Mary Godwin has played most of the great roles in Shakespeare, and since her return to England has given Costume Recitals in many parts of that country. Her great interest in medieval costume - a consequence of her Shakespearean work - led to a close study of Monumental Brassess, on which she lectures, illustrating this romantic subject with delightful Brass Rubbings taken by her in old English Churches.

Her great love for travel has resulted in fascinating talks in countries such as Greece, Egypt, The Holy Land, islands in the Mediterranean and Canada.

Miss Godwin has the recommendation of the British Council and the Arts Council of Great Britain.

"Well, we're all very happy about going national," beamed Diane Sellars, when asked her reaction to Sigma Phi Sigma's transition from a local sorority to a national colony.

National status brought a change in the name of the sorority. It is now Zeta Tau Colony of Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority.

"We have to learn all the pledge education material until we have sufficiently completed our education," explained Diane. "Then we will be installed as Zeta Tau Chapter."

Notification of the acceptance of Sigma Phi

Sigma's petition for membership with Zeta Tau Alpha was received September 27.

The colonization ceremony was held Friday night, Oct. 4, at the home of Ellen Dunn, one of the sorority sisters.

"The anxiety felt by all the girls was tremendous," stated Ellen.

Melta Granger added, "We were all very anxious and very nervous."

A buffet dinner followed the ceremony.

The president and vice-president of Zeta Tau Alpha at Duke, and Mrs. Jerry Ward, Providence Advisor, were present to install the sorority as a colony.

Currently, Miss Jeanne Manley, who travels for Zeta, is in Wilmington to assist the colony with its training.

PI KAPPA PHI

The Gamma Theta Chapter of the Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity held its Fall Rush Party at the American Legion on Saturday, October 5, featuring music by "The Sounds Unlimited."

Bids were given out and 10 men joined the ranks of Pi Kappa Phi as pledges. They are: Terry Austin of Marshville, N.C.; Ghazi Bidwan of Palestine, Jordan; Larry Brammer of Hickory, N.C.; Scottie Daughtry of Jacksonville, N.C.; Scolie Dean Dunford of Southport, N.C.; Randy Gore of Richmond, Va.; John Pollard of Wilmington, N.C.; Luis Vega of Beauville, N.C.; Terry Walton of Vowinkel, Penn.; and James Wolfe of Wilmington, N.C.

At its regular election of officers in October, the Fraternity chose Bill Johnson to fill the position of fraternity secretary.

PHI MU

The sisters of Phi Mu recently had a house party at the beach to serve both as recreation and as a planning retreat for the current school year.

During the week of the house party, 5 of the sisters served as official hostesses at the grand opening of Hercules, Inc. Those assisting included June Grumbles, Sara Rivenbark, Sharon Blake, Jane Rogers, and Chris Deasy.

Delta Epsilon

The Delta Epsilon Fraternity had its first rush in their new house during fall rush week.

Hap Hazzard, rush chairman said "We had a very successful rush and we hope to have some good pledges this quarter."

FIRST SPORT - SOCCER

By BILL FRANKS

Wilmington College begins its athletic season this year with soccer. The team, under the leadership of coach Charles Sproles, is sporting a one and one record. The Seahawks trounced South Carolina Baptist thoroughly in a 4-1 dual away in South Carolina. They then lost a heart breaker to Belmont Abbey when the Abbots kicked the only goal of the afternoon in the fourth quarter. The home squad won two previous exhibition matches earlier in the season against a non-conference team.

The overall quality of play should be greatly improved this year by the addition of two players from south of the border where soccer is the national sport. Manuel de Haro, a transfer student from Caracas, Venezuela, and Alvaro Zuiros, a native Colombian, are showing a great deal of spirit and individual skill.

The squad is relatively small this year, but substitutions are infrequent in close matches. The twenty-one member aggregation is, generally speaking, a year wiser and a year tougher. What does seem to be lacking in experience is more than equalled by a tough competitive spirit and a great team unity and pride. The two Latins have added a good deal of knowledge and poise to the team with their superior experience.

After the highly successful opening 4-1 victory over South Carolina Baptist the Seahawks lost their second match to Belmont Abbey, 1-0 at Wilmington. The goal was scored late in the game by the highly rated Belmont Abbey squad.

The "Hawks face another top contender on October 10 when they tussle with St. Andrews College from Laurinburg. With more of the same hustle shown thus far, and with some adequate student support and attendance, the soccer team should enjoy a reasonable amount of success in the ensuing year.

Students, Administration Meet To Attempt More Acceptable Campus Communications

Invited student leaders and administrative officials attended the second in a proposed series of meetings between the administration and the students Oct. 21 in the Student Services Building.

Gary Chadwick, president of the student body, defined the meeting as "an effort to establish an effective link of communication between the students and the administration".

Students were encouraged to voice their opinions about policies, procedures, and problems around the campus. Various members of the administration were called upon to present reports on designated topics.

The first item of business was a discussion of faculty and student reaction to the method of registration used for fall quarter. Dr. Paul Reynolds, Dean of Faculty, gave the reasons for employing that method, stating the necessity of balancing the class sections in order to prevent overloading instructors and classes.

In a report from President William Wagoner, it was learned that if Wilmington College is successful in its bid to become a branch of the University of North Carolina, the college may expect to receive its university status by July 1, 1969.

A recommendation for university status will be presented December 2, 1968. This recommendation is subject to the approval of the North Carolina General Assembly.

Dr. Darwin Newton, head of Counseling and Testing, stressed the fact that assistance for students having scholastic problems is available in his department. "Not enough students realize help is available," he informed the students at the meeting.

A course on study skills is currently being taught. There is also assistance available for the student with emotional problems which prevent him from studying effectively. Plans for next year include an extension of this program.

Dr. Newton also stated that the closing date to register for the Graduate Record Exam is Jan. 18.

The students were told that a committee has been formulated to work on parking problems. Composed of both students and faculty, the committee will attempt to alleviate many of the problems of campus parking.

Miss Helen Hagan reported that the library will be kept open every Sunday from 2:00 p.m. until 6:00 p.m., starting in November. Zeta Tau Alpha Sority will be in charge of the library on these days.

Plans for the new cafeteria have been delayed slightly, but it is hoped that construction of this building will soon begin. Acceptance of bids for the management of this establishment will depend upon the quality of the firm and not so much upon its cost. "It will probably not be a local concern," stated Dean Thomas Brown.

Hugh Newkirk, vice-president of the student body, raised a question about the increase in the activity fee this year. Dr. Reynolds explained that the increase was necessary to cover anticipated expenses in the near future, but that no definite plans have been made for $4.50 of the $25 fee.

A suggestion was made by Tim Jordon, Senior class vice president, that a portion of that money be used for student affairs, such as for dances. He was assured that the suggestion would be considered.

At a request from Hugh, a break down of the activity fee was given. He was told that $6 covers the student activity fee, $5 goes to the athletic program, $5 goes to the physical education department, and $5 is used for parking lots and other parking expenses.

David Warner, head of the Placement Bureau, expressed regret that only a few Seniors have

Candidate For Governor Pays Visit To Campus

By Renee Hartman

"The chances are good for Wilmington College to become part of the University of North Carolina," Lt. Governor Robert Scott told the "Seahawk" in an interview on October 15.

While Scott believes that "education is a privilege and that students are in college for the purpose of learning," he also believes that schools "must be run by the administration and the Board of Trustees and not to be run by professional students."

"Students should," he continued, "be concerned about the issues of the day and should be able to express their views. But (See Scott On Page 4)

Faculty Lecture Series Presents Fitness Expert

"We're here to have an evening on physical fitness, and I view physical fitness with some aspects of health," began Dr. Thomas K. Cureton, a recognized research scientist in the field of physical fitness.

He continued, "The term physical fitness has been coined in this county as a word that means vigor. It means ability to do things with your body. It's just the opposite of physical disability."

Dr. Cureton was addressing a group of students, faculty, and interested Wilmingtonians at the first lecture in the current Wilmington College Faculty Lecture Series.

"I've been in this work about forty years," stated Dr. Cureton, referring to physical education and fitness, "and I've shared it with people around the world. What do we work on?" he asked. "Well," he answered his own question, "we work with people just like you."

Director of the Physical Fitness Research Laboratory at the University of Illinois, Dr. Cureton is internationally known. He has directed research at the Royal Free Medical College in London and in the Occupational Health Institute in Helsinki.

Of particular interest at the present time are his past memberships on the American Olympic Swimming Committee and the Olympic Medical and Nursing Committee, as well as his research on Olympic swimmers.

His work with Olympic swimmers led to the publication of "Physical Fitness of Athletic Champions". In addition to this publication, he has written numerous other works.

His career, spanning nearly fifty years, includes the direction of some 300 institutes on physical fitness and aquatics, several academic positions at Springfield College, the Berkeley branch of the University of California and the University of California (See Lecture On Page 4)

Cheerleaders Led By Elsie Bossi

Wilmington College's cheerleaders, sporting new uniforms and led by Junior Elsie Bossi, will make their debut November 21, leading the "Seahawk" fans' cheers against Methodist College in the season's opening basketball game.

Freshman members of this year's squad include Pat Corcoran, Wilma Bossi, Gerri Murdock, and Jan Smith.

Sophomore members include Shirley Sikes, the cheerleaders' treasurer and Judy Thompson, who is publicity chairman. Tryouts were October 9.

Olympic Aftermath

By BILL FRANKS, Sports Editor

If you were in front of your television set when the awards presentation for the 200-meter dash in the Olympic Games was given, you may have been surprised to see gold medalist, Tommy Smith, and bronze medalist, John Carlos, raise black-gloved hands in silent protest while the National Anthem was being played.

The International Olympic Committee asked the United States Olympic Committee to take immediate action on the incident. Responding to this ultimatum, the U. S. Committee suspended both Carlos and Smith for their "disillusioning demonstration".

To those outside of the United States, the incident have been quite surprising and shocking; but we, as Americans, had no reason to be taken by surprise.

This demonstration was a mere after-effect of the proposed Olympic boycott by black athletes and "sympathizers".

The spiritual leader of the proposed boycott, Harry Edwards, a former professor of sociology at San Jose State, says, "Athletes are on the field for maybe four hours a day; the rest of the time, they're in the same garbage heap that most of the black people in America live in."

Tommie Smith, world record holder and Olympic gold medalist in the 200-meter dash, is the most likely leader of any such a movement, because of his prestige as a champion athlete, and his ability to put in words the emotion of the "angry black athlete." But why should black athletes be angry; after all, haven't athletics given Negroes opportunities never before offered to them? Why should black athletes want to demonstrate and protest?

The answer is as simple as it is obvious. The boycott which never came off, and the demonstration that did, just "dramatized racial injustice right here at home," says Harry Edwards.

Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee thinks that "it seems a little 'ungrateful' to attempt to boycott something which has given 'them' such great opportunity". Why can't (they) be a credit to (their) race like Jesse Owens, who at 55 says he's still grateful to sports; yet two years after he won four gold medals in the 1936 Berlin Olympics, he was reduced to racing against horses and motorcycles just to keep from starving.

come into My Parlor said

NO, NO, SAYS NOE

(Editor's Notes This is printed exactly as received.)

Dear Ed:
Suggest that you folks do a little more research prior to writing your editorials. The Physical Plant Department is well aware of the need for the removal of architectural barriers for the physically handicapped.

Your Physical Plant Administration, along with Mr. Thomas P. Brown, the Dean of Men for this institution, attended a seminar at Hofstra University in June of this year for the express purpose of making our campus more accessible to the physically handicapped.

Plans have already been prepared by the Physical Plant Department to install ramps on existing buildings and the possibility of adding elevators to these buildings is under study. However, you are possibly not aware of the fact that funds used for projects of this type are requested three to four years in advance. There is some delay in accomplishing what we want to do.

It is true that the new library building, as well as the new science building have fewer architectural barriers than existing buildings, but there are many barriers in these buildings. Ramps were not properly designed nor were they properly constructed for the convenience of the physically handicapped. Restroom facilities were not properly designed nor were water fountains and other facilities.

It is believed that unless cuts are made in the Education building, that this will be our first building with only minor architectural barriers. The restroom facilities, water fountains, phones, ramps and other minor conveniences are planned in the construction of this building. The only item left out, over my objection, was the elevator. The architects did not want that additional cost.

Felt that I had to advise you that we are interested in making our campus available to the handicapped. Hofstra University, which is supposed to be the most accessible to the handicapped has more barriers than does our campus. The University of Missouri has possibly gone further in making their campus comply with the needs of the handicapped than any other college. The Federal government has given these two institutions financial assistance to make their campus accessible. The federal government has recently enacted a law which requires the removal of all architectural barriers in buildings constructed with federal money. I feel that with this law as a lever, I can demand compliance of the architects in removing architectural barriers to the handicapped from any new buildings to be constructed.

Sincerely yours,
Thomas D. Noe
Physical Plant Administrator

COMMENT ON FINDINGS

There are some individuals on the Wilmington College campus who believe there exists a definite positive correlation between G. P. A. (grade point average), SAT examination scores, intellectual capacity, and student scholastic ability. The previously mentioned persons state that there should be a definite point on the SAT range, G. P. A., and SAT score which should be employed as a criteria for admitting students to college.

The standard error of measurements are the verbal division of the SAT is a plus or minus thirty points on the mathematical division of the SAT examination. Because this is so, one should not consider a precise numerical grade point as an interpretation of scholastic ability or intellectual capacity.

For example, a student who has an SAT score of 800 may have a score which has a range of 770-830, as a result of the plus and minus standard error of measurement. Comparing the 750-800 SAT range and the 801-850 SAT range as to the G.P.A., one notices that there does not exist a definite ratio between the SAT range and G.P.A., i.e. this should not be accepted as a thermometer of the students ability because of the incongruity which does exist.

As a result of the standard error of measurement, plus and minus thirty points, it is inconceivable to employ the obtained score as a valid statement of a student's scholastic ability.

Students Come Out For Humphrey

Tony Heyes, organizer from the Humphrey headquarters, appealed to members of the Students for Political Activities Club to help in the county's organization of a Citizens for Humphrey-Muskie committee.

Heyes is part of the Humphrey's campaign's crash program in the South to show people in the South that there is actual support for Humphrey in the southern states.

Speaking about this crash program, Mr. Heyes said, "What we are doing is an attempt to pull together those people who are willing to stand up and be counted and work for the time left before the election."

Heyes outlined what Humphrey can offer to the students of college age by saying, "Humphrey has had a long and consistent record of aid to education. Also, when he has had any control over his situation, he has had a consistently liberal record. We cannot sit by and let the challenge of Nixon and Wallace go by without raising some form of protest."

"If you students think it is right to protest the war in Viet Nam, you should also be protesting this challenge," he said in reply to a question about Humphrey's position on the war.

When former Eugene McCarthy supporters said they could not feel right in working on the Humphrey campaign, Heyes aply said, "Eugene McCarthy is not running for president right now."

He then added, "It's fine if the Wilmington College students want to sit out this election, but they will not be the people who are hurt by the election. The people who will be hurt are those on a low-economic margin. These people will be taking a backward step. I'm going to appeal to you on these grounds."

"We have to be positive now and then spend the next four years speculating."

At the Sunday meeting of the Citizens for Humphrey-Muskie, three Wilmington College students, who heard Heyes appeal, were elected to the central committee of this organization. Renee Hartman was elected secretary for the group, and Robert Prince and Marie Bassow were chosen to head the campus organization.

GREEK LINES

Delta Epsilon

"Delta Epsilon Fraternity is still here and kicking!" exclaimed Delta Epsilon Brother Hap Hazzard. "Gonna surprise ya'll 'fore long," he continued, hinting that the fraternity will soon have news to report about national accreditation.

Hap stated that Delta Epsilon recently entertained Zeta Tau Alpha and Phi Mu at what he called "the first real Greek type 'mixer'."

"Delta Epsilon extends congratulations to Sigma Phi Sigma on their national affiliation with Zeta Tau Alpha," said Hap.

Tau Kappa Epsilon The TKE Fraternity has been running smoothly during the first weeks of school," states George Crouch. The entire chapter will be looking forward to the many aspects of an eventual quarter which this one will prove to be," he promises.

After rush, the Tekes initiated Bill Raynor, Donnie Summerlin, Raymond Richard, Bob Britt, Henry Green, Chuck Wheeler, and Wayne Kelum as the new pledges. The brothers are very pleased with the pledge class and have been helping the pledges work with the brotherhood.

The Tekes are currently practicing for Greek Week events, which will be coming up very soon.

Pi Kappa Phi

"This past weekend, a group of energetic Pi Kappas ventured into the wilds of Culowee, N.C., to pay a visit to Gamma Epsilon Chapter of Pi Kappa Phi at Western Carolina University," reports Pi Kap Brother, Denny McCaughn.

The Pi Kappa Phi social Chairman, Mickey Corcoran announces the following events: a stag party for brothers and pledges, followed by a Halloween party; IFC Weekend; and a trip to Tau Chapter at North Carolina State University.

Included in the events of the next three weeks is a proposed hayride.

they should not try to dictate the policies of the college."

When asked about present disenchantment among many young persons with the Democratic Party, Mr. Scott stated that he believes this party still has room for the young people of the country.

Mentioning the fact that in his campaign for governor, he has made every effort to get the support of the young people of the state, Mr. Scott said this effort has "paid us great dividends in terms of support."

"If the Democratic party continues to grow, we are going to have to have this support. We want this support if we are going to continue to be the dominating party," he said.

Scott Addresses SPAC

Lt. Governor Robert Scott, candidate for governor of North Carolina, made a brief stop on the college campus during his campaigning visit to Wilmington, October 15. While in campus, Mr. Scott made a short speech to the Student Political Activity Club who had invited him to speak.

Speaking of his ambition to be governor, Mr. Scott said that what he wanted to do when elected was to plan a blueprint for the future of the state.

"With respect to the future, the state is growing rapidly. It is time to think about where we want to go with our times. It's not too soon to think about rapid transit," he said.

"More and more of our young people like you want to continue their education. And I hope sincerely that when you complete your education, you chose to remain in North Carolina. I hope that we as a state can so conduct ourselves to make you want to stay here."

"We don't want to face the turn of the century--only 32 years away--unprepared. If we plan now, we can concern ourselves with the problems we think we might be facing. We will be planning for your future and mine."

"It's great to live in these times. If we didn't have problems, we'd be stagnant. I welcome the challenge to tackle some of these problems," Scott said.

"The air is charged with challenges and pregnant with possibilities. This campaign's main issue is the future," Scott concluded.

taken advantage of the services offered by the Placement Office. He encourages all Seniors to go by the placement office and make appointments for interviews with the various businesses which seek graduates from Wilmington College.

Several students were concerned about the new cut policy for freshmen and sophomore level courses. It was explained to these students that these cuts in these courses would result in advisory counseling from one of the deans. However, the counseling is designed to help the students and is not considered disciplinary action.

The possibility of the students evaluating their instructors was discussed. The administration was in agreement that the most effective method of evaluation would be for students to submit an evaluation long after the course has ended. In the future, some system of evaluation might be devised.

The final item on the agenda was recognition of a group of students who are planning College Day Programs in an effort to recruit students for Wilmington College. Bill Harrell, chairman of the group, asked for suggestions and volunteers for these programs.

Another meeting is planned for next month. This third meeting will be open to the entire student body.

versities of Wisconsin, South Carolina, and Illinois, service on a number of national committees, and commissions on physical education; a consultantship to the U.S. Naval and Air Force Headquarters of Physical Fitness, and a lecturing position with the President's Council on Physical Fitness.

A Founding Fellow of the American College of Sport Medicine, Dr. Cureton also holds fellowships in the Society for Research in Child Development, the American Association for Health, Physical Education, and Recreation, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American School Health Association, and the Royal Society of Health.

About 500 people each year forms what he calls his "experimental pool of people". Dr. Cureton conducts tests to discover whether people in these pools improve in physical fitness. He saw improvements in some of his subjects for as long as ten years, and that is as long as the experiments with them lasted.

Dr. Cureton explained that the President's Youth Fitness Program was formed to help insure the fitness of school children. "We feel training children to get the most out of their abilities is important."

In his lecture, Dr. Cureton was particularly concerned with the problem of the lack of physical fitness in adults. "The area of physical fitness that's most important is that of adult fitness," he said. For that reason, President John F. Kennedy changed the name of The President's Council of Youth Fitness to simply the President's Council of Physical Fitness.

Dr. Cureton stated that adults need a program that involves burning a sufficient amount of calories. In his experiments with isometrics, he found it obvious that these exercises fell short of what was needed. Experiments have also proven that vibrating machines use to "take away the flab have been a big fizzle".

"Adaptation is the heart and soul of physical fitness," he stated. "You do not get in a week; you do not get it in a month; you do not get it in six months."

Dr. Cureton mentioned that jogging has become very popular. He and his experimental pool had a lot to do with popularizing this sport. They started a program called "Run for Your Life" in conjunction with the YMCA. Displaying a picture showing Dr. Cureton "running for his life" in a cemetery, he asked "What's a sixty-five-year old man doing running through a cemetery?" Maybe he's looking for a good spot!" he quipped.

Dr. Cureton concluded his lecture by showing slides which demonstrated the difference in living an active life and living a sedentary life. One point brought out in the slides was that "The growth of emphysema in this country is just parallel to cigarette sales. Emphysema is the fastest growing disease in this country."

After the lecture, Dr. Cureton led a group of physical education majors in demonstrating exercises for physical fitness.

Phi Mu Fraternity served refreshments.

The Platters To Open Homecoming.

Senate Charters New Campus Clubs

Since the last edition of the SEAHAWK, the Student Senate has endorsed the new parking rules, chartered two new campus clubs, discussed plans for homecoming, helped in the reorganization of the SEAHAWK, and decided to have an amendment to the Student Government Constitution.

Vice President of the Senior Class, Tim Jordan, was first appointed to head a committee to look into senior parking privileges. As Tim reported to the Senate, "When the Committee met it was noted that parking regulations on campus were not up to par."

Tim was also on a committee composed of Dean Thomas Brown,

Platters To Open Homecoming Festivities

Homecoming activities for 1969 will be the best yet, according to the Homecoming Committee which has recently been formed.

Opening the Homecoming festivities will be a concert by the Platters Jan. 31. "We've never had a concert at homecoming before," said Dance Committee chairman Clinton Hardee. "This year we thought it would be a good idea to have one since all colleges have them -- and we could make the effort."

Bands have already been booked for Feb. 1 and 2. Friday night Bill Plant Engineer Thomas Noe, and Head of the Judicial Council Terry Wortley, to check into the parking regulations.

New clubs chartered by the Senate were the Chess Club and the Society of Physics Students.

After hearing a report from Chairman of the Dance Committee, Clinton Hardee, (see related story, page 1) about Homecoming and problems of the Dance Committee, the Senate decided they would sell tickets for the Platters concert during the Homecoming Weekend.

"We'll commit ourselves to selling the tickets," Speaker of the Senate Hugh Newkirk told the senators. "It's our part of the deal. There is no doubt that we can get together and do it. Someone is going to have to really push this thing, going to have to take it and go with it."

Tickets will sell for one dollar to students. Students may purchase only two tickets. This prevents students from getting tickets to give to friends who are not in college.

Jerry Ramsey, Chairman of the Board of Elections, told the Senate at its last meeting that two senate seats from the sophomore class are vacant. There is also no President of the Junior Class.

Deal and the Rondells will be playing following the game with Augusta College. Saturday night the Originals will provide music for the dance.

In charge of the Homecoming Parade being planned is Bob Wiard. Ann Stephens is planning the halftime show during the game. For the concert, Bill Harrell heads the advertising and Dickie Powell, seating arrangements.

And, as Clinton has said, "The success of the whole weekend will depend on student participation."

Money, Facilities Worry Committee

Finding a band which will fit the budget of the Dance Committee and the facilities of the college is not an easy task Clinton Hardee, chairman of the dance committee, has learned.

"We have such a limited budget, only $5500, and we could actually spend that much on one band and still not get what we want," said Clinton. "And prices for bands, are jumping like crazy."

Also, many bands will have certain stipulations in their contract which the college is unable to fulfill because of inadequate facilities on the campus.

At the present time the Platters who will be appearing in concert during Homecoming are pre-

Sounding Off

As a Senior in this institute of higher education, I profess that I am extremely interested in all aspects of collegiate life. I would like to acknowledge the past achievements and contributions that the Senate has made to Wilmington College. Concerning the current Wilmington College Senate, I would like to take this opportunity to remind the student governmental body that they are the elected representatives of the student body, and consequently should act with the best interest of the majority of the student body as their primary concern. A representative body, for example, the Senate, is not a private club nor should it convene without publishing an agenda--which simply consist of a chronological list of the dates, and times that the Senate is officially scheduled to meet. I am positive that the Senate Parlamentarian will attest to the previous statement. Perhaps I have been too hasty in my analogy, in equating the Senate with a private club, but I would like to mention that the Senate meetings are supposed to be open to the public. It would be proper and considerate to post individual Senate meeting dates in order that interested students may attend and observe the manner in which this representative student body operates and initiates legislation.

Committee Worries

sending something of a problem to the Dance Committee.

The fee for the Platters is $2250. This, according to Clinton, doesn't include the Public Address system they require. The system in the gym is inadequate which means the Dance Committee will either have to rent or buy the proper system.

The Platters want certain lighting during the concert, but there is not yet the proper lighting for the gym for a concert.

The committee has to find a stage for their performance which will have room for the five-piece band, a piano -- which the committee has to provide -- and the Platters themselves. This stage also must be large enough to provide room for the Platters to give a decent show.

"The stage we have is too small," Clinton said.

"You said 'utter simplicity,' right?"

"We presently believe we are going to be able to find one, but if not, we will have to build one."

To book a band Clinton calls different booking agencies to see what they have open on the particular date of the dance. "Of course," says Clinton, "they want to know how much you want to put into a particular date. I'll tell them and then they'll list off say 10 or any number of bands and give you a choice." From this list, the choice is made.

Before the selection is made, however, Clinton goes around with the list and asks various people "Suppose we have so and so? Have you seen this group before? Are they good, are they bad?"

Chorus Presents Concert Of Sacred Music

The College Chorus presented a concert of sacred Advent and Christmas music Monday, December 2 in Temple Baptist Church.

The Christmas Cantata, "Puer Natus," by David H. Williams was the highlight of the concert which featured soloists Dianne Braak, Brenda Taylor, Betty Frink, Eddie Thompson, Paul Rodrick, and Eddie Lock-

"I try to ask as many people and get as good a cross section as I can -- and from that I make a selection," he commented.

Although Homecoming is the most important weekend of the year, the May Dance also has to be taken into consideration. This year, says Clinton, the Dance Committee is going to try finding a decent place off campus for the May Dance as well as trying to have an orchestra for it instead of a band.

"We try to come up with as good a group as we can get for the money we do have," Clinton concluded. "And you can't get big name entertainment if you don't have the money."

amy. Guitar accompaniment for one of the numbers in the cantata was furnished by Craig Martin and John Richardson.

The 42-member chorus, under the direction of Frank K. Honey, also sang several anthems and two motets by Mozart. Gordon Keifer and David Allen played the Recorder and Indian Tom Tom drum in one of the anthems.

SORRY--The Drama Department was sorry during the production of J. B. when it had to turn people away who wanted to watch the play. Wilmington College has money for an auditorium. Isn't it a shame that it cannot meet both demands. Sure would be nice to have a theatre on campus...

Accounting Club Begins On Campus

Bringing interested business students in touch with the business world is the purpose of one of the newest clubs on campus, the Wilmington College Accounting Club.

The Club meets the second Tuesday of each month at 7 a.m. for breakfast in a local restaurant. An address by a guest speaker will highlight each meeting.

Membership in the club is open to any interested student who has completed Accounting 202.

Which Way To Go -- Dance Committee chairman Clinton Hardee and Parade chairman Millie Bowden listen as Bob Wiard, Homecoming Chairman, describes what he thinks the parade route should be.

Campus Set For Homecoming Activities - Concert, Dance

By RENEE HARTMAN

The Platters will begin 1969's Homecoming Festivities Jan. 30 with a concert in Hanover Hall.

Activities for Friday, Jan. 31, will start with a parade in which the members of the homecoming court will be featured. This parade will end around the bonfire and pep rally.

That night faculty members will challenge students in a student-faculty basketball game beginning at 8 p.m.

Following the game there will be a dance in the Pub with music provided by Bill Deal and the Rondells.

The old-timers basketball game will kick off Saturday's activities at 2 p.m. Also that afternoon there will be a college open house for the alumni and interested people in the community.

The Homecoming Queen will be crowned during the halftime of the Homecoming basketball game with Augusta College. The Originals will play for the dance following the game.

Members of the Senate will be selling tickets to the Platters concert between now and the day before the concert. Wilco student tickets will only cost one dollar. However, students may buy only two tickets. One section -- the best seats -- will be reserved for Wilmington College students, who must have their college I.D. cards with them to enter the concert.

"We had never had a concert before during Homecoming and since other colleges do, we thought it would be nice this year," stated Clinton Hardee, chairman of the committee, who was in charge of getting the Platters to the college.

Anyone sponsoring a contestant in the homecoming queen contest, must have a float in the parade, Millie Bowden, chairman of parade plans.

She then defined a float as "anything that moves."

Admitting that "we couldn't get any cooperation if these floats weren't required," Millie added, "well, we could, but it wouldn't be as successful."

Millie hopes that a prize will be given to the best float. Faculty members, not connected with any of the participating clubs, will judge.

At the bonfire, which will be built by the Engineers Club, the finalists in the "Mr. Ugly" contest sponsored by the cheerleaders will be introduced.

There will also be a skit, planned by cheerleader Pat Corcoran, during the pep rally.

Bob Wiard, over-all chairman for the Homecoming events, has received replies from alumni who will be parti-

University Status Question To Be 'Settled' By July 1

College President William H. Wagoner said Friday that the question of university status for Wilmington College should be decided by July 1.

The Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina voted to accept Wilco into the system some few months ago.

Wagoner, in an interview asking him at what stage of development the proposal is in now, explained that it is now in the hands of the Board of Higher Education in Raleigh.

A committee of members of the Board of Higher Education will be visiting our campus the 28 or 29 of this month," Wagoner said, according to a telephone conversation he had recently with Dr. Cameron West, Board Chairman.

He added that the proposed visit had not been officially confirmed.

If the group visits the campus, Wagoner said, they will confer with various persons on campus, look over the facilities and make general observations.

Providing the proposal is approved by the Board, the status question then goes to the floor of the North Carolina State Legislature for final approval.

When asked what he felt the final outcome would be, Wagoner said, "I am indeed optimistic."

Noe Says Parking Is Not A Problem

"We have complete all new parking facilities on campus so I feel that we will have fewer problems in finding a parking space," Thomas D. Noe, Plant Engineer, said.

"There are over one thousand paved parking spaces for faculty and students. Approximately 200 of these spaces are for Faculty, Staff, and Seniors. That leaves a paved parking space for every other student who drives a car.

"While each and every student will not be able to park by the building in which they have a class, they will find a paved parking space with sidewalks whereby they do not have to wade through mud and water," Noe commented.

According to Noe, the main thing all students should remember is that spaces with a large white 's' are reserved exclusively for Seniors. Spaces with yellow lines on each side are reserved for Faculty and Staff with a few for visitors. Students should never park in the above listed spaces.

"When parking please remember that you must have parallel white lines on each side of your car. If this is done you should

Students Meet Faculty For "Dialogue" Session

By CARRIE DAVIS

Another meeting to "aid in closing the gap between students, faculty, and administration," will take place Jan. 27.

This will be the fourth meeting in this series of meetings proposed by College President William H. Wagoner.

"We find out that they are thinking; they find out what we're thinking," stated Student Body president Gary Chadwick as he opened the December meeting.

At this meeting Dr. Wagoner gave the latest developments in the college's bid for University status.

Dr. Wagoner noted that while the bid for University status has already passed the University of North Carolina Board of (see "Dialogue Session, p. 8)

Editorials

UNC-W, Absurd?

Few state-level decisions have caused as much controversy as the Consolidated University of North Carolina's expansion to include Charlotte College. The Board of Trustees' decision to include Wilmington College and Asheville-Biltmore in the folds of consolidation has been labelled equally absurd by the critics.

But let's take another look. Despite the patently obvious political overtones, there is some wisdom in the inclusion of these institutions.

Higher education in North Carolina is facing ever-increasing needs. The state's population is rising, and a larger percentage of the larger population is graduating from high schools. What's more, more of these are entering college.

And there are limits on the capacities of the Raleigh, Chapel Hill, and Greensboro campuses.

Look at State, for example. Physical limitations have forced campus construction projects in the expensive high-rise direction. And even high-rise projects can only cram so many buildings onto existing acreage. Similar problems exist at Carolina and UNC-G.

It would be undesirable (even if it were possible) to make the existing universities much larger. Walking distances even now have brought consideration of a 15-minute inter-class break.

Worse is the loss of individual attention to students brought on by mammoth campuses. With freshman lecture classes in the 300-700 range, and funds for hiring more and better faculty apparently limited, enlargement of existing facilities would be unwise.

The concentration of certain disciplines at certain campuses (engineering at State, for example) is valid for its efficiency. But time has proven that all technical learning cannot be concentrated here - Carolina needs some with its med school - nor can all liberal arts be kept here. Engineers must learn the fundamental humanities.

Therefore, the development of full scale universities at Asheville, Wilmington, and Charlotte can, if well planned, provide educational opportunities comparable to those at the major branches. If, for example, Wilmington were to emphasize technical education, it might develop a strong program in industrial engineering, engineering operations, etc., leaving State to concentrate in the electrical, mechanical, and nuclear areas. The benefits of specialization need not be lost.

Furthermore, educational opportunities will be extended to more with the growth of universities in these population centers. Day students naturally pay less.

The argument against these new branches has been that they are far from ready for university status. True, and perhaps their inclusion could have been delayed a bit.

But it's a chicken-egg sort of question. With the influx of state aid coming with university status, A-B and Wilmington will grow at fantastic rates. Look at Charlotte's progress in four years. Look at State's growth and maturity since university status.

To the critics: Look at the potential of these institutions, look at them now. Their potential, and the need for it, make it imperative that we remedy their deficiencies.

See This Flick 2001: A Space Odyssey

It was inevitable that the futuristic atmosphere of 2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY, Stanley Kubrick's MGM Super Panavision and Metrocolor production, should affect the crew and technicians involved in the unique picture.

From the creator of the project, producer-director and co-writer Stanley Kubrick to the hundreds of technicians, there was a feeling of dissatisfaction with modern living. "Modern," it seems, was not advanced enough. It was a natural reaction to an undertaking that minutely pieces together an exciting vision of the future which makes today's existence pale in comparison.

To make 2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY, a technical team was gathered from the corners of the world. Scientific consultants from a dozen nations, including leading space authorities, were constantly at Kubrick's side to give authenticity and guidance to each aspect of this film.

When you spend your days living in the world of tomorrow, the world of today seems obsolete.

NOTE: The ideas and facts presented in the following piece were compiled while I am in the manacles of a deaf and dumb society (jail). These facts were proposed and discussed at a forum of egolitarian humans interested in alleviating some of the ills of our sick society.

Last spring America was shocked to hear that there are, in this land of boundless wealth and abundance, thirty million souls living and dying in sub-human filth and squalor. There are, in this land of surplus, ten million people who are suffering from the effects of starvation and malnutrition.

The parking lot between Hoggard Hall and Kenan Hall, as of January 20, will be closed. The reason for this is that the new cafeteria is to be built on this site. It will further extend back towards the parking lot behind the Maintenance Building.

Previously, the lot was to have been closed January 13, but Noe said that he wished to keep the lot open as long as possible.

After this lot is closed student cars will not be allowed beyond the eastern boundary of Parking Lot "B". Cars proceeding beyond this point will be fined and any car parking in this area will be subject to being towed away at the owner's expense.

Noe advises, "Remember to advise the Physical Plant Office of your new license number when purchasing new plates. This will save you a trip to the Judicial Council."

To answer the cries of these truly "Forgotten People" Martin Luther King formed the Poor Peoples Campaign. Through the campaign he enacted his program "designed to focus the energy and creativity of the poor and oppressed into useful things that translate into power."

The Poor Peoples' Campaign represented the masses of poor who have little, if any, voice in this government. It represented the people in this country who lacked the education and self-confidence to change the system. The Poor Peoples' Campaign was the voice for these oppressed people. Through the campaign the poor repeatedly pleaded with our representatives to take immediate forthright steps to obliterate hunger in this land and alleviate the problems confronting both urban and rural poor. The poor called upon America to redirect its resources and energies into rebuilding and adding meaning to the lives of these people.

The Poor Peoples' Campaign stated its purposes and demands in a platform submitted to the Congress in late May, 1968. Basically it requested implementation of the recommendations set forth by the President's commission on civil disorders. The following is the platform of the Poor Peoples' Campaign. 1. Immediate abolition of hunger in the United States (Secretary Freeman of the Agricultural Department sent 215 million dollars back to the Treasury Dept. because of "the lack of need at the present time"). 2. Adequate jobs for the unemployed and under employed (nine days and 18 hours of the Vietnam War would be sufficient to establish 400 thousand new jobs) 3. Welfare payments brought up to realistically defined minimum subsistence (we spend 57 dollars a year to improve the lot of each of the 30 million poor in this nation while we spend 48 thousand dollars for each American soldier in Vietnam and 1500 dollars for each S. Vietnamese soldier. 4. Firm establishment of school desegregation and quality education for all Americans (we spent 8 billion dollars on defense research and development 4 times the amount we spent for the education of all the elementary school children in the U. S.) 5. A massive program of building and renovation to provide decent housing (two months of the war would pay for 300 thousand new homes) 6. Adequate medical and dental care for all Americans. 7. Law enforcement and judicial system reforms to eliminate all present forms of discrimination.

The day the government burned the shanties of the poor the hopes and aspirations of these shanties also went up in smoke. It burned the vehicle that was to carry the poor out of the depths of adversity and to a new life full of hope for the future with meaning, purpose, and direction. I hope the shanties of the poor represented a redirection of our resources of mind, money, and matter from the insane programs of devastation and ruin into programs aimed at the obliteration of poverty, prejudice and starvation.

For as Aristotle said, "Extreme poverty lowers the character of Democracy."

DAY IS GONE, THE EVENING SPENT
By KENN KEFFER

I press my burning face against
The soothe, cooling surface of a table top,
And watch helplessly the minutes burn out like matches.
Dust-disturbed upon the linens unfolded for the night--
Is settling in the corners of my fingers
And filling the wrinkles of my second shirt.
Now,
The shadows are conspiring with the stillness in this kitchen
To spin a muslin thread that leaves my eyelids sown
Till dawn's faint knocking jars my restless sleep.
Then out of bed to huddle near a morning fire.

Day is over

Perhaps I should have pasted
My eyes to new-washed paisley aprons, Hanging in a wind-swept backyard, beneath the grinning sun.
Perhaps, then I might have tasted
The air's fullness in the sunshine,
That till now I've only watched and imagined.
Now the wash is taken in
And occupies the linen's closet space.

The yard lamp needs a bulb; I shall buy a cheap one.
My driveway is a parking lot with parking meters bent
Untimely, throwing up the pennies on the pavement.
Everywhere are children, emerging from the darkness,
And into paper bags, gathering the coinage.
They hide it in their pockets or under dying foliage.
I turn the yardlamp on and they are gone.

I should turn the door and walk
And see the pregnant sky
And know the day was rumor,
As ashes of evening cool on the steps.

Fine Arts - In Review

By JERE HODGIN

The Fine Arts Committee of Wilmington College will hold its third program January 29.

The program will be the film Cyrano De Bergerac, ac. It will be shown in Kenan Hall at 8:30 p.m.

The 1950 film was directed by Stanley Kramer and stars Jose Ferrer.
Ferrer brings new life to Edmond Rostand's immensely popular romantic play first on the stage, then in this film version where his performance brought an Academy Award.

The wit of Cyrano's jest, the beauty of his imagination, the freedom of his spirit, the charm of his insistence on grace in ugliness, the integrity of his character (always in pursuit of the unattainable ideal of perfection in all things) have all been captured in this delightful film.

The film, which the New York Times called,
"a distinguished piece of entertainment," is rich in material for students of language, literature, drama, and history.

Following Cyrano, Henry Vth, acclaimed the best Shakespearean film of all time, will be presented on February 7th.
The remaining two programs to be given Winter Quarter will include Rod Stiger's masterpiece The Pawnbroker, on the 21st, and the silent film Intolerance which rivals Birth of a Nation as one of the best spectacles of the silent era.

From The Faculty:

Change? Yes! But No Columbia

In a paper presented at the annual meeting of the American Council in October of this year, Allan P. Sandler notes today's students are "pressing for greater freedom to direct their own lives both on and off the campus, to shape university policy, and to engage themselves in the controversial and critical public issues of the day.
These goals are pursued with vigor and a variety of tactics that promise for the future. Whatever one's view of these student goals, it seems evident that the sensible resolution of disagreement will depend on ground rules governing university and student inter-action, formulated to be as full, clear, persuasive, and equitable as possible.

An educational community, by its very nature, has a special obligation to accommodate change through legitimate procedures and the exercise of rationality, avoiding both the inertia and conservatism said to be inherent in large institutions and also avoiding any uncritical acquiescence to students' demands because of coercive pressure. If students' viewpoints are pressed in orderly ways, are received without prejudice, and are subjected to the considered judgment of the educational community, the present period of student challenge may have invigorating and constructive effects for university life.
Much of the outcome will depend on the sensitivity and farsightedness of faculties and administrations across the land."

Watch for Captain Sea-hawk during Homecoming activities. He'll be showing his school spirit, will you?

'Hippies'-Seahawk Can Also Be Yours

"Don't" bother to read the Seahawk, unless you are in the fine arts department or a hippie".

Sound familiar? It should, because that one statement has been used by most of the student body, some of the faculty and even members of the administration to describe this campus' most vital organ, the college newspaper.

Seahawk staff members heard that and decided to take a good, objective look at the newspaper they were publishing.

Did it represent only the views of a small group of students, and were these views being forced down the reader's throat?

Some staff members said perhaps they had been ignoring the fact that not only was the paper
the voice of the students, but that its purpose was also to reflect all areas of campus life including faculty and administration.

Others admitted that in the past, the paper had been used to stir up controversy for controversy's sake, and to make proposals that were not beneficial to the college as healthy controversy should be, but had been used as an outlet for personal gripes.

So the staff and a few members of the faculty and administration got together to decide what the Seahawk should be as a campus publication and how to make it that way.

One of the major problems the group faced was a lack of trained staff, so they requested that the college offer a course in basic journalism, to begin this quarter. The proposal was approved and staff members are taking the course.

They then decided to form a sound policy, one which would make possible some sort of unity among the different factions realizing that hip-pies frown on fraternities that political conservatives frown on just about everything, and that everybody has jumped out on a limb "to do his own thing".

The policy they agreed on was to "tell it like it is," no matter how many trees they shake to get the facts, and find out how the campus feels about itself and the community in which it lives.

But it takes more than a gentle breeze to shake the limbs of Wilco's sturdy pines, with everybody sitting around griping and hanging onto his "security blanket," beard or frat pin or basketball letter, or title on an impressive office door.

To establish sound dialogue between splinter groups requires patience and work.

With this issue, the Seahawk wants to let it be known that they are going to shake the trees from Hoggard to the Nature trail, because they care about what happens

It is heartening to us to see that Wilmington College has already begun to institutionalize innovations in such a way as Sandler proposes in its establishment of a joint student-faculty administration discussion group which is open to all interested parties in the college community. It has been reported to us that in the two meetings to date, there has been a marked effort at accommodation on the part of the college staff and a corresponding openness on the part of students in their discussion of grievances and expectations.

It has been pointed out in numerous places that disruptions such as those at Columbia last spring could erupt on almost any college campus in the country. Indeed, they are presently occurring at various colleges on both the East and West coasts.

Let us hope that participation in this discussion group will help bring about constructive change here without the brutality and rancor which seem inevitably to accompany such confrontations.

To this end, we urge all concerned students, faculty, and administrators to be in attendance at the next meeting of this group on Monday, January 27, at 7:30 p.m.
upstairs in the pub.

to Wilmington College.
They know that it cannot become what it has ideally intended itself to be, unless all the factions come together and begin to speak up about how they feel.

What better place to establish dialogue between students, faculty and administration than in the campus newspaper?
The Seahawk is yours.

It is what you as a student, faculty or staff member, decide it will be.
If you aren't willing to put out some effort it goes where everything else without energy goes,
nowhere.

Faculty members, contribute to your newspaper. Consider writing a guest column, an editorial, or critique a film.

Athletes, demand full coverage of all your activities and make sure you provide the staff with adequate information.

Fraternities, sororities, service organizations and other clubs, get somebody from your group to go to the Sea-hawk with your news.

If they think the Sea-hawk stinks, write a letter to the editor telling why; you might be able to get rid of the odor.
Otherwise, the stench will gradually fill up the "nooks and crannies" and the campus will find mouthwash went out with the horse and buggy and it's a long way back to
NOW.

New Library Building Opens

by Connie Jordon
"It's so colorful! There is so much room to study!" exclaimed one student coming out of the William M. Randall Library on its opening day.
The Library Staff, after months of waiting, no longer believes the building is only a mirage, as Assistant Librarian Miss Betty Sue Westbrook once described the building when asked how soon the move would take place.
Talking to the Seahawk the day the move was completed, Russel Peace, Librarian, commented, "We couldn't have been in here today without the strenuous effort of the many students who devoted so much of their own time to make the move a success. It's a relief to finally be in this handsome new building."

Miss Tsai-En Wu added, "We would like to thank those students who helped us move."
"The bigness of it amazes me," said Miss Louise Jackson, who stated, "It's so wonderful to have space to shelf documents and periodicals without having to worry about where to put them."
"We're so completely away from everything else," said Miss Gertrude Cameron, Library Assistant. "It's like a whole world in itself. There's so much working space and lots of room for the students to do individual study."

Sophomore Marilyn Gooden places books on the shelves as they are handed to her by two friends.

A Student Asks: 'What Homecoming'

EDITOR'S NOTE: How students feel about campus issues is important. The Seahawk hopes to give the students a chance to voice their opinions each issue by conducting a survey.

A Seahawk reporter while taking a student poll on Homecoming got this answer from one student, a freshman, "What Homecoming."

Despite the signs and posters on campus describing the Homecoming activities for this year, he apparently had no idea of what Homecoming Weekend was even about.

Other students interviewed gave a variety of answers.

"Homecoming activities should play an important part in each student's college life because it is a time when the student can support his school and have fun at the same time," junior James Anderson believes.

However, sophomore Jack DiSarno seems to disagree. "Homecoming festivities can be summed up in this way: It's a case of mind over matter. If you don't mind, it doesn't matter."

John Pollock, sophomore, said that Homecoming seems to be well planned and should turn out to be a success if the plans that have been made are followed through by the committees.

He also said "The students should do as much as possible to make the weekend a success."

"Homecoming should mean a lot to the college student because it is his opportunity to support this school's activities and demonstrate his school spirit," stated Brenda Barnhill.

Senior Ed Hudson asserts that this year's Homecoming seems to be the best yet. "I, along with many other students, am looking forward to a really 'swinging' weekend."

Freshman Butch Rogers is looking forward to Homecoming as the "most promising thing, entertainment wise, this year."

The students questioned had mixed views concerning the entertainment for the festivities, especially about the Platters. "I feel the Platters were a poor choice. More up to date bands would have been better," one sophomore commented.

"I don't like the Platters," said one senior, but another senior added, "I've met them, they're very good."

One freshman "likes the Platters. I think they've had a lot of good hits and they are really a good group."

"We were lucky to get the Platters at the price we were able to get them for," says Phil Eakins, sophomore.

"I like the Platters very much and think we'll have good attendance at the concert," commented one junior.

One senior said that he would like to see "someone who identifies more with the youth movement."

"I don't really like the Platters," said one senior, "but I think an effort is being made to make Homecoming better this year, and the majority of the students will be pleased."

Platters Concert

An Internationally famous vocal quintet and veterans of stage, radio and television-motion pictures, the Platters, open here in concert Jan. 30.

Part of Homecoming, the Platters will present a program of music ranging from popular songs to current hits.

Veteran musicians, the Platters consist of Herbert Reed, an original member of the group, Sonny Turner, lead tenor, Sandra Dawn, vocalist, John Rodgers, baritone, and Ron Austin, second tenor.

Popular on the college circuit, they travel with their pianist-conductor, Duke Hall, and originator of the group Buck Ram, who also is the composer of several of their "hit" songs.

Ram wrote "Only You," "The Great Pretender," "Twilight Time," "Remember More," and other of their tunes, netting them a stack of gold records.

Voted the World's Best Vocal Group in 1956 by London's new Musical Express Magazine, a private audience with Pope Pius XII in the Vatican and being entertained by the President of Mexico are among their many accomplishments.

They are reported to have "entertained the family of the King of Morocco, Mohammed V, at Rabat who possessed a harem of 30 wives," to have "sang with cold feet in the ice rink in Cortina de Empetzo high in the Italian Alps."

According to their publicity director, they also recently "saw democracy at work in Israel and went to Ghana to help celebrate their newly won independence."

Tickets for the Platters concert are now on sale.

Rogers To Direct Next College Play

Tryouts for "Crime on Goat Island" by Ugo Betti will be held January 20-21 in the S.R.O. Theatre at 8 P.M. This is the second Wilmington College Theatre production of the year.

The play is a convincing demonstration of the self-destructing power of untrammelled sexual passion. It lays bare the animalistic hungers of man in a universe which does not supply a simple moralistic code.

"This is a strong and mature play calling for meet the challenge of its tight and demanding script," said Terry Rogers, director of the play.

The play includes roles for three actresses and two actors. There are many opportunities on the production staff for students to become part of this production. The Wilmington College Theatre practices an open tryout policy and strongly urges all students with any interest to join the staff at the tryouts.

What's Right - Or Wrong - With Wilco?

Alfonso DeFalco - Sophomore - Too conservative.

Anita Laird - Freshman - You don't have enough cuts. If you are old enough to go to college, you should be old enough to decide when to go to class.

Al Templeton - Sophomore - It lacks a college atmosphere because there is no campus housing.

Mary Gardell - Freshman - There are not enough majors to choose from.

Gordon Davis - Freshman - No football team and not enough school spirit.

Jerry Keith - Freshman - Administration does not supply ample classes for students to choose from.

Question: What is right or wrong with Wilmington College?

Editor's Note:

The first of many questions the Seahawk will be asking students, faculty and administration. Questions will deal with campus, local national and international issues.

Attention all Greeks: Marilyn Gooden is your reporter. Make certain all of your news is given to her.

Zeta Tau

Zeta Tau Colony of Zeta Tau Alpha Fraternity has almost completed their pledge training with the help of their chapter counselor, Jeanne Manley.

New Zeta pledges are Donna Marks and Toni Marsari.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

Tau Kappa Epsilon pledges are presently going through "Hell-Week" which will be completed in the second week of January. They will then be initiated into the fraternity.

The brothers are looking forward to a successful quarter with many activities to round out their college life.

Pi Kappa Phi

Joining the ranks of Pi Kappa Phi are new brothers Scottie Daughtry, Dean Dunford, Randy Gore, John Pollard, Louis Vega, and James Wolff.

Delta Epsilon

New Delta Epsilon officers are Charles Eyre, president; John Bates, treasurer; Jimmy Doss, secretary; Ed Norris, sergeant at arms; Wayne Spivey, historian; Al DeFalco, social chairman; Bill Chapman, pledge-master, and Dana McAtee, scholarship chairman.

Gary Wayne Whitehead received the fraternity's scholarship for this quarter.

Mrs. Edith Clements has been employed as housemother for the Fraternity House at 3906 Market Street. The brothers began moving into the house Jan. 5.

Sweetheart for the fraternity is Joyce Harris.

DEFENSIVE FORM -- Hawk reserves Chuck DeLutis (24) and Greg Walters (14) pick up the offense at half court.

By ARTIE GREENE

Basketball season has rolled around again and the Seahawks have been battling hard. The team under Coach Bill Brooks is much better than the 4-11 record indicates. After getting off to a rather slow start, the Seahawks have won 3 of their 4 games. Coach Brooks credits this surge to the improved play of his veterans plus the inspired play by his freshmen.

Discussing the rest of the season, Coach Brooks is quite optimistic. The Hawks face tough competition in the coming weeks. They face the Citadel of the Southern Conference as well as Pembroke and Atlantic Christian. These games could have great bearing on the rest of the season.

In the last two games the Seahawks have been quite impressive. They upset Appalachian State University in overtime by a score of 110 to 102. In this game Chris Speciale led the Hawks with a magnificent performance. The sophomore forward from New York pumped 37 points through the hoops. He also grabbed many rebounds as did big Mike McQuay. McQuay backed up Speciale with 25 points. Chuck

BASKETBALL

DeLutis, Jerry Martin, and Jimmy Hall also played a fine game. They scored a total of 39 between them. Martin also had numerous steals which resulted in easy Hawk baskets. Greg Walters also did a fine job in a reserve role. The next game against undefeated Belmont Abbey was almost a repeat performance. The Seahawks, playing without Speciale and ace reserve Wayne Johnson, rallied to take the contest 83 to 80. Belmont Abbey had beaten Wilmington 96 to 83 earlier in the season. This time the Hawks got revenge. Jimmy Hall, playing perhaps his best game in a Wilmington uniform, scored 26 points in the contest and had a number of assists. Mike Mc-

Dan Whisnantscoring threat

Quay playing his usual brilliant game scored 20 points in addition to leading the team in rebounds. Chuck DeLutis had 17 points and Jerry Martin 10. Ronnie Vance and Randy Johnson also saw action in the game.

Homecoming is around the corner and the Seahawks players are looking forward to it. The game should prove to be a thriller against tough Augusta College.

The Seahawk staff urges you to support the team for the remainder of the season. We also wish the team luck for the rest of the season.

THE HAWK'S VIEW

The Wilmington College Soccer Team had its first winning year since the soccer team was established four years ago. This year the team played equal to any other team in the state.

Two ties kept the Seahawks from playing in the South Eastern NAIA playoffs for the national NAIA tournament. The Seahawks were edged out by Campbell College who had .791 avg. to the Wilco .777 avg.

In the first game of the season the Seahawk team smashed South Carolina Baptist 4-1.

The next opponent to face the Seahawks was the powerhouse soccer team from Belmont Abbey. At 15 minutes into the fourth period the Abbey team scored its lone goal of the game. The Seahawks did not let down but picked up momentum and hammered at the Abbey's goal for the remaining six minutes but failed to score.

The third game of the season was against another soccer powerhouse, St. Andrews.

Within 2 minutes the St. Andrews team scored a goal from 20 yds. out by their All-southern lineman Yank Albwea. The Hawks tied the score in the third period on a shot by Al Quinos. Final score: Hawks 1, St. Andrews 1.

The Monarchs of Methodist College visited the Wilmington Campus the same week that Hurricane Gladys passed along the North Carolina coast. The Seahawks were not bothered by the rain and went to a commanding lead in the first quarter on a goal by Al Quinos. The Hawks then coasted in for the victory.

The next team to clash with the Seahawks were the Pirates of East Carolina University. From the very beginning of the game the Hawks took command of the field. Al Quinos scored the fourth and final goal of the game to give the Hawks their second shutout and first upset of the season.

N. C. Wesleyan came to take revenge on the Hawks because of last year's humiliating 4-1 defeat. In the first period the Wesleyan team was on the defense even before they could get organized. The Hawk goals were a team project.

The final score: Wesleyan 0, Wilco 8.

With one game left to play the Hawks traveled to clash with the Quakers of Guilford. The second quarter saw the Quakers take the lead with a goal just at the end of the half. Late in the third quarter Whisnant and Quinos teamed up on the Quakers and scored the lone tally of the third period. In the fourth and final period the Hawks put pressure and the Quakers goal but couldn't score. The game ended in a tie and gave the Hawks a 6-1-2 record for the season.

Looking back on the season, Hawk offense scored 35 goals in 11 games.

The Hawk defense has to be given a lot of credit. This year the defense gave up only 10 goals. The bulk of the defense was carried by the fullbacks Steve Shambelin, Steve Clemmons, John Leach, and Wayne Barker. They were helped by reserve fullbacks Gary Winters, Gary Gurganus, and Jim Paschal.

The halfbacks carried most of the lead of the whole game because they play offense and defense, they are Paul Livingston and Elmer Mulley. The offense was led by Manuel DeHaro and Al Quinos. The rest of the offense were wings Gene Russ, Phil Oakley, insides Dan Whisnant, Pete Daughtry, Ricky Wells, and Tom Torhan. The goalies were Dayne Smith and Bill Watkins.

FREE BALL -- Seahawks Chris Speciale (42), Randy Johnson (50), and Mike Sabrinski (40) struggle for a rebound against N.C. Wesleyan as Ronnie Vance (30) looks on.

Do you know who Capt. Seahawk is? Sports Editor Dayne Smith does.

STARTING POSITION -- Captain Jim Morrissey shows style that ranks him as the team's top grappler. Morrissey has a 210 record this season in his 137 pound class. He also took top honors in the East Coast Classic Tournament in Fayetteville over the Christmas holidays.

Grapplers Keep Up Winning Tradition

Wilmington has a winning wrestling team. It has been since it began under the direction of Coach Charlie Sproles.

Coach Sproles has a knack for finding the toughest competition in the southeast: teams like Duke and UNC of the ACC Conference, and East Carolina and the Citadel of the Southern Conference. The team is now sporting a 2-0 record.

The team's captain and winningest wrestler is Jim (Pop) Morrissey. He has a record of 210 and won the 137 pound weight class of the East Coast Classic Tournament in Fayetteville during the holidays.

Robert Elliot is another Hawk grappler who has a winning tradition. He also has a 2-0 record this season. Coach Sproles cited these two boys as the top wrestlers so far with other wrestlers not far behind.

The rest of the team members are Pat Sykes, Ed Radford (112), Chaime Baldwin, Chris Stone (130), Drue Adams, John Risley, Robbie Eaves (145), Wayne Barker, Roy Jones (152 or 160), open at 177, Gary Gurganus, Ed Thompson, unlimited. The team is looking for someone to fill the 177 slot. So if your weight is 177, YOUR SCHOOL WANTS YOU.

A FEARSOME FOURSOME -- Lost this year from the Hawks winning soccer team, who ended the season with a 8-1-2 record, are (L-R) Elmer Maley, Gary Winters, Dan Whisnant, and Wayne Barker.

Guaranteed Loan Program Act Passed By Congress

WASHINGTON (CPS) - New legislation which makes it possible for a student to borrow money for educational expenses from his school -- regardless of his state of residence -- has gone into operation under the Guaranteed Student Loan Program.

The new type of loan is authorized by recent amendments to Congress' Higher Education Act of 1965.

In most states, before the amendments were enacted, loans to non-resident students could not be insured. The amendments permit the Federal Government to insure loans made by a college to a student who, by reason of his residence, does not have access to a state or private loan insurance program.

Students may borrow up to $1,500 a year to a maximum of $7,500, including loans made for graduate study. Repayment begins after the student has left school, and may be extended over a period of from five to ten years, with deferment while serving in the military, Peace Corps or VISTA, or during periods of return to full-time study.

The federal government pays all interest charges (7 per cent a year) on behalf of a student whose adjusted family income is less than $15,000 a year, until repayment begins.

Since the inception of the student loan program, more than $1 billion has been loaned to students. The U. S. Office of Education expects that 750,000 loans totaling more than $641 million will be made during the current fiscal year, which closes in June.

afternoon.

The tour will end with a tea in the new library building.

Half-time activities will feature Hugh Newkirk, President of the Senate, as Master of Ceremonies. Last year's Homecoming Queen, Barbara Wentz, will be introduced. The crowning of the new Homecoming Queen will be done by the Captain of the Basketball team.

"The tickets to the concert are going well," stated Hugh; who believes that enthusiasm is very high and that this year's Homecoming will be "the most successful and one of the best we've ever had."

"There's plenty of work to be done," said Bob, "but it seems as if people are hopping on the merry-go-round and things are beginning to wheel out."

"Dialogue Session"

Trustees, "I cannot say to you that it will pass the board of higher education without problems."

"But," he added, "I'm always optimistic."

Dr. Wagoner mentioned the debate about the future name of Wilmington College if it should enter the University system. "North Carolinians seem to be quite adept at getting into hassles about names," he quipped.

Describing the path through the Legislature he explained that the bill will probably go into committees in both the House and the Senate before going onto the floor where it will "hopefully pass."

Answering a question concerning a possible change in the calendar year if the bill does pass, Dr. Wagoner stated, "I don't think that we would be required to change from a quarter system to a semester system."

However, he did not rule out the possibility of a voluntary change eventually taking place.

Tim Jordon, vice president of the senior class, questioned the effect of the possible University status upon the 1969 graduating class, but was told by Dr. Wagoner that, "it would not, it could not be retroactive."

Marshall Crews, Dean of Students, stated that Wilmington College will give just as much to the University system as the college will receive from it. "The fact that Wilmington College has something to offer is often minimized."

Dean Crews also reported on the plans for the dormitories, which Dr.

Wagoner commented was something "I'm not optimistic about."

"It looks to me that the present plans for the dormitories are going to be scrapped," Dean Crews stated.

The dorms will have to be redesigned because the bids received exceeded the appropriations for them.

Although there has been some question of the college losing the money for the construction of the dormitories, Dr. Wagoner assured those present that because there is just cause for delay, it seems likely that the funds will not be lost.

Also during this meeting activities for College Night, Homecoming, and Registration were discussed.

Parade Sets Pace For Festival

Homecoming weekend, one of this campus' most extravagant student and community festivals continues here this afternoon with the Homecoming Parade.

The weekend's activities, which began last night with the nationally known singing group, The Platters, in concert, continue today with the parade, featuring a variety of floats designed and built by the students, will start at 4 P. M.

Riding in the floats will be the seventeen girls who have been nominated for Homecoming Queen.

To enter a contestant in the parade, each participating club was told they must also have a float on which their contestant could ride in the parade.

A float was earlier defined as anything that moved--be it wheelbarrow, car, motorcycle, or horse.

The parade will wind its way from the library to "South 40" parking lot where the bonfire built by the Engineers Club, will be lit. The cheerleaders under the direction of Head Cheerleader Elsie Bosso will lead a pep rally.

During the Pep Rally, the cheerleaders will announce the winner of the "ugly man" contest they were sponsoring.

Tonight faculty members and students battle it out on the basketball court, game time beginning at 8 p.m.

Following the game, a dance will be held in the Pub--school clothes--with music by the Immen. This will mark the second appearance within two years at Homecoming of this group.

Saturday afternoon, alumni and any other interested people will tour the college. This tour will include Kenan Hall where the S. R. O. Theatre and a new Art Exhibition will be on display.

After visiting the Chemistry - Physics building, the tour will end with a tea in the new William Madison Randall Library.

Taking over the basketball court at 6:30 tomorrow night will be the alumni for an old-timers basketball game.

The main event of the evening--the event which no Homecoming is complete without--will be the basketball game with Agusta College, who defeated the Seahawks last year during the Homecoming basketball game.

During half-time, Hugh Newkirk, master of ceremonies, will end the suspense for the 17 contestants and the watching waiting crowd as he announces the name of the Homecoming Queen for 1969.

The homecoming Queen, crowned by the captain of the Basketball team, will be presented roses as well as a trophy.

After the final whistle blows to end the game, college students and alumni and their dates or wives are welcome to come and dance to the music of the Originals in the Pub.

College Budget Money Not Final, Wagoner Says

"The main thing that has been cut out," said Dr. Wagoner, commenting on the college budget was the Business and Economics Building and dormitories."

The North Carolina Advisory Budget Commission cut the $3,359,000 requested by the college down to $1,118,000, $680,000 of which is for a self-liquidating dorm.

Over $100,000 of the requested money was for an on-campus president's house which is no longer needed with the acquisition of the Kenan house on Market Street.

The $480,000 for the business and economics building was cut, along with $219,000 for an infirmary and $63,000 for an environmental lab.

Wagoner did stress that he and the school has not given up trying for whatever they can get from the legislature. "This is not the final word."

Swink Dislikes Plans For New Auditorium

Frank Kenan, nephew of Sarah Graham Kenan, approved plans for the Sarah Graham Kenan Auditorium to be built on campus by the end of the year last week.

When the plans were released, Doug Swink, Chairman of the Drama Department, stated, "This auditorium has fallen far short of what it should be."

The purpose of an auditorium is "not only to house a speaker, but also to house musical performances, plays, ballets and anything like that," said Swink.

THE STAGE IS MONSTROUS IN SIZE AS WELL AS BEING NON-FUNCTIONAL, SAYS SWINK. TWO DRESSING ROOMS FOR BOTH MEN AND WOMEN ARE LOCATED ON ONE SIDE OF THE STAGE. THE BOILER ROOM IS LOCATED ON THE OTHER SIDE.

The plans do not provide any method of getting from one side of the stage to the other. There is also no area behind the stage.

Plans do include an orchestra pit; however, Swink doubts this will ever be used since -- because of the design of the stage -- there is no way to produce a musical or ballet which could employ scenery.

Designing the building was Leslie N. Boney and Ballard, McKim and Sawyer Associated Architects.

SWINK ALWAYS HAD TO TAKE THE INITIATIVE IN WORKING WITH THE ARCHITECTS. ONE TIME WHEN HE WENT DOWN AND WROTE OUT HIS SPECIFICATIONS, THE ARCHITECTS CALLED NEW YORK TO CHECK HIM OUT. "THEY FOUND OUT THAT I WAS RIGHT," SAID SWINK.

"I will take up for the architects in some respects," he said. "Those people, ignorant though they may be as far as the theatre is, have never gone to a college show," Swink believes.

The auditorium is to seat 1000 people. This, Swink pointed out, is unnecessary for the college and the Wilmington community, which is to share in the use of the building.

THE COMMUNITY OF WILMINGTON ALREADY HAS TWO 1000 SEAT AUDITORIUMS. THE COLLEGE COULD NEVER USE THE AUDITORIUM FOR A COLLEGE ASSEMBLY FOR THE ENROLLMENT OF THE COLLEGE HAS AL-

Platters Concert Causes State-Wide Controversy

Contrary to rumor, the Platters did present their concert in Hanover Hall last night to kick off Homecoming activities.

However, Senate members, who undertook the project of selling tickets to the concert, heard Dean Thomas Brown explain the reasons behind the rumor which said the Platters were not going to honor their contract.

This year instead of working through local agent Paul Marshburn, Dance Committee Chairman Clinton Hardee decided he would be able to get the Platters for a cheaper rate by working directly through the Jokers Three, an agency in Greensboro.

A deposit of $250 that had to be paid immediately. The contract was sent to the Jokers Three during the latter part of October.

Following this, Clinton and Brown waited for the signed contract to be returned.

Then about three weeks ago, according to Brown, the general agent for the Platters called from Las Vegas wanting to know where their money was. The deposit had not been received and unless it came within the next few days, the contract would not be honored.

Brown did not realize that Clinton had not worked through Marshburn; therefore, he called Marshburn, who knew nothing about this.

Marshburn called the Jokers Three immediately, but "couldn't get to first base with them." When Brown, after several unsuccessful attempts, contacted a member of the Jokers Three he said "they did things like that and would take care of the $1250 immediately."

Brown informed him that "We don't do things

According to Brown, the Jokers Three had deposited the money and had probably been using it to pay some of their own bills. And never sent "our money to the Platters and the Platters would not sign the contract until they had gotten their money."

Brown and James Price, Business Manager, finally called the State Attorney General--"because that was the only way we could get any action."

The Jokers Three, after the call from the State Attorney General, returned the money to the school.

The check received from the agency was deposited -- "we hope it's good, it hasn't bounced yet," Brown quipped.

Money was then immediately wired to the Platters in Las Vegas. The contract was received by Dean Brown on January 30.

As to the rumor, this began at an Azalea Festival Teenage Division meeting where leader of the group, F. L. Meier, Jr. (Continued on page 4)

Editorials

EDITOR'S NOTE:

We would like to announce four new features in the newspaper. Two of these you have already seen, or at least should have. These are the "Inquisitive Cameraman" and the new opinion survey. The purpose of these two items is to allow the students a voice in issues prevalent in campus, local and national affairs. We hope these polls show us exactly what "bugs" the students on various issues.

The "Inquisitive Cameraman" is a more personal and immediate way of expressing your opinions. These will be permanent features of the paper so this is your chance for self-expression.

Two more semi-regular features coming in the paper are the newly introduced column by President of the Student Body Gary Chadwick and a column beginning next issue by Dr. Wagoner, President of the college.

Mr. Chadwick's column will be a regular feature and will discuss school and senate problems and goals.

Dr. Wagoner's column will discuss his views on students and the administration. It will not be a regular column but will be featured when something important occurs on campus, such as accreditation and dorms. The purpose of this column is to give the average student the official attitude of the various issues.

We hope that these new features will interest the students and prove informative.

Where Is Spac?

As you no doubt notice we have started a feature concerning nothing more than just the asking of a question, no explanation, no further discussion. One question we have not asked that needs asking is "What ever happened to SPAC?"

SPAC, of course, stands for the initials of the Student Political Activities Club, it could stand for nothing.

At this writing SPAC has had only three meetings, one of which was to select a Homecoming nominee, another was to elect officers.

Meetings are scheduled for the second Wednesday in every month or as called by the president of the club. So far one regular meeting has been called after officer's elections and one special meeting has been called to discuss Homecoming.

Nothing has been done in the way of raising interest in the discussion and furthering of politics.

Last year SPAC took part in various on and off campus activities, such as trying to get the late Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King to appear on campus and going down town to the city board meeting in reference to the "Marijuana scandal".

So far this year SPAC has ignored everything that has happened. Not, of course, that anything of importance has happened on the political scene this year. Except, perhaps, national elections, student unrest throughout the world and a few other insignificant activities.

There has been talk that SPAC was going to sponsor a student election to determine student tendencies in the national election. But nothing came of it. Any work done in the support of political candidates was done by individual members through other organizations. The political club tended toward ignoring the entire campaign.

If handled intelligently and well the club could be an asset on campus, but the way things stand now the club will be lucky to be continued next year.

It is time for SPAC to get up off its back and do something.

Homecoming?

The Senate of Wilmington College has spent a lot of time, effort and finances on "Homecoming". But little on anything else.

This year's Homecoming promises to be the best ever, as if that were a valid claim for anything. The festivities include everything from a nationally known group called the "...uh "Platters" to a campus parade. It is even rumored, good heavens, that one group, the "Rondells" actually plays psychedelic rock, how innovative, but of course the group, through the capabilities of someone, did not sign a contract. So now we have the "Inmen" who are "not even rumored to play music" let alone psycho.

Beyond the preparation for the bands, the organization of the weekend has been quite careful and capable. But what does the senate intend to do after Homecoming is over?

The only things the senate has done this year are charter clubs, handle Homecoming and create committees. It will be interesting to witness the first senate following Homecoming and to see if they have anything to do.

Student Body President

Opinions, Observations

By GARY CHADWICK

This is the first in a series of articles which I plan to write concerning us as students and our relationship with the college. In some articles, I'll be giving my observations and opinions as your president on other pertinent matters.

You may or you may not know that as a student, you are just as much a member of student government as anyone else. If you aren't taking an active part, you may well find yourself in a difficult situation if you begin complaining in the future about policies and programs which are being planned now. The reason for this is that now you have a chance to give your views.

The one biggest complaint last year about Student Government was lack of communication. Lack of communication between students and administration, between students and faculty, and even between students and their own student government.

This complaint has brought action this year. Both the administration and the student government have begun enacting corrective measures.

This year one of the biggest boosters in our effort has been the introduction of a student-faculty - administration monthly meeting. The first three meetings have been extremely successful in bridging the communication gap. The reports of the meetings have been in previous issues of this paper so that you could keep posted on everything that is happening.

Other measures which have been taken this year include the consultation of student leaders by the administration on every issue concerning the student decided this year. Another step is the posting of all Student Senate meetings on the Bulletin Board in the pub.

Still another step is this series of articles. If you have any suggestions which may help further the communication cause, please tell one of your student leaders, and we'll see what we can do with it. Also if there is any other matter which you would like to bring to the attention of Student Government or Administration Leaders, just let any of your representatives know about it.

Howell Describes Style

Head of the Art Department, Claude Howell, who describes his style as growing but not changing, presently has a one-man show hanging in the Gallery of Contemporary Art in Winston-Salem.

Entitled "A Summer With Claude Howell," the show represents all the paintings that Howell did in his studio in Kenan Hall last summer and this fall. "Of course, it is all new work," he commented.

When asked about the critical reaction to the show, Howell laughed and said, "Well, it's been fairly good so far, thank goodness. Not too many people have objected too strenuously."

Five oils in this show were first seen in the Faculty Art Show here on campus during the fall. "I hung them here first to see what the reaction would be," said Howell.

"I don't think my style really has changed," Howell said when questioned. "I hope its grown and developed, but there hasn't been a complete break -- no complete change."

"The difference, if there was a difference was that I was concentrating on the commercialism along the coast rather than the fishermen."

"I think the message was that I just enjoyed my painting," he asserted.

Films Of Viet-Nam Issue

Describing it as "Viet Nam from Two Sides", the Unitarian-Universalist Fellowship of Wilmington will present two controversial films representing opposite opinions on the Viet Nam issue. These will be shown on Monday, February 3, at 7:30 PM in room 121, Kenan Hall. All students and faculty are invited.

By showing both films side by side, it is hoped that a better understanding of the viewpoints of opposite sides can be grasped. From the arguments presented, a more balanced view of the Viet-Nam situation may result.

The first film is produced by the U. S. Army and is called "Why Viet-Nam". Distributed by the Department of the Army Audio Visual Support Centers, it emphasizes the results of U.S. efforts toward economic development and the well known domino theory.

The second film was produced in North Viet-Nam. Called "The North-west Fighting Against the United States Aggression", it plays on emotions of sympathy for the underdog. There are pictures of rural people in the fields and view of bombed out dwellings.

For information or transportation to the public meeting, call 256-3589.

SWINK DISLIKES PLAN

READY PASSED THIS MARK.

"What we need is a new dimension -- say like a 300 or 400 seat auditorium," he said.

PLANS ALSO INCLUDE A GREEN ROOM, WHERE PERFORMERS MEET BEFORE THEY GO ON STAGE. HOWEVER, THIS ROOM IS LOCATED OFF THE LOBBY WHICH, AS SWINK SAID, LEAVES ONE WONDERING AS TO HOW THE PERFORMERS WILL GET TO THE STAGE.

The auditorium, to be built in Georgian architecture, will be a two-story structure with three levels.

THERE WILL BE A MASONARY BRICK EXTERIOR FEATURING A SEMI-CIRCULAR PORTICO WITH LIMESTONE STEPS AND GEORGIAN COLUMNS.

The portico includes two entrance doors topped by paneled windows which reach to the roof of the entrance.

The entrance lobby features an 18-foot ceiling with a balcony on the back, reached by circular stairways on both sides.

"THE LOBBY IS GOOD," SAID SWINK. "I DESIGNED THAT MYSELF BECAUSE THEY WERE WASTING MATERIALS."

SWINK GOT THE IDEA FOR THE LOBBY FROM THE AUDITORIUM AT SOUTHEASTERN COMMUNITY COLLEGE IN WHITEVILLE.

Ticket windows will be off the front portico. "But, said Swink, "If it is raining, people buying tickets will get wet since the ticket windows are exposed.

CLASSROOMS AND THREE OFFICES FOR THE USE OF THE DRAMA DEPARTMENT AS WELL AS RAMPS FOR THE PHYSICALLY HANDICAPPED ARE PROVIDED IN THE PLANS.

"I don't think Mr. Frank Kenan realizes what the foundation donated all of this money for. I don't think Mr. Kenan realizes that this Georgian 'white elephant' is being constructed," Swink commented.

Money for the auditorium was donated by the Kenan Foundation last year.

Controversy

told the several 100 teenagers that the Platters were not going to appear. Meier received his false information sometime during the discussions with Marshburn. Meier must have picked up fragments of their conversations and based his assumptions on this, according to Brown.

"And as far as Wilmington College is concerned, we'll never do any more business with the Jokers Three," Brown emphasized.

In other business of the last Senate meeting, President of the Student Body, Gary Chadwick, has promised to have the campus telephone directories out in a month.

Gary's promise came after a discussion of what to do about the directories. Hugh suggested that the Senate might do one of three things: take money out of the senate funds to pay for the printing costs, sell the directories to the students for a small fee, or take on the project of selling the ads themselves.

Civitan and the Circle K club were both asked to see ads, however, neither one did anything towards this goal.

Dean Brown closed the meeting by telling the senators that he hoped "the Senate will get back to normal when it does talk about something other than homecoming."

Budget Cuts

The state advisory budget commission works with the moneys from the state surplus and taxes for the biennium. This committee takes various requests, including those by the schools, and works with priority and value judgments in selecting projects and deciding on cuts on the different budgets.

Dr. Wagoner was quite emphatic on the point that this is only the advisory budget committee and not the final word. The school intends to fight and get as much of the original request as they can.

Committee Adopts Bulletin Of AAUP

Working with Dean Marshall Crews students Helen Huneycutt and Charles Evers presented a revised statement of policy to the Student, Faculty, Administration meeting Monday night.

The first revision the committee made was to change the name of the statement from "Procedural Standards for Disciplinary Action" to "Policy of Rights and Freedoms for Students."

The major change the committee made, however, was the decision to adopt the American Association of University Professors' summer of 1968 bulletin entitled "Joint Settlement on Rights and Freedoms of Students" as the basic guideline specifying policy for Wilmington students.

An extra paragraph was added to the original statement to read: "The rights and freedoms of students as recommended by the AAUP summer 1968 bulletin should be the guidelines specifying the policies of Wilmington College."

This bulletin sets up policies which the colleges may follow concerning a person's rights as a student in an institution of higher learning.

The Preamble to this document states that "Each college and university has a duty to develop policies and procedures which provide and safeguard this freedom. Such policies and procedures should be developed at each institution within the framework of general standards and with the broadest possible participation of the academic community."

The document goes on to define student rights in the classroom, in student affairs, and in off campus activities.

"This bulletin," says Helen, "is flexible enough to work with."

"The statement clearly points out the due process to which the student is entitled," Crews stated.

Wagoner Unveils Policy Statement

College President William Wagoner unveiled a new policy statement during the Feb. 27 Faculty, Student, Administrative meeting.

The statement was drawn up in order that every faculty member and student would know what their rights on campus are.

Titled as "Procedural Standards for Disciplinary Actions" the statement came under fire from most of the students attending the meeting.

Beginning by saying that "The College respects the right of each member of the academic community to be free from coercion and harassment," the statement goes on to say that "Person engaging in disruptive action or disorderly conduct shall be subject to disciplinary action...including expulsion or separation, and also to charges of violation of law."

"Wilmington College prohibits interference with orderly operations of the college, by breach of peace, physical obstructions, or coercion, unauthorized occupancy of college facilities or buildings, or other forms of disruptive action."

The "most important aspect of the document" according to Wagoner is the section which gives the student the right of appeal.

Violators of the regulations may appeal before the Student Appeals Board, the Student Affairs Committee, the Dean of Students, and finally, the President of the College.

Students at the meeting mainly protested the vagueness of the document and suggested that the first thing to do would be to change the name of the policy.

Students Charles Evers, Helen Huneycutt, and Marie Bossow were appointed to work with the faculty and administration on clearing the policy before its adoption.

Senate Gets Extra Money

During their Feb. 3 meeting student senators accepted an offer of money from the dance committee to aid them in putting out the telephone directories.

They also set up several committees as well as hearing reports from Speaker of the Senate Hugh Newkirt and Dance Committee chairman Clinton Hardee about the Platters concert.

The Dance Committee made $2500 profit from (Continued On Page 8)

Location Ideal For Oceanography

By JACK DI SARNO

"In the next year or two" Wilmington College will become involved in oceanography studies, according to Dr. William H. Wagoner, President.

The decision to emphasize marine studies was made late last summer by the Board of Trustees. Following the Board's decision, former Governor Dan K. Moore established a North Carolina Marine Science Council.

Oceanography, or marine science, is the study of the ocean and can be biological, chemical or physical in nature. Marine biology, however, will be one of the specialized areas," says Jack Dermid, member of the biology department. "It's hard to tell yet," said Wagoner, "but I believe students are interested in this." Dr. Paul Reynolds, dean of faculty, added, "A great deal of interest has been expressed."

Financing the studies will be done mostly by the state. However, Dr. Wagoner stated that once the program is started, it would be eligible for limited federal funds.

Graduate work in the field will begin "as soon as the need arises and is approved by the State Board of Higher Education," said Reynolds.

Wagoner explained that the college enjoys the advantage of being the only four year college on the coast and added, "It is our job to impress upon the public the need to take advantage of our own resources."

The Biology Department presently offers three marine oriented courses. Also, increased emphasis on marine aspects will be given in the survey courses, according to Dermid.

"In the future, we hope to have a marine biology lab nearby," Dermid added.

Dermid described oceanography as "an exploding field."

Lecture Committee To Present South

The Faculty Lecture Committee of Wilmington College will present Stanley South as seminar leader and guest lecturer on campus Feb. 25 at 8 p.m. in Kenan 121.

South is currently staff archaeologist with the State Department of Archives and History in Raleigh, where he is setting up the Laboratory of Historical Archaeology. He is a former resident of Wilmington, and was in charge of the excavations at Brunswick Town State Historic Site from 1958 to 1968.

South has recently completed a special archaeological assignment in South Carolina, where he was under contract to the Institute of Archaeology and Anthropology of the University of South Carolina.

Together with a team of archaeologists and historians he uncovered remains of much of the original settlement of Charles Towne, in preparation for the observance of Charleston's tercentenary in 1970.

Students interested in history, archaeology and ceramics are invited to attend the seminar on that day in Kenan Hall at 3:30 p.m. This will be conducted by South, Terry Rodgers, John Nygren, and Dr. Gerald Shinn.

Director Lauds Cast Of Production

A "fine cast" has been assembled for the second Wilmington College Theatre production "Crime On Goat Island" according to W. Terry Rogers, director.

Appearing in Ugo Betti's modern tragedy is Beth Grant as Agata, the widowed mother maintaining isolation over her young daughter Silvia played by Donna West and Agata's sister-in-law Pia played by Abbe Godwin.

"Into the world of woman comes the beguiling Angelo played by the veteran actor David James. Rounding out the cast is John Blair as Edoardo the handy man who comes once a week with supplies for the women," Rogers said.

The cast will be supported by the talent of Jere Hodgkin and John Blair as assistant directors, Tony Rivenbark is in charge of lights for the show.

John Richardson is composing the music. David Henry will handle make-up and Marion Hodgkin will place properties. "The insanely inspired direction will be handled by W. Terry Rogers with Doug W. Swink thunderingly constructing the set that Anne Fitzgibbon will deliberately paint with ease," Rogers quipped.

 Discipline ***

Procedural Standards for Disciplinary Action. Sounds like a funny name for a document designed to protect the students. It is however, a document originated as an aid in allowing the students to know their rights in the occurrence of any problems on campus. A document with high ideals that almost got lost on the field of school politics.

A little while ago Duke University had a student disturbance involving the cafeteria, or something, and the school did not have any regulations protecting the rights of the students, and so the town police were called in to do the job of the school officials. Even with all the ensuing trouble experienced by Duke officials, Duke still does not have any safeguards for the students, and they can be expelled at any time.

To prevent this from happening at Wilmington College, a few members of the faculty and administration decided to draw up a document defining just exactly what a student could expect in the case of student rioting or individual action.

This document was presented at the regular monthly meeting of students, faculty and administrators to allow the students an opportunity to voice any objections they could have to these procedures.

Sounds great! But somewhere something happened. The wording was to remain vague to allow a liberal interpretation in favor of the students, but this wording tended to be vague to the extent that many of the students attending this meeting could not quite decide or even attempt to decide what some of the references meant.

The greatest vagueness discussed was the statement pertaining to the various activities prohibited on campus. The passage in part reads, "Wilmington College prohibits interference with the orderly operations of the college, by breach of peace, physical obstructions... or other forms of disruptive action." What exactly is a disruptive action? And who exactly is to define one?

The other main problem that developed was the presentation of the document. A few students had been notified that something big was going to be presented, and, if they wanted a say in the matter, they had better come, but the exact context of the thing was not disclosed.

If the real purpose of the document is to stop student rioting before it has a chance to begin, as some believe, then it almost failed miserably, nearly causing a riot itself.

This sudden presentation of the document, coupled with its wording, almost ruined the fine purpose the document had originally been designed for.

Surprisingly, considering the unhappy relations between students, faculty and administrators on many campuses, the different factions present decided to discuss these procedures and formed a committee of students to take the document and rework to a point that the students would feel it was more acceptable. The results of this student committee was to be presented at another specially called meeting of this group on February 19. The document in its new form will then be discussed for its acceptability by both sides.

This document, if it does nothing else, has proved that the different groups at Wilmington College still have the good sense to talk to one another before they run off half-cocked. This could usher in a new era at Wilco, one of understanding and discussion that few institutions have enjoyed. This is not to say the students or anyone will lean back and allow another group to push it around, but that all groups can air their opinions and problems and work for a better and more complete institution.

Threat To Peace?

Opinions, Observations

The Student Services Building (better known as the Pub) has been a constant source of complaints from students, faculty, and administration ever since I began school here in 1965. The loudest complaints have come, as usual, from us, the students. Many times, we complain about problems which are so far removed from us as to make them insoluble by us. This is not, however, the case with reference to the Pub. The Pub is solely for the convenience of the students. It is also paid for largely by the students now (you wonder where your activity fee is going?), and will soon be totally maintained by students. Half of the increase in Student Activity Fee will be spent on maintenance and capital improvements of the Pub. Your student leaders have had and will continue to have a substantial say in where and how this money will be spent. But remember, it is still your money.

The very fact that the Pub is maintained by and for the students is reason enough for us to begin showing a little more pride in it. Many of us do not pay for the maintenance of our home, but hardly any of us treat it as badly as we do our Pub. Do you throw trash or, dump cigarette ashes and butts on your floors at home? When you play bridge at home, do you use the table as a writing tablet to keep score on? Do you show the same disrespect for your brother or sister which you do for your fellow student by leaving the able in the condition of a pig sty?

Of course, you don't do these things in your home. Then why do them in your Pub? I have heard the excuse that the trash cans aren't near enough. I don't believe many of us would use them if there was one on every table in the pub. It just isn't all that difficult to pick up your trash when you are through eating and dispose of it in the nearest waste paper basket. I can't for the life of me see why we would find it necessary to keep bridge scores on the table when, ninety-five per cent of the time, there is a sheet of paper within ten feet of us. One other thing, our senate every year is forced by our fellow students to buy a new supply of ash trays for the Pub. If you see someone put one in his coat, just remember, you paid for it. There used to be a T.V. in the Pub, but someone almost managed to sneak it out of the Pub.

vertise for bids.

We were quite fortunate when State officials extended the deadline (previously set for December 31, 1968) for beginning construction. This extension will give us ample time for additional study and planning.

In the meantime, we were also quite fortunate when the bids for the cafeteria were within a range which made possible their acceptance. The cafeteria is now under construction and so that portion of the project is behind us.

It is my firm belief that within a reasonable period of time we will receive bids on the dormitories which will make the beginning of construction possible. When that day comes all of us should rejoice at a milestone reached.

One of the most important ventures facing Wilmington College in the immediate future is the construction of dormitories on our campus. The 1967 session of the State Legislature authorized two dormitories to house 200 students each.

We have experienced many delays in getting the dormitories started. All of us were very disappointed when bids were opened some weeks ago and the projected cost far exceeded the amount of money available for the project. At that time there was no alternative other than to re-design and rebuild the dormitories.

Currently, our architects are in the process of re-drawing plans; and in as short a time as possible, we will re-ad-

THE MURDER OF THE GREATER CIRCLE

By Kenn Keffer

It was while the dusk was being lifted
From behind the old gray water-tower,
And spilt from buckets
Upon the littered scape,
That Boy Rule, sitting on a curb,
Bent down to mount his roller skates.
Just very young and lame he was --
Not the type to see smiling near a brick wall
At some decaying school house,
But empty as a snail's shell was his face
As the evening crawled upon him.

Since first he stumbled from his tidy house
He had heard the laughs -- without the right
To laugh himself.
Embarrassed smiles had made malignant
His mother's gentle face,
And he had seen his brother's gay pretensions
Fade, when they thought him gone.
And ever since; the days
Had pounded, and pounded, and pounded,
Till he was sexless, faceless,
And, worst of all, without beauty.

Timid and frightened as a sterile squirrel
He shod himself with skates,
And rolled in circles round the driveway
During the muddy dark.
Perhaps his rings became too wide
For they reached into their garage,
Where he chanced to sight a shotgun
Leaning, leaning near their golf clubs.
And his circles stopped at once,
And his circles stopped at once.

America-The Beautiful

By MIKE GLANCY

Well, here I am again called upon to relay to you some truth that has touched my life recently. I am sure all of you are acquainted with the local newspaper and the one sided presentation of the news they usually deliver. Well, after coming home from Washington, D.C. and reading their account of the Counter-Inaugural activities (workshops, conferences, and march) held in Washington, D.C. over the weekend of January 19, I became angry and decided to present you with an eye-witness account of the aforementioned activities as seen through the eyes of Yours Truly.

The Counter-Inaugural activities were sponsored by the National Mobilization Committee to End The War In Viet Nam (MOBE). MOBE called upon those who could no longer stand by in silence and allow men to die in Viet Nam for an immoral, hallow cause, watch their black brothers languish in dungeons of despair, or allow their red brothers to suffer still further torment in the smoldering deserts of the West to come to Washington, D.C. and attend conferences (and later a march) dealing with individual involvement in the movement to irradiate these blights within our system.

I traveled to Washington because I was concerned about the present trend toward violence within the movement, because I wanted to learn how I might relate more effectively to others, because I wanted to let Mr. Nixon know I wanted him to fulfill his campaign promises to bring our torn nation together, and I wanted to rediscover the movement and its present activities. I have too little space to relay to you all that happened, so I will give you a capsule survey of the activities and their meaning to me.

The conferences were held on Saturday morning, January 19, at Hawthorne school, on the Southwest side of D.C. There were a variety of conferences dealing with the meaning of the movement, the role of the S.D.S. on campus, communal living, Living Theatre, self liberation, and G.I. Workshops. The G.I. Workshops had the greatest effect on most of us because these men were veterans of this barbarous war. They were the men who had experienced the horrors of war and returned to register their opposition to it. Through-out all the conference, the coordinators emphasized individual reorientation and collectiveness. That is, each individual must know himself and channel the magnificent energies within him into constructive measures designed to advance our society and drain it of its ugly tendencies. Each individual must be willing to work, sacrifice, and dedicate his life to social progress and the betterment of man. (I will admit to you that there was an anarchic element present whose concept of progress and change conflicted sharply with the concept held by the majority in attendance.) The coordinators continually chastized those "paper mache" revolutionaries who are floundering in their own rhetoric and good intentions, but who are not prepared to work for the good of all. This was aimed at many members of the S.D.S. who are quite adroit at articulating their demands and fighting but less willing to sacrifice and work with people to build new life styles and to revamp society.

The March on the following day (January 20) was characterized by a solemn respect for life

"You people are beautiful," Herbert Reed, of the Platters, "told The Seahawk during the intermission of their concert. Judging by the standing ovation the Platters received, the audience thought the Platters were too.

"This is the best college audience we've had," Sonny Turner, lead singer, declared.

The Platters played to a standing room only audience, but no one complained.

The Platters walked on the stage singing "We traveled around the world ...to sing to you." The Platters have performed in 67 countries.

The Platters prefer working for college audiences rather than in nightclubs. "On the college circuit, the kids are very receptive, very polite, and they make you sing. Whereas in a nightclub, you can get by with a lot of things," said Reed.

"When they're sitting and listening to you, you have to stay in tune," he added.

"We seem to get a nice reaction from college kids which is really surprising because some of the tunes are so old, but the kids seem to know them," declared Ron Austin, second tenor.

Reed organized the Platters and named them as well. "When I got out of high school, it was the day of the groups. I did a lot of singing in high school and I just felt as if I could carry a tune," he said.

"I wanted to be part of that era which was the era of the groups," he added.

The group recorded their first song, "Only You" in late 1953, but it wasn't until 1956 that it hit, according to Reed.

"In slang, a record is a Platter. And since at one time or another we were single performers, I decided that if a single platter could get together, you would have the Platters."

Music - Turns Into Love-In

By STEVE ELMAN

(CPS) -- The word is synthesis.

It began about two years ago, and the conclusion hasn't been reached. It started as a desire to make the original venture more interesting, and may conclude with the destruction of categories and the creation of a new art form known as MUSIC.

Butterfield and the Blues Project had the right idea -- try to combine forms of expression presently existing into a new one that will appeal to everyone who liked each of the old. "Rock" and "Blues" and even the amorphous, maligned "jazz" began moving toward one another -- cautiously.

RUSH TO FILL GAPS

Now everybody wants to get into the act; there seems to be a mad rush to fill the gaps with new categories. "Rhythm and blues" suddenly became "soul"; country and western met Robert Zimmerman. "Folk music" discovered Benjamin Franklin's kite. It's turning into a love-in.

Rock even has schools now. There's Hendrix and Cream and thundering, body-bending amplified SOUND. There's the Ohio Express and Bosstown. Buffalo Springfield (define that one, I dare you). Al Kooper - what's that? A freaky one-man band that plays better than any other one-man group around.

SAY THE WORD

The word. Say the word and you'll be free. The word is synthesis. Synthesis of musical forms. Maybe if we forget about some of these words we might even end up liking some of this stuff.

Suppose, just for a minute, that music doesn't really depend on categories at all. Suppose the reason Archie Shepp chooses to play differently from Charlie Parker is due solely to the fact that he wants to play differently. Not that he is trying to "synthesize Bop and Avant-garde jazz," but that he is merely attempting some kind of communication different from Parker's.

Communication, perhaps. A relationship between human beings. The most perfect form of relationship -- one that transcends the mind and lets you feel rather than think.

DIRECTION SYNTHESIS

If there has been any direction in the synthesis of modern music, that direction has been that of intensification of the relationship between performer and audience. Why does the Grateful Dead's new album have a short section that says, "Come on, everybody, get up and dance?" Why does the Jefferson Airplane prefer a hall where there are no seats? Why does Archie Shepp encourage people to move their bodies to his improvisations?

In a real sense, dancing helps to create the music of these performers. They are interested in response, reaction, spontaneous feeling. They want emotion rather than intellect.

PATHOS PROTEST

Most recently, the range of emotions, exploited by country music was opened when Dylan began recording in Nashville. Pathos and protest entered by way of folk music. Rock has expanded to accommodate the desire of its performers for expression.

Architect Tests Soil For Dorm Sites

Where to locate future dormitories on campus is a question still up for grabs, local architect Leslie M. Boney said in an interview here recently.

Boney's firm has been making extensive tests on the campus for possible areas in which the buildings could be constructed.

The tests, soil borings, were found to be necessary before any definite decision could be reached, although, Boney said, areas around and near the athletic field are being considered as suitable.

"Original residence hall sites, suggested by the Board of Trustees, were found unsuitable for use after sub-surface soil investigations," he continued.

Use of these sites would require additional filling and preparations of the soil to prepare suitable foundations, and cause an considerable raise in construction costs, far exceeding the original budget, Boney explained.

Boney explained the college budget "simply cannot absorb the extra costs so we are looking for other sites more suitable."

In Wilmington, according to Boney, the soil varies greatly from spot to spot in regard to foundation settlement.

"Areas may be very sound and support any type of building, and then nearby extensive explorations are required to provide suitable foundations."

From the surface, Boney added, it is not obvious what changes have taken place in the soil; whether or not five feet under there is nothing but muck.

Boney said the sites should be determined soon and construction of the proposed residence halls completed by 1970.

Junior Compares Recruiters to Water Fountain

"The presence of the recruiters might be compared to a water fountain. No one requires another to use that fountain. Those who use it, do so willingly," was the reply the junior gave to a staff reporter when asked his opinion of military recruiters on campus.

Amzie Adams, freshman, asserted that "the military is at best, a necessary evil. Ideally, the military should be polished and recruiters with them."

"The only army to join is the Salvation Army. I take it from someone who's been there -- an ex-marine," Amzie added.

Sophomore Kyle Everett, an ex-serviceman, advises, "These men on campus are here to give you a chance to be more than just a soldier and also to improve the ability of the services. So it is obvious that I am for recruiters on campus 100%."

Faculty member Melinda Snow sees no reason why the recruiters should not be on campus and says, "After all, one need not approach them. Isn't as if they were asking attendance."

"Considering them as companies interviewing through the Placement Office, I feel they should be required to remain in that office as are other organizations," senior Bob Bohannon commented.

Junior Chris Ainselmann believes the recruiters are informative as long as they don't try and force you to join by false information while sophomore Freddy Harrell thinks the campus "is not the place for them."

Freshman Carol Weddie believes that "if more people would take an interest in the recruiters, it would be a good idea. At the present time no one seems to care and the recruiters would be wasting their time."

"They have a right to be on campus, it is senseless because if students to join they will and it is doubtful if they are influencing the students," said Ollie Whitfield, freshman.

Another freshman, Sam Cornell, says that the recruiter provides an opening for many freshman males because "many freshmen are neither physically nor emotionally prepared for college and could better themselves by serving in the defense of our country."

"After first hand experience, I tend to disagree with the programs that the recruiters present in college," sophomore David Walker declared.

"Military recruiters on campus are a welcome and essential part of the college male's life. I think they are needed here on campus permanently to advise the young man of his military obligation and matters concerning the military life and the college male," said senior Edward Hudson.

Freshmen James Franks and Pete Mitchell share similar ideas.

"I see no harm in service recruiters on campus. I personally have talked to one and it proved beneficial to me even though I had no intention of enlisting," Pete commented.

TAU KAPPA EPSILON

Five new brothers were inducted in the fraternity last week. Named new members were Robert Brett, Wayne Kellum, Raymond Richard, Donnie Summerlin, and Chuck Wheeler.

The rush was considered "successful" by the fraternity.

A band party was given for the rushees with music provided by the "Generations."

DELTA EPSILON

Brothers of the fraternity were busy last month rushing and assisting the college in moving equipment into the new library, only one of many campus projects in which they are involved.

PHI MU

"Sisters of Phi Mu were very pleased with such a successful and cooperative rush," said Barbara Halterman, rush chairman.

"Panhellenic was a tie between Phi Mu and Zeta Tau Alpha, and it helped rush run smoothly."

Phi Mu has eight new pledges. They are Debra Baggett, Lynne Bowen, Kay Carmichael, Jenny Halterman, Linda Rackley, Cheryl Tienken, Debbie Welsh, and Ollie Whitfield.

PI KAPPA PI

Quarterly rush took place from January 13th to January 17th. Smokers were held and also a party at the Elks Home featuring music by the "Sounds Unlimited."

A list of eligible rush-ees was received from the office of the dean and at the present time 17 men are eligible to pledge.

The Gamma pledge class purchased a new refrigerator for the house in conclusion of their pledgship.

Trustees Cautious About Academic Freedom

PRINCETON, N. J. (CPS)-- Most of the nation's college and university trustees do not think the faculty and students should have major authority in decisions affecting the significant educational and administrative issues on campus.

Most members of college governing boards believe such decisions should continue to be made primarily by themselves and by the college administration.

These are among the findings of a recent survey by Educational Testing Service on the backgrounds, roles and educational attitudes of college and university trustees. The study, based on a questionnaire of more than 5,000 members of college governing boards, will be published this month.

Although trustees' responses differed with the location or type of their institution, certain general characteristics emerged from the report.

In general, the college trustee is white, Protestant, in his 50's. He is well educated and financially secure; more than half report annual incomes exceeding $30,000. He occupies a prestige position, usually in business, and "personifies 'success' in the American sense of the word."

He is often cautious about academic freedom, and has some reservation about its uses. He believes that college attendance is a privilege that should be extended to all, but not a right. As a rule, he describes himself as a "politically moderate" Republican.

Half the business-executive trustees in the survey agree that "running a college is like running a business," and that "high-level business management experience is important in choosing a new president." However, the more prominent executive position the trustee has, the less likely he is to hold these views.

Wrestlers Win 3, Lose 3

The first three wrestling matches of this season found the Seahawks reporting a 3-0 record. It was at this point the Hawks found the going rough. Coach Sproles team has lost three matches to three very outstanding teams.

Appalachian State University is one of the best wrestling teams in the South, if not the best. The Wilco team did have a chance to beat the Apps. All the team needed was for a few of our boys to get psyched up so that they wrestled well above their potential. The psyche just never appeared.

The first match of the evening saw Senior Eddie Radford go down in defeat by a score of 11-0. He was beaten by George Sansone, in the 123 pound weight class. In the 130 pound class sophomore Pat Sykes of the Hawks lost to Bill McAdams by a score of 7-0. Following this sophomore Chris Stone of Wilmington was pinned in 5:49 by Herb Singerman. Captain Jim Morrissey was decided by Alan Thompson 4-1.

Senior Roy Jones of the Hawks was tied in points with Ron Childress. Childress won the match because he had enough riding time to receive another point. Apps grappler Mike Masonor whipped senior Wayne Barker by a score of 4-0. The match found the Hawks' Fred Allen counting the lights in the gym. Fred was pinned in the second period. He deserves credit for the fact that he went into the match with only one week of practice. Junior Bob Elliott scored the only Hawk points of the match when he wrestled to a 2-2 tie. The heavyweight class found Wilco's junior Dave Haskett pinned in 1:15 by Bruce Schlegel.

123 Radford (L) to Sansone (11-0)

WILCO - E.C.U.

ON Tuesday, Jan. 21 the Wilco wrestlers met the Pirates of East Carolina. As the meet progressed it was apparent that the Seahawks were no match for the strong E.C.U. team.

Two exhibition matches opened the meet. Sophomore Pat Sykes of Wilmington lost to Ron Williams of E.C.U. in the first one and Joe Facchina pinned Wilco's Sophomore Chris Stone.

In the first of the regular matches Junior Eddie Radford was beaten by Tom Ellington of the Pirates by a score of 12-4. This was in the 123 pound class. In the 130 pound class, Sophomore Chamie Baldwin was pinned 6-24 in the match. The next match was all E.C.U. as Robert Corbo beat Sophomore John Risley in the 137 pound class. The following match was one of the best of the evening. Captain Jim Morrissey of Wilmington and Stanley Bastain of East Carolina battled all the way. Morrissey went ahead by a score of 31-but dropped the match by a score of 6-3.

Disaster was the name of the game as Junior Roy Jones of Wilmington fell under the might of John Corral by a score of 5-2 in the 152 pound weight class. The next two matches still found Wilmington without a winner. Senior Wayne Barker dropped a 9-0 decision to Sam McDowell and Drewry Adams was pinned at 4-27. It was at this point that Coach Charles Sproles averted a shut-out. He forfeited the 177 pound class and sent Junior Bob Elliott in to tangle with E.C.U.'s heavy-day as he dominated the match and went on to take an 8-3 decision.

123 Radford (L) to Ellenberger (10-4)
130 Badwin (L) to Ellenberger (pin)
137 Risley (L) to Corbo (7-1)
145 Morrissey (L) to Bastain (6-3)
152 Jones (L) to Corral (5-2)
160 Barker (L) to McDowell (9-0)
167 Adams (L) to Brown (pin)

THE CITADEL

The Cadets of the Citadel smashed the Wilmington College Seahawks 25-5 Feb. 4 at the Hawks gym. This loss was the Hawks third in a row. The Hawks have a 3 wins and 3 loss record for the season.

In the first match of the night Eddie Radford wrestled to a draw with Stan Polonsky of the Cadets. Chamie Baldwin, the best grappler at 130 pound class was decisively beaten by John Wood of the Citadel by a score of 5-0.

At this point the Hawks were losing by a score of 3-2. John Risley of the hawks was demolished by his opponent (10-3) Tony Gutierrez. Risley only gave a decision to the cadets thus keeping the Hawks still in contention. With Jim Morrissey the captain of the team on deck the Hawks were looking for a win. Morrissey was decided by Chip Brooks 5-0. This put the Cadets ahead by 7 points.

The match at the 152 pound class found Drewry Adams being decided by Allan Foard of the Citadel Cadets (5-2). Veteran Roy "Bull" Jones found his match was also a Bull. Tom Bull, as a matter of fact only this bull really socked it to Jones by a score of 9-5.

Another veteran Wayne Barker met defeat in the Citadels Bob Shellman. Shellman decided Barker by a score of 9-6. The 177 pound match turned out to be a heart breaker for the Hawks. Bob Elliott vs Wyndham Manning, these two grapplers wrestled to a tie with one minute in the match. Then Manning scored in a reversal on Elliott to take the lead in the match. Elliott made valiant attempts to tie up the score. Time ran out and Elliott lost 9-6. Manning picked up a point on riding time.

HAWK'S VIEW

This columnist wants it to be known that the Wilmington College Student Body should be proud of some of their soccer players. Six WILCO players were nominated for "All-District 26 Team" this year. These players are: freshman Manuel Delhoro, freshman Al Quinos, senior Dan Whisnant, for the "All-District" line jobs. At the half-back opening is junior Paul Livingston, Sophomore John Leach is up for one of the full-back jobs. Sophomore Dayne Smith is hoping to receive the goalie position. Fellow students, WILCO athletes are getting a name in the South. So, give them your support!

The athletic teams on the WILCO campus have a problem other than not winning. The problem is they do not have any school backing. This school has enough students to do the job of providing support and attendance at the various athletic events. The Wilmington College student body had more school spirit when they were changing from a junior college to a four year college status. This brings us up to today. We are changing from an independent college to a part of the University of North Carolina. We hope this will change student apathy. We have less school spirit now than they did back in the 1950's.

One other note, the athletic teams back then had a winning record. Do you think the student body's participation might have had an influence on the basketball teams record? Why play for a school that doesn't care whether you win or lose?

Even the coaches at Wilmington College think the attendance could be a h--l of-a-lot better.

Coach Brooks is not satisfied with the attendance at the basketball games. Basketball is the money sport here at Wilmington. That means the more paying people at the ball games, the better the scholarships will be that are given to new ball players.

Coach Sproles was disappointed in this years turnout of freshmen for the wrestling team. The freshmen at every school should be the most enthusiastic people on campus. The main reason is that they want to be in with the "IN" crowd. It seems that here at Wilco the "IN" crowd does not care about the school. There are a few people who care like the cheerleaders, Delta Epsilon, and a few stout-hearted fans. I raise the question, "Where are the TEKE's, supposedly the school H--l raisers, The Pi Kappa Pi's, the ZTA's, the Pi Mu's, and the rest of the school's clubs?" Don't you people have any school spirit?

When people do attend the ball games they don't cheer ---- YOU DON'T EVEN STAND UP WHEN ASKED TO STAND UP!!! What are you? Mannequins! With a little help a mannequin could stand-up! Let's show the team that we want them to win and that we are behind them even when they do lose. The students here at Wilco have been known for their school spirit, so let's keep with the past tradition of a good spirited school.

I will be the first to start the movement back on the road to a school that cares about its teams. Join the Cheerleaders, Captain Seahawk, and myself in a school minded movement.

Jaguars Capture Close Game

Augusta's Jaguars fought off a determined Seahawk club for a 71-67 win Homecoming night. The game was played before a near capacity crowd and was close all the way. The loss put the Seahawks record at 5-16. Homecoming Queen Carrie Davis was crowned during the halftime ceremonies by Seahawk captain Jim Hall. The game was close from the opening buzzer and at halftime the score was Augusta 36 Wilmington 31.

With two minutes remaining and the lead cut to 3 points, Walters failed to connect on a charity loss. After that Wilmington was out of contention. Foul shots made the difference in the contest with Augusta hitting on 15 of 27 and Wilmington getting 11 of 14. Both clubs dumped in 28 field goals. The game was marred by fouls and once during the second half both benches emptied. The Jaguar's Brown led all scorers with 28 points while McBride hit on 18. Chris Speciale led the Seahawks with 15, DeLutis and Senior Jim Hall had 12 points each. Senior "Big Mike" McQuay contributed 11 and defensive specialist had 7. In the old timers game which preceded the varsity contest Coach Wayne Jackson's veterans won 70-58 with Frank Bua scoring 22 points. Jim Hebron paced the losers with 12.

Policy Reaction Delights Faculty, Administration

Student reaction when the new "discipline" policy was presented to them was, for the most part, unfavorable. However, members of the faculty and administration were glad to hear this reaction according to a survey taken by Seahawk staffers.

"I was delighted at the free discussion," declared President William H. Wagoner, who continued by saying, "The Policy has been here, I think it's just been in an unwritten form."

Wagoner believes "It's necessary that everyone is informed what the policy really is. The policy is taken primarily from state law, and I feel that every individual has a right to know exactly what the policy of the college is."

The new policy is "for your protection," stated a member of the Art Department John Nygren. "Without this policy there's no protection for the students from the police. I think the best part of it is that the students are being allowed to be involved with the policy of the college."

Nygren was "mildly surprised and greatly relieved that the students would not receive this policy at first hearing. When students, faculty, and administration start having dialogues, this is a good sign."

"Originally this policy was not supposed to be presented or made public to the students, but President Wagoner, the deans, and I thought this wrong and that the students should know about it and have the opportunity to question it," said Dr. Gerald Shinn, Head of the Department of Institutional Research.

"In view of student riots throughout the world, it is the obligation of any president, of any institution of higher learning to have guidelines prepared in advance of such an eventuality at his institution," commented Dr. Jack Levy, of the Chemistry Department.

Dean of Faculty, Dr. Paul Reynolds, explained that the policy is necessary for two reasons.

"Students should have a clear understanding of laws and the consequences for breaking them, and their legal rights of defense. If any legal suit should come against students, no one would have a leg to stand on."

"We (faculty and administration) prefer misdemeanors to be handled within the school and away from the law," he added.

Reynolds was not surprised at the student reaction to the policy. "Some may have been surprised, but I rather expected some discussion and surprise from the students."

"We could not have asked for student opinion," said Dean Helena Cheek, "but we wanted to give them the privilege of reading it. We were glad to hear them react. Personally, I think a lot of the reaction was from lack of understanding."

Shinn hoped "this policy would make the students think. Better yet, it might make them talk."

"The policy as presented at the meeting did have some harsh writing," said Dean Marshall Crews, who added, "we can't compromise the rules, but we can change the wording of the rules."

AMERICA- Beautiful

(Continued from page 3) and a hope that man will awaken to his responsibilities to his neighbor and make a sincere effort to communicate peacefully with him. We capped our weekend of harmony and brotherhood with a Counter-Inaugural ball with entertainment provided by such stars as Judy Collins, Phil Ochs, and The Fugs. I believe the hope of all present at these activities is best exemplified in Edwin Markham's poem "Outwitted":

He drew a circle that shut me out -
Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout,
But Love and I had the wit to win.
We drew a circle that took him in.

COMMITTEE ADOPTS

(Continued from page 1) The AAUP Bulletin has been endorsed by such organizations as the U. S. National Student Association, the Association of American colleges, The National Association of Student Personnel Administrators, and the American Association for Higher Education.

Before the policy is adopted by the college, it will have to be approved by the college Board of Trustees, as Dr. Gerald Shinn, Head of the Department of Institutional Research, pointed out.

"The policy is set by the Board of Trustees," he said. "What we are doing is recommending what we would like for them to do. We can't set policy."

"I am confident they will wish to adopt the one we could agree on," said President William Wagoner.

He also mentioned that the administration wanted to discuss this policy with the students before it was sent to the Trustees as the policy mainly concerns the students.

PLATTERS

(Continued from page 4) All of the members of the Platters enjoy working together and loving traveling around from place to place. As Turner said, "It's a way of life, a way of life I like."

"It's a very exciting life. I enjoy the life," Austin commented.

Wagoner Confident About UNC Status

"If you miss me during the next few weeks, I'll be pounding the pavement up in Raleigh," said President William Wagoner in reference to UNC status during the Monday night Student, Faculty, Administration meeting.

"UNC looks better every day," he declared. "Following the visiting committee from the Board of Higher Education, Wagoner received letters with such statements as 'tremendously impressed' and 'delighted with what we saw.'"

"I will predict now that by April 20 the situation will be settled in our favor," he said, even though he cautioned that it was not wise to count one's chickens before they are hatched.

When questioned about whether Wilmington and Asheville-Biltmore would have to enter the university system together, Wagoner replied that the college was bound to Asheville-Biltmore by a gentlemen's agreement as well as by the joint recommendation from the Board of Trustees.

He explained that since 1962 Wilmington and Asheville-Biltmore have worked together, first for becoming a four year institution and now for university status.

the Platters Concert. With this money the committee is tentatively planning another concert for later in the Spring.

At the present time, however, some of the Dance Committee's money is being used to pay printing costs for the telephone directories.

President of the Student Body, Gary Chadwick, who undertook the project of selling advertising to pay for the directories after no group on campus would undertake this responsibility, reported that although approximately $100 of ads had been sold, the directories would come out sooner if the Senate would vote to accept the money offered from the Dance Committee.

Junior Senator Chris Deasy informed the Senate that several students had complained to her that campus elections did not receive enough publicity.

Chadwick noted that Chairman of the Board of Elections Jerry Ramsey had tried to find people to work with him on the elections, he had been unsuccessful.

Newkirk appointed Dickie Powell, Marilyn Gooden, Chris Deasy, and Sherry Southerland to serve on an elections committee under Ramsey.

"If there are shortcomings in the building, we should know about them," stated Newkirk referring to the Sarah Graham Kenan auditorium.

Dale Donahue and Tim Jordan were asked to speak to members of the drama department and discuss their findings at the next Senate meeting Feb. 17.

During the meeting Newkirk alternately praised and scolded Senate members for the role they had played during the recent Homecoming activities.

"I don't see how we got through it," said Hugh in reference to the Platters concert. "Many times I had to go back and straighten out things you people did wrong or didn't do right."

"People I had heavily depended on let me down. The success of the concert was due to one or two people who came through," he added.

Dance

This is just a short note about Homecoming. Never before has this weekend of festivities come off with as much enthusiasm and enjoyment for all persons involved, from just those who attended the game to the individuals who planned and ran the different activities.

To slightly recap these activities: Homecoming was ushered in by the Fine Arts Committee's award winning film, "Cyrano de Bergerac". Thursday night saw one of the most successful and fantastic performances ever presented in Wilmington, the Platters. Prior to their appearance, feelings were mixed as to their acceptance by the local and college audience. All such doubts were erased by their excellent show.

The various games of the weekend were highlighted by the exciting performance of the varsity team Saturday night. Perhaps the only disappointment of the Homecoming was the Saturday night dance, which did not measure up to the excellence of the rest of the weekend.

Everyone involved with the various dances, games, etc., should be heartily congratulated, with special notice to the Dance Committee, who took a gamble inviting the Platters, and who, we hope, will continue to put on a concert each year.

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N.C.

VOLUME 11 NUMBER 8

FEBRUARY 28, 1969

Wagoner Waits For Information

This college is one of 200 schools in the Eastern United States which will be invited to send ten student delegates to a convention - symposium on "The Urban Crisis--The Student's Response" at Wake Forest University March 20-22.

The symposium, called "Challenge '69", is held every other year on the Wake Forest campus on various problems confronting the country.

Keynote speaker for the symposium will be Sen. Edmund Muskie, democratic vice presidential candidate.

College President William Wagoner has endorsed the symposium, but is waiting further details before the student delegates are chosen.

Wagoner told "The Seahawk" that students going to the symposium would probably have to pay their own expenses as the college does not have the money to send them.

According to Miss Norma Murdoch, executive director of "Challenge '69", "our program exists as an expression of our anxiety over our nation's plight."

She added, "Challenge '69 will bring together authorities from the various sub-areas of the problem to plans seeds for constructive action by students and their universities."

The symposium has three major divisions.

The first day, delegates will consider the student's role as a citizen and voter; on the second day, his role as a volunteer; and on the third, his role as part of the university's participation in community problems. Officials from over 200 major Eastern cities have been invited to conduct workshop which the delegates will attend in addition to lectures.

Students Journey Towards Excellence

"Those we're honoring today have shown in some fashion that they are in the pursuit of excellence," College President William H. Wagoner told the students selected to be included in the "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities", their parents and friends during a program in their honor Feb. 18, 1969. Wilco students received certificates commending them for their inclusion in this book.

"We should be concerned with ourselves in this pursuit of excellence," Wagoner continued. "I do not believe that we can forsake the pursuit of excellence merely because it has become a trite saying," he added.

"In the pursuit of excellence, it is not the goal that is important, but the journey towards that goal," he said. "I am delighted to be here today to congratulate them for their pursuit, their journey towards excellence."

"My prayer is that there will be those who find it."

"We're just as proud of these students as we can be," declared Dean Helena Cheek.

"We're hoping that these students will become very active and productive members of their community," she added as she gave out the certificates.

Students who were included in the "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities" are John Blair, Jr., Carrie Davis, James Hall, Barbara Halterman, Dale Donahue, Hugh Newkirk, and Ann Stephens.

Others are Renee Hartman, Jere Hodgkin, Ray Pacer, Georgia Macris, Deirilla Dorsey, Gary Chadwick, Linda Rivenbark, Sarah Rivenbark, Terry Wortley, Linda Fear, and Robert Prince.

Play Runs Until Sunday

"Crime on Goat Island" by Ugo Betti is an important modern tragedy blending the two necessary ingredients of "good" theatre.

On the surface it is a story of passion leading to violence with a liberal sprinkling of sex. This formula has proven successful for many superfluous plays and still seems to insure box office success in the commercial theatre of Broadway.

But not only is it a well-plotted story using sex, violence, and mystery--it also contains the second ingredient of "good theatre"--a soul. Under the violent actions of the characters is a philosophical problem of right and wrong. Each character is attempting to create a morality which will serve in any crisis presented by life. When these moral judgments are needed by the individual can they be true for all who come into contact with them? Can each life be regimented to a universal morality? And will this morality remain constantly true under all possible human pressures?

Well, if you want to know Ugo Betti's answers to these burning issues, then see "Crime on Goat Island" which began February 27th.

If you really don't care and you just like to have your senses titillated, then you must also see "Crime on Goat Island" closing Democracy - Mass Rule ?

Democracy has struck again.

It seems that the biggest (and only significant) fault in rule by the masses is in the masses. Case in point: The recent national elections.

The only candidate of the people, by the people and for the people was George Corley Wallace. The two major political parties used their usual method of selection, they chose the candidates they felt could represent their platforms and possess the highest chance of becoming elected. Ah, but the American Independent Party.

The AIP rose as an answer to the calling need of the American people to vent their hostilities, their prejudices and their, well, stupidity.

Imagine what would have happened if Ol' George Corley had been elected. First of all (and thank God) nothing would have happened. But just supposing that somehow Wallace could instigate his policies.

Those intellectuals (of course, I mean, Communists) with enough courage would vehemently denounce his administration. This would arouse the already overzealous secret police (F.B.I., C.I.A.) of America to even stronger action in quenching thought.

This, of course, would only involve a few of our intellectuals. The rest would go underground or leave the country.

Thus intelligence would successfully enter a dormant period. Thus gratifying the ignorant wish of mankind.

But what would Wallace do?

Once those who are educated go into hiding then the education of "Our Children" will fully return to the idiots that have handled so well in the past. The few advances made in racial equality...well, forget it. If any one remembers the play-movie "Inherit the Wind", then one will know the logical end of this return to ignorance.

The original question, however, was about Democracy. Does it work, as a form of government?

Only in small doses.

This is a rather painful realization I have come to and it was a great deal more difficult to admit to myself.

Hitler was chosen by the people of Germany, if they didn't openly support his rise to power, they didn't openly object to it either (of course I am referring to the majority of the populace).

We can't blame the entire ills of the world, past or present, on the average mass, merely because they haven't been given the opportunity. Communism has taken hold in a number of countries, mainly through strictly party organization, not popular support.

The people, once they do get this supreme power, the power of the vote, then they are capable of anything, from a Huey Long to a Strom Thurmond.

Candidates of the people have long been associated with conservatism. Of course, many might not consider this too much of a fault, but consider this: where would this country be if it had been left in the hands of the conservatives through a great many national crises, such as the one we're having right now?

Imagine the condition of the country if, instead of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, a strict "Balance-the-Budget" man had been President. Imagine the condition of the country? Why there wouldn't be a country as we know it.

A second case would be Abraham Lincoln. The long suffering Southern states would be in a much harder position now than they are. Lincoln's presence on the historical even has softened racial attitudes.

We have seen what the conservative, or in this case do-notting President, can do. Nothing. President Eisenhower kept the United States from remaining in her position as supreme world power and keeper of the peace. His presence hardly inspired a feeling of happiness with "Uncle Sam" among our Latin neighbors. And his failure to act on Civil-rights? Useless.

There are a few of the arguments that have arisen against Democracy, they are not the only ones nor are they necessarily the best. But they are valid.

No one has yet come up with a more perfect form of government (Benevolent-Monarchy?) to replace Democracy.

But we will keep looking.

Opinions - Observations

BY GARY CHADWICK

The inception of a Student Appeals Board (composed of five student judges) this year shows a marked improvement over past years in the area of more responsibilities for student government. The problem of parking is an important issue to the students, and it is only right that they have the final say.

This year, also for the first time, student leaders were instrumental in preparing the rules and regulations concerning parking on campus. We have taken over the legislative and judicial powers concerned with automobile parking.

Before this year, all parking tickets were handled by one man, Mr. Noe. If you didn't like his decision concerning fines, it was just your tough luck. Now things are different. If you don't think that your ticket is warranted or that your fine is too steep, you may appeal your case to the Student Appeals Board.

The Appeals Board is here for your protection. Don't be afraid to use it. If it isn't used, then it may go out of existence, and the students will have lost an important right. The judges on the Board are a group of your own peers. They are on your side.

The actual Student Judges are Terry Worley, Brian Black, Jimmy Doss, Joanne Conroy, and Marie Bassow. If you have any questions concerning the court, just ask any of them or any of your Student Government Association representatives.

So remember, if you suddenly discover one of those pink slips of paper under your windshield wiper, it isn't a hopeless case!

Young People Want To Vote At 18

The history of efforts to lower the voting age is full of frustration and failure, dating back to 1942 when Sen. Arthur Vandenberg introduced the first recent resolution to extend the franchise. In that session, Congress lowered the draft-induction age to 18, but refused to lower the voting age.

Since then, more than a hundred similar resolutions have been bottled up by the nation's lawmakers. Despite President Eisenhower's support in 1954, a proposed Constitutional amendment lowering the voting age failed by five votes. In the last session of Congress, well-meaning liberals let another bill die without a fight after President Johnson spoke up favorably but too late.

The 18-year-old vote issue has also been raised at least once in each of the states, but the voters have consistently said no. Only in Kentucky and Georgia have efforts been successful.

In the last month, two groups have formed to start a nationwide push for passage of laws lowering the voting age. One, begun by students from the University of the Pacific in California, and launched on a television special with Joey Bishop, is called LUV (Let Us Vote). It claims chapters on more than 200 college campuses and 1,500 high schools.

Another handful of young people, from the National Education Association's (NEA) student affiliate, have formed a Youth Franchise Coalition. With the support of other student groups, they claim to be the first national organization working toward the 18-year-old vote.

Students Prepare Permanent Gallery

To fill the need of Wilmington College's artistically creative students a permanent student art gallery has been established in cooperation with the art department.

This Student Gallery, which opened Thursday, Feb. 20, is located in the Northeast corner of Kenan Hall near the SRO theatre.

Talking about the gallery, art student Linda Simard said, "The purpose of the gallery is to give the students of Wilmington College an opportunity to display their works."

Phil Sullivan, Linda Simard, and Harry Nickerbocker, organizers of the gallery, cordially invite all WILCO students to display their works. Sullivan credited art department head, Claude Howell, with being the innovator of the project.

All flat pieces to be displayed must be either matted or framed. Three dimensional pieces (sculpture) must be on a base. Bases and frames must be provided by the individuals.

All mediums are acceptable and all interested students should contact any of the mentioned art students. Pieces are to be displayed on a rotational basis.

Georgia Southern Nips Hawks

The last home basketball game pitted the Wilmington College Seahawks against the Eagles of Georgia Southern. Georgia Southern came out on top for the eighth time in a row in four years by a score of 67-66. The Hawks let them know that they had been in a basketball game.

In the opening minutes of the game, the Hawks came on strong by fast and quick scoring. Georgia Southern found itself trailing a team with a losing record, to say the least.

All through the first half, the Hawks stayed within striking distance of the Eagles. Never giving the Georgian boys more than an 8-point lead. Then late in the first half, the Hawks used a slow-down tactics after they had reduced the lead to only three points. Then just before the half-time buzzer, the Hawks reduced the lead to only one point.

Here it was half time and the Hawks with a record of 6-20 was within two points of leading a team which has a record, nearly the opposite of the Hawks, 15-6. With the right kind of support, the Wilco record could be 20-61.

During half time, the Soccer team was given their hard-earned letters. The Hawks soccer team only lost one game while winning six.

The second half opened up with the Hawks hitting a cold spot. Even with this jitteriness, they still only gave the Eagles a ten-point lead at the most. The Hawks warmed up and reduced the lead about halfway through the second half. With less than five minutes left in the ballgame, the Hawks were leading by three big points.

The tough Georgia Southern team rose to the occasion and recaptured the lead. Only after a furious battle for baskets, the Hawks were not about to let such a big upset go so easily.

With 27 seconds left in the game, the local boys stole the ball and moved in on the basket. Finding time was moving too quickly, the Hawks called time out to talk it over. Only 23 seconds remained on the scoreboard as time resumed. The Hawks took one desperate shot and missed with the buzzer sounding the end of the game.

This was the last game for Seniors Mike McQuay, and Jim Hall. These two players have sparked the college team for as long as they have played for our school.

Hawks Beat Pembroke

Before the basketball game, there was a wrestling match between the Indians of Pembroke College and the Seahawks of Wilmington College. Wilco fared better than the bubble-bouncers by defeating their opponents 21-18.

In the first match of the evening, Eddie Radford pinned Jim Madaris at 4:15 in the match. The Hawks Chamie Baldwin decided his man by a score of 11-1. Baldwin beat Terry Trafton of Pembroke.

Jack Nitto from Pembroke decided John Risley 11-0. Jim "pop" Morrissey pinned his man in 2:43 of the match. Senior Wayne Barker was pinned with 5:55 left in the match by Billy Cranford. Roy Jones also a senior, decided Jim Reutter of Pembroke State. It was Madman Elliott's turn on the mat and the result was Elliott pinned his man in 2:11 point of the match, he pinned Joe Mareka. Brian Black made his debut on the mat against the Indians. Billy Byrd of the Indians pinned Black in 2:50 of the match. The last match of the featured Paul O'Neal verses Bill Sankey of the Indians. O'Neal was pinned in 4 min. 6 sec.

Three seniors wrestled their last match of their careers. They were Jim Morrissey, Wayne Barker, and Roy Hall and Vance Measure Up to the Georgian Giants.

Theatre Announces Cast

Wilmington College Theatre announces the cast of their forthcoming production, "The Rivals" by Richard B. Sheridan, to be presented on May 1-4 in the S.R.O. Theatre.

"The Rivals" was first performed in 1775 at Covent Garden and secured immediate national recognition for Sheridan. This play has retained its abundance of wit and pervasive humor, the ingenious grouping of the characters, and the heartiness of the fun.

In the role of Lydia Languish, Donna West will be the wealthy, sentimental heroine whose fortune is dependent upon the whims of her aunt, Mrs. Malaprop, played by Pat Haines. Lydia is in love with Captain Jack Absolute, portrayed by Tony Rivenbark, son of Sir Anthony Absolute, played by Sam Garner.

Kenneth Grossinger, David Henry and Bob Keenan will play the roles of three of Lydia's other suitors -- that of Bob Acres, Faulkland and the flamboyant Irish nobleman, Sir Lucius O'Trigger, respectively.

Michael Zipser will be found in the role of Fag, a dandified servant of Captain Absolute while John Blair will portray the courtified coachman of Sir Anthony Absolute. Marc Pope will be David, Bob Acres' timid servant.

The second heroine, Julia, a close friend of Lydia, will be played by Joan Carol McGee and her maid will be Pat Hughes. Gwen Clark has been cast as the scheming maid of Lydia's aunt, Mrs. Malaprop. In the role of the female servant who weaves her way in and out of the complicated plot and unifies the entire play will be Lenore Hagen.

The Wilmington College Theatre's production will be staged in the S.R.O. Theatre on May 1 through 4. Announcement of ticket sales and seat reservations will be made at a later date.

Cafeteria Construction Begins

The next addition to the expanding Wilmington College campus will be a $750,000 combination snack bar - cafeteria building, Feb. 1, 1970 is the completion date set for the building.

The cafeteria will be located directly behind the old faculty parking lot and adjacent to Hoggard Hall.

The first floor will house the kitchen, snack bar, and terrace while the second story will consist of the serving area and dining room.

President William Wagoner confirmed rumors that the building was to be built in the traditional two-story Georgian style.

According to WILCO Business Manager James Price, the total seating capacity of the facility is 678.

The cafeteria is being financed by state and federal funds. The 1967 North Carolina General Assembly appropriated $375,000 for construction of the structure which was matched by an equal amount by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Designs for the building were submitted by the Architectural firm of Ballard, McKim and Sawyer of Wilmington.

Curriculum To Add Asian, African History

Asian and African history may soon be added to the curriculum. Although a specific deadline has not been set the expansion is in the "talking stage."

Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, Dean of Faculty cited a lack of personnel trained in Asian and African affairs as one of the main handicaps.

Presently the only courses offered which pertain to African or Asian history are: Russian History 417, 418 and a spattering in Western Civilization 111 and 112.

Reynolds stressed that the addition of these courses will have to be gradual because of financial reasons. When asked about student interests in these areas Reynolds said, "I think eventually students would become interested if they're not already."

Because of the definite differences between Western cultures as opposed to Asian and African cultures much emphasis will be put upon these cultural differences.

According to the by-laws of the Senate, any member guilty of more than two unexcused absences any quarter will be expelled.

These officers, however, will be allowed a hearing at the next meeting and may be reinstated by a majority vote.

Why P. E. ?

I have a small question to ask. It deals with a problem every student at Wilmington College faces. "What is the purpose of a Physical Education requirement?"

Our reasoning concerning the athletic department does not stop at merely the question at why a mandatory P. E. requirement but encompasses the whole of the department, with the main stress on its attitude, its unhealthy attitude.

The first has never been answered to the satisfaction of a great many people. Though there are some obvious, secondary reasons, these seem to be overshadowed by more pertinent matters.

"The purpose of a Physical Education requirement at Wilmington College is to assure the students of a certain amount of physical conditioning they would not otherwise acquire."

Sound wonderful - no? It just shows that somewhere, some one is interested in our welfare as students. It's not really as simple as all that.

Basic Assumption Number one: physical education is important. So let's require all students, with a few obvious exceptions, to take six hours in this field. Basic Falacy in Thinking Number one: if this physical education is so important, then why not give the student credit toward graduation from it.

Technically, the student does get credit towards graduation from his P.E. requirement. Instead of working for 180 hours, the student who has to take P.E. is working for 186 hours. Basic Falacy in Thinking number one and two: if most students now are working for 186 hours credit for graduation then shouldn't those students incapable of taking P.E. make up these six hours in some other course of "studies"? (No. 3) 180 hours were required before Wilmington College had facilities allowing P.E. to be taught, and 186 hours afterward. Then, for every new department added, the requirement for graduation should increase by six hours.

A personal dislike of this system we feel we share with many students is the idea that making us take these courses will, in the long run, help us. The old adage: "Healthy body, healthy mind." Not so, if you look at the people graduating from these courses.

What right has anyone to pry into our private lives to the extent of forcing us into certain areas we feel are outside the realm of education? Four years is too short of a time to spend three hours a week for two years perspiring, as little as possible, but perspiring.

Our second main objection to the Athletic Department is its attitude. This attitude can be partially explained on the grounds of insecurity. Obviously the P.E. department is not the most popular element on campus, and, perhaps, it has realized this.

This is heightened by the fact that almost every student taking courses in Hanover Hall is doing so only because he is required to do so. This is, of course, true in any field of studies outside of one's major or interests but is more so in P. E.

Therefore, perhaps, the P. E. Department has a feeling they aren't too well liked and would not last too long if the students had any choice in selecting these courses.

All of this makes for unhappy feelings in the department towards a number of students, usually those whom, it is felt, will cause the most trouble. This attitude is extended to all students in reference to a number of departmental policies that seem to be mainly defense mechanisms.

The most obvious defense mechanism is the make-up class. This is designed for the student who has missed more than the allowed number of classes, no matter what the reason. We know of a student who thought he had broken a toe but continued to go to class, because he had taken all of his cuts. These overcuts have to be made up regardless of the excuse or reason for missing. Our friend could have gotten a doctor's excuse to miss the class, it is true, but he would have still had to attend make-up class.

Let us examine the make-up class. It's true name should be "punishment class." If a class is to be truly designed to help the student make-up over cuts, then it stands to reason that the class should consist of the course which he has over cut. No, it consists of as much physical exercises as can be placed in an hour and a half.

The attitude prevalent in the P. E. Department towards the classes is that they are doing the student a great favor. In one way they are, they are allowing him to make-up a class that he might otherwise fail (Of course, if P.E. courses are designed to help the student physically then what can be the purpose of loading him down at the quarter's end, unless it be Punishment?).

Space is a problem and we do not have enough of it here to go into the problem further, but perhaps the opportunity will again present itself. But one last thought: it might be time to look into the Physical Education Department and find out its true purpose.

Crime On Goat Island

Loneliness, Alienation, Sin

By DAVID JAMES

In reviewing any college or university production it is necessary to keep in mind the essential nature of college theatre and to realize that the purpose of professional and community theatre is entirely different. Professional theatre aims to present a finished product that is entertaining and, in some cases, instructive. College theatre seeks to present material that is challenging, provocative, and often unfamiliar in a production that allows the actors to test and expand their abilities. Of course, distinctions do not always hold true. Nevertheless, it seems to be a point of confusion among many people.

On the last two days of February and first two of March, Vgo Betti's "Crime on Goat Island", a drama of loneliness, alienation, and sin, was presented in the Wilmington College Theatre. The play was directed by W. Terry Rogers and the cast consisted of Jere Hodgkin, Beth Grant, Donna West, John Blair, and Abbe Godwin. The production marked a further attempt by Director Rogers to introduce contemporary plays of substance, meaning, and relevance to the theatre-going public of Wilmington.

In criticizing the performances it is necessary to recognize the obvious immaturity of the actors. They are young and relatively inexperienced. The play calls for actors of great maturity and control. However, the age and experience of an actor are immutable facts. He cannot be criticized on that account. The basis for criticism must necessarily be the degree to which the actor adopts his background and talent to the demands of the work.

Jere Hodgkin in the role of the central character Angelo gave an extremely fine performance. He effectively captured the attention of audience and held it throughout the evening. He was by turns fiery, passionate, humorous, frightening, and frightened. He effectively portrayed a variety of emotions, purposes, and actions. However, he lacked the strength and demonic intensity necessary to Angelo's character. Too often he merely indicated rather than explored the depths of Angelo's personality.

Beth Grant as Agata, the mother, gave what was in many ways the most disappointing performance of the evening. It is true that she exhibited a certain strength and maturity rare in an actress of her age. Her stage presence was imposing at all times. The essence of the character was, however, missing. There was no fire or passion beneath the rather soical surface. She spoke throughout in a heavy, flat monotone. In many spots she was simply dull. The great reservoir of Agata's character was untapped.

The hysterical, neurotic daughter Sylvia was given depth by Donna West. She conveyed poignantly the desperate weakness and loneliness of the girl and the horrible sense of guilt and sin. The fact that she was wooden and mechanical at times hardly distracted from the finer moments of her performance.

In a minor role John Blair offered an intriguing and convincing portrait of old Edwardo, the family's only link with the outside world. He conveyed subtly the character of a man possessed by lust and indifference.

It is always a pleasure to watch a young actor or

SOUNDING OFF

To The Editor:

Matters concerning my newspaper have weighed heavily upon me since last fall. This paper has justly been referred to as a leftist sheet. As is obvious from your own opinion poll -- notably in the last issue -- however, the vast majority of the student body leans to the right on the political spectrum. I am concerned that rather than being a representative news media on our campus, the paper tends to preach or indoctrinate, if you will. Academic freedom is undisputedly one of our greatest assets; however, as I am sure all our leaders from George Wallace to Senator McCarthy would agree, the destruction by left wing agitators and black militants of our campuses will necessarily bring an end to this freedom. Because of my beliefs I have written you this letter in the hope that our paper may tend to give broader and less biased reports in the future.

state and regional conventions.

After discovering that SNEA had $300 in their treasury as compared to only $350 in the Senate treasury, the Senators refused this request.

Despite arguments that the money had always been given to this club, another reason for the denial of the request was because it might encourage other clubs on campus to do the same.

After Sophomore Class President Bill Harrell requested to know why the "rest rooms in the Pub haven't been cleaned," a committee of Bob Wiard and Mike Shean were appointed to look in to this matter.

Harrell did acknowledge the fact that he only knew about the condition of one of the restrooms.

Junior Class Senator Chris Deasy reported that a request to open the book store earlier in the morning at the beginning of each quarter had been made to the manager of the bookstore, Mrs. Ruth Standland.

Mrs. Standland replied that opening earlier was impossible, but that it would be feasible to open on Saturday.

The next senate meeting has been set for March 24.

Chris Deasy (J) Yes. If you are old enough to register for the draft you are old enough to vote.

Jim Ferger (J) No. Most people that age are not interested enough in politics.

Barnes Welverton (F) No. I don't think at 18 people are ready to vote.

Coach Brooks and Coach Mihal are looking forward to another fine year. The team is intact from last year with the exception of Jim Sanders who is now playing in the Atlanta Braves' farm system. Returning from last year are pitchers Chuck Cuppet, Pete Eyer, Eddie Lewis, Jim Johnson, Jim Harris, and John Hester. Infielders are Pete Daughtry, Sam Askew, Paul Livingston, Jerry Martin, and Bobby Dunn. Outfielders are Jim Hall, Sandy Dew, Wayne Johnson, and Gene Russ. Catchers are Jim Atkins and Jim Fugate.

There are four rookies working out with the Seahawks this spring. Eddie Booth, who plays the outfield, infield, and pitches, Eddie Atkins, a left-handed pitcher, Barnes Yelverton, a right-handed pitcher, and Jesse Smith, a first baseman. The coaches feel they will be a fine asset to the team. Last year, the Seahawks had a little trouble hitting. Coach Mihal is working really hard on this and feels they are coming along fine. Coach Mihal stated that Daughtry, Askew, and Atkins are hitting the ball really hard.

The first game of the season is March 15, Saturday, at 1:00 p.m. It will be a doubleheader at home against the University of West Virginia.

Two All District Hawks

Two National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) soccer All-Americans are members of the NAIA All-District 29 soccer team released here Sunday.

Rufus Hackney of St. Andrews College at Laurinburg, Chairman of District 29 and also the District's Coach of the Year, said goalie Craig Hannas of St. Andrews College and back Richard Murphy of Campbell College both attained All-American status along with All-District and All-South honors.

The combined All-District 29 team scored a total of 79 goals during the 1968 campaign. The mythical team also includes eight members of the 1968 All-South team and four previous members of the All-South squad. In addition, the seven members of the honorable mention team scored a total of 38 goals during the campaign.

THE TEAM

Goalie -- Craig Hannas -- St. Andrews College, sophomore, All-American 1967 and 1968, All-Dixie Conference 1968. 326 saves, scored four goals on penalty kicks and had one assist.

COACH OF THE YEAR
Rufus Hackney, St. Andrews College.

HAWK'S VIEW

By DAYNE SMITH

It's the end of the winter quarter, and this school has been just as stagnant as ever. Basketball and Wrestling seasons are over. One team had a winning record, and one a losing record. As everyone has already expressed their opinions on the subject, I would like mine to be known. The student body here at Wilco are the best complainers of any campus on the east coast, more than likely in the western half of the country too. I congratulate all the complainers here, because you have had another undefeated season. Better luck next quarter. Baseball players do your best and go to the national finals, it's the only way to beat the complainers.

As Captain Seahawk, I can say that the students here at Wilco have had another great year at heckling. The only problem is that they have heckled our team and cheerleaders as much as the opposing teams. Personally, I can say that since Captain Seahawk appeared here at Wilco, he has been called everything from "Captain Squawk" to "Super Chicken". Again, thank you student body. So just sit around until next year and think up some new ones, I'll appreciate it very much.

If, by any chance, you can't come up with any new ones, why not support the teams and support does not mean heckle our players or the cheerleaders. They do well enough for a student body that does not support the team. I ask this: who do you support more, the high school basketball team or the college basketball team?

An argument for not supporting the team is: "This college does not have dorms." Well neither does the glorified New Hanover high school. They filled Brogden Hall to capacity. We did not even come close to filling Hanover Hall during our own Homecoming!! And we want University status. We really show that we are going to be a great asset to the UNC system.

Another argument is: "There is not any communication to let the students know what is going on at Wilco." Wrong again. This sports page listed the home schedules for both basketball and wrestling on two different occasions, and once during the fall quarter. If you will notice, this is the baseball schedule. The tennis and golf schedules will be listed in a later copy.

There isn't any reason for any team here at Wilco not to be supported. If they aren't, it's the student body's fault that they are not supported. It shows an outsider that the students here DO NOT CARE!

How many times have you heard this line on a Saturday night: "There is nothing to do", "This town is dead" or "I'm tired of having nowhere to go". Just about every weekend during this quarter there was something happening (going on) here at the college. Think about what you might just enjoy here at the college.

There's more to college than classes! Don't be apathetic all your life, cause "YOU GOT TO GET UP OFF YOUR --- BEFORE YOU CAN WALK."

VOLUME 11 NUMBER 10

WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N.C.

FRIDAY, APRIL 11, 1969

Poverty such as this exists not only in large cities, but also in large towns such as Wilmington where this photograph was taken by photographer Andy Howell. To see what experts say can and must be done about the existing poverty in our nation, turn to page 4.

Great Yardstick

Supposedly the greatest yardstick available to democratic societies is the percentage of voters participating in this glorious pastime. Somehow the Americans, who have had the vote for as long as apple pie and J. Edgar Hoover have been around, have always fared rather poorly percentage wise at the polls.

Americans make up the majority of the Wilmington College student body, and like their brothers of the ballots every where Wilco students never seem to see the need to vote, subsequently Wilmington College has had the reputation for having a number of doing nothing student governments.

This year has been a ripe example, but it is too late to do anything about that now. However next year is right around the corner, though it could quite easily be too late to save Wilco from another year of boring ..

Oh well, why go into it.

As some of you have guessed this editorial concerns voting, of all kinds but particularly on campus voting.

I felt it was about time to allow those beleaguered few who do not quite follow some of the heavy thinking here (whew) to have a chance to catch up on the line of thought.

Western civilization, as we know it, has long endured without too much worry about the vote. Americans, however, seem to have this great sense of destiny, or something, and claim that their's is the greatest of all civilizations because it is a democracy (therefore enters the question of the vote).

The percentage of Americans who somehow forget to register to vote, forget when the exact day was, make other arrangements or just go fishing is appalling. And no particular class of voter, be he intelligent or poor, is barred from this lacadaical attitude toward voting. Of course, we realize that it is entirely too strenuous and too much trouble to go all the way to your nearest poll to register and then to vote, for shame us asking so much of such conscientious citizens. For shame!

Wilmington College students in their student government elections have it easy. There is no registration requirement, no poll tax, not even a literacy test (now there is an idea). All one needs to do is walk to the Pub, most students it would seem have at least this much time they can waste on voting, and spend the three minutes it takes to vote (longer if anyone is ahead of you - fat chance).

Certainly does seem an effort.

We suppose the easiest way of making our point is to use the old stand-by argument: how can you honestly complain about the way of student government (nay, even the entirety of the whole of the school) unless you vote. Shut up or vote!

You see there are a number of means of trying to bug people to vote. Please do. There is not a student on campus important enough to overlook the ballot, no matter what that student may think.

Americans always seem to be last at the ballot poll. Are you an American?

No Barriers

There are a couple of pictures in this issue of the SEAHAWK that have to do with a problem that has been getting a lot of nationwide attention, and -- about time. There is not much we can add to what these pictures say and what else has already been said and we do not intend to say too much more.

These pictures deal with a problem that knows no racial or religious barriers, it has struck members of every society and culture in the world and will continue to do so.

There is a great deal of work to be done. It is about the only field in the world that has no waiting line. It needs your help and it is a curable disease.

America-The Beautiful

by Mike Glancy

My initial intention for writing this piece for the paper was to deliver a searing condemnation of this area and you, the people of the North Carolina gentry.

Since arriving here I have studied you and your value system. I have been much saddened by the fact that you seem to care only for wine, women and cars and very little about the workings of your community, your state, nor your country (other than those issues pertaining to the perpetuation of segregation or your chauvinistic support of the war machine).

I, too, realize that you have grown tired of hearing of your apparent apathy. So I thought I'd try to penetrate your apathetic crust and approach you with a cause that transcends political or ethnic allegiances and which requires of your little time or money.

The subject of which I am speaking is one that concerns the lives of millions of women and children not unlike you or the members of your family. These innocents live in Biafra, a part of the largest and most prosperous nation of Africa, Nigeria.

As you may well know Nigeria and Biafra are now involved in a Civil War which has effected the lives of these women and children possibly more poignantly than those involved in the actual fighting.

This brings us to the point at hand: the civilians and their involvement in this bloody affair. These people caught up in the debacle of war are dying at a rate of 12,000 a day from the effects of Kwashiorkor, "a deadly degenerate disease associated with protein starvation."

Apply this to the fact that millions will soon die of carbohydrate famine if relief is not soon forthcoming.

The U. S. has adopted "a wait and see" policy while admitting that 3,000 to 5,000 tons of food a day are needed now to curb the present rate of starvation.

Thousands of Americans are now involved in programs to alleviate the suffering of the Biafran people. These are private ventures in dire need of funds). A decision is to make in your hearts now, whether to allow this needless suffering to continue or to sacrifice one hamburger or coke at lunch to feed a child in Biafra now lying along a roadside in agony or wallowing in the mud of a deserted village too weak to resist the slow, painful onslaught from within its frail body.

I can think of no greater project for the fraternity, the sorority, the BSU or the newspaper to embark on than that of saving lives.

I pray that each of you can find it in your hearts to aid in this most worthy of causes.

Anyone interested in knowing more about this cause and how you may aid in the fight to relieve the suffering now taking place should contact me, Mike Glancy, either in the newspaper office or at 791-0929 any time after 5 p.m. or write Operation Outrage, The North American Coalition for Biafran Relief, Box 1202 Cardinal Station, Washington, D.C. 20017.

Remember the words of U Thant: "No man can save himself ... or his people unless he ... identifies himself with and works for the whole of mankind."

Good Grief!

by Ed Norris

With the coming of Spring, one may also see Father Minus and his dotting disciples atop the pub discussing his recent safari into the swamps of Brunswick to seek the rare enthuse bird.

It seems the sage had been in hopes of establishing a colony at Wilco, but has lost all hope since the bird he had shipped all the way back from the Calabash River began to shed its feathers when it flew over Hanover Hall.

Rumors had been spread that the sage had been banished from the campus by the kindly Tommy Terrific and his band of jolly men, but the sage assured all that since the coming of the new emperor, all were welcome on campus.

The sage told the disciples of his recent visit to the annual fertility rites at Ocean Drive and announced plans for an attempt to bring world peace at the Flower Fling to be held here.

The sage has assured all that after the Spring rites he intends to confer with Quinn the Eskimo concerning plans to enlighten all new students. The sage claims a mysterious haze coming from the polluted Cape Fear River destroys the minds of all who come in contact with it if proper precautions are not taken.

We are still wondering whether the disciples will be allowed to continue their symposiums atop the pub if Dr. Know and his band of pink flingers discover the contents of his cough syrup bottle. The sage does not seem to be disturbed and says that this is only the beginning.

LIBRARY DEDICATED

Dr Benjamin E. Powell, librarian of Duke University's Libraries, was the keynote speaker during the dedication ceremonies of the William Madison Randall Library March 30. Both the Randall Library and the Chemistry - Physics building were dedicated at this time.

Library Receives New Equipment

A new coin operated microfilm copier, audio visual equipment and a "listening library" are the latest additions to the William Madison Randall Library.

The new microfilm machine is the 3M 400 Reader-Printer. For a dime a sheet the machine produces enlarged photo-static copies of microfilm.

The microfilm copier is located in the Microfilm Room on the first floor of the library.

A listening library of tapes and phonograph records will be available to students in about a month, Russell Pease, librarian, disclosed.

The listening library will be housed in the room adjacent to the Circulation Desk and will consist of drama, poetry, music, etc. Mr. Pease then added "The records will not circulate."

Over 600 phonograph records are now being processed for the collection.

The library also recently acquired a sophisticated assortment of audio visual equipment which includes: a self threading 16mm projector, a stereo phonograph, a stereo tape recorder, an AM-FM stereo receiver, an automatic slide projector, an opaque projector, an overhead projector and an equipment table.

This equipment will soon be available for use by instructors in the library.

Head Librarian Helen Hagan wanted to inform all students that "The New York Times" from 1945 to the present, and most of the Civil War years is available to all interested students.

CHALLENGE '69: The Ur

EDITOR'S NOTE: SIX WILMINGTON COLLEGE STUDENTS, SENIORS GEORGE CROUCH, RENEE HARTMAN, AND TERRY WORTLEY, JUNIORS GLENDY HIGGINS AND TONY RIVENBARK, AND SOPHOMORE BOB KEENAN ATTENDED CHALLENGE '69, A SYMPOSIUM ON "THE URBAN CRISIS" -- THE STUDENT'S RESPONSE "ON THE CAMPUS OF WAKE FOREST COLLEGE MARCH 20-22. ON THE FOLLOWING PAGES WE WILL TRY TO BRING TO YOU WHAT THE SPEAKERS SAID DURING THE SYMPOSIUM, ATTENDED BY STUDENTS FROM ABOUT 40 COLLEGES IN THE COUNTRY.

EDMUND MUSKIE

Keynoting the Symposium was Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine.

EDMUND MUSKIE

"The Urban Problem is the most pressing of our domestic problems and challenge is a good word to use describing this urban problem," he began. "The American society is a crises society. Each day's news presents us with a new problem or crises."

According to Muskie, "Things have not improved in the cities of our country in the last ten years. The hard core slum areas are not shrinking."

One of the main problems in the cities of today is the fact that white citizens are fleeing to the suburbs. These citizens leave the cities with shaky tax structures, no resources to upgrade public facilities, and dwindling industrial opportunities.

There is a rapid decrease of inner city job opportunities. Job opportunities for blacks decrease as job opportunities for whites in suburbs increase."

Muskie feels that mutual trust and tolerance have been undermined. "There is a temptation to look away or to give easy answers of solutions."

"A polarization has come to exist. There are those who chose to cuddle in the corner guided by their indifference and those who chose to throw rocks guided by their frustration."

"The Urban Crises", he says, "has been of our making. Therefore, it is capable of our solution."

"The government must help," he believes. "It can help with educational programs in the ghettos, opportunities for employment, food, and medical care. It must ask to establish agencies which will work to relieve urban pressures."

"The government must look beyond the present and look ahead to the future."

Muskie emphasized that "Whatever the government does, it must do so from a sense of justice and equality."

Speaking about the private sector of the population, Muskie assured the audience that the people of the ghetto need outlets just as they did.

"The private sector assures us constantly that private enterprise has 'done well,'" he stated. "Challenge them to prove their point."

He believes that the private sector must focus on new job opportunities. "No job is better than one firmly based in our private enterprise system. The government can't create this."

"No single issue plagues slums as much as the lack of jobs."

"If private enterprise is going to survive, it must survive as the vehicle to diminish human idleness."

"Private enterprise should work to break down the hostile suburban attitude encountered by the Negro. You can't take away his job in the ghetto and then refuse him a job in the suburb."

"Racial discrimination is the brand of the suburbs," he stated.

Speaking to the students in the audience, Muskie told them that the role they could play was to take direct social action in legitimate channels that society provides: tutorial projects, VISTA, political activities and work with retarded children.

"You can challenge those who lead. YOU can serve as society's conscience. This is the business of youth in any society."

"You must do this thing passionately. Life should be lived passionately, as long as passion has no harm."

"Reform does not require revolution. When the message is a just one, why let the medium destroy the message?" he questioned.

"History teaches that when militants and revolutionaries take over the cause is lost."

"The Urban Crises can't be solved by the government alone. It also needs the business community and the individual citizen. It needs us all."

"Ideas," he said, "can clash without being subversive. And violence and militance, in the end is harmful and leads to distrust."

"An underlying problem in our society today is the spreading conviction that material gain is the most important thing without regard for anything else."

"All of us are responsible. The heavier responsibility is on our leaders who fell short, and the citizen whose preoccupation is too inward and not enough outward."

"YOU'RE THE FUTURE, MAY YOU SERVE BETTER IN THAT RESPECT THAN WE DID!" Muskie ended.

What we need to do is to make capitalism more compassionate.

Congress is good at setting goals, but it is not as good at carrying them out.

THE URBAN CRISIS...

Michael Harrington, author of "The Other America" and presently chairman of the Board of The League for Industrial Democracy, spoke on the welfare system and the crises of the unemployed.

MICHAEL HARRINGTON

Michael Harrington believes the idea of Martin Luther King who said that the people of this country must have an economic bill of rights which would guarantee each citizen a job or a liveable income.

Harrington attacked the myth that says the "poor are a bunch of lazy people who don't want to work or either want to get something for nothing."

"This is preposterous and has nothing to do with the problem," he stressed.

There is an overwhelming majority of the poor who can do work--and work long hours for poverty wages. But many can't work, they are either too young, too old, or disabled."

"Poverty has a great future, most of the poverty people are young!"

He says that some who we call unemployed are actually employable. People are not unemployable through their own fault, but through ours."

"If people had the right of a decent job, this would affect many of our other social problems," he stated.

We are dealing with a complex reality, according to Harrington, as we make some progress, what remains becomes more difficult."

He noted that the poor don't have pensions, they are discriminated against by social security and they don't have decent services."

Even in jail, he pointed out, the poor are treated differently. "There is poverty on every level of our society."

Many people tend to believe that the poor of America are living it up on welfare. Harrington corrected this myth by saying that only a minority of the poor get any money from this, and those who do receive money from welfare receive only half of that they need.

America needs uniform welfare laws, he said by giving the example of one state, Connecticut pays $55 a month under the Aid to Dependent Children welfare program while Mississippi only gives the recipients of this program $8.50.

"I am convinced that the federal programs do not aid the poor, but add to their poverty."

He believes that we should get away from discriminatory policies in regard to the poor, but not only the poor need help, he declared, but also those who voted for George Wallace. They have very real problems."

"The social security program also needs reform," he said.

"In India, poverty is a tragedy, in America, poverty is a crime," he concluded.

YOU CAN CHALLENGE ...

Herbert Kramer, consultant to the Office of Economic Opportunity, talked about the "Crises of Underemployment."

HERBERT KRAMER

Unemployment, said Herbert Kramer, is better than underemployment because when a person is unemployed he not only has nothing to do, but can do "his own thing."

However, when a person is underemployed, he is "doing someone else's thing" and is being exploited; he's doing the system's thing.

"Many of our people can sleepwalk, never awakening to the nightmare around us."

Kramer believes that in the War on Poverty, not all of the resources of our country have been used.

However, the War on Poverty has aroused expectations and also has called forth the greatest volunteer movement.

More than a million people have volunteered freely, they have pitched in to do something to help and have come because their conscience called.

There are, Kramer noted, many different attitudes about the poor. Some say poverty is caused by a lack of money, others from a family breakdown, some believe the poor lack a personal fiber, and still others believe poverty is caused by the consequences of human weakness.

"There is little agreement as to what the enemy is and how the battle should be waged," he said.

Work is a central fact of life in American thought and experience, however, 40% of the people classified as poor in this country are under 15 years old. Another 25% are over the age of 55. This half of the poor people can't work.

"There are 11 million people in this country whose poverty won't change by having a job."

(photo by Howell)

Crisis - Students Response

"Most of the remaining poor want to work. I've never known any poor people who said that being poor is fun," he commented.

Most of those remaining poor people can't get jobs which will give them decent wages.

The poor lack a basic education and the basic skills which they need. Other things which hinder a person in finding a job include: having a police record, being black, not speaking the language, and their motivation is destroyed by prospective employers.

"So why work to be poor when you can be poor doing your own thing?" he asked.

It is about time that private enterprise went out and got people to work for them," Kramer said.

"We are all imprisoned by the 'system.' The 'system' keeps the poor where they are. They are confronted by the system. Is it any wonder that the poor turn off and give up?"

"We are all worried about violence," Kramer said in concluding, "But apathy is worse. Underemployment is worse than unemployment because it leads to apathy."

WHAT WE NEED TO DO ...

Southern Regional Director of the Urban League, Clarence Coleman, spoke on the role of self-help organizations.

CLARENCE COLEMAN

Clarence Coleman believes that we have a gap in our society today between the young and the old and between the whites and the blacks.

Non-governmental agencies give a degree of flexibility, and are closer to the people. They have a degree of independence, and are controlled by the people.

Coleman believes that in the future there is going to have to be a closer relationship between government and nongovernmental agencies.

He is disappointed in the church of today which he sees as being too divided, rendered ineffective by its organization, controlled by conservative laity, led by underpaid ministers, and too comfortable and too affluent.

"However," he said, "we should not give up on the church because we have lost confidence in the people who are running it."

"The students of the NOW generation need to help us so that change must come about," he declared.

In speaking about the business community, Coleman said, "We know the business people are conservative by nature and unless we can find a way to get businessmen to take more of a role in community affairs, we're going to have a real problem."

He outlined several steps students might take to work with the business community in developing a greater positive interest.

First Coleman believes students should think of how the local Chambers of Commercés could set up Youth Advisory Committees.

Business courses should be re-taught and a new emphasis in business should be placed on taking courses in the humanities.

"What we need to do is to make capitalism more compassionate."

In working with government agencies students can help the agencies realize that their services should be given in attitudes of respect and dignity.

"Poverty in North Carolina is a disasterous situation that needs the attention of all of us."

CONGRESS IS GOOD ...

Consultant to the Office of Economic Opportunity and to the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Dr. Chester Hartman's subject was the crisis of urban environment.

DR. HARTMAN

Dr. Hartman began his speech by pointing out that twenty years ago Congress passed a National Housing Bill which called for a decent home and suitable living conditions for every family.

"Congress is good at setting goals, he said, 'but not as good at carrying out these goals.'"

Good housing is important because of the traditional reasons of health and safety, but many people are still killed each year from inadequacies in their housing, he noted.

Housing is the setting for so much of our lives and it takes so large a part of the family budget, he continued.

"Where you live and how you live is like a badge. Housing is the last really good indicator of status," he asserted.

Bad housing comes in a package, all bad housing is grouped together and who ever lives there gets a low deal.

Most of the people in the inner city rent their homes; therefore, they are at the mercy of their landlord. The people who live in this housing seem to be paying too much for a crummy apartment.

Beginning a review of what has been done in the area of housing in the last ten years, Hartman said he was tempted to say nothing. "But precious little has been done as compared to the need."

"It would be better to begin now to work on improving the housing of our nation, not to wait for the perfect moment because meanwhile the poor are suffering the physical and emotional damages of poor housing," Hartman declared.

Projects are barren and ugly, he said. "The message of these projects is that the government will provide you with structural sound houses, but no frills."

"Public housing housing projects are not much better than slums. The turnover rate is high in these projects."

One of the things wrong in these projects is that as soon as the family income reaches a certain level they have to move and break any social ties they have made.

Hartman definitely feels this should change.

"A house is more than a roof over one's head. It also means dignity, political power, and control," he ended.

REFORM DOES NOT ...

Speaking on the role of the church was Dr. Harvey Cox, author of "The Secular City."

HARVEY COX

"The Bible begins with man in a garden, but ends with him in a city," said Harvey Cox. "Man is meant to be an urban creature."

"However, our cities have become symbols of despair."

One problem, Cox feels, is that people are still placing too much emphasis on the efforts of the individual.

Looking to the church of the future, Cox hopes to see it leaving the existentialist philosophy and moving towards a Marxist philosophy, or a philosophy of group, not individual effort.

Cox does see some signs of hope especially in the black communities and on the university campuses where people are beginning to see that the individual effort is no longer going to work.

He believes that it is time for a new epoch of utopianism. "We should have conscious experiments with new forms of communal structures."

THERE IS POVERTY ...

Saul Alinsky, executive director of the Industrial Areas Foundation in Chicago.

SAUL ALINSKY

Saul Alinsky declared that the democratic process became a way of life to try to achieve the values of dignity of individuals, freedom, and equality.

These values are accepted as prime articles of faith, they are not debatable, discussed or voted upon.

In order to make this way of life work, you have to have a situation where all people are participating as citizens.

"If you are a white racist, if you are also committed to a free and open society for you and your children, this is a contradiction," he asserted.

"You must of necessity stand for complete equality for all people of the country." If you have any hope for a free society to continue."

"Until you can look at a black exactly as you do a white, you're prejudiced. And the same thing goes for a white, he added.

"Violence takes many forms," he pointed out. "And the violence our society has visited on the blacks is totally incomprehensible to the whites."

"In order for citizens to act as citizens, they must be organized. You can't act as individuals any longer. You have to

Support Viet Nam War, General Tolson Advises

"I have no question in my mind as to why we are in Viet-Nam," Lieutenant General John Tolson said during a question-answer session on campus during the day he was here to lecture in the Faculty Lecture Series program.

General Tolson, Commander of the XVIII Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg, recently completed a 15 month tour of duty as Commanding General of the First Air Cavalry Division in Viet Nam.

"We entered South Viet Nam at the request of the legitimate government at that time. There is now a government in South Viet Nam which is respected by the majority of the people in Viet Nam and recognized by the United States," he said.

The general agreed that there has been no war which has had more conflicts than this one.

However, he believes that once a country has entered a war, it is the duty of the people of the country to support it; not decide whether the country is right or wrong.

College Hires New Teachers

Two of the social sciences in Wilmington College's curriculum, political science and sociology are soon to be strengthened.

Dean of Faculty J. Paul Reynolds recently revealed plans to hire new instructors in these fields.

According to plans, next year Dr. J. C. Dixon will head the Political Science department. Dr. Dixon received his Ph. D. from Emory University and has taught at High Point College and East Carolina University.

Reynolds described Dixon as being "quantitatively oriented and specializing in American Government."

Dr. Sam Chambers will continue teaching in the Political Science and History departments.

Sociology, which at the present time is manned by one part-time instructor will have one full-time and one part-time instructor next year.

Concerning the popularity of political science and sociology at WILCO, Reynolds said, "These classes will fill up rapidly, they are very popular."

Reynolds said that as soon as an adequate staff is secured he would propose to the State Board of Higher Education that Wilmington College be granted a major in Political Science and a minor in Sociology.

He also believes the draft is a fair thing, "we've been using it for a long time," he commented. "It is possible that we could make some improvements in the way the draft is being done." He admitted that perhaps the draft isn't fairly done. "I believe the United States would get involved again. I don't believe the word war is out of our dictionary yet, but I do believe the day will come when there are no more wars, but I also believe the country should be prepared."

The boys fighting in Viet Nam receive rugged, realistic training both here in the United States and again when they first reach southeastern Asia.

"The product we get from our training here in the United States is very, very fine. They have no shortcomings and, in my opinion, are very adequate," he emphasized.

The man starts out at training centers here where all drill instructors are veterans of the Viet Nam war. "They start off with first hand instruction."

"Then he goes to the war where he is assigned to a squad and put in with 'old-timers!'"

"It doesn't take many months before a boy is a 'seasoned veteran' because the tour of duty in Viet Nam is only for a year.

Many boys are extending their tour to three months longer, or six months, or a year. "Now there are quite a few men who are coming back" he commented. "A good share of them are patriotic or whatever you want to call it. They want to stay with it and keep on with it."

Speaking about the stopping of the bombing of North Viet Nam, he said that this certainly makes the military effort more difficult. "There is nothing now that we can do to stop them from getting their supplies and new equipment."

"This is making the situation militarily difficult, but I feel it is a key towards getting peace."

"We're carrying out our objectives which is to show Hanoi they can't by force come in and take over South Viet Nam."

"I hope and pray we have successful negotiations and I hope we don't give up our objectives," he stressed.

War Statements

1962 (9000 U.S. troops in South Vietnam):

"U. S. aid to South Vietnam has reached a peak and will start to level off."

- Defense Secretary McNamara, in the New York Times, May 12.

1963 (11,000 U. S. troops):

"The South Vietnamese should achieve victory in three years." -- Admiral Harry D. Felt, Commander in chief of U. S. forces in the Pacific, in the New York Times, January 12.

1962:

"Victory in the sense it would apply to this kind of war is just months away, and I am confident that the reduction of American advisers can begin any time now." -- Gen. Paul D. Hartkins, Commander of the Military Assistance Command in Saigon, quoted in Stars and Stripes, November 1 (the day Ngo Dinh Diem was overthrown by his own army).

1964 (16,000 U.S. troops):

"I am hopeful we can bring back additional numbers of men. I say this because I personally believe this is a war the Vietnamese must fight. I don't believe we can take on that combat task for them." -- Sec. McNamara, in The New Republic, February 3.

Trip Answers Questions For Mott

by Renee Hartman
With a hundred dollars in his pocket freshman Steve Mott left Wilmington at the beginning of January in search of a "better place."

Even though Steve had been dissatisfied as a freshman during the fall quarter, he had not actually planned to leave although he had been wishfully talking about it during that time.

His decision to leave was made after talking to friends who "attend out of town big colleges" who were telling him about "what was going on."

"I felt like I was missing everything," he said.

Talking about this town and the college, Steve stated, "Nobody here knew what was going on."

They were all apathetic, they didn't care about what was going on outside of Wilmington. And everybody was so biased, about race, religion, anybody that was different."

Other than finding a commercial art school -- his hopeful college major -- Steve didn't really know what he was seeking, but he did want to find out if things were "like this" everywhere. "I was hoping there was a better place. That's all I wanted, ing one group to hurt another."

Steve used most of the hundred dollars he had when he left here to get to Boston -- traveling by bus -- and to eat when he first arrived.

He also spent money buying books and underground newspapers. However, most of Steve's reading came from books from the public libraries of Boston.

"I got a library card the first day I was there," a better place."

Because a friend had written him and told him that the people in Boston were really wild, hippie type people, Steve went there.

As Steve lived and walked and talked among these people, he discovered that they were no different from the ones he had left. As he said, "I thought they would be free of the hates and biases but I discovered when I got there that they weren't."

"They were just as biased as the people here, but they were biased in another way. People here hate different races and religions, people there (hippies) hate anyone that is straight."

Steve's parents, he admits, were upset when he left college; however, Steve feels, "They knew I had to find myself."

"The trip answered a lot of questions for me," he stressed.

Now back in college and working the 12 - 6 A.M. shift at a local plant, Steve's main thing, as he says, is that "I am a humanist and I believe in helping people, helping society, but not help-he said, "I was there to sort of get away from people and the easiest way to get away from people is to get inside a book."

For entertainment Steve, who was living with his friend, wandered around the streets talking to people, went to hippie hangouts, visited lectures at different churches and colleges, and watched campus demonstrations.

"Every college would have a demonstration once in a while and different groups would take over a building and get their demands answered and then it would be another group's turn," he said describing them.

Still speaking about the demonstrations, Steve believes the people participating in them were too violent and that a lot of them were in them for fun.

"I watched and talked to the people. None of the causes were really worth the means."

After his money was gone, Steve decided to get a job. "At first I tried to get one with my long hair, but no one would even talk to me. So as a last resort, I got my hair cut because I was starving."

His first job was as an encyclopedia salesman for a "shyster" firm. This firm would get its salesmen into homes under false pretenses, such as a survey. They would then tell the people they were getting a $1500 offer for $500.

Steve stayed with this for about two weeks. "I couldn't sell it to people because I felt guilty about lying to them."

Next he tried working in a grocery store, but left this after a "day or two" when one of the men there told him that if he wanted to stay there and work full time that in a few years he could be a manager of his own store.

"I told them I didn't want to stay in a grocery store for a couple of years. There's not much creativity involved in putting stock on shelves."

His next job, working as a stock boy in a big company that made prototype scientific equipment with lasers, Steve described as "pretty interesting."

At this point of his trip, however, Steve was getting tired of the cold weather, he hadn't located the commercial art school he was seeking, and he also felt the "people there weren't much better."

Leaving Boston at the beginning of March, Steve had a dollar in his pocket. When he reached Washington, traveling by bus, he left the bus after deciding that since he'd never seen Washington before, this would be a good opportunity.

He spent ninety cents to leave his suitcase in the station and spent the next two days at the Smithsonian Institute and at all of the different monuments and galleries.

"I spent the nights sitting up in a seat in the bus station," said Steve, "and I was approached by a bunch of queers and drunks and was winked at by one nice looking girl."

Steve had nothing to eat during these two days, but saved his dime in case he needed it in the near future. "I used it to call my parents when I came home."

Music Department To Present Opera

"Pepto's Golden Flower," a one-act opera, will be presented by the Music Department April 17-18 in the auditorium of New Hanover High School.

Written by Mary Elizabeth Caldwell, a contemporary American composer, the opera is a children's piece set in California in the early nineteenth century.

The story takes place after a disastrous earthquake has struck the old mission on Santa Inez.

Main parts in the opera are handled by Dianne Braak as Pepto; Brenda Taylor, Rosita; Eddie Lockamy, the Padre; Charles Dail, Manuel; and Paul Roderick, who has a three part role.

Miss Ann Darden is production director and Frank Honey is music director. Both are instructors in the department.

Stage directors are Terry Wortley and Sharon Blake. Other students in the production are John Richardson who is doing the sound and lights; Sara Fowler, costumes; Charles Coleman, properties; Debbie Bagget, dancing; and Danny Grant, scenery.

Others are Kathy Wilson, programs; Donna Jones, make-up; Kathie Wilson and Betty Szczerbiak, publicity.

Choreographer for the opera is Mrs. Dorothy Nesbitt.

There will be a special children's performance of the opera on April 17 at 4 p.m. Regular performances will begin at 8 p.m. Admission for children is free and one dollar will be charged for adults.

A FINE ARTS COMMITTEE PRESENTATION

Skirts And Sweaters Forever

Is there a typical Wilco student? When asked this question students on campus had a good variety of answers as they tried to answer this question.

"Apathetic, bigoted, intelligence average, interests mostly beer and parties," decided one freshman girl.

"An ambitious person that knows how to work and how to relax. He is conscious of his responsibilities to his friends and environment," said another freshman girl.

"Certain sects appear to be undesirable such as the 'hippie' group. Other groups are active, proud participants. Unfortunately, too many are not school spirited," decided one senior girl.

One junior girl describes the typical boy on campus as "draft dodging."

"The typical college coed is a native or long time resident of Wilmington who is highly infected by the local view that 'life is not change,' that Wilmington is truly an example of the All-American city and completely unpossessed of any types of stimulating ideas," said a senior girl.

She continued, "She has probably never experienced a situation in which she was challenged to think and would be extremely shocked at the thought of daring to be an individual."

"By the way, she is so conventional that you seldom see her dress in even the nationally accepted styles; for example, boots, bell-bottoms, skirts and sweater forever."

This same girl described the male students in much the same manner, but added, "He is even more resistant to change than the coed. He is more of a racist and probably voted for Wallace.

He is so very straight that he probably doesn't realize that there are opinions other than his own."

A freshman married male thinks "that many are here to get an education with outside activities of secondary importance. Of course, there are some exceptions. Many are married and have children and it is impossible for them to get involved with outside activities."

Another freshman male thinks the students here are the products of their environment which they have been raised in. They are not reactionary on many subjects, but under the proper educational system their basic goodness could be drawn out for the betterment of themselves and those around them."

An out of state junior male says, "It appears to me that the typical male at Wilco knows everyone from Dr. Wagoner to the custodial engineer in the gym. He dresses nicely, likes the beach, has a new car (I don't know how), and is a member of Phi Kappa Phi."

One male freshman, declared that the majority of students are here for an education and not for the purpose of avoiding the draft. I feel that if a student is not here for educational purposes that he will probably flunk out for lack of interest and drive."

"A high school graduate that really hasn't broken the tie from high school and really doesn't care to become involved."

"The typical Wilmington student is just like any other college student except that he is perhaps a bit more inactive in campus affairs. He is also a bit conceited and non-mannerly."

"A self-contained individual who is usually not concerned with what everyone is doing."

Another freshman girl thinks the typical student here is "just a little short of the ivy league."

"Lazy, apathetic, complaining about offered activities that aren't enough or good enough."

Talking about the campus coeds one junior boy stated, "They are self-righteous, stuck up, non-bending to really help the other person. They look for only the good time. Not the realistic view of what a girl is supposed to do."

Production Crews Busy Preparing For Play

The Wilmington College Theatre's production staff and behind-the-scenes crew is busily working for the forthcoming presentation of "The Rivals" on May 1 through 4. The play will be mounted in the S. R. O. Theatre with the curtain time at 8:30 P. M.

"The Rivals" by Richard B. Sheridan was first performed at Convent Garden on January 17, 1775, and secured for its author national recognition. In 1776, Sheridan assumed control of the Drury Lane Theatre. Another of his plays "The School of Scandal" is also ranked along with "The Rivals" as a hallmark of this period in English drama.

The Wilmington College Theatre has gone back to the theatres of Sheridan for its staging of "The Rivals." Two features of that day have been incorporated into the S. R. O. Theatre for this production. One is the use of proscenium doors for interior scenes and the other is the raked or slanted stage. This actual slanting of the stage towards the audience is the actual physical feature of eighteenth century theatre that has furnished the present day theatre with the terms of upstage and downstage.

The setting and lighting design was executed by Gary W. Weathersbee. The setting will be constructed by Linda Carter, William Carter, George Crouch, William P. Furpless, Artie Greene, Bill Griffin, Bob McCorkle, Rick Stallings, Wesley Thomas and Clyde DeLeon Wells.

The lighting and other elements in production will be handled by Terry Rogers assisted by Jere Hodgkin, Mike Glancy, and Charlie Schoonmaker.

Thelma Sellers is now in the process of making eighteenth century costumes for the fourteen member cast.

VOL. 11 NO. 11 WILMINGTON COLLEGE, WILMINGTON, N.C. FRIDAY, MAY 2, 1969

No Semesters - Yet

BY Renee Hartman

One of the main topics discussed on the day after the General Assembly passed the bill giving Wilmington and Asheville-Biltmore university status was whether this campus would have to change from a quarter system to a semester system in order to conform with the other branches of the University.

President William Wagoner does not anticipate the change for next year, but pointed out that it would be awkward if five branches of the University were on the semester system and one was on the quarter system.

However, he feels certain that the University will not force the issue for next year.

According to J. Paul Reynolds, Dean of Faculty, "We don't have to change, but I think we will," Marshall Crews, dean of students, does not know what is going to happen, but he did mention that "all other units are on the semester system."

"I prefer a semester system," said Reynolds, "it has greater advantages for the student." Crews stated that "It takes time for things to soak in and the semester system gives this time."

Some advantages which both deans pointed out include the fact that classmates would meet on alternate days making possible two days or evenings for preparation for both students and faculty.

Academy Of Science Meets On Campus

The Academy of Science will hold its annual meeting at Wilmington College May 2 and 3.

The Academy is an association of biologists, chemists, mathematicians, and physicists in North Carolina.

This is the first time in the Academy's long history that the annual college and I imagine the first time for the city of Wilmington," according ing to Dr. Daniel Plyler of the Biology Department.

Numerous lectures will be given by scientists and undergraduate students from across the state during the event.

Friday morning May 2, the General Session will be held with prominent researchers delivering lectures.

Friday evening Academy President H. D. Crookford former Chairman of the UNC at Chapel Hill, Chemistry Department, will address the Academy concerning "Osmotic Pressure An Historical Approach."

At 7:30 pm Friday evening the Academy will hold a banquet in the Student Services Building. "The Top Twelve," local college singing group, will entertain following the banquet.

Tours of Masonboro Island and Boiling Spring Lakes will be conducted Saturday and Sunday respectively.

The Inauguration of William Hampton Wagoner took place yesterday here on campus.

At approximately 9 am registration of distinguished guests began in the William Madison Randall Library. Coffee was served at this time.

Next on the schedule of events was the Academic Procession at 10:45.

The Procession included the WILCO Board of Trustees, platform guests, representatives from various colleges and universities across the country, representatives from several learned societies (Phi Beta Kappa, America Council of Education, etc.), and Wilmington College faculty members.

The Procession left the Administration Building, passed in front of Hoggard Hall, and stopped in front of the Student Services Building. The platform will be located in front of the Student Services Building.

A Campus Address was delivered by Dr. James R. Scales, president of Wake Forest University at 11 a.m. to which Dr. Wagoner will respond.

Comments were also made by Gary Chadwick Student Body President, Carl Dempsey representing WILCO faculty, Retired President William Randall representing the learned societies, and Mrs. Pearle Oldham Jones who was Dr. Wagoner's first grade teacher.

Following the Inauguration, there was a Presidential Luncheon.

Organization and planning for the ceremony was conducted by the Inauguration Committee with Dr. Will DeLoach Chairman and Dr. B. Frank Hall Chairman of the Program Detail Subcommittee.

Students on the Inauguration Committee are Gary Chadwick, Hugh Newkirk Vice President of the Student Body, and Sarah Rivenbark Secretary of the Student Body.

Chadwick To Give Farewell Speech

Dr. William Wagoner, college president, will present the annual Senate award to the student a special senate committee has decided is the most Outstanding Student Senator for this year. During the May 12 meeting of the Senate.

Following an address by Wagoner new student Government officials will be sworn in during a candlelight ceremony. Outgoing Student Body President, Gary Chadwick will then present his State of the School Address charging next year's officers with their responsibilities.

A reception, planned by freshman senator Jenny Halterman, will close the meeting.

Reminder

This is another reminder to vote in the upcoming elections. It is the duty of every student to take at least this much of an active role in his government. This year's senate will go down in history as the great "Do-nothing-senate-of-1969."

The newspaper is not a political organization and cannot and will not support any candidate. This does not mean that the individual members of the staff cannot support their favorite candidates, only that the paper will not.

Vote, but vote intelligently for the best man and not out of any group pressures.

Voluntary Gesture

EDITOR'S NOTE: the following article does not pertain to Wilmington College.

We don't know how closely anyone one has been following the news concerning a number of colleges putting the President of the Student Body on the Board of Trustees. Most of the colleges claim that this is a move they have been contemplating for a while now and it does not stem from recent and present student unrest.

These colleges state that this move has been planned over a period of time as a voluntary gesture to give the students more power in the direction of the college. Whatever the reason, it is a good idea.

Enlightened colleges and universities are finally coming to the realization that the purpose of these institutions is to help the students (their needs are first, the community comes only after the students are taken care of). For a good long time now the students have been fairly well ignored by the various administrations; their needs and desires have not been met or even recognized by any but the most forward thinking educators.

Now that a small opening has arrived for the students they must be prepared to take it and use it for all that it is worth. This does not mean that students should or could take over the entire running of the college; they neither have the knowledge nor the capabilities to run a campus (very few administrators possess the vast number of requirements needed to run a campus for all elements involved - faculty and students).

Students, in this proposed new role of theirs, must act only as advisors and not as the exact policy makers themselves, except as in the case of the appointment of the President of the Student Body to the Board of Trustees (again we would like to stress that this is not taking place at Wilmington College).

The students would be an invaluable assistance to the discovery of what's wrong with campus life, what is needed by the students and various problems inherent in the present system. Students are the most knowledgeable about their own problems, no matter how well some administrators feel they can read the barometer of college activities.

It is about time that some institutions have decided to listen to the students or even allow them to voice their own opinions. We can only hope that this will become the fashion on all campuses across the nation (even world, maybe), it would be a great help in campus relations.

Looking For A Scholarship ?

If you are looking for an easy way to get a scholarship as well as a job that will challenge your interests for an entire year, apply now to work on the SEAHAWK for next year.

Applications must be turned in by May 12 to Thomas Lupton, newspaper adviser, in room 123 of the Chemistry-Physics Building.

The SEAHAWK presently has two whole scholarships and approximately four half scholarships to give away next year to students who will be working on the newspaper.

Whole scholarships are given to the Executive Editor and the Business manager. Half scholarships will be awarded to Managing Editor, Features, News, and Sports Editor.

All of these positions are presently open for next year.

No experience is necessary to apply, however, it is helpful.

"We hope to see the newspaper become even better next year," says Renee Hartman, managing editor, "but to have a better newspaper, more people will have to work on it. A good campus newspaper cannot be put out by two or three people."

Of course, anyone willing to work on the newspaper is welcome to come by the newspaper office either now or when school opens in the fall.

Nixon Not God

Powell's Place

By Richard J. Powell Jr.
The "First Hundred Days" what is it and who should control it? Barry Goldwater stated, "I'd like to dig up the man who created that phrase and beat him in the face with it."

Every president is chaperoned by the American public during this period of readjustment; this period is unfair. The president is supposed to untangle this god awful jumbled, littered botch which has taken the late John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson eight years to propagate. Eight years of some of the worst adversity in American government that the people of this country has ever experienced, all of this is going to be stabilized into a smooth working government of apple pie, motherhood and the flag. One may think this to be impossible -- one better believe it to be impossible.

The change from a liberal to a moderately conservative type of government must be evolutionary not revolutionary.

President Nixon has been subjected to veritable slander by the use of legal praise. Why? Because of his "segregated" appointments to government positions of importance. During a brief prelude a president there were few democrats and no negroes in the positions. Now may I refresh the memory of those first to take issue the first thing John F.

Kennedy did when he took office was to exterminate all the republicans in the White House; Lyndon B. Johnson followed the same pattern. The new administration is republican and should be run by republicans. The democrats had their chance and did not capitalize their time.

People have faith President Nixon is not God and cannot work miracles. Stabilization of our government takes time. It cannot occur in one hundred days or weeks but is a process which will take from four to eight years.

Good Grief!

By ED NORRIS

This week found Father Mungus in a rather compromising position and a concerned mood after his recent trials and tribulations with the establishment. Even his meditation atop the pub has been less frequent since his hassle with the infamous Baby Huey and his playmates.

It seems the Father was revealing his plans for a new poverty program when an ear-piercing scream disrupted the discussion between the Father and his followers, causing the Father to overturn his cough syrup bottle.

Jumping from among his sheets the Father ran in the glory of his skin to the edge of the building top and peered over the flowers and grass he had planted there to see what the bellowing was about. Much to his surprise Baby Huey was laying among the azalea bushes with his friends after having made a futile attempt to scale the walls of the building.

The Father gasped when he saw the bodies twisting and writhing in the bushes, but after realizing he was not watching an orgy, he threw down his cough syrup bottle in an attempt to aid those who might be in pain. Unfortunately the Father must have been meditating too long, for his aim proved to be fault-

ty. The bottle, still nearly full of the Father's secret spirits, barely missed the golden locks around Baby Huey's head and badly bruised his right thigh. The original ear-piercing scream made by Huey was but a whimper compared to the sound coming out of his golden throat when the bottle reached its mark. Huey then went limping off in the direction of the abode of his keeper, Tommy Terrific, and was not seen for the remainder of the day.

Of course the sage was quite upset by having done this act of violence, even though he was sure that the gods had played some major part in it. When he realized that he had inflicted pain upon the loud but harmless Huey, he found it quite impossible to meditate for the remainder of his exhale cycle. Fortunately he was able to return to his normal functions when an aspiring young man fetched the cough syrup bottle from the azalea bushes and handed it with great ceremony to the Father.

The Father took the offering to heart and after pouring the contents of the bottle through a small hole he had bored in his temple by mistake one afternoon while staring at the sun, the Father smiled and said he felt everything would be lovely soon and asked for prayers and more divine intercession.

Many Ways For Students To Receive Financial Aid

By John Blair Jr.

"There are several avenues open to those students who need scholarships," said Dean of Men, Thomas Brown.

"During the past year we gave out approximately $225,000 in various scholarships," he added. Not only is there this much in scholarships but there is additional money available in loans from the state and federal governments.

The number of scholarships given by the school is limited by the number of students attending. The money is given to the schools on a percentage basis.

"We give the scholarships out on a basis of who needs the assistance," continued Brown. "We hope to come to the time when we give them out on the basis of scholarship."

A great deal of the help given by the college is in the form of work assistance. Students can work in the various labs in the different departments, such as language and science. "The Music and Drama departments get a few scholarships to give students because they need the extra help."

Another form of assistance is the Work Study Program under which students work in a department or the library.

All scholarship money is allocated by the Board of Trustees. To see about getting a scholarship see Brown, who serves as Financial Aid Officer.

There are also a number of loans available under the National Defense Loan Act. There is also money available under the 1964 Federal Insured Student Loan Plan. Under this plan any student can borrow up to $750 a year and not have to pay it back until after graduation.

There are also teacher loans. This way a future teacher can borrow money from the state and work it off by teaching and not worry about paying it back.

There are various outside agencies that give scholarships to students and the Summer Pace Program where a student can work during the summer in his home town.

There are also benefits for veterans under the G. I. Bill and for the children of veterans under the North Carolina Veterans Commission.

Besides these there are the work scholarships for the campus publications SEAHAWK and FLEDGLING.

"So," said Dean Brown, "if a student really wants to get through college he should have no problems on the financial side."

The annual Student Art Show opens Sunday in Kenan. This will be the last art show of the year.

During the last month the art show being exhibited in Kenan Hall was presented by the Associated Artists of North Carolina.

It was the smallest show that has been shown in Kenan and consisted of only 24 pieces.

This show was exhibited last month at A&T University in Greensboro and grew out of the Fifteenth Exhibiting Members Show for the AANC last year.

The show was judged by Dick Cossit, a sculptor and teacher of the Richmond Professional Institute.

Cossit selected 67 works by 21 artists for

WAGONER SEES TREMENDOUS

by Renee Hartman

"I see a tremendous potential in this institution and I wanted to be associated with the people at Wilmington College," says newly inaugurated College President William M. Wagoner.

Wagoner, the third president in the history of the college, came here after serving for five years as the Superintendent of Public Schools in New Hanover County.

Speaking about leaving the post of superintendent to become the president of the college, Wagoner said, "It would be absurd to say the transition in this area. There is also a short supply of public speech teachers. I found myself volunteering to teach it."

Later Wagoner became principal of a primary school which consisted of grades one and two. "I was quite interested in finding out about the educational techniques at this level; I had done most of my work at the upper level," he commented.

Wagoner completed work on his doctorate in educational administration and political science at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. He then returned to Elizabeth City as the superintendent of schools there until coming to Wilmington in 1961.

He continued, "Obviously, immediately after I came here, the budget had to be put into order and we had to start in the process of going to the General Assembly for funds. So these first few months of my tenure here at the college have been unusually busy ones."

Just during the month of April, Wagoner estimated that he has spent approximately 15 per cent of his time going to meetings in Raleigh, but he added, "April has had an unusual number of meetings."

"That's part of the problem that we have. We are a state institution and we have to be represented when a committee had a hearing."

Wagoner, who was probably the most elated man on campus last Wednesday afternoon when news of university status for the college was passed by the Senate, has been thinking of something the college could do in celebration of this new status.

"I'm right much of a ham," he said. "One of the things I thought we might do if the students would be interested is on June 30, the last day Wilmington College will be Wilmington College, we might have a little get together around our sign coming into the college."

"We might then have the highway department have a new sign printed up and go through a ceremony of pulling up one and planting another. I don't know whether this sounds too sophomoric or not," he said laughing.

In the next few years Wagoner sees Wilmington College "extending its arms offering its services, both academic and otherwise to all of Southeastern North Carolina."

"I feel that we are and have been and certainly are going to be more than just a local city college, but indeed have responsibilities throughout all southeastern North Carolina and in this region, but not deemphasizing, of course, the responsibilities we have for the whole state."

"This could take the form of many aspects, such as extension programs where we would actually take a course or a program to Southport or to Burgaw where we could get 15 or 20 people interested in taking this particular course or participating in this kind of program that the college could uniquely offer."

"Then I think that as the institution grows and as the area becomes more interested in the institution, its programs, its offerings can be expanded as far as we can go with the expansion of programs with the current size of the campus."

"Certainly with the junction of this institution with the University of North Carolina and using the resources and assistance there, I feel as if these things will take place."

"Then also I think the time will come, and I wish that I could specify the time, which may be sooner than any of us probably expect, when the institution will not only be ready, but when the demands will be there, when we will have programs in the graduate level. Obviously, this will come at the masters level first," he explained.

"I have to be very careful in the things I say, because people might interpret this as a policy statement," Wagoner declared, "but I am not making a policy statement at this time. I am only sharing with you a personal feeling that I have and that it is not going to be very long before the state is going to need to begin granting masters degrees in the marine sciences."

"To me, the logical place where this can be done is here at this institution simply because we are so located. And, as I reminded a committee just the other day, we have a laboratory here that the state cannot build and cannot move," he said.

"I think that graduate studies in this field need to be going on right now and going on here. And I believe that with university help, these will come about," he stressed.

However, Wagoner noted, there are other areas. "I'm not emphasizing this area to the exclusion of others."

"For example, there is a great need for graduate education where teachers are concerned. I believe we have a responsibility in this field and I think it is one that we do want to do some work in a relatively short time."

Changing the subject slightly to speak about the buildings on campus, Wagoner said the situation about the dormitories at this point is that the college is almost ready to rebuild for the dormitories.

"They had to be redesigned and we had to make some modifications in them," he said. The dorms will be high rise, but not the extreme high rise, according to Wagoner who stated, "When I say high rise, I usually think in terms of eight or ten stories."

Wagoner was not quite certain how this was going to be done. "In my opinion, and this is only my opinion, as plans have not been finalized at this point," he said speaking about the now proposed plans which call for one dorm, consisting of six stories, which will be shared by both men and women.

Wagoner believes that either men or women will use the top three floors or either men will live in tion was really easy for no transition is really easy. However, it has been most enjoyable."

"I have enjoyed most the closer contact with the students and faculty members. And for a long time I've wanted to be on a college campus," he added.

Wagoner, who obtained his B. S. degree from Wake Forest University, said, "Wake Forest was still at the old location then. In fact, I was a member of one of the last graduating classes. That sort of dates me." During the time that he was working on his M. A. degree from East Carolina, he was also teaching in Washington and then later in Elizabeth City.

In both of these schools he was taught both physics and public speaking. When asked about this odd combination, Wagoner replied, "Public speech has always been an interest of mine. I was a varsity debater at Wake Forest and took electives in this area. There is also a short supply of public speech teachers. I found myself volunteering to teach it."

Later Wagoner became principal of a primary school which consisted of grades one and two. "I was quite interested in finding out about the educational techniques at this level; I had done most of my work at the upper level," he commented.

Wagoner completed work on his doctorate in educational administration and political science at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. He then returned to Elizabeth City as the superintendent of schools there until coming to Wilmington in 1961.

He continued, "Obviously, immediately after I came here, the budget had to be put into order and we had to start in the process of going to the General Assembly for funds. So these first few months of my tenure here at the college have been unusually busy ones."

The next building the college will request from the General Assembly is one for the Business Administration Department. "This department is a very large and is scattered around right much," he said. "And that is the only one being requested now."

The next building we will request we will be studying between now and the next time the General Assembly meets," he stated. "We will be studying each department and making analyses and working with the university officials to determine what our request will be."

"I would feel, Wagoner began before adding that "I'm afraid to say this for I'm afraid that someone will hold me to it and all of my information isn't in yet, but the next building that I think we need is an English and Modern Foreign Language Building."

Wagoner sees a need for such building because he believes "We could then relieve the Kenan building of the situation there and pretty well confine the Fine Arts there."

"To be perfectly candid about it, I don't have enough information to say yes, this will be our next building. I'm confident, however, that it will be high on our priority list."

"It would seem to me that an English - Modern Foreign Language Building certainly is called for at this moment. Our English Department language department is large. We need to have more spaces where language laboratories and

Senators Want To Help School

With Student Government elections coming on May 8, the SEAHAWK was curious about why students run for student body offices and what, at the time of their election, they hoped to accomplish as compared to what they actually feel they have accomplished after a term in office; therefore, the SEAHAWK questioned the members of the Senate during their April 21 meeting.

The majority of the questioned officers, only 17 of the 35 elected officials were present during this meeting, agreed they had run for office to help the college.

Others mentioned the fact that it was necessary for someone to show an interest in school activities while others had ideas they wanted to put into effect.

Junior class senator Chris Deasy wanted to "have a say in student activities and to help the school." In any way I could." Gary Shell, who was appointed to fill a vacant senior senate seat, felt as if he could do something to change some problems on the campus.

"I felt like I was willing to put in enough time that the office required, plus I had some ideas which I personally wanted to see attempted," said Vice - President of the Sophomore Class Bob Wiard.

"When I entered Wilmington College, I wanted to do something for the school. Since most students are so apathetic few people were running for office. Therefore, I decided to give a little of my time to represent my class," was the comment of Freshman Class Vice - President Butch Rogers.

Junior Class President Dale Donahue wanted "to be where the action is on campus and that, in my opinion, is in the Senate.

As far as goals were concerned, the senate members mainly wanted to represent their class members in the Student Government Organization and participate in Senate Activities. For the most part, those questioned felt as if they had accomplished these goals.

Sophomore senator Bill Johnson wanted "to help the student body" and felt that he had accomplished his part by "voicing the opinion of the sophomore class." Junior senator Sherry Southerland wanted to fulfill her duties "to the best of my abilities" and felt as if she had done this.

Senior Class Vice-President Tim Jordan wanted to see "improvement in student government" and believed that this has happened because, as he said, "I feel the Senate and the student body were much more active this year."

Freshman Class Senator Jenny Halterman hoped to "receive a better understanding of the school and its activities. I also wanted to be a part of an active group on campus."

She believes that "the student senate has accomplished many important things this year and I have participated in many of the activities along with my fellow senators."

Last, when asked if they felt as if they had gained any personal insight by working in the Senate a majority of those questioned mentioned that they had discovered that if they wanted to accomplish some goal, they would have to depend on a small number of students to carry this through.

Others felt as if they had voiced the opinions of the majority of the students whom they were representing and that most people were willing to take part in Student Government activities.

Vice president of the Student Body Hugh Newkirk says that he learned "who to trust and who not to trust." "I have seen that only through good cooperation can a group be successful and without this cooperation only failure can be expected," was Senior senator Jack Sheehan's opinion.

President of the Sophomore Class has learned about "tolerance." "I have learned not to expect or receive all the help and cooperation I once expected. I have also come to appreciate the efforts and competence of many of my peers," he said.

Freshman Vice president Butch Rogers believes that membership in the Senate is one of the most thankless jobs anyone could undertake. Everyone criticizes what you try to do, but come election day, these people are not running for office."

Marilyn Gooden, secretary of the sophomore class has seen "how the student government is handled and to what voice the general student has in the Senate."

"It's showed me that a small, but united body can act on many facets of the college and student affairs with ability and authority," declared sophomore senator Mike Sheehan.

And Freshman Class Secretary Dru Farrar has gained "a respectful insight into the conservative aspect of the campus."

'The Rivals' Runs Through Sunday

"The Rivals" by Richard B. Sheridan will open tonight and run through Sunday, May 4, on the stage of the S.R.O. Theatre. Performances will begin promptly at 8:30 p. m.

The Wilmington College Theatre is producing this English comedy which has survived almost two hundred years of theatre and is ranked as one of the best plays of the eighteenth century.

"The Rivals" features one of the most famous characters in English drama, Mrs. Malaprop, who ludicrously distorts the English language.

The plot is concerned with the story of Lydia Languish, a wealthy sentimental heroine whose fortune is dependent upon the whims of her aunt, Mrs. Malaprop.

Poking fun at excessive sentimentality, the play depicts the romantic misadventures of a number of couples. Parallel plots help to confuse the characters, enhancing the comedy of the production.

Donna West will play the heroine, Lydia Languish, and Pat Haines will portray Lydia's aunt, Mrs. Malaprop. Tony Rivenbark will play Capt. Jack Absolute, with whom Lydia is in love.

Jack's father, Sir Anthony Absolute, will be portrayed by Sam Garner, Kenneth Grossinger, David Henry and Bob Keenan will portray Lydia's three suitors. Fag, a dandified servant of Capt. Absolute will be acted by Michael Zipser.

John Blair will play Capt. Absolute's country-coachman, and Mark

Pope will portray a timid servant. Joan Carol McGee will play the second heroine, Julia. Pat Hughes will portray Julia's maid, and Gwen Clark will act as Mrs. Malaprop's scheming maid.

Lenoire Hagen will play the female servant who appears throughout the complicated plot, unifying the entire play.

The setting will be constructed by William Carter, George Crouch, William P. Furpless, Artie Greene, Bill Griffin, Bob McCorkle, Rick Stallins, Wesley Thomas and Clyde DeLeon Wells. Linda Carter is the scenic decorating artist.

The lighting and other elements in production will be handled by Terry Rogers assisted by Jere Hodgkin, Mike Glancy, Bob Keenan and John Blair.

Abbe Godwin is serving as Stage Manager for the production with Thelma Sellars making all of the eighteenth century costumes for the fourteen member cast. Lace and silks are the basic materials for all the costumes.

Special effects in sound and lighting will be executed by Richard Thompson. For the first time in the S.R.O. Theatre footlights will be used as graced the eighteenth century Covenant Garden.

Anne Fitzgibbon, professor of Drama and Speech, will supervise the silk-screening of the posters. Bill Franks will assist her.

SEAHAWKS ON ATTACK

Golf Team On Winning Path

Led by three returning lettermen and a couple of talented freshmen, the Seahawk golf team has assured themselves of a winning season.

Last year's team finished with an eleven and three record losing no two matches to the same opponent, and this year's team is hopefully on the way to bettering that mark.

In match play the Seahawks have scored 145 1/2 points while allowing the opposition only 39 1/2. Although Coach Earl Allen feels it is "too early yet to judge" the relative strength of the team he is pleased with their performances so far.

As to the strength of the opposition, coach Allen stated that "East Carolina University and William and Mary College along with rival Campbell are "always tough, these will be a real test for the team."

The Seahawks have only dropped two matches this year one to St. Andrews by one point and one to South Carolina Baptist after the "Hawks had to forfeit 3 points when Mike Frimenko suffered an injury on the 9th hole and was unable to continue play. The injury was not serious and Frimenko resumed play when the Seahawks met St. Andrews.

The members of the team are Freshman Bern Coulter with a nine round total of 381, Hoppy Smithwick 382; returning lettermen, Alex McCrackin 684 and Richard Fowler 687.

The other returning lettermen are Jim Paschal and Mike Frimenko, with Robert Rehden rounding out the squad.

Victories for the team include wins over Atlantic Christian College, twice; Methodist College; Western Maryland; Pembroke, twice; Cleveland

The hawk pitching staff in 18 games has given up 88 hits for 34 runs and an earned run ave. of only 0.84 due mostly to the efforts of Ed Booth (3-0), Charles Cuppett (3-1) Ed Atkins (2-0), and Pete Eyer (3-3).

Thus far in the season the hawks have only dropped 4 games: splitting with West Va. University 8-1, 0-4; St. Andrews 13-0, 2-3; Elon 6-3, 7-10; and High Point 14-4, 3-4.

The last four regular season games were played in Wilmington with final coming against Virginia State College on May 5.

Upsilon Nu Anticipates Coming Installation

Member of Upsilon Nu, service fraternity, are anticipating their national installation as part of Alpha Phi Omega National Service Fraternity May 9.

Organized during winter quarter, Upsilon Nu has 22 members; however, their membership has recently increased during their pledge period.

"There was nothing like it on campus," stated David Carver, one of the fraternity's organizers and acting president.

The college doesn't take enough interest in the college or community. The fraternity is based on leadership, friendship, and service to the community and to the campus," he added.

Other organizers of the fraternity were David Warner, head of the college public relations office, Juniors Eddie Thompson and David Carver, and Senior Robert Crumpler.

Warner presently heads the Upsilon Nu advisory board which consists of Doug Swink, Dale Harrison, Thomas Noe, Robert Walton, and Carl Gay.

All of the fraternity's plans are now centered around their May 9 installation. Before their official recognition the fraternity's members had to prove that they could be of service to the college and the community.

Projects during this last quarter included selling drinks at all sports events, helping with the library move and the library dedication, and serving as guides during college night.

Future plans include taking care of the recreation room soon to open in the upstairs room of the Pub and organizing a chapter on the campus of Southeastern Community College in Whiteville.

According to Carver, the fraternity is waiting until September to work on any plans for the community because it is too late now to do so.

Semester System

There would be a slower pace for students in course work which would provide better opportunity for development of faculty-student rapport and would perhaps reduce the number of failures.

The longer term and the schedule of classes on alternate days would enhance the time for assimilation of subject matter.

There would be two preregistration, registration, and exam periods as opposed to three on the quarter basis.

Many text books seem to be organized for semester sequence courses.

Since vacations come during the term on the semester basis, more time for the students to do significant library work would be realized.

All of the other branches of the University are on the semester system so it would be easier for a student to transfer if the college were on a semester system.

A longer exam period would be provided. A semester system would provide a full week's break between terms and a spring vacation of a week possible during Holy Week.

It would further provide ending the spring term before June 1, making possible job opportunities at the beach to begin the opening of the beach season.

Wagoner Thanks Senate For Their Assistance

"This has been one of the very best years of my life," President William Wagoner told the Student Senate during their last meeting.

"I know it isn't easy to be a college president, but it is easy to be one when you have students like you are. I can't begin to describe all that you've done."

"You have helped to initiate a new president, helped inaugurate a new president, assisted a new president in finding his way around campus, to find his way back and forth to Raleigh for business he had to conduct in that region, and you have helped a new president to help give birth to a new branch of the University of North Carolina."

"Surely, without your assistance this could not have taken place," he emphasized.

"You have assisted me in opening what I hope will be a continuing line of communication between faculty and administration and student body in informal forums which we have enjoyed together," he continued.

"It is my strongest desire to continue these forums," he said. "We want to move ahead in this field to share with each other our dreams, our desires, our ideas, and our aspirations and to move ahead in this field."

Mentioning the construction presently going on, Wagoner said, "We have shared together the occupying of a new library and chemistry-physics building. Very shortly we will see the ground being broken for a auditorium-theatre. Also, if we don't get many more upsets, we will see ground broken for dormitories on campus."

"So, frankly, you are part of a pretty big operation at this moment. I can't say how important each of you are and how important you are collectively in this operation."

Wagoner feels that the student senate is "composed of the real leaders on a college campus where the work of the governance of the college is concerned and we here, we can get down to the meat of things and make our institution become like it should become.

When we become the fifth campus of the University of North Carolina, I'm not at all interested in just becoming just another campus of the University, I have not just been interested in being just the president of Wilmington College just to say that it is here and jog along with our own tight little jackets of security," he said.

Student Production Now In S.R.O.

The Wilmington College Drama Department is attempting something entirely new with its fourth production of the year. The production is to be entirely student run, with advice only from the department's faculty.

The only other such attempt was in 1966 when Del Lago, a student, directed John Paul Sartre's "No Exit".

The evening will consist of a one-act play by student Ed Norris and a mixed-media show which is being put together by Tony Rivenbark and Jere Hodgins.

John Blair is directing Ed's play, "And Even Demanded Sugar".

The cast of "And Even Demanded Sugar" consists of three parts: Chuck, played by Michael Zipser, is a youth who is searching as do men of all ages; Brennan, played by Gil Hugley, is a man who, like Chuck, has searched for and found what he feels to be the answer; and Mary, Gwen Clarke, who is Brennan's answer and Grand-Keeper-of-the-Games.

The play points up the roles and games all men play in life. Anna Ballard is stage manager and is in charge of properties.

The second half of the evening is the mixed-media show. "Jere saw one up at State," said Tony, "and I saw another one and we were both excited enough to do one here." To differentiate between a mixed-media and a happening the main contrast is the structure. A happening is essentially a free form with the slightest restrictions, following only an original idea.

According to Tony, it is "not an actor's show. It relies on the technical aspect, which, unfortunately is not very good here at Wilmington."

The idea of the mixed-media show is exactly that, a mixing of a variety of different forms. Involved will be, of course, the human element in arranging the show and in acting in a few short skits. Besides this, there will be films, slides and art work, plus some inspired light work.

"We hope that this will only be a start," said John Blair.

The production is scheduled for May 22, 23, 24, and 25, at eight thirty. Admission for Wilmington College students is free, one dollar for everyone else.

YOUR LEADER -- Newly elected president of the student body, Hugh Newkirk.

Newkirk Outlines Plans

By Jack Di Sarno

Recently elected Student Body President Hugh Newkirk outlined his policy for next year as being one of: Increasing Student Government funds, increasing student participation in government, to affiliate UNC-W Student Government with a state-wide association.

Several appointments for the next year have already been made by Newkirk. Bill Harrell, Terry Wort-Bill, and Brian Black have been appointed to the Judicial Appeals Board. Junior Class President Bob Waird has been named Chairman of the Dance Committee along with Dale Donahue as vice chairman.

Newkirk also has named Chick Coleman as Chairman of the Board of Elections for next year, and Kirk Brown, unsuccessful candidate for President of the Sophomore Class, as treasurer of the Student Government.

President Newkirk disclosed that he is planning a series of concerts to increase student funds. At the present time, Neil Diamond and Jerry Butler are being considered.

Hugh also expressed his desire for members of next year's Student Government to attend Student Government Workshops to be held at Atlantic Christian College.

Mr. Newkirk summed up his policy by saying, "I want to get more people participating and more benefits to everyone."

Newkirk added, "No particular group on campus is going to be favored."

Tired

One does get tired, and I am tired, tired of a great many things, but most of all, I am tired of people. Once a year campaign speeches are given, and just as frequently speeches are given against the newspaper. And once a year these speeches are forgotten as soon as the elections take place. It does get tiring.

Perhaps, the most tiring element of the whole process is the fact that once all these speeches are given the "brave souls" are too cowardly to do anything, even denounce the newspaper in front of something totally insane as the senate.

True, this year was a bit different. An attempt was made by two members of the senate to "do something" about the minority rule of the paper. The method used by these senate members (one of whom gave last year's anti-SEAHAWK tirade) was to go around the English Department and ask them for a list of names of people that would be capable of working for the newspaper. They also gave us some articles from other newspapers. "Why don't you use some of these?" they asked, the articles were by Paul Harvey and other "open-minded" writers.

They gave us a list of names, no offer of physical help, either in looking up the names (a few were even working for the paper already) or in re-organizing the paper. Of course, they claimed at the time that they had too much other work, perhaps they had forgotten that when the speeches were made. They did say that they would work to put the paper back in the hands of the average student; but when the time to do so came around, they had too much work to do. Sounds an awful lot like a great many campaign speeches.

As to these articles, one of the things they wanted was news from other campuses, not just campus news. We tried this, we wrote about poverty, which is a more important issue than one will find on most campuses. Of course, our big mistake was to mention that poverty existed right in Wilmington. This apparently hurt the sensibilities of these same two senate members. One should not mention poverty to close to home, it might make someone's conscience. Not that this slight mention on our part inspired anyone to work against poverty. It just hurt their feelings and "How easy they forget."

The paper was supposed to be investigated by the senate, verily its very own president notified the paper of the censoring, however, free speech won out. Or did the senate back down like they have so many times before. What can one expect from the "Great Rubber-Stamp" Senate of Wilco '69? They have never done anything in the past and the expectations of the future are equally dim.

Good Grief!

By Ed Norris

This week found Father Mingus and his merry men in not too merry a mood. It seems the father is still rather upset about Dr. Know's attempt to arrest him for indecent exposure and the fang marks left on his leg by a small but loud dog owned by the administration.

The father was also upset because of insults thrown at him by several red necks who accused him of being a hippie, a drug addict, and being over weight. Hurt to the pit of his golden heart, the father announced plans to depart the campus.

None of the followers seemed to mind his leaving for they too expressed their contempt for general conditions on the campus and said they felt there was no hope for the spanish-moss draped imbeciles that inhabit the region. One disciple dramatically exposed a portion of his body to openly show his feelings for the conditions at Wilco.

The father asked the disciples not to think bad thoughts about the students and reminded them that the mysterious haze coming from the polluted Cape Fear River was the culprit, not the students themselves. The ancient sage then instructed the follower who had shown his contempt to please pull his trousers back into a proper position and gave a deep sigh and said some festivities were in order to break the spell placed upon them by an evil sorcerer hired by Baby Huey at the election speeches. A three-day orgy was proposed by one of the lusty followers who had been stimulated by the display of disgust and who had been fortunate enough not to attend the spectacle in the pub, but most of the disciples agreed that meditation and passing the peace pipe around would probably suffice to lighten the spirits of the group.

Have you heard about the man who never worried about his marriage until he moved from New York to California and discovered he had the same milk man.

Father Mingus told his admiring throng that he would announce the date of his departure at a forthcoming time and emphasized his distress by emptying the contents of his cough syrup bottle into a small vein he had found while caressing a tree the week before.

A stunningly stacked soul sister walked into a dress shop, and asked the manager, "I wonder if I might try on that blue dress in the window?" "Go right ahead," he said. "It might help business."

Student Show Hangs In Kenan

By Judy Benson

The 11th annual student art show presented on exhibit in Kenan Hall, consists of around 250 works. Ranging from design problems, ceramics, sculptures, paintings to various three dimensional problems and mobiles.

Those works represented by the drawing class consist of figure drawing, landscapes, imaginative drawings and some abstracts. These works are done in a variety of mediums such as: polymer and ink, wash, pencil, conte ink, ink wash, pencil and photographs.

The various prints consist of serigraphs, wood cuts, and lithic.

Works represented by the art education course for elementary education students consist of stitchery, repeat printing, tempera painting, weaving, collage, and some three-dimensional pieces.

When asked how she would compare this show to last years, Mrs. Tomnye Sue Murphy stated that the present show is much better than last year. The reason for this improvement she felt was due to "the greater variety of materials used. The student art show gets progressively better every year!"

The works on exhibit are for sale and if students are interested in purchasing anything, they are to contact the individual artists. The show will continue in exhibit through May.

WILCO Nine Makes Bid

The Seahawk baseball team behind the best pitching in the nation, moved into first place in District 29 NAIA competition when they defeated the Pembroke Braves 6-0. The victory gave the hawks a 12-3 district record.

Pete Eyer spearheaded the Seahawk win; pitching a three hitter after relieving Chuck Cuppett who was injured in the second inning. Eyer also went 2 for 2 at the plate and drove in a run. Sandy Dew, Booth, Wayne Johnson, and Sam Askew drove in runs.

Though the Seahawks lead in district play; first place and the site for the district playoffs has not been decided yet due to the fact Pembroke, in second place, plays more games than the hawks and the standing is figured by percentage.

The playoffs will be held the 15th, 16th, and 17th of May with the winners going to the four state (Va., W. Va., N. C., S.C.) area playoffs here the 22nd, 23th, and 24th. Assured of berths in the district behind the Seahawks are Pembroke, and St. Andrews. Lynchburg is in third place in district play but may not enter the playoffs because of a rule infraction. When asked about the quality of competition in the playoffs, coach Bill Brooks stated that, "Pembroke and Lynchburg will be tough; but when you reach the playoffs, every team is tough."

The Seahawks with one game remaining on their regular schedule possess a 19-4 record against competition with three wins over Ft. Bragg bringing their overall total to 22-4.

Wagoner Thanks

"I am interested in seeing this campus become the best campus of the University."

"I am interested that this campus forge ahead as I know it can forge ahead. I am interested in accomplishing by the year 2000 - that with your help and with the help of the faculty that when abroad when someone speaks of the University of North Carolina, they will not think of the 'old well' but will think of the traffic circle right out there!"

He noted that "We have just as much to offer the University of North Carolina as the University has to offer us. So the marriage is a mutual one between us and I look forward to it."

"It could have not taken place without your help," he again pointed out to the Senate. This campus will continue to progress in statue and in some degree in size as we move forward."

Baseball Team Places Second

The Pembroke Braves moved into first place past the hard-pitching hawks as they finished their regular season play. The hawks, who led at the end of their schedule, were ousted by a few percentage points because they have played less district games.

The season title gave the Pembroke team the right to host the District 29 playoffs, with the winner moving on to the area playoffs here in Wilmington May 22, 23, and 24. Opposite the hawks in district play are Pembroke, St. Andrews, and Lynchburg.

WILCO Netters Finish Strong

The Wilmington College tennis team has overcome a slow start to post a 4-5 record with two matches remaining. The squad has won four of their last five matches the latest coming against Lenoir Community College 8-1. The team is very optimistic about the future. Dennis Massengill surmized the confidence of the team in saying, "the team has come on strong since the beginning of the season; and if we can take the next two matches, we'll finish with a winning record."

The next matches will be against Lenoir and Wayne Community Colleges. If past performances are any indication, the hawks optimism is well founded. It isn't often that a team in any sport ends its opening season with a winning record, the hawk tennis team deserves the praise of all.

'Rivals' Ends With Flying Colors

By Bill Stover

Getting off to a rather bad start on opening night, "The Rivals," a delightfully funny English comedy by Richard B. Sheridan presented by the Wilmington College Theatre, finished with flying colors Sunday night, (May 4).

As has been the case in all the productions this year, the play was enjoyed by all who had the opportunity to see it. Doug Swink, head of the Drama Department, directed the production and with the aid of some fine talent on and off the stage, he put together another memorable performance in the S. R. O. Theatre.

The play itself, surviving almost two hundred years, is basically a satire on romanticism dealing with the over-sentimentality of one, Lydia Languish and her love for Capt. Jack Absolute. To complicate matters, Lydia's aunt, Mrs. Malaprop, who murders the English language with her word distortions, has to approve the man Lydia will marry before the latter can receive her rightful inheritance.

The part of Lydia is played by Donna West, who at times seemed to be overacting in her part, but with Lydia's personality as the sentimental heroine, the overacting was not that distracting.

Tony Rivenbark came off with most of the honors of the performance in his role of Capt. Absolute. His facial expressions, his gestures, and his ability to put himself into the role was just superb. In every performance that Tony has been in, whether in a very minor role or as a main character, he seems at ease on the stage.

Mrs. Malaprop's role was a difficult one to fill, but Patricia Hines was excellent as Lydia's scheming aunt who is so wrapped in pseudo-intellectuality that she is hilariously funny.

Sam Garner, like always, steals all the laughs with his mere presence on stage. It is always a delight to see him in a performance, and he brings the role of Sir Anthony Absolute to life. Garner, like Rivenbark, has that quality of theatrical maturity rare in most amateur actors. He seems to get better in each performance in which he appears.

These were the most outstanding performances in the play, but it would not be fair to go without mentioning those given by Gwen Clark, who was perfect in the part of Mrs. Malaprop's "busy" maid; Kenneth Grossinger, who played the difficult role of Bob Acres; and Mike Zipser, who did an excellent job in the role of Fag, Capt. Absolute's servant.

David Henry in the role of Faulkland seemed a little unsure of himself at times, as did Carol McGee as Julia, but both handled themselves superbly and were certainly not a discredit to the performance.

The set and costumes were beautifully done and created a mood placing all who entered the S. R. O. in an 18th Century atmosphere. The costumes, especially, were expertly done and Thelma Sellars should be congratulated for her efforts to get the costumes as original as possible. Also, the footlights, used for the first time in the theatre, were quite effective.

It was evident that a lot of time, effort, and hard work was put into the production of "The Rivals", but space won't allow the listing of all those who had a helping hand in the finished product. All of them, however, should be patted on the back for a job well done. Mr. Swink has a fine crew and staff working with him; and just by talking with him, one knows right away that he is very proud of everyone of them.

The next production of the Wilmington College Theatre will take place May 22 through 25. Presented will be an original one-act play by student, Ed Norris entitled "And Even Demanded Sugar". On the same bill will be an experiment in mixed media called "Mirrors".

Zeta Tau Alpha Gets Charter

Zeta Tau Alpha Fraternity announces that its 142 chapter will be granted on this campus May 24.

This chapter, organized last year as Sigma Phi Sigma, will be the fifth Zeta Tau Alpha chapter in the state.

Sigma Phi Sigma decided to associate with Zeta Tau Alpha because their purposes and goals were most in line with the goals we set as a local," said Zeta Tau president Donna Marks.

During this year, the main school project for the girls has been keeping the library open on Sunday afternoons. Two of the sisters work every Sunday enabling the library staff to be able to extend this service to the students here.

The sisters also serve as guides during Freshman Orientation this year as well as on College Night.

Next year the chapter hopes to devote more time to the National Cerebral Palsy drive.

Wagoner Becomes Chancellor July 1

July 1, 1969, is the date set for the appointment of President William Wagoner as Chancellor of the Wilmington branch of the Consolidated University of North Carolina.

The office of President will be filled by Dr. Friday, President of the Consolidated University.

At this time, the Wilmington College Board of Trustees will cease to exist, and the duties will be transferred to the Board of Trustees of the Consolidated University.

There are three trustees on the Consolidated University Board from New Hanover County, they are: Judge Rudolph Mintz, Mr. Lennox Cooper, and Mr. William Barfield.

These changes are being made in conjunction with the entrance of Wilmington College into the Consolidated University of North Carolina effective July 1.

Butler To Perform At Fall Festival

Note: Due to technical difficulties arising from the choreography of Jerry Butler's three female vocalists, Jerry Butler will appear on stage in Brogden Hall rather than in-the-round as previously planned.

Brogden Hall will swing with the soul sound of "The Iceman" Jerry Butler, Thursday at a concert sponsored by UNC-W at 8 p.m.

"Butler is America's number one pop vocalist," stated Hugh Newkirk, student body president.

Butler's first hit recording, "For Your Precious Love," which won a Broadcast Music Inc. certificate award as one of the top ten best sellers in the U.S., skyrocketed to prominence in 1958.

Three other Butler renditions won BMI awards: "He'll Break Your Heart," "Moon River," and "Make It Easy On Yourself." In 1962, Henry Mancini and Johnny Mercer ran full-page ads in trade magazines, expressing appreciation for Butler's recording and assistance in making "Moon River" the song of the year.

A veteran of 11 years in show business, Butler has appeared on network television on the Tonight Show, Joey Bishop Show and Dick Clark's Bandstand.

A producer who owns two publishing companies, Butler has written songs for himself and a number of other artists, including Jackie Wilson, Count Basie and the late Otis Redding.

Butler has had such successive top 20 hits as "Lost," "Never Gonna Give You Up," "Hey Western Union Man," "Are You Happy?" and "Only The Strong Survive," which earned him a gold record.

Tickets are on sale at Payne's Men's Store, Shield's Ice Cream Shoppe, Harvey Cannon Ltd., King's Department Store, McGrath's Record Shop and Belk-Beery. Advance tickets cost $3 for the public and $2 for UNC-W students. Price at the door will be $5.

Students who will occupy reserved seats, must buy tickets in the lobby of the Student Services Building. Limit is two tickets per student. Those bearing student tickets must present University ID Cards at the door or must be accompanied by a student.

Butler will arrive in Wilmington at noon Thursday and will spend the afternoon at the university, where he will tour the campus and participate in seminar-type discussions.

"Wilmington audiences are in for a real treat when they hear this talented individual and his recording orchestra in concert," Newkirk said.

Dance to Feature Soul Inc.

The first dance of fall quarter will feature Soul Incorporated, Oct. 18 in conjunction with Jerry Butler Weekend. It will be in the Pub from 9 to 1 a.m. Dress is casual, and no admission will be charged.

"Since this will be the first Fall Festival to be held on the UNC-W campus, the Dance Committee felt only a band of the best reputation should be acquired for entertainment," said Dale Donahue, co-chairman of the committee. "Consequently, this group was selected."

"Soul Incorporated draws good audiences in other areas of the state, and we are confident they will be well received here," Dale continued.

He encourages all persons either attending or employed by the university to enjoy all the weekend activities: the Jerry Butler Concert Thursday, the free movie FAILSAFE Friday, and the dance Saturday.

"According to favorable reactions committee members have received thus far, we are anticipating a tremendous success," he added.

Because this is the first of several dances planned throughout the year, Dale reminds new students that university policy does not allow stags or couples in which neither person is a UNC-W student to attend dances. The regulation does not, however, restrict in any manner the dates of UNC-W students.

Committee Discusses Homecoming Activities

Vowing to "make UNC-W's first Homecoming as a University the biggest and best yet," Homecoming Committee has tentatively schedules festivities for Feb. 4-8.

"The majority of events will be patterned around a concert by a pop-vocal attraction," explained Bob Wiard, chairman. Among the groups considered are "Steppenwolf" and "Three Dog Night." Dale Donahue, dance chairman, stated, "Selection of the group, however, will depend greatly on price and availability."

In line with the theme of expansion is the planned kick-off of activities on Wednesday, rather than the traditional Thursday. Committee members have also discussed the addition of a concert sponsored by the Fine Arts Committee and a free film.

Festivities, organized by the Entertainment Committee, will possibly include a Homecoming Parade, Student - Faculty Game and two dances, in addition to the Homecoming basketball game and selection of a Homecoming Queen.

Frosh To Vote For Officers

Freshmen elections will be conducted Oct. 23, rather than Oct. 16 due to a conflict in activities. Ballot boxes will be in the lobby of the Student Services Building. Nomination blanks will be available in the Office of the Dean of Students.

Prospective candidates were required to take a test on the UNC - W Constitution in Seminar Room No. 3 in the Randall Library, Oct. 14.

THE ICEMAN COMETH --- Popular recording artist Jerry Butler will entertain fans at a concert tomorrow night in Brogden Hall.

VN Moratorium To Focus Attention On Peace Efforts

October 15 sees opposition to the war in Vietnam expressed by students on campuses throughout the nation.

The Vietnam Moratorium Committee and the New Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam are making efforts to get students involved.

Class boycotts, teach-ins, and rallies have been and will be the instruments of the anti-war movement on the fifteenth. The only difference in this effort and the others is the mass support of the populace. Five hundred student body presidents and newspaper editors have endorsed the moratorium. Organizers expect over one million students to participate.

UNC-W student body President Hugh Newkirk has not endorsed the moratorium. When asked why not, Newkirk replied, "The responsibility of maintaining the confidence of the student body in the SGA is on the President. I feel that my endorsement of a national political movement such as this one would only divide our student body."

Newkirk was pleased that President Friday provided the right to dissent on the University campus because the University should be a place where free thought and discussion are encouraged. "Suppression of the right to dissent is an intolerable situation," said Newkirk.

The first Senate meeting of this year saw a group of concerned students request Senate sponsorship of the moratorium on the UNC-W campus. The senators were divided on the issue and it was referred to a committee.

Louis Vega, chairman of the Senate sponsored committee, reported that the committee's recommendation to the Senate is that "Oct. 15 be designated a day of individual contemplation on the war in Vietnam on the UNC-W campus, and that permission for a voluntary memorial service to be held on campus be given in advance by Chancellor Wagoner."

Vega further reported that this motion was passed by a five to one vote, the one vote against being and abstaining ballot.

Statement Defines Disruption

On July 7, the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina adopted the following statement as a definition of University policy on the subject of disruption and discipline.

Be it resolved by the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina:

Section 1. The By-Laws of the Board of Trustees are amended by adding a new chapter "V" thereto to be entitled "Emergency Disciplinary Procedure in Cases of Disruption in the Educational Process" which shall contain the following provisions:

SECTION 5-1. DEFINITION OF DISRUPTIVE CONDUCT

The University of North Carolina has long honored the right of free discussion and expression, peaceful picketing and demonstrations, the right to petition and peaceably to assemble. That these rights are a part of the fabric of this institution is not questioned. They must remain secure. It is equally clear, however, that in a community of learning willful disruption of the educational process, destruction of property, and interference with the rights of other members of the community cannot be tolerated.

(a) Any student or faculty member (including full-time or part-time instructor) who willfully, by use of violence, force, coercion, threat, intimidation or fear, obstructs, disrupts, or attempts to obstruct or disrupt, the normal operations or functions of any of the component institutions of the University, or who advises, procures, or incites others to do so, shall be subject to suspension, expulsion, discharge, or dismissal from the University. The following, while not intended to be exclusive, illustrate the offenses encompassed herein: occupation of any University building or part thereof with intent to deprive others of its use; blocking the entrance of exit of any University building or corridor or room therein; setting fire to or by any other means substantially damaging any University building or property of others on University premises; except as necessary for law enforcement, any display of or attempt or threat to use firearms or explosives or, for the purpose of intimidating, other weapons, in any University building or on any University campus; prevention of the convening, continuation or orderly conduct of any University class or activity or of any lawful meeting or assembly in any University building or on any University campus; inciting or organizing attempts to prevent student attendance as classes; and, except with the permission of the Chancellor, blocking normal pedestrian or vehicular traffic on any University campus.

(b) Any faculty member (including any full-time or part-time instructor) who, with intent to obstruct or disrupt the normal operations or functions of any of the component institutions of the University, willfully fails or refuses to carry out validly assigned duties shall be subject to discharge.

SECTION 5-2. RESPONSIBILITY OF CHANCELLOR:

(a) The Chancellor or his representatives shall have a duty to identify persons who violate the provisions of Section 5-1 (a) or (b) and promptly report their names to the President. In any such instance the Chancellor or his representative shall marshal the evidence, and the Chancellor shall report it to the President in writing.

(b) The Chancellor or his representative may recommend to the President that injunctive relief be sought from the courts to prevent occurrence, continuation, or recurrence of a violation of Section 5-1 (a).

SECTION 5 - 3. RESPONSIBILITY OF THE PRESIDENT

When it appears that there is a violation of Section 5-1 (a) or (b), it shall be the duty of the President, and he is fully authorized to act, to take all steps which he deems advisable to protect the best interest of the University of North Carolina, and any of its component institutions, and to see that its Rules, Regulations and Policies are enforced. He shall insure that any person or persons found guilty after proper hearing shall be disciplined in such manner as may be warranted.

In carrying out these duties, the President may call upon any members of the University Administration or Faculty. Conviction in any State or Federal Court shall not preclude the University from exercising its disciplinary authority in any offense under this or any other section of the By-Laws.

Section 2. Subsection (a) of Section 3-3 of the By Laws of the Board of Trustees is amended by rewriting the third paragraph thereof to read as follows:

Subject to the provision of Sections 5-1 through 5-5 of these By-Laws, it shall be the duty of the Chancellor in each of the component institutions to exercise full authority in the regulation of student conduct and in matters of student discipline in that institution. In the discharge of this duty, delegation of such authority may be made by the Chancellor to faculty committees and to administrative or other officers of the institution, or to agencies of student government, in such manner and to such extent as may be deemed necessary and expedient; provided, that in the discharge of this duty it shall be the duty of the Chancellor to secure to every student the right of due process and fair hearing, the presumption of innocence until found guilty, the right to know the evidence and to face witnesses testifying against him, and the right to such advice and assistance in his own defense as may be allowable under the regulations of the institution as approved by the Chancellor. In those instances where the denial of any of these rights is alleged, it shall be the duty of the President to review the proceedings.

Section 3. Section 3-3 of the By-Laws of the Board of Trustees is further amended by adding a new subsection thereto as follows:

(b) Firearms and Other Weapons Prohibited -- The possession of bowie knives, dirks, daggers, loaded canes, sword canes, machetes, pistols, rifles, repeating rifles, shotguns, pump guns, or other firearms or explosives upon any University campus or in any University owned or operated facility, unless explicitly permitted by the appropriate Chancellor or his designated representative in writing, is forbidden. Violation of this prohibition constitutes grounds for suspension from the University.

Pray For Progress

Progress always goes hand in hand with change. And change is the only preventive of complete stagnation. It makes people explore themselves, the world, their place in it, and, whether favorable or not, leads to knowledge and the wisdom needed to use the knowledge fully.

A university's purpose is to shape a student, making him not just an aspiring learner but also a productive citizen. Just as the school is a vehicle for change in a student, it is subject to change by the students. We of THE SEAHAWK believe the campus newspaper plays a vital role in relating this responsibility of the university to the student and the student to the university.

A mature college newspaper faces facts impartially and strives to publicize fairly and interestingly the school as a whole, as well as the individual segments of the educational community. We have established this ideal as our immediate goal - to work with faculty, students, and all campus organizations to facilitate the changes that are so important to progress, to encourage complete development of UNC-W as a learning institute, for the good of all students.

We cannot do this without the cooperation and confidence of everyone concerned. There are stories to type, beats to walk, pictures to schedule, pictures to crop, headlines and layouts to struggle with, all of which involve much time and all of which the general college student knows nothing. We welcome suggestions and criticism, coupled with understanding and patience.

Newspapers are made with hard work and tender loving care from all sources. Without these, we cannot live up to our own expectations much less be of service to others.

Businesses, Agencies Schedule Interviews

Nine corporations, three governmental agencies and two branches of the military forces will visit the campus during the fall quarter to interview seniors for employment after graduation.

Arranged through the Placement Office, a branch of the Office of University Relations which is administered by David E. Warner, Jr., individual interviews will be scheduled for 30 minute periods beginning at 8:30 a.m. with the last appointment scheduled at 4:30 p.m.

Mrs. Joyce Jackson, secretary in the Office of University Relations, reported that 14 seniors have already registered for interviews during the first three class days of the quarter.

Seniors who plan to use the placement services offered by the University should come by the placement office in the old library area in the Administration Building at their earliest convenience to schedule their interviews at hours compatible with their class schedules.

Resume forms and a list of the responsibilities of the student participating in the placement program are available from Mrs. Jackson.

Interviews scheduled for the fall quarter include:

Anderson To Form Shell Racing Team

By JOHN ANDERSON

If you have been in the old library recently, you may have noticed a structure shaped something like a canoe along the wall. The more acute observer probably noticed the thin planking and fragile framing.

Actually, it's far more exciting than an ordinary boat. It's the cornerstone of what could become one of UNC-W's most colorful and rewarding activities - rowing.

By no means new to the U. S., rowing was a competitive sport as far back as 1811 when the ferry-men of Whitehall in New York City were the champs of the Hudson.

Today there are almost 150 clubs and colleges participating in rowing in the U. S. alone. Great Britain has over 100 college rowing teams and over 336 clubs, while Japan has over 70 colleges and 420 clubs.

In 1852, 17 years before football came along, two of our most popular universities squared off on Lake Winnepesaukee in the first of what is now a most prestigious event for rowing enthusiasts - the Harvard - Yale boat race.

The boat, called a shell, is propelled by oarsmen who pull 12-foot sweeps through the water, sometimes reaching a speed of better than 15 miles per hour on calm water. A good crew can cover the usual one and five-sixteenths miles in a little over six minutes, representing over 200 bursts of maximum energy to the oarsmen, often leaving them totally exhausted after crossing the finish line.

Pulling the sleek racing shell through the water is a 100 per cent team effort. All eight oarsmen and the coxswain must work together with precision; errors in timing, balance, or strategy can result in lost races.

Well-conditioned and smooth - rowing teams will fight it out for the entire length of the course with the bow tips darting ahead on the pull through and falling back on the recovery. Slacking off by any member of the crew at any point in the race could cost those elusive inches needed to push over the finish line first.

The coxswain plays a key role by shouting encouragement to the oarsmen and coaching the stroke man, trying to keep the beat at 30 to 35 strokes per minute.

Rowing can be a year-round sport. Endurance is developed through running and distance rowing, while strength is developed with weights and isometrics. A well-developed sense of timing and coordination are just as important to a good crew as brute force.

It is not uncommon for a skillful lightweight crew to row down a stronger, but sloppier, opponent. Rowing is gaining popularity in the south - the East Carolina University crew is just over two years old and already claims a winning record.

Our university is ideally situated for rowing, with the Cape Fear River on one side and the coastal sounds on the other.

Putting a good crew on the water, however, will take time, patience and a lot of effort - not to mention cost! A new racing shell, full-equipped, costs approximately $3000.

One encouraging thought is that all top-notch teams in all sports had to start from scratch. The shell in the old library was a piece of that scratch - the rest depends on the enthusiasm and tenacity of the men of our university!

Hawks Drop Methodist Opener

Kicking off its first game in District 29 play the Seahawk soccer team suffered a 2 to 0 defeat at the hands of Methodist College. The game, played at Methodist Sept. 30, saw the Hawks fall victim to first a penalty kick and then an insurance score in the 4th quarter.

Along with District 29 action, the team faces two scrimmage contests with Southeastern Community College. The Seahawks face tough competition but if the opposition holds true to past years, Coach Charles Sproles expects Campbell, Belmont Abbey, and St. Andrews to be teams to beat.

Last year's team finished an undefeated season with seven wins and two ties, and with ten lettermen returning, the Hawks look strong. Several of the returning members have three years experience, and, although Coach Sproles expects the team to have lost some of its scoring punch, he adds that the greater experience should offset it. He remarked that if they could equal last year's record of scoring 36 goals while holding the opposition to 9, he would be satisfied.

The Seahawks have two three-year standouts at the wing position in Phil Oakly and Gene Russ, with Ricky Walls, Tommy Torhan, and last year's top returning scorer, Manuel DeHaro, at the forwards. Freshmen forwards include Steve Bowls, Barney Lewis, and Randy Harrel. As halfbacks the Hawks will have Paul Livingston, Jack Blackmore, James Whisnant, and Frank Barbee. Fullbacks: John Leach, Steve Clemmons, Steve Shamblyn, Gary Gurganus, Drewry Adams, and Jim Harris make up probably the strongest position on the team. Completing the roster at goalie, the Hawks have Bill Watkins and Brian Black.

The Seahawks played two games on the road before opening their home season last Saturday with a match with Guilford College.

UNC-W Joins NCAA

On September 1, 1969 the University of North Carolina at Wilmington became an active member of the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) in addition to retaining membership in the National Association of Inter-Collegiate Athletics (NAIA).

This move will cause very little change during the 1969-70 athletic year. However, it is felt that it will have a great emphasis on the future growth of the Athletic Department, since the school has reached the university status. This puts us in a position to schedule both small colleges and major colleges and universities under both NCAA and NAIA affiliation.

Sports in which the University participates inter-collegiately include soccer, basketball, wrestling, baseball, tennis, golf.

Senior Standouts

Cuppett Tagged

By Tommy Walton
"A gold nugget": the RALEIGH NEWS AND OBSERVER'S description of Chuck Cuppett is indeed accurate. Cuppett, a senior, has played a vital role in the Seahawk's rise in the ranks of the nation's baseball elite.

Cuppett, a native of Alexandria, Va., served five years in the Marine Corps.

After being discharged from the Marine Corps, Cuppett was sought after by many large universities including U. N. S., Purdue, Michigan State and Florida State. Cuppett decided on Wilmington College and has since kept the fans spellbound at his delivery.

While in Seahawk uniform, Cuppett has hurled 20 victories, suffering only 5 setbacks. Chuck has become an integral part of the mound magicians who compiled the lowest earn-run average in the nation. In 1969 he pitched a no-hitter against Lynchburg and was once victorious in a 17 inning marathon. A member of the 1968 All-State Team, the 1969 All-District team, Cuppett was recently honored as a member of Who's Who in College Athletics.

DELTA EPSILON

The brothers of Delta Epsilon Fraternity worked hard this summer getting the house ready for the new school term.

The brothers started the new year with an open band party, which was a huge success. Everyone is looking forward to a number of activities throughout the quarter.

ALPHA PHI OMEGA

Upsilon Nu Chapter is rushing through Oct. 10. Anyone having any questions is urged to contact any of the brothers.

David Warner, Jr., was re-elected chairman of the Advisory Committee, and new officers were also elected.

PHI MU

Phi Mu had a successful summer consisting of several informal meetings and a house-party. The sisters are now planning informal rush and the social calendar, which will include several functions during the year.

PI KAPPA PHI

Gamma Theta Chapter of Pi Kappa Phi set the new term in motion with the First - Annual Back-To-School Blast, which, in spite of the foul weather, was a promising success.

Rush Smokers were conducted earlier in the month, and the fraternity sponsored an open party with live entertainment.

TAU KAPPA EPSILON

The brothers of TKE sponsored a number of activities during Rush, including a pre-rush party and a retreat for officers. Other activities were a drive-in party, a band party in honor of the new pledges and a Cowboys and Indians party.

ZETA TAU ALPHA

The Zetas are currently preparing their calendar for both Fall and Winter quarters. This year, the sisters are continuing their campus project of working in the library on Sundays.

The Founder's Day Alumni Tea has been scheduled for Oct. 15. Plans are also in the making to promote better relationships with the fraternities.

Drama Department To Present 'Oliver!'

By Donna West

The eternal longing for happiness and the infinite variety of circumstances that arise through the search for love are recurring themes in Charles Dickens' OLIVER TWIST.

Tonight at 8:30 p.m., S.R.O. Theatre will present OLIVER!, the musical comedy adaptation by Lionel Bart, which has received critical acclaim both as a Broadway musical and motion picture.

The story of a tiny orphan-hero who undergoes all the harrowing experiences that early nineteenth-century London can offer, OLIVER! is directed by Doug Swink, drama department chairman, and Bob Alexander, music instructor.

The music includes such popular songs as "Where Is Love?", "Consider Yourself," "I'd Do Anything," and "As Long As He Needs Me."

Ira Jacobs is cast as Oliver, who is placed in an orphanage and fed only gruel by his keepers, Mr. Bumble (Rick Morton);

Mrs. Corney (Catherine Williams); and Old Sally (Tina Forrester).

Oliver is apprenticed to the undertaker, Mr. Sowerberry (Bob Keenan); his wife (Dianne Braak); their daughter (Darnell Glover); and Noah Claypoole (Jerry York).

He is then sold to a lively old fence for pickpockets named Fagin, played by Sam Garner, who trains little orphan boys in the fine art of theft for fun and profit. Playing the Artful Dodger, a skillful young robber, is Tracy Shepard.

Neal Bell portrays the villainous Bill Sikes, who prevents Oliver from escaping from the thieves' den. Donna West plays his girlfriend Nancy; and Glendy Higgins portrays their friend Bet. The girls try to help Oliver find his grand-uncle, Mr. Brownlow, portrayed by Tony Rivenbark.

Other characters are Dr. Grimwig (Terry Wortley); Mrs. Bedwin (Doragene Gurganus); the Rose Girl (Rachel Jordan); the Strawberry Girl (Louise Morton); the Milkmaid (Brenda Taylor); and the Knife Grind-er (Eddie Thompson).

OLIVER! will continue through Sunday with curtain time at 8:30 p.m. College students are admitted free with I. D. cards. Tickets are $1 and may be obtained by calling the Drama and Speech Department at 791-4330

Faculty Welcomes Dixon

By Jack Di Sarno

Political science at UNC-W received a shot in the arm recently when Dr. J. C. Dixon joined the faculty as Visiting Professor of political science.

Dr. Dixon comes here from East Carolina University where he served as Associate Professor of political science until this summer. He bolsters a Political Science Department which last year numbered one part-time instructor.

Dixon said that he came to UNC-W because "it was an opportunity to be part of a new and developing school."

Concerning the future of political science at UNC-W, he said, "I think there will be additional persons employed to teach political science and a major will possibly be offered within the next three years or so."

Preferring to teach American rather than foreign government, Dixon specializes in state and local government and constitutional law.

Dr. Dixon spent his undergraduate years at Marshall University, receiving an AB degree with a major in political science in 1953.

Shortly after graduation, he entered the U. S. Army and served in Germany. After his discharge, he returned to Marshall where he was awarded a master's degree in political science in 1957.

Awarded a fellowship by Emory University Dixon completed work for his doctoral degree there.

Guthrie's 'Alice's Restaurant' Entertains Millions of Listeners

By Hugh Newkirk

If you were among the number who heard Brother Hughie and the Plastic Pi Kapp Jug Band perform "Alice's Restaurant" at Freshmen Orientation, fear not, for their effort to destroy Arlo Guthrie's masterpiece was unsuccessful.

Whether their performance prompted the publishers of PLAYBOY to use "Alice's Restaurant" as a lead article in their October edition or the editors of NEWSWEEK to devote an unprecedented five pages to the song, this writer could not hazard a guess. The fact remains, however, that Guthrie and his creation have made their mark in the annals of American history and folklore.

The song has touched millions of Americans. Paul D. Zimmerman of NEWSWEEK says, "In the song's mixture of whimsy and anger, moral outrage, and absurd humor, thousands of disaffected and disillusioned young people recognized themselves and their own responses to American life."

Most people would be shocked to know that the circumstances of "Alice's Restaurant" are factual. On Thanksgiving Day, 1965, Guthrie was arrested in Stockbridge, Massachusetts for littering. The Alice's Restaurant Anti-Massacre Movement was born of this instance.

The second part of the song, the draft part which begins, "But that's not what I came to talk about....," didn't really happen.

Guthrie, son of folk singer Woody Guthrie who wrote "This Land Is Your Land," has seen his song mushroom into tremendous financial success.

Alice has produced an ALICE'S RESTAURANT COOKBOOK, which will go on sale this month and is planning to open a chain of Alice's Restaurants throughout the nation.

The album, "Alice's Restaurant," has sold over 700,000 copies to date.

committee member, charged that "the committee vote was a farce. There were only three senators present and the chairman voted too."

Walton continued, "I abstained from voting because my arguments for parliamentary procedure were futile. I represent, I feel a good many students when I oppose the endorsement but I do feel that concerned students should have the right, which they do, to demonstrate."

The concerned students asking that SGA sponsor the moratorium are planning a teach-in, the purpose of which is to have students come and voice their opinions spontaneously; a non-denominational service which would be officiated by a minister; and a candlelight vigil to be held in conjunction with the memorial service.

The Student Call for a Vietnam Moratorium, published by the Vietnam Moratorium Committee, states, "Ending the war in Vietnam is the most important task facing the American nation. Over the last few years, millions of Americans have campaigned, protested and demonstrated against the war. Few now defend the war; yet it continues. Death and destruction are unabated; bombs and fire continue to devastate South Vietnam. Billions of dollars are spent on war while the urgent domestic problems of this country remain unattended. Moreover, the war has had a corrupting influence on every aspect of American life, and much of the national discontent can be traced to its influences."

The Board of Trustees have given the right to participate in the moratorium to students as long as they do not intimidate, coerce or otherwise keep their fellow students from attending class. Faculty members who boycott classes will be in violation of the trustee policy.

Parking Fine

Here To Stay

To answer questions and complaints concerning increased fines on campus parking misdemeanors, the Traffic Committee met with a number of university officials and student leaders last month.

Complaints centered around a hike in parking fines from $1 to $5 a ticket. Committee members defended the raise as necessary to discourage age students from improper parking.

"In the past, the $1 fine was not stiff enough to discourage students from parking in restricted areas," explained Bob Wiard, junior class president.

In addition to the hike in fines, committee members voted to allow seniors to park in any student parking places. Underclassmen, however, cannot park in any student spaces marked with an "S".

Students must remove old parking decals from their vehicles to avoid confusion with new decals.

Parking areas bordered in red are reserved 24 hours a day.

Any questions or misunderstandings concerning parking or traffic rules should be referred to Noe, whose office is located in the Physical Plant Building.

Pstych Club

Psychology Club will sponsor a party to better acquaint members and prospective members Oct. 18.

At the first meeting of the quarter, Walt Denning, Jr. was elected president. Other officers include Bill Bland, vice-president, and Martha Cowie, secretary-treasurer. Dr. Michael Bradley will be adviser.

O'Kaysions To Play At Winter Festival

The O'Kaysions will entertain at the Winter Festival Dance Nov. 14.

This six-piece band from Georgia is nationally known for their smash hit "I'm a Girl Watcher" which climbed high on top tune lists last spring.

"This is the first time the University has secured a band with such a great reputation for a dance," said Dale Donahue, Dance Committee Chairman. "We're expecting another successful evening."

"Even though our last dance was a tremendous success, we are working hard to make the next one even better," he continued.

The dance, the last of the fall quarter, will cost about $1,000 with most of the expenditure for the ballroom rental, free refreshments, and the band.

The place is the Cape Fear Hotel Ballroom. The time is 9 - 1. The dress is semi-formal: coat and tie for men, party or cocktail dress for ladies. The admission is by ID card, no stags permitted. All members of the University and their dates are invited to attend.

From Twi To Bobo

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Twi, Bobo, Kran and Kru may sound like exotic tongues, but not to the people who speak them as native languages. Twi (spoken in Ghana), Bobo (Upper Volta), Kran and Kru (Liberia) are among the lesser-known languages now being taught by the Peace Corps to its Volunteers.

These minor languages range from Aklanon (Philippines) to Zomboangueno (another Philippines tongue) and include four Arabic dialects, Ghanese, Ga, Cameroonian Pidgin and Caribbean Creole.

CELEBRITIES -- Famous nation-wide for "I'm a Girl-Watcher," The O'Kaysions will perform for the UNC-W Winter Festival.

Chorus To Present Concert

The Chorus of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington will present a concert Friday, Nov. 14, at 8 in the small gym in Hanover Hall.

Dr. Don Moses, assistant professor of choral music and conductor of the Chamber Singers, a prestige vocal organization at Indiana University, will conduct the University Chorus in the Chamber Mass by Antonio Vivaldi and the Opus 52 Liebeslieder Waltzes by Johannes Brahms.

A small orchestra has been secured through the help of Professor Rodney Schmidt at East Carolina University. The instrumentalists, assisted by Jim Youngblood at the organ, will accompany the Vivaldi Mass. The two piano accompaniment for the Liebeslieder Waltzes will be provided by Dru Farrar and Frances Farmer.

Soloists for the concert are Ann Darden, UNC-W music instructor in voice; Dianne Brsk, soprano; Brenda Taylor, soprano; Mrs. Belinda Groves, soprano; Mrs. Lynn Walker, soprano; Larry Oldham, tenor; and Paul Roderick, baritone. Mr. Loyd Hudson is the director of the University Chorus.

UNC-W Soon To Boast Professional Fraternity

UNC-W will soon boast its first professional fraternity, Pi Sigma Epsilon, a national fraternity in marketing, sales management and selling.

Dedicated to the promotion of the business profession on campus, Pi Sigma Epsilon is the fastest-growing professional fraternity in the nation. Listing over 6000 brothers, PSE chartered its forty-seventh chapter in March, 1967 and adds over 1000 members annually.

PSE gives undergraduates brothers, "potential sales executives," an opportunity to establish closer contact with one another, with marketing educators on their campuses and with professional sales executives.

"Pi Sigma Epsilon will provide students with valuable extracurricular education, worthwhile chapter sales projects, management experience, potential career opportunities and leadership training," stated Thomas Burke, professor of business.

Interested students may obtain additional information in Burke's office in the business department. An organizational meeting is slated for the near future.

Frosh Elect New Officers

Freshmen elected Bill Brooks as president of the class. Less than 175 students of a class of 500 voted.

Edna Lee will serve as secretary, and Rhonda Vaught, Nadine Frimenko, Pam Ward, Walter Glover, and Keith Farmer as senators.

A run-off for vice-president was held yesterday between Fran Turnage and Gail Hutson, since neither received a majority of the votes.

Local Fraternity To Award Grant

To give freshmen an opportunity to apply, Delta Epsilon Fraternity is awarding its annual $100 scholarship at the end of fall quarter.

Established Spring Quarter, 1968, the scholarship is available to a full-time student who has earned a minimum 2.0 quality point average. Selection, by the brothers, is based chiefly on scholarship and financial need.

The scholarship provides the student with $33.33 per quarter, or $100 per academic year, if the recipient main-

"This grant exemplifies one of the founding principles of Delta Epsilon -- scholarship," stated Dana McAtee, scholarship chairman.

Previous scholarships were awarded to Sara Rivenbark Harrell and Gary Wayne Whitehead.

"The fraternity is proud of its scholarship program and of the high standards set by the founding brothers," McAtee said. "This is but one of the ways that we attempt to promote scholarship, as well as brotherhood, at UNC-W."

Construction Projects Face Lift Campus

By JACK D. SARNO

The annals of history will look back on the 69-70 school year at UNC-W as one of great material expansion. Three buildings are now under construction, a fourth will soon begin to take shape, and a fifth is in the planning stage.

At present, work is nearing completion on the education - psychology building and the cafeteria. The auditorium, a gift of the Sarah Graham Kenan Foundation, is in the steel-erection phase.

The cafeteria is scheduled for completion around March 1. Seating capacity of the facility is 678.

Jan. 15 is the completion date of the education - psychology building, which will consist of classrooms, labs, and an auditorium. This structure will greatly aid an already extensive teacher-training program.

The auditorium, which will seat 1000, is slated for completion July 15.

Dorms, the lack of which has long been a hindrance to the growth of UNC-W, will soon begin to materialize. The tentative completion date for the proposed coeducational dormitory is Jan. 15, 1971. Present plans locate the structure in the vicinity of the Field House.

Numerous problems have plagued the dorm construction project. The main one has been in the limit of funds state institutions are allowed to spend for housing facilities.

MEMORIAL OR RALLY?

TO THE EDITOR:

Do not take lightly the actions of a few faculty members and students who took an active part in a "memorial" service last Oct. 15.

An attempt to gain support of the student body for next month's "Memorial" might be made. In view of this a few facts should be made general knowledge to all concerned faculty members and students. The Moratorium or "memorial" was a service without even a simple word of prayer, even though several well known ministers and concerned faculty members spoke. This fact normally would be surprising but if one would take a look at the sources from which this whole "memorial" originated here at UNC-W it can be understood easily.

The moratorium of Oct. 15 and the proposed action this coming November is a front organization for a political rally. These people used every single American that has died in V. N. and exploited him for their own political views.

Many do not realize the gravity of this situation. As pointed out earlier, the memorial was supported by a few; but look closely at what almost happened because of our apathy. On Oct. 13 a resolution was defeated by a vote 11-10 in the Student Senate. If it had passed, in name we would have supported the farce that took place on the steps of the Pub Oct. 15. The 11 senators that saved us cannot be commended too highly for sticking to their basic beliefs and voting against the Moratorium.

All of us know someone whether relative or friend who gave his life in Viet Nam. Are we going to let a few of the vocal minority drag these dead G.I.s names through the mud next month? Are we going to stand by and let a few faculty members and students speak for 1400 students? I suggest we contact our student senators and voice our opinion and attend Student Senate meetings when these topics come up for discussion. Don't let the voices of a few (Ph.D. or otherwise) speak for you.

In recent year, the North Carolina General Assembly has taken on a new project of transforming colleges into universities.

Although this sounds like an immense and time consuming task, the General Assembly has become a master craftsman in only a few sessions.

Consider one of the latest creations. This large group of politicians from across the state transformed Wilmington College, a 1200-student community college, into a university. An exaggeration of course, but it does focus attention on a serious problem.

The effect of this rapid expansion on the whole system will eventually be detrimental. Hostility should not be directed toward the institutions involved, though. Naturally the benefits of being incorporated into the system are many, and local decision-makers are not going to hinder any such move.

However, if academic excellence is the primary objective in developing the state's higher learning apparatus, "legislated universities" are not the answer.

Logically, the state could encourage financially and otherwise general improvement of the prospective branches and insist that these institutions do in fact reach a high degree of academic excellence before being consolidated.

Future expansion should be used sparingly as a tool to strengthen all the members collectively rather than benefit one in particular.

Stasios Serves

By TOMMY WALTON

Famed for his wit, reliability and willingness to work, Jimmy Stasios, senior class vice-president, has more than earned the recognition of this column.

Majoring in business administration, Jimmy is an active member of the accounting club and is working to establish a chapter of Pi Sigma Epsilon national business fraternity on campus.

This year, he was awarded a scholarship by Winn-Dixie, where he has been employed for the past two years.

In addition to his duties as vice-president of his class, Jimmy acted as chairman of advertising for the student telephone directory, selling the necessary ads, with the help of his committee, in an unprecedented three weeks.

A charter brother of Delta Epsilon Fraternity, Jimmy is a tremendous asset to this year's Student Government Association.

From College To University

By MIKE CHURCH
Everyone is aware of the happenings last July. What does becoming a university mean to the school? The answer is nothing.

It is just a new name and a few new signs in big black letters proclaiming the existence of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington. It is the same old Wilmington College. Believe me, just count the number of UNC-W students at a soccer game or later at basketball games.

Wilmington College was plagued with lack of interest and nowhere is it more evident than at athletic functions. Only you can become UNC-W if you the students take a part in making this school what it should be.

Supporting your team is a good place to start. An absence of fans at athletic contests is often reflected in the score; ask any of your team members. Then go and find out.

Visitors from other parts of the country in the past have often been surprised to find that schools in this area, and especially this university so close to the ocean, do not participate in any of the water sports such as swimming, rowing, and diving.

UNC-W will now have a rowing team. Men have responded enthusiastically to the call, and two more boats have been acquired. The seventh varsity sport has begun well enough; keep it going.

Hawks Face Erskine In Last Home Game

The Seahawks finish their home slate Monday against Erskine College. The Hawks beat Erskine at Due West, S.C. last year in their poorest defensive showing of the year giving up three goals.

Coach Sproles' team has been hindered by injuries this season. Out for the season are lettermen Phil Oakley and Tom Torhan. Also nursing injuries have been Steve Bowls, Gary Gurganus, Drew Adams, and Randy Harrell.

The Hawks, with a 4-4 record, will probably start Gene Russ, Rick Wells, Steve Bowls, Barney Lewis, and James Whisnant on offense. Defensively will be Paul Livingston, Jack Blackmore, John Leach, Steve Clemmons, Steve Shambelin, and Gary Gurganus. Jim Harris will probably start in the goal. Rounding out the team are Frank Barbee, Bill Watkins, Brian Black, Drew Adams, and Randy Harrell.

The Seahawks travel to Laurinburg to play St. Andrews in their final District 29 outing of the year.

Construction Projects Face Lift Campus

By JACK D. SARNO

The annals of history will look back on the 69-70 school year at UNC-W as one of great material expansion. Three buildings are now under construction, a fourth will soon begin to take shape, and a fifth is in the planning stage.

At present, work is nearing completion on the education - psychology building and the cafeteria. The auditorium, a gift of the Sarah Graham Kenan Foundation, is in the steel-erection phase.

The cafeteria is scheduled for completion around March 1. Seating capacity of the facility is 678.

Jan. 15 is the completion date of the education - psychology building, which will consist of classrooms, labs, and an auditorium. This structure will greatly aid an already extensive teacher-training program.

The auditorium, which will seat 1000, is slated for completion July 15.

Dorms, the lack of which has long been a hindrance to the growth of UNC-W, will soon begin to materialize. The tentative completion date for the proposed coeducational dormitory is Jan. 15, 1971. Present plans locate the structure in the vicinity of the Field House.

Numerous problems have plagued the dorm construction project. The main one has been in the limit of funds state institutions are allowed to spend for housing facilities.

Dramatists Produce Christmas Musical Variety Promised In Homecoming Plans

By Donna West

The Drama Department recently presented the first children's play ever produced on campus, "Mr. Scrooge," which was directed by Tony Rivenbark.

Based on Charles Dickens' perennial favorite, "A Christmas Carol," "Mr. Scrooge" is a two-act musical version.

The well-known tale unfolds the story of miserly old Ebenezer Scrooge, who is sullen, scornful and devoid of sympathy for fellow humans. To him, "Christmas is a noisy, nasty nightmare!"

The popular holiday tale was the story of how Scrooge, played by David Jones, was terrified out of his misanthropy and was forced to realize the beauty of life, symbolized by the Christmas season.

The cast included Bob Keenan as Bob Cratchit, Scrooge's underpaid clerk; Neva Godwin as crippled Tiny Tim; and Sid Crowley, Tammy Reavis and Theresa Sheats as the Cratchit children. Glendy Higgins portrayed Mrs. Cratchit.

Musical numbers included "Mr. Scrooge," "You're A Rose, Mrs.

Cratchit!" and "Gee Up, Little Pony!"

Playing the ghosts who convinced Scrooge to change his life were Mike Zipser (Christmas Past), Tom Allen (Christmas Present), and Louise Morton (Christmas Future). The Ghost of Jacob Maley, Scrooge's late business partner, was played by Mike Groves.

Scrooge met the spirits of Mr. Fezziwig (Sam Garner) and Mrs. Fezziwig (Joan Carol McGee), as they and their guests performed the "Fastest Polka in the World," at a Christmas party given many years ago by a former employer.

Marc Pope played the ghost of young Scrooge, and Sandy Lazarides portrayed his fiancée Isabelle, who recalled her loss with a rendition of "Very Long Ago."

The cast also included Mrs. Dilber (Donna West), Scrooge's housekeeper; Mr. Stretch (Edie Thompson), and the Undertaker; his assistant (Tracy Shepard) and the crafty Mr. Sharkey (Jimmy McDaniel).

Scrooge's nephew was portrayed by Robin Conrad; Sherry Campbell

Homecoming festivities, scheduled for February 4-8, will feature two concerts with major vocal attractions.

According to Bob Wiard, Homecoming chairman, plans call for concerts on Thursday and Sunday of Homecoming Week. The first concert, tentatively slated for Brogden Hall, will be open to the general public, but the second, to be staged on campus, will be restricted to university students and their guests.

"We hope to present the first concert in Brogden Hall because of the extra seating space, superior lighting facilities and better sound system," Wiard explained. "The facilities are much more suitable for staging a group of the calibre we expect to have."

Rumors name "Smith" and "The Brooklyn Bridge" as concert possibilities. Wiard, however, declined comment.

Students will be able to purchase tickets for the concerts for $2 for the first ticket and $2.50 for an unlimited number of additional guest tickets.

Working with a budget of $10,000 - $12,000, as compared to $5,500 last year, the Homecoming committee has scheduled a number of activities. A program sponsored by the Fine Arts Committee will kick off festivities Wednesday night.

Two dances, featuring the "Calabash Corporation" and the "Georgia Prophets", are slated for Friday and Saturday nights.

"This year we are giving students a variety of music," stated Wiard. "The bands for the dances are primarily soul groups, but the concert attractions will feature different styles."

Festivities will also include a Homecoming Parade, student - faculty game, alumnae game, open house and election and crowning of Homecoming Queen, in addition to the Homecoming basketball game Saturday night.

"By scheduling a longer Homecoming Week, this year, we have been able to include activities which will interest everyone," Wiard explained. "What we really need, however, is the support of all university students."

22 Students Honored

The 1969 edition of Who's Who among Students in American Universities and Colleges will carry the names of 22 students from UNC-W who have been selected as being among the country's most outstanding campus leaders.

They are Carol Blythe, Chick Coleman, Chuck Cuppet, Billy Dalton, Chris Deasy, Dale Donahue, Mike Frimenki, Randy Gore, Barbara Halterman, Johnny Hester, George Holston, Georgia Macris, Hugh Newkirk, Tony Rivenbark, Gene Russ, Sherry Southerland, Jimmy Staslos, James Thornton, Tommy Walton, William Watson, Donna West and Bob Wiard.

Campus nominating committees and editors of the annual directory have included the names of these students based on their academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and future potential.

They join an elite group of students selected from more than 1000 institutions of higher learning in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and several foreign nations in North and South America.

Outstanding students have been honored in the annual directory since it was first published in 1935.

Newkirk Proposes, Explains Finances For School Year

Student Body President Hugh Newkirk recently presented his proposed budget for the year to the Student Senate.

Newkirk explained to the Senate that traditionally $6 out of $25 of the student activity fee is administered by the Student Government Association. The breakdown is as follows:

$6 -- Student Government Association
$5 -- Physical education
$5 -- Athletics
$4.50 - Parking lots
$4.50 - Uncommitted

The uncommitted $4.50 is deposited to a savings account until the Board of Trustees of the Consolidated University of N. C. decides where it will be administered.

Newkirk asserted that the SGA would make recommendations concerning its use through the Fees Committee, of which Donna Lester, student body secretary is a member. Newkirk, however, stressed the fact that final decision belongs to the Board.

This year's SGA budget figures approximately $21,320, based on a full-time equivalency enrollment of 1240 students.

The breakdown on the budget is as follows:

	Appropriated	Income	Net
Seahawk	$3,400	$500	$2,900
Seahawk deficit	---	---	300
Telephone Directory	450	400	50
Fine Arts	3,000	---	3,000
Social Events	5,000	---	5,000
Fledgling	10,000	1,750	8,250
Senate	500	---	500
	$22,350	$2,650	$20,000

"Every quarter, income and expenses will be evaluated, and this will be compared to enrollment figure," Newkirk explained. "This could possibly result in an increased budget."

"The appropriated figures are the ones we must be sure to cover because rising costs often outrun income."

Frances Farmer, executive editor of The Seahawk, told the senate that printing costs greatly affect her budget, which is the same as last year. The senate acknowledged Miss Farmer's comment, and Newkirk promised to try increasing the budget if possible.

Originally, this year's budget was debited for approximately $1,300 to cover a $900 deficit incurred by The Seahawk, two years ago, plus $450 to cover half the cost of the Student Handbook, the other $400 coming from an administration budget.

Newkirk informed the Senate that he had told Chancellor William Wagoner that he felt that the SGA should have been notified earlier that they were to assume these debts.

Dr. Wagoner agreed to have an administration budget absorb the entire cost of the handbook and agreed that the SGA would absorb the $900 deficit in $300 increments, to be debited from another account over the next three years.

Dr. Wagoner cautioned Newkirk that the SGA must absorb the cost of the handbook and take responsibility for its publication, if the student body wanted a handbook.

Test Results

The Counseling Center would like all freshmen to make an appointment to receive results from tests administered during Orientation. They should contact Mr. Mathis or Dr. Newton in the Administration Building, Room 205A, or by dialing Extension 57.

New Name Commemorates James

Student Senate recently passed a resolution proposing changing the name of the Student Services Building to the Hinton James Building, in honor of the first student to attend the University of North Carolina.

The resolution was presented to Chancellor William Wagoner, who will present it to the University Board of Trustees for final action.

Hinton James, who was born in 1776, lived near Wilmington, in what was then New Hanover County.

In 1789, when young James was 13, the state university was chartered by the State Legislature.

The first cornerstone was laid in 1793, when James was 17.

On February 12, 1795, James became the first student at University of North Carolina, having walked to Chapel Hill from his home near Wilmington. For two weeks, he was the entire student body.

One of seven in the University's first graduating class, James received a bachelor's degree in engineering, returning to Wilmington, where he worked to make the Cape Fear River more navigable.

gable.

In 1807, James was elected to the State Legislature. Later, he served a term as mayor of Wilmington.

"Now, 173 years later, the University of North Carolina extends to Wilmington," stated Chick Coleman, who proposed the resolution.

"A state-wide network has emerged from such meager beginnings," he continued. It is only fitting that the building which has been designated Student Services Building be named for one of the students who made it all possible."

Two-Party Politics Arrives: 'It's About Time'

By Dale Donahue

Politics: Some may laud it, others damn it; some may say it cures, others that it corrupts, but few can for long ignore it. At long last there are students who have discarded the theory that "if we ignore it maybe it'll go away" and have dared bring politics to campus life. It's about time.

Three years ago the university chartered its first politically oriented organization, the Student Political Activities Club, but only once (on the occasion of Dr. Martin Luther King's death) did the club really come into the campus spotlight. That is until now. This year SPAC has attracted attention more than once and in so doing, was instrumental in encouraging the discussion on campus of a topic of deep political significance - the Vietnam War.

Rest assured, SPAC leaders tell us, that other issues of local and national concern besides the war will also be raised during the school year. Again I say, it's about time.

Shake some skeletons and break some of the internal cobwebs that so frequently cloud our minds. Stir up a little thought - the resulting mixture might prove highly beneficial. And regret no longer that SPAC has no one with whom topics may be discussed and issues debated because a local chapter of the Young Americans for Freedom has been founded. At last, politics is at its best - a "loyal opposition" has been created.

The local YAF was begun only three weeks ago for the main purpose of presenting speakers issues, and platforms that espouse the feelings of most campus conservatives. We should all welcome the creation of both non-radical groups as a small but, nevertheless, significant step towards producing a university that is both politically active and informed on the issues that face our country today.

I reiterate: it's about time.

THE LOSER

A Loser is:

-A pickpocket in a nudist camp.

-A person who is seasick and one who has lock-jaw at the same time.

-A guy who joins the Dodge Rebellion and gets run over by a Volkswagen.

-A guy who mixes up the aspirins with THE pill.

-A person finishing a 440 and finding out that he was really running the 880.

Macris Distinguished In Service To School

by Tommy Walton
The epitome of energy and dedication, Georgia Macris has been an inspiration to her fellow students during the past three years. A tireless worker, Georgia always takes the lead in solving problems concerning the university.

Last year, she served as a senator and helped with the dance committee. When the committee got to the tough job of decorating and cleaning up, Georgia was always in the thick of the action.

In addition to serving as acting president of Phi Mu Women's Fraternity, she is editor-in-chief of "The Fledgling," a position which requires hours of tedious work and the ability to lead and coordinate.

In her junior year, Georgia was named to Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. This year, she was elected for the second time.

The nominating committee for Who's Who recognized what many of us have learned through experience: Georgia Macris is one of UNC-W's most valuable assets.

Letter-to-the-Editor

Drivers Take Care

To the editor:

During the past two weeks, we have had three accidents on our campus, resulting in several hundreds dollars worth of damages to the vehicles involved. These accidents could have been avoided if all parties involved had been driving carefully.

Even though there was insufficient evidence to warrant arrests, there were strong indications of traffic violations in these cases. I would like to point out that motor vehicle laws of North Carolina apply on campus, as well as off.

All of the accidents occurred near parking lots. From observing the driving habits of some of our people, I think we can anticipate more of the same type of accidents if more caution is not exercised.

We have also had a larceny from a parked car, resulting in the loss of stereo tapes, valued at approximately $50. The care was unlocked at the time of the theft. I strongly suggest that anyone parking a car with valuables inside be sure to lock it.

Do Something

Students, you are wasting your votes.

The Student Government Association is composed of the students you have elected to legislate in your behalf. Yet presently, it is probably the most ineffective, misused institution on campus.

Senators meet every other Monday - some senators. The meeting usually opens with the quandary of the quorum. Absenteeism is high, and nothing is done to discipline the truants.

Mike Frimenko, vice-president of the student body, presides over the meeting with procedures resembling Robert's Rules. Members have elected a parliamentarian to keep matters in order. But no one quite knows what is in order and what is not: more than once, a senate member has called an incorrect point of order to stifle discussion or table a motion.

In spite of technicalities, some business manages to reach the floor, but it is usually trivial and not pertinent. Anything of any importance is decided outside the senate meeting behind closed doors. Motions pass with little discussion and a unanimous voice vote.

The Senate is a select society of close friends who tend to their own business, not yours.

If you do not feel like it is serving you and considering your problems, if you can see the potential in such an organization being sapped, make an issue of it. Show the SGA you care. Let these elected people perform the jobs they accepted when they took the oath of office.

Hawks Come Small But Scrappy

By Tommy Torhan
Opening its first season as UNC-W, the Seahawk hardwood crew, sporting new look, will go against Guilford College at Guilford, on Dec. 1.

Hoping that quickness and speed will offset a lack of height and experience, as a unit, the Hawks are preparing for a 24 game schedule.

The UNC-W hoopsters face a schedule of seasoned veterans, with Campbell and High Point high on the list of teams to beat. The Seahawks have 12 home games scheduled, including a holiday tournament in which Elon, Pfeiffer, and Concord join UNC-W.

The Hawks, averaging only 6 feet 1 inch, hope to break past taller opponents, counting on senior Jerry Martin to lead the way. Martin, a 6-ft. 160-lb. Wilmington native is the only senior and one of the two returning starters on this years team.

The other returning starter is Ronnie Vance a 6-1 jr. forward from Raleigh.

Other members back from last years squad are Bill Winstead, a 5' 8" 160 lb. guard from Angler; Mike Sabrinsky, a sophomore native of Wooster, Ohio; and Jesse Smith, a 6-2 sophomore forward.

The Hawks also have three junior college transfer students: Bob Walker, a junior guard; Dennis Pierce, also a junior playing forward; and Ernie Sawyer, a 200-lb., 6-4 junior center from Elizabeth City.

Soccer Team Ends Season

By Mike Church

Cheering crowds and honors await the victors in any athletic contest, but what for the losers? Losses don't erase the hours spent in practice or the bruises. Often, as much goes into losing as into winning. A close call in the first period, a twisted ankle, or a just plain lucky bounce can mean the difference between a win or a loss, but inches and seconds never nullify the hours and miles that the fans never see.

Even large scores do not tell the complete story; a team behind by a few points late in a game may in desperation gamble and lose by more than they otherwise would have.

The Seahawk soccer team recently completed a disappointing season against St. Andrews. They never gave up and were defeated by only one goal in the final minutes, to give them a 7 - 5 record.

More men are needed for the UNC-W Rowing Association. At present 22 have signed up or indicated an interest, and will begin preparatory workouts of running and weights, while awaiting the arrival of more equipment before taking to the water.

The team is now a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Rowing Association.

Several practice sites are under consideration, with a three-mile stretch of the Brunswick River as the most likely.

Presently, Bob Brett, the only team member with previous experience, is acting captain of the team. He and several others are procuring two new four-man shells and one eight-man shell from Washington, making a total of three, four-man, and one eight-man shells.

Plans are underway for a jogging and recreational program for faculty members. Those interested should contact the Physical Education Department.

1970 Homecoming Presents...

Bridge Performance Nears

Helping to make the 1970 UNC-W Homecoming the biggest yet will be the national recording group The Brooklyn Bridge appearing in concert this Thursday in Hanover Hall at 8 p.m.

Bob Wiard, Homecoming Committee chairman, noted that extensive stage and sound preparations are being made to make this concert one of the most outstanding ever in this area. Howard Sound will supplement the equipment furnished by the by the group. WGNI "Good Guy" Mike Finley will emcee the event.

Only 1500 tickets were available originally to the public and supplies are dwindling. Those who haven't bought tickets yet are urged to do so immediately.

Present plans call for the group to arrive on campus Thursday and visit with students all day as guests of the Homecoming Committee.

The Brooklyn Bridge, consisting of 10 males and one blonde female has formed a musical monument with four powerful voices, blending with two saxophones, a trumpet, guitar, bass, organ and drums.

Their style is a masterpiece of precision, eleven individuals working together to form a single unit of perfection.

Standing proudly in front is Johnny Investrior who has one of the most dynamic voices in today's music.

Providing both flawless harmonic backing and outstanding solo voices are Fred Ferrara, Les Cauchi, and Mike Gregorio.

Tom Sullivan, the 22-year-old bandleader-arranger-saxophonist, was organist, guitarist and lead singer in the first rock and roll group in the history of West Point Academy.

The danceable rhythms that the Brooklyn Bridge create are accented by pretty blonde Carolyn Wood on organ, Jimmy Rosica on bass, Richie Marloce on guitar, Artie Cantanzarita on drums, Shelly Davis on trumpet and piano, and Joe Ruvia on sax.

Their sounds have been described as blue-eyed soul, hard rock, the most progressive of contemporary sounds and everything in between.

All four of the singers in the Brooklyn Bridge were formerly with other groups. Wes Farrel who produced The Cowbells, The Beacon Street Union, and The Everly Brothers, and produced such songs as "Hang on Sloopy," "Come on Down to My Boat," and "Come A Little Bit Closer" also produces for the Brooklyn Bridge.

Having made many television appearances, the group has achieved national prominence for their versatility.

This winter and spring, the Brooklyn Bridge begins an extensive college tour circuit. Formerly playing night club dates, the group hopes to spread their appeal to all levels of audiences.

Some of the Bridge's million selling records are "The Worst that Could Happen," "Welcome Me Love," "Blessed is the Rain," and "Your Husband and my Wife."

Tickets Stolen

During the robbery of Shield's Ice Cream Shoppe Jan. 23, a safe containing 500 Brooklyn Bridge tickets and about $300 belonging to UNC-W Student Government was taken. The loss is unrecoverable because the establishment was not covered by insurance. Wilmington Police are investigating.

The financial success of Homecoming depends on the Brooklyn Bridge concert Thursday. If a loss is sustained because of this incident, future activities will be jeopardized.

Priest Enters Show Business To Make A Joyful Noise

Father Ian and Caroline Mitchell, appearing in concert Feb. 4, at 8:30 bring a concert of folk, pop, and liturgical music for Homecoming entertainment.

Father Ian and his wife have performed and delighted old and young alike, music critics, students, church and non-church goers, in schools, concert halls, and churches. He and Caroline both sing while he accompanies on guitar.

Internationally known as the originator of the Jazz Mass, Folk Mass and the Rock Mass idiom, Father Ian has appeared on nationwide television, has performed in the largest cathedrals in the country, and is further identified with Steve McQueen and his work among the Navajo Indians.

His American Folk Mass is the first of several liturgical works in contemporary style that have been produced. Especially popular among young people, they are being widely used at services in Roman Catholic, Episcopal and other Protestant churches.

Father Ian thinks church music will change so drastically in the next 10 years that it will amount to a revolution. "Organists have had an uncommon grasp on the public that the sweet, somber or consoling type of music made by organs is the only style for Christian worship," he has said.

His intention is to add an element of joy and enthusiasm to liturgical music. He has written a Funeral Folk Mass which is far more jubilant than somber. It displays the spirit of hope which is part of the Christian attitude toward death.

Father Ian states his aim: "I am not just an entertainer. I demand to retain my priesthood. I come to preach because the Christian church needs preaching." His music is the only medium of his message.

Father Ian and Caroline have appeared everywhere from concert halls and churches to coffee houses, theaters, and night clubs to sing their faith for young people. Soon to be released are two new albums in English, an adaptation of the "Folk Song Mass" and a "Folk Requiem" for use by the Roman Catholic Church.

18 Women To Vie For Royal Title

Students will vote Thursday to elect UNC-W's first Homecoming Queen.

Eighteen representatives of campus clubs and organizations are competing for the title.

The Queen will be crowned during halftime activities at the Saturday night basketball game by last year's queen, Carrie Davis Sheehan. Freshman Jerry York, master of ceremonies, will present the queen and her court before announcing the winner.

Candidates were required to be unmarried female students currently enrolled at UNC-W. Those competing include Judy Thompson, Physical Education Majors Club; Fran Turnage, Freshman Class; Frances Farmer, Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity; Sylvia O'Quinn, History Club; Peggy Spivey, Alpha Delta Upsilon Affiliates of Delta Upsilon; Jeannie Howe, Fledgling Staff; Linda Simon, Engineers Club; and Carol Blythe, Student

North Carolina Education Association.

Other candidates are Pat Corcoran, Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity; Phyllis Cherry, Alpha Chi Sigma Sorority; Donna Lester, Student Senate; Chris Deasy, Accounting Club; Georgia Irving, Alpha Phi Omega Fraternity; and Linda Flowers, Baptist Student Union.

Also competing are Terry Hammond, Seahawk Staff; Debbie Welsh, Phi Mu Women's Fraternity; Janet Maxey, Cheerleaders; and Donna Marks, Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority.

PE Coeds To Battle Phi Mu's

The blanket concert will make its debut at UNC-W this Sunday afternoon.

Students may bring blankets and sprawl on the floor of the gym. No chairs will be set up on the court, but bleachers will be pulled out to accommodate the townspeople.

Performing will be Freedom, formerly called Soul, Incorporated, the group that made such a hit at a dance earlier in Fall Quarter. They have played opposite Janis Joplin and the Iron Butterfly.

Students with ID's will be admitted free. Admission for the public is $1 in advance and $2 at the door.

Parade Hour Rates 1 Cut

William Madison Randall Library parking lot will be the staging ground of a Homecoming Parade, Thursday at 10:30 a.m., according to Ed Boylan, chairman of the parade committee.

Approximately 20 units will compete for two prizes: Best Float and Most Originality. Winners will each be awarded a plaque and $10.

The parade route will be from the library parking lot to the South 40 by way of the Pub and Gymnasium.

Judges will be Doug Swink, "Yank" Mihal, and William Adcock. Prizes will be awarded at a pep rally after the parade.

Classes will be suspended from 10:30 - 11:30 a.m. by order of Thomas Brown, Dean of Men, and Chancellor W. H. Wagoner.

Teke Becomes Mu Chi Chapter

Forty-one brothers and alumni of the UNC-W Tau Kappa Epsilon Colony became initiated members of TKE International Fraternity Chapter Mu Chi at installation ceremonies Jan. 24.

The colony was originally Sigma Phi Kappa local fraternity founded as the first fraternity on campus Feb. 12, 1964. The brothers were recognized as a colony of TKE May 6, 1968.

TKE was founded at Illinois Wesleyan University, Bloomington, Illinois, Jan. 10, 1899, as "The Knights of Classic Lore." The name was changed to Tau Kappa Epsilon in 1902. TKE having 215 active chapters in 41 states, the District of Columbia, and Canada, is the largest in number of chapters.

Charter officers are Robert Brett, Prytanis; Ken Cobb, Epiprytanis; Gary Holt, Grammatere; Carman Aragona, Cryso-phylos; Larry Clukey, History; Phil Saigh, Hypophetes; Frank McBride, Pylortes; and Larry Sauls, Hegemon.

Grand Epiprytanis Lenwood S. Cochran and Fraters of Lambda Psi Chapter at East Carolina presided over the weekend activities. Province Supervisor Thomas Dunham was also a guest.

UNC-W Chancellor Dr. William H. Wagoner delivered the main address at the banquet in which he emphasized the positive sides of college and university programs. He said that many of the complaints about bureaucracy overlooked the progress and benefits accomplished by an establishment for students.

Dr. Wagoner pointed out that higher education is available to many more students and offers more than ever before. College and university programs have become a major part of American life and are vigorously supported.

After the speech, Grand Epiprytanis Cochran presented the charter to Prytanis Brett. Dunham then gave Brett the traditional TKE horseshoe.

The TKE Golden Book, a record of TKE heritage was given to Dean Thomas Brown who accepted for the school. The book will be placed in the campus library.

Prytanis Brett honored Larry Sauls with a special presentation to the brother who he considered had displayed the most desire and drive in becoming a TKE chapter.

Local Fraternity Affiliates With Alpha Delta Upsilon

By Terry Hammond

Delta Epsilon Local Fraternity recently affiliated with Delta Upsilon International Fraternity as an Alpha Delta Upsilon Petitioning Colony.

Delta Epsilon was notified November 21, 1969 of acceptance as an 1834 Colony of Delta Upsilon, the sixth oldest college fraternity in existence.

Founded in 1834, Delta U has 87 active chapters in the United States and Canada, making it fourteenth in size in men's undergraduate fraternities in America.

Delta Upsilon's ideal is Justice, Our Foundation, and its four founding principles include Promotion of Friendship, Development of Character, Diffusion of Liberal Culture, and Advancement of Justice.

One of Delta Upsilon's most progressive concepts is the Unpledge System. Bill Chapman, president of the colony, explained, "The Unpledge concept calls for no physical hazing of the pledges. They are trained to be good brothers, rather than good pledges. Instead of Hell Week, pledges undergo Help Week."

The first non-secret fraternity, Delta Upsilon was founded in protest against certain abuses of secrecy. The brothers do not observe secret rituals, such as the handshake, common to the majority of college fraternities.

A charter member of the National Inter-Fraternity Council, Delta Upsilon has no set length of time for chartering a colony. "A field representative will periodically visit the colony, which will be chartered when the national considers it capable of charter status," Chapman stated.

Until the colony is installed as a chapter, colony members will wear colony pins, and pledges will wear Alpha Delta Upsilon pledge pins.

According to Chapman, Delta Epsilon considered three fraternities before deciding to go with Delta Upsilon. "Delta Upsilon really impressed us with its progressive constitution," Chapman explained. "Its goals and ideals were parallel to those of Delta Epsilon."

With an active brotherhood of 20, Alpha Delta Upsilon was founded as Delta Epsilon in 1967 by three charter brothers: Chapman, Hap Hazzard, and Rodney McGuire. During its existence as a local fraternity, Delta Epsilon initiated 37 brothers.

Elections were recently conducted to establish an executive council parallel to that of (Continued on page 6)

Big Game: UNC-W Vs. Baptist Col.

By MIKE CHURCH

With ten games yet to be played the surprising Seahawks have already topped last years win record gaining their seventh win of the young season over St. Andrews Jan. 19. Relying on speed and agility to compensate for a lack of height, the Hawks have captured third place in the District 29 standings behind Campbell and Fayetteville State, which does not play enough district foes to be eligible for the post season tournament berth.

The Hawks after dropping their first three have come back to win seven of their last eleven outing to post a 7-7 overall record while possessing a 5-1 district record.

The Seahawks increase in poise is led by the playmaking and sharp-shooting of guard Jerry Martin and the rebounding and shooting of Howard Dunn and Ronnie Vance. With the dismissal of Maynard Reynolds four Hawks are averaging in double figures Dunn (14.8), Martin (13.2), Vance (12.2), and Pierce (11.8). Besides being leading scorer Dunn has been grabbing rebounds at the rate of 12.3 per game to lead in that department.

Mike Sabrinsky, the likely choice to replace Reynolds, and Jesse Smith have also been instrumental in the Hawks success often coming off the bench to hit key baskets.

The Seahawks as a team have been scoring at the rate of 82.2 points per game, hitting 45.1 per cent of their shots from the floor. In field goal percentage Jerry Martin leads the team hitting 59.6 per cent of the shots he attempts, he also leads in assists with 85.

The Hawks faced Campbell in the first meeting of the two schools this season here Jan. 31. The Campbell game splits four games on the road which pit the Seahawks against Lander and Augusta Colleges and then High Point and Pembroke before returning to face Baptist College of Charleston in the Homecoming game. UNC-W will be seeking to avenge an earlier loss at the hands of Baptist.

After homecoming the Seahawks play Belmont Abbey here Feb. 12 and end the regular season with a three game road trip meeting ACC, Georgia Southern, and Campbell.

With ten games remaining on the schedule the Hawks are definitely in the running for a berth in the District 29 tournament. Campbell and nationally sixth-ranked Elizabeth City State are almost assured of berths in the tournament as is College of Charleston, leader of the Dixie Conference. The battle for the other berth will be between UNC - W and Pembroke State.

The Seahawks have a 5-1 record with seven district games to be played, Wilmington has only four. The two teams meet once more on Feb. 5 at Pembroke, in possibly one of the most important games of the season for the Hawks.

Hawk Mat Men Display Strength

The Seahawk grapplers under the direction of Coach Charles Sproles have thus far this season split even with opposition. The UNC-W mat crew, losing contests to The Citadel and Campbell, have wins at the expense of Methodist and St. Andrews.

The Hawks have four meets remaining, including Duke University here

Feb. 17, before the NAIA District 29 tournament.

Wrestlers for the Hawks include David Haskett a senior from Morehead City in the unlimited class, two Wilmington natives in Larry Hobbs a freshman and Bob Dineen a junior, Carl Larson and Freddy Kee both freshmen from Jacksonville and Junior Pat Sykes of Burlington. Three freshmen rounding out the roster are Edward Weddington, Robert Woodward, and Steve Jones from Salisbury and Statesville and Annandale, Va., respectively.

Captain Martin Sparks Team To Victory For Fourth Year

The UNC-W Seahawks have returned to winning ways and one of the major reasons for their success is six foot 160 pound senior captain Jerry Martin. Wearing number 20 and starting at guard he is presently scoring at 13.2 points per game clip.

A Wilmington, N. C. native Martin played high school basketball at New Hanover High graduating in 1966. He then decided to further his education and basketball fame at Wilmington College, breaking into the starting lineup as a sophomore and a regular ever since.

Jerry is now the captain and only senior with the Seahawk hardwood combo; he leads not only the Hawks but tops the District 29 statistics in field goal percentage, hitting on 65 of 109 attempts from the field for 59.6 per cent.

Howell Captures N.C. Coastline In Art

By · DAVID JAMES

Many people in search of art and culture often ignore all that is best in the area in which they live and look to some other area which they imagine to be a center of artistic endeavor. In so doing they often miss the unique and wonderful qualities of the situations and experiences of which they possess first-hand knowledge.

Those of us living in North Carolina are fortunate in many respects. If you enjoy the beauties of nature and, more particularly, the beach and the life associated with these, you owe a special debt of gratitude to Claude Howell, chairman of the Art Department, for his accurate and sensitive drawings of the North Carolina coastal regions made over the years. Many of these have been published in a small volume "Exploring the Seacoast of North Carolina" by John and Jane Corey.

The idea for an illustrated book about the various coastal regions of the state was conceived by the Coreys, and they began collecting information on the towns and villages and contacted Howell about illustrations.

He volunteered many drawings created over a period of years which Mrs. Corey sifted through selecting those suitable to her theme and adapting her book to them.

The drawings are of different types: some are line drawings, others brush or pencil. All however, illustrate some aspect of life along the coast and were drawn from actual scenes and situations.

The small 40-page volume was printed early in 1969. A second printing, with certain changes, was issued in November.

Tentative plans call for a new edition with more substitutions and alterations.

I cannot recommend this book too highly to anyone familiar with or interested in the kind of life so graphically depicted here.

'Today Is Today'

By C. T. Eyre

I've had a life and another life and they were enough to show me more than enough of the deaths of Fire and Ice.

I've lived human misery and been a carrier and victim of all the diseases that humanity and its ill-begot society have plagued on the world.

The games of insanity that are requested of me are through - there's an End in every beginning and I'm tired of running in circles -- If there's going to be an insanity, I'll make my own!

What won't Tomorrow not bring?

no longer questions me For I've learned and am Learning how to see. What do you want with tomorrow when there's more than enough of today?

Tomorrow's yours, push it away in a little garbage truck for all I care. For the garbage of the past steals today with its strings that stretch through and rob you of

Today and push the past into the future and one day there won't be a tomorrow or even a Today.

I've found that that's been Lost and Today and Love are one.

I no longer wait with Becket for Godot, I've Found Godot and he's not a he but a she and the sun's got sunny blonde hair and the blue eyes of the sea that see with me the absurd beauty of Reality!

Love is Love and play with your words of thoughts, I'll live mine and a hand to hold and know that when I Let go I still hold is more than enough and a Kiss that doesn't end is more than enough. An eyelash is enough and the kiss of a kind is a hold on reality.

Time is yours and I be-quest you all the clocks of momentary dust but for me I'll just walk hand in hand and play tag throughout the infinity of an eternal chaotic reality.

You'll say he's lost and leaving and losing his sanity but unfortunately you've yet to see how crooked straight can be. So save your pity from me it's yours too. And we'll take the crooked straight road out of your unreality; Because she too can see that Today is Today.

Jerry practices with the team approximately three hours each day working on individual shooting about half an hour. When asked how this years team differed from past teams he said, "This year the team seems to have a lot more desire and hustle. It's really a team effort - everyone is working for everyone else."

About the Hawks chances for a playoff berth Jerry remarked, "I think we can beat Pembroke, last time we had an off night and I think if we're hitting we can take them." He added that the fast style of the Seahawk game greatly improved the spectator aspects of the game and seems to have solved the problem of so often being the smaller team.

Drama Portrays Life's Ambiguities

'Waiting For Godot' is an ambiguous play -- it is intentionally ambiguous because the author, Samuel Beckett, seems to feel there is no other way to make a statement about the human condition," said Mrs. Anne Fitzgibbon, director of this S.R.O. production.

"The things we can say are few -- that we hurt, that we are lonely, that we are most conscious of our own existence through pain, that we know that love is better than hate, but that human love is a terrifyingly imperfect thing," she continued.

Samuel Beckett has recently been awarded the Noble Prize for Literature. "Waiting For Godot" is regarded as a cornerstone of the modern Theatre of the Absurd movement and a key play in the post-war theatre.

The five characters include two tramps, Vladimir (Didi), played by Neal Bell, and Estragon (Gogo), portrayed by Doc Clay, who spend their time awaiting a nebulous "Godot."

Beckett does not reveal who or what "Godot" is, probably to emphasize the human condition of waiting and not the particular thing or person who is awaited.

As Didi and Gogo wait, they are encountered by Pozzo (Tom Wilson) and Lucky (Tony Rivenbark), another pair of symbols of modern man.

Pozzo and Lucky, also nebulous figures, may all be masters and slaves, elements in each man. On the other hand, they may be the physical as opposed to the intellectual man. The fifth character is a boy sent as a messenger from Mr.

Godot to Didi and Gogo.

"It is a difficult, and in many ways, a disturbing play," stated Mrs. Fitzgibbon. "But is the very simplicity of statement in 'Waiting For Godot' and its ambiguity that makes it such an amazingly complex and exciting experience."

"Perhaps there is no better way to speak of twentieth century man than in this totality -- his religious and physical needs, ethical considerations, his hopes and his fears," she added.

The play will run Feb. 12 - 15 at 8:30 p.m. in Kenan Hall.

Students are admitted free on presentation of a student activity card. All other tickets are $1. To make reservations, see Mrs. Catherine Burruss, secretary to the drama department, in Kenan Hall, or call the theatre box-office at 791-4330.

Department Schedules Concert; Displays Baroque Recorders

Chorus to Perform In March Concert

The chorus of UNC-W will present a concert Mar. 2 at 8:15 in the small gym in Hanover Hall. No admission will be charged, and the public is invited to attend.

Featured works will be the "Libera Me" section of the Requiem by Verdi, the cantata "Rejoice in the Lamb" by Benjamin Britten, and "Verbum Caro Factum Est" by Hans Leo Hassler.

The soprano soloist in the Verdi will be Brenda Taylor. Taking solo roles in the Britten cantata will be Diane Braak, Mary Beth McGinnin and Larry Oldham.

Mr. William Saul, minister of music at Temple Baptist Church, will accompany the chorus at the organ for the Britten work. Mr. Loyd Hudson is the conductor of the chorus.

Instruments Donated To Commemorate Bason

A group of authentic Baroque recorders has been donated to the Music Department of UNC-W in memory of George F. Bason.

The recorder is a German Renaissance flute-like straight instrument. Made of wood, the instrument has a soft, highly individual, and slightly reedy tone quality.

It had its beginnings in the late Middle Ages and was used considerably throughout the Renaissance down through the time of Bach and Handel until it gradually faded out in 1750. Its use reappeared in the 20th century, first in England and then in Germany.

The recorder family consists of soprano, alto, tenor, and bass instruments. They are on display in the Music Library located in Kenan 112.

Meeting Slated For Students On Prospective Teacher Loans

UNC-W students currently holding a prospective teacher loan are required to attend a meeting Feb. 3 at 7:30 p.m. in the library auditorium. Mr. Donald Cotton from Raleigh will be here to discuss the program.

Any students who do not currently have this loan, but are interested in it are invited to attend. Please note change of meeting place from K-131 to the library auditorium.

DELTA UPSILON COLONY

Three men initiated after pledging Fall Quarter were Mike Ligon, Bern Coulter, and Ghazi Bidwan.

Three brothers will be delegates at the Province Convention, meeting this year in Virginia the third weekend in February.

The following officers have been elected to correspond to the offices of Delta Upsilon:

President, Bill Chapman; Vice - president, Rodney Maguire; Treasurer, John Bates; Chapter Relations Secretary, Jimmy Stasios and Secretary, Raymond Weeks.

ALPHA PHI OMEGA

New officers elected on Jan. 15 were Ed Boylan, President; Wallace Ambrose, first vice-president; John Blake, recording secretary; and Bob Spencer, treasurer. Georgia Irving was chosen to be Sweetheart.

Members continue to take tickets and operate concession stands at all basketball games and wrestling matches. The fraternity is conducting the Ugly Man Contest with proceeds going to the March of Dimes.

Upsilon Nu will conduct the Boy Scout Court of Honor for the Cape Fear Area Council Feb. 9 at the First Presbyterian Church.

PHI MU

Phi Mu gained ten pledges after conducting a very successful rush this quarter. The pledges are Cathy Bear, Diane Braak, Pat Corcoran, Brenda Davis, Nadine Frimenko, Margaret Garris, Gail Hutson, Rebecca Johnson, and Jean Scott.

State Day for Phi Mu will be held Mar. 7 at Gamma Lambda Chapter at UNC-CH.

ZETA TAU ALPHA

Quarter pledges are Betsy Coleman, Karen Costello, Katherine Smithfield, Rosemary Williams, and Vonnice Yeager.

Jaycees To Present B. J. Thomas Concert

Top recording artist B. J. Thomas will appear in concert in Brogden Hall, March 18 at 8 p.m., sponsored by the Wilmington Jaycees.

Boasting two recordings in the top 20 in the past year, 24-year-old Billy Joe Thomas was voted "The Most Promising Male Vocalist" by Billboard Magazine in 1966.

His first record, "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry," was an instant hit. Scepter Records bought the master and signed the artist, who next cut "Mama," which made the top of the charts in the United States and was number one in Australia.

Since then, B. J. has had big hits with "Billy and Sue" and "Tomorrow Never Comes," which were top 20 records and albums.

Thomas' recording "The Eyes Of A New York Woman" was top 20, and his next, "Hooked On A Feeling" was number five in the country and a certified RIAA million-seller.

B. J. was chosen by Burt Bacharach and Hal David to sing their compositions, "Raindrops Keep Fallin' On My Head," in the Paul Newman film, "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid."

Thomas, who was born in Houston, Texas, has played the Copacabana in New York, the Venus Club in Baltimore, and the Forum Club in Mexico City. The entertainer has appeared on both the Mike Douglas Show and the Merv Griffin Show.

Tickets for the concert will be $3.50 in advance and $5 at the door.

B. J. THOMAS, popular recording star, will appear in concert March 18 in Brogden Hall. Among his hits is "Raindrops Keep Fallin' On My Head."

University Conducts 1st Self-Evaluation

The entire University of North Carolina at Wilmington community - students, faculty and administrators - will be making an in-depth study of the past, present and future of the institution during the next 17 months as participants in UNC-W's first follow-up self-study, a requirement for retaining accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and schools (SACS).

The SACS requires a follow-up self-study four years after the initial accreditation of an institution. UNC-W was accredited as Wilmington College in November, 1967, and the accreditation was declared retroactive to 1965 when the school graduated its first four-year class.

The self-study has been in progress since October of last year when the 14-member steering committee, chaired by Dr. Fred Toney, met to map plans for the study. Members of the steering committee are Robert W. Appleton, J. Marshall Crews, Dr. Harold G. Hulon, Dr. Jack B. Levy, David K. Miller, Dr. Darwin R. Newton, James A. Price, Jr., Dr. Duncan P. Randall, Dr. W. Terry Rogers, Philip C. Smith, Jr., and Dr. Jackson G. Sparks. Ex-officio members are Dr. William H. Wagoner and Dr. J. Paul Reynolds. Dr. Arnold K. King of the University of North Carolina is consultant. William Browder, director of Institutional research, has been designated a resource person, and Mrs. Gwendolyn Croom, is serving as secretary to the steering committee.

The theme of the follow-up self-study is a comparison of Wilmington College in 1965, the date of initial accreditation by the SACS, with UNC-W today. The study will probe all aspects of the school's operations, including purpose; organization, administration and financial resources; educational programs and special activities; faculty; library; student personnel; physical plant; graduate studies and research; and projections.

Ten students have been appointed to principal committees. They are Michael Frimenko, purpose; Hugh Newkirk, organization and financial resources; Donna West, educational programs and special activities; Chris Deasy, faculty; Dianne Braak, library; Carol Blythe and Tommy Hodges, student personnel; Chris Speciale, physical plant; Wayne Whitehead, graduate studies and research; and Chick Coleman, projections. Dr. Toney emphasized that other students will play an important role in the self-study by completing questionnaires which will be used in writing the self-study reports.

The steering committee has set May 17 as completion date for the first semi-annual progress report to the executive secretary of the SACS. The second semi-annual report will be submitted in November, and the final report will be submitted in March, 1971.

The steering committee plans to request a visit by the Southern Association's visitation committee either in late April or in early May of 1971. The visitation committee will examine the departmental reports prepared for the self-study and will interview representatives of the student body, the faculty and the administration to determine how well the institution is meeting its stated purpose.

Wilmingtonians Win Awards In Lower Cape Fear Exhibit

Wilmington artists won two of the top three prizes in the Eighth Annual Lower Cape Fear Exhibition which opens in the Kenan Gallery at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington Sunday, February 8, with a reception from 3 to 5 p.m.

Juror Benjamin Williams, curator of the North Carolina Museum of Art, selected "Light in the Pine," an acrylic on masonite by Caroline L. Mc-Cauley of Wilmington, for first prize. She also had two other entries selected for the show.

Second prize winner was Cullowhee artist Thomas Hammond. His winning entry was an ink and wash drawing entitled "Bramble Picker." All four of Hammond's entries were selected for the show.

A UNC-W student, Linda Simard, won third prize for her etch "Man and Machine."

Honorable mentions were awarded to Anne Wyche of Hallsboro for her painting "Italy;" to Henry Wyche of Hallsboro an acrylic entitled "Old Barn;" and to UNC student Harry Knickerbocker for "Implosion No. 1," sculpted in plastic and cast aluminum.

Seventy-six artists representing 19 towns in the lower Cape Fear region entered the competition. From the 179 entries, Williams selected 45 works for the show.

Commenting on quality of works submitted, Williams said, "The general quality improving considerably. The old stigma of 'Sunday artist' is not attached to these works which in the past, many of entries were done by amateurs who never tended to be anything more. The prints and graphics particularly good, and it is interesting to see things coming from towns other than the metropolis, Wilmington."

The Lower Cape Fear Exhibition will be open to the public from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily through the month of February.

UNC-W To Publish Research Journal

By GARY GRADY

Students and faculty engaged in research in biology, chemistry, physics, and mathematics will soon be able to publish the results of their work in a scientific journal published by UNC-W.

Dr. Hildelisa Hernandez, assistant professor of physics, noted, "This should offer encouragement to students doing independent research or Honors work, and should give them practice in preparing papers for publication."

Dr. Jack Levy of the Chemistry Department added, "I think that publishing a journal is a good idea. It will let people outside the university know that research is being conducted here."

Research papers will be selected and edited by the department concerned and will then be submitted to an editorial board composed of one representative from each of the science and mathematics departments for final approval.

In addition to formal papers, the journal will publish communications (Continued on page 4)

NEARLY COMPLETED cafeteria building stands idle, possibly until construction is completed on the proposed high-rise dormitory. (Photo by Simeone)

Requested Cafeteria Funds Provide Air-Conditioning

The U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has granted an additional loan of $115,000 to UNC-W for its student housing and cafeteria project, according to information received by university officials from Senator B. Everett Jordan.

The additional funds requested to finance installation of air-conditioning in the student housing facilities brings the total federal loan to $1,700,000.

Ground was broken, and construction begun on the cafeteria in March, 1969. The structure is nearly complete, but operations may be delayed until the dormitory is completed.

Bids were let in January for construction of a single high-rise dormitory, which will be the first residential unit on campus.

The 1967 General Assembly appropriated funds for construction of two 200-student dorms, but the original designs were scrapped when bids exceeded available funds, and architects said further alterations would result in "serious compromise in the quality and size of the structures."

Government Plans Parenthood

The Senate has voted to adopt a child in the United States on a year-by-year basis.

Children, Incorporated, an adoption agency in Richmond, Va., will handle all procedures and select a child to be supported by the UNC-W student body.

Funds for the project will come from the earnings of a pinball machine to be placed in the Pub. Total cost of the adoption is about $12 per month.

Correspondence with the child by the student body may be direct or through the adoption agency.

Dorm Delay Reaches End

By JACK DISARNO

Dorms, long a center of controversy at UNC-W, will soon become a reality. Construction of the $1,450,000 structure has begun.

The long delay in construction can be attributed to two things: a rise in building costs and limited funds available for campus housing structures.

The General Assembly fixed a $3,400 per student limit on funds spent, regardless of the source of the funds.

The first bids received exceeded this amount forcing a change in the building plans.

The six - story dorm will be located near the dirt parking lot across from the baseball field, air - conditioned living quarters will consist of one room for two students with build-in beds. There will be four large bathrooms to a floor.

Dean of Students J. Marshall Crews said tentative plans for establishing rules will be handled by a student-faculty committee.

Concerning priorities, Dean Crews said out-of-town students would get first pick, but he added, "I think we will have enough rooms for some local students too."

Cress also said that male students would probably be housed on the bottom three floors with female students occupying the top three.

Business Manager James A. Price described the facility as "relatively plain." Leslie N. Boney and Company designed the building, with the exterior design similar to New Hanover Memorial Hospital, also by Boney.

Placement Office Aids Job-Seekers

Students needing employment can obtain information about available jobs from Mrs. Joyce Jackson in the Placement Office in Administration Building.

Wrestlers: New additions to the team include Bill Roach, John Howarth, Chris Stone, Artie Green, and Bob Deas.

ter program for pledges. Sisters are attending State Day held at Gamma Lambda Chapter in Chapel Hill Mar. 7.

DELTA UPSILON

After an exciting and exhausting Homecoming, the brothers of Delta Upsilon are settling down to concrete planning for their first Delta U Province V Conference. The conference will be held Feb. 20, 21 at Washington and Lee University in Charlottesville, Virginia. Delegates will be Bill Chapman, president; John Bates, treasurer; and David Cole. Newly-initiated pledges for Winter Quarter are Charles Beverly, Edwin Flynn, Harry Sholar, and Richard Bullard.

ALPHA PHI OMEGA A.P.O. will hold final rush to night February 19, in the old library. Dr. Wagoner will speak at 8. Prospective pledges are reminded that this is the last chance to pledge this year. Brothers had a super meeting with Chuck Wainwright, National Field Representative, on Sunday, February 8. A.P.O. presented certificates of appreciation to Professor Hudson and the Pep Band at the last home basketball game.

Editorial

Improvements Needed

Lady Luck has been on the students' side. So far.

Only three accidents, all occurring within a two-week period, have resulted on campus. However, the near-misses are unaccounted for.

Every day, a lack of caution invites calamity in the parking areas. Some form of discipline is necessary to protect students from each other.

Traffic control within lots would greatly benefit from one-way patterns. Such a plan would involve a sufficient number of signs and directional arrows painted on the pavement. Concrete dividers between double rows of spaces would also aid traffic flow, preventing drivers from cutting across lots haphazardly.

Until something can be done to the lots to reduce the risks, Officer Brantley Dillon suggests that everyone keep to the right, observing posted "yield" signs. He also asks students not to use the lots as thoroughfares, since it creates unnecessary movement in them.

Regardless of any physical improvements that may be made, traffic engineering has never by itself eliminated accidents. The responsibility ultimately relies on the drivers' common sense and courtesy to establish safe driving conditions.

PI KAPPA PHI

Gamma Theta began Winter Quarter with 13 men taking the pledge oath at the end of rush week. And the number 13 has not proved unlucky; Pi Kappa Phi placed first for their Homecoming Parade float, and sweet-heart Pat Corcoran was elected Homecoming Queen.

The fraternity honored Mrs. Keel with the annual party Valentine's Day.

TAU KAPPA EPSILON

In intramural competition, Tekes are currently 2-3 with some important games yet to be played.

Social activities for the remainder of the quarter include band parties, a ski weekend at Sugar Loaf Mountain, the Fourth Annual Roaring Twenties Party, and the First Annual Bowery Ball.

New pledges include Al Payne, Cecil Reynolds, Marion Verzall, and Ed Weddington.

PHI MU

Ten new pledges have made Beta pledge class for sign-making, enthusiasm, and football. Pledge Pat Corcoran was elected Homecoming Queen. Phi Mu was defeated 20-0 by the PE Majors in the powder puff football game.

Programs at meetings have been educational as well as entertaining lately. Frank Honey presented a slide - music program, and sisters revisited the 1968 National Convention in Denver, Col. A film, "The Red Balloon," will be shown at the Feb. 10 meeting followed by a big-little sis-

Hawks To Host D-29 Tournament

By MIKE CHURCH
Struggling to overcome a lack of weight the UNC-W wrestling team has dropped two of its last three meets. The Hawks have had to forfeit the heavy weight match in each of these meets, and are also under the handicap of having to let smaller men wrestle in the upper weight classes. The Seahawk grapplers have been able to get commanding leads only to see them disappear, losing to Campbell 20-28 after holding a 20-13 lead, and then to Elon 26-18 after being up by 18 to 3, and finally holding off Pembroke to win 25-23.

The Hawks are stronger in the first five weight classes according to coach Charles Sproles, having more experience in the smaller men. The Seahawks, now 35 on the season, still have several meets left including a contest with a strong Duke team.

Looking forward the UNC-W Seahawks will host the District 29 Wrestling Tournament February 24. The tournament will begin at 11 a.m. with the semi finals and finals that afternoon night.

The Hawks have the undefeated men thus far this season, having a good chance of placing in the tournament: Pat Sykes, Freddy Kee and Eddie Weddington.

Contest Fights Local Pollution

UNC-W Biology Club and SPAC are conducting a Filthy Photo Contest to bring to public attention any pollution - causing elements or eyesores in New Hanover County. Anyone interested in participating should submit a photograph of what they think is the most harmful incident causing pollution in our area.

Contestants should observe the following rules:

1. Any interested person of any age is eligible except judges and their immediate family.
2. Any size black and white or color photograph except slides is admissible. Pictures will not be returned after the contest.
3. The contestant's name and address and the site of the picture must be printed on the back of the photograph.
4. All entries must be submitted by 12 a.m. April 20. Winners will be announced on Wilpoll Day, April 22, at UNC-W. Winners will be notified by mail.

Minimum first prize will be $50. Additional prizes and sponsors will be announced at a later date. Send photographs to the Biology Club, in care of Mr. Frank Allen, Biology Department, UNC-W.

Dramatists Begin Preparing For Fourth Production

The Drama-Speech Department announces the cast for its fourth production of the year, EXIT THE KING. Neal Bell will portray the centuries-old King Berenger who now must die. Anne Fitzgibbon will display the strength of the Old Queen who must help Berenger face the inevitable. Donna West will enticingly insist that Berenger must not give in.

David James will mystically add the wisdom of the ages in his advice for Berenger to accept death. Jere Hodgins as the King's guard and Marcia Faye Bryant as the maid, will observe with a comic eye as Berenger struggles against his mystical - human condition.

The play depicts a death struggle on both a cosmic - universal plane as well as on a human - personal plane. Berenger has moments of grandeur and moments of pity. This subject of death is not all tragic.

Eugene Ionesco adds his ironic viewpoint with excellent touches of humor. His approach is one of tragi-comedy which he calls anti - theatre. He views man as an enigma trying to define himself while he denies the known conditions of life. All of this adds up to an exciting evening for the theatre - goer.

Production dates are April 9 - 12 in the SRO Theatre. Reservations should be made before the production week to assure a seat for this production.

Students Plan Journal

A group of UNC-W students interested in the Fine Arts have recently formed an organization which will seek to promote interaction among the arts.

The first meetings resulted in a decision to explore the possibility of publishing a journal. An effort is now being made to gather material for this journal with publication of the first issue anticipated during the early part of Spring Quarter.

Basically the journal is to be an anthology of student work in the various areas of the Fine Arts: art (visual and historical), drama, English, and music. Within this general framework the journal will strive for variety in the subject matter as well as in the mediums of expression such as original art, drawings, poems, essays, short stories.

Any student who has material he would like to submit is welcome to do so. Themes, essays, and term papers written as class assignments are eligible. All written work should be typed with name, address, and telephone number included.

There is no restriction to length. The written material can be left with any faculty member in the English department.

Those students who have art work they wish to submit are asked to contact Brain Benson or Harry Knickerbocker.

Wilmington Native Serves Foundation

A University of North Carolina at Wilmington biologist, Dr. Walter C. Biggs, Jr., has been invited to serve on a National Science Foundation (NSF) panel to evaluate proposals submitted to the Instructional Scientific Equipment Program.

Through the Instructional Scientific Equipment Program, the NSF makes grants to colleges and universities for the purchase of scientific equipment. Since many more proposals are expected than can be supported with available funds, the NSF is empaneling a group of scientists to study the proposals to determine which projects are most deserving of support.

Dr. Biggs, a native Wilmingtonian, received his A. A. degree from Wilmington College and earned his B.S. at East Carolina University. After attending the University of Kansas, he completed his M.S. degree at Texas A & M University and completed his Ph. D. in zoology at North Carolina State University in 1969.

Martin Gets Club Honors

Honored during the halftime ceremonies of the Belmont - Abbey U.N.C.-Wilmington basketball game were team captain Jerry Martin, Professor Loyd Hudson and the Pep Band.

Captain Jerry Martin playing his last home game for the Seahawks was presented a silver bowl by the sisters of Phi Mu for his outstanding contribution to the sports program at the university.

The presentation of the engraved bowl was made by Phi Mu president Barbara Halterman, who stressed his sacrifice, loyalty and service, the words inscribed on the bowl.

Professor Loyd Hudson was honored by the Upsilon Nu Chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, for his dedicated service to the university as "Voice of the Seahawks." Hudson has announced all home athletic events since 1955. Chapter president Ed Boylan presented Hudson a framed certificate of appreciation.

Boylan also presented a certificate of appreciation to the Pep Band, organized by the student under the direction of Charles Hughes and Jimmy McLain.

Library Displays Rare Books

Aldine first editions of Latin classics on loan from Professor J. Rush Beeler of the Department of Modern Languages are on display in the lobby of the William Madison Randall Library at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

Included in the exhibit are the rare Ovid OPERA (1502-03) and a volume of Cicero's letters in its restored sixteenth century binding.

The Aldine Press was founded about 1490 by Aldo Pio Manuzio, better known by the Latinized form of his name, Aldus Manutius. For just over a century, this press issued books that have been increasingly prized by collectors for their careful and correct typography, elegant fonts of type and beautiful bindings.

Aldus devoted himself to the perfecting of types and had nine different fonts of Greek types and fourteen of Roman made.

He and the engraver, Francesco of Bologna, devised the corsivi types, now known as italics, founded on the best contemporary handwriting, perhaps that of Petrarch.

His new italic types were first used for a series of ancient and modern classics in octavo format, known as 'Aldines,' which began with Virgil in 1501.

The introduction of this format was a landmark in the history of book production. The demand for these publications was so great that the printers of Lyons and Florence began to issue counterfeit Aldines.

Council Okays Additions

Courses in anthropology and a new course in philosophy and religion will be introduced into the curriculum at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington as a result of action taken by the institution's academic council at its February meeting.

Two courses in anthropology, Anthropology 105 - Introduction to Anthropology and Anthropology 305 - Indians of North America, will be offered spring quarter, beginning March 23. The academic council also approved a course addition in philosophy and religion, Indian Religions:

Hinduism, Jainism, Buddhism and Sikhism, also for spring quarter.

Study Reveals Department's Faults

Editors note: The following is an excerpt from the self-study report of the Department of Philosophy and Religion. The report is the first to be furnished for publication.

The purpose of the Department of Philosophy and Religion of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington is to create a UNIVERSITAS SOCIETAS where the whole body of masters and students are launched in an associated quest for the common end of freeing shackled minds to think their own thoughts in responsible service to the wider community of man. Inquiry, research, learning, and teaching are intimately related to the social and intellectual needs of all men and, if they are not, become vacuous, inspid, and dangerously destructive. The masters are those whose investigations prompt students to seek with them. The students are those who have learned that there is no appropriation of knowledge without joyously communicating it. Thus, at any time the master may become student, and the student may become the master. Within this consortium of nature scholars and eager students, the perspective of total concern with all being, knowing, and doing is pursued with honest inquiry and open controversy.

In light of the aims and purposes of the institution as a whole, the Department of Philosophy and Religion has adopted the pedagogical methodology of creative inquiry, which maintains that constant or frequent questioning is the first key to wisdom. We advocate the tradition of the liberal arts, i.e. liberal with its original meaning of "free" and arts with its original meaning of "excellence." We strive, therefore, to galvanize excellence through free inquiry. The purpose and aims of the department are, consequently, fully in accord with the purpose, spirit, and intent of DISCERE AUDE.

The aims and purposes of the department are presently being tangibly realized in terms of the number of students engaged in independent and seminar study, study abroad (program and scholarships for students as members of the Institute for Mediterranean Studies), student directed informal seminars (no course credit and NOT listed in the catalogue as a part of the regular curriculum), program for the creative students, addition of evening courses by means of visiting lecturers, development of varied methodologies for teaching and learning, 1968-69 inception of a major in philosophy and religion, development of a philosophy of curriculum which allows for divergence rather than perpetuation of egalitarianism, development of a program in archaeology through independent study (archaeological excavations of the 17th and 18th Centuries site of Charles-towne, N. C.), development of a course in applied logic for freshmen to provide an introduction to the thinking process hopefully utilized in all the disciplines at the institution, and significant upgrading of the primary sources in the William Madison Randall Library.

In relation to the Department of Philosophy and Religion, the institution's general education requirements need to be re-examined and rethought. The current ideology of basic requirements seems to stem from the archaic philosophy of well-rounded individuals (which is in itself contrary). Fifty years ago when there was no knowledge explosion, one could perhaps function with a survey course in the major disciplines. Now, superficiality is neither appropriate nor feasible. The curriculum model needs to be changed from the broad-based pyramid to a model where each individual has a curriculum built for his own talents, interests, and abilities. We ought to stop trying to mould everyone in the same straight jacket of a curriculum and begin to explore the possibilities of assisting individuals to mould their own abilities and talents. At present, therefore, the general college requirements are out of step with the Department of Philosophy and Religion.

While acknowledging the fact that the Fine Arts Department has yet to develop itself into a major department (and it may have justifiable reasons), that sociology is in the catalogue but not one course was taught during the winter quarter, and that anthropology will finally cease to exist only as a subject title in the card catalogue and be taught spring quarter, the most patent omission in the curriculum at the UNIVERSITY of North Carolina at Wilmington is a department of classical languages. This omission greatly hinders the effectiveness not only of the Department of Philosophy and Religion but of the entire institution. No institution worthy of the appellation "university" lacks Latin and Greek, and we await the appointment of a classical scholar with growing impatience.

The department is not only interested in innovation for its own discipline but also hopes to broaden and deepen the inception of innovated programs throughout the university.

The Department of Philosophy and Religion has taken the initiative and received a grant of $300,000 to identify and utilize hidden talents. The first talent we are concentrating upon is the creative talent, which is presently not being provided for in the institution. We propose, not only for our department, but for ALL others, that a program of enlightened instruction and opportunity be established where people with ability to produce new and worthwhile ideas, products, and methods can teach and learn.

The devices utilized to evaluate the effectiveness of individual instructors and general department effectiveness indicated general satisfaction with the administration and general DISSATISFACTION with the faculty.

Library resources are woefully inadequate -- particularly in the realm of primary sources; and until we are adequately financed, we shall remain woefully inadequate. Library usage of what we do possess by both staff and students is above average. We have lately instituted courses which attempt to develop a students' library by having them buy the primary sources in paperback. At present, it appears to be working.

Teaching and office space is inadequate. We need several larger seminar rooms, and the office might best be described as inadequate kennels. Hopefully, in the future, buildings will not be designed by architects alone. It is also pointedly recommended that telephones with outside lines be installed in the departmental offices. It is incomprehensible to hinder faculty from the communication of ideas.

The immediate and pressing need is the addition of another fulltime faculty member in the area of secular philosophy. Logic and modern philosophy need to be strengthened, and the student demand for both is patent.

Within the next two years, we shall need another full-time faculty member in the field of Asian philosophy. Within five years, we shall need another faculty member in the field of modern Western philosophy. In ten years, we shall need two additional faculty members to teach the fundamental courses in philosophy and religion with specialties in ancient, mediaeval, and modern philosophy and religion. Resources, program, and plans will depend upon the individuals we add to the faculty. Faculty are our priority, everything else, i. e. courses, resources, and curricula follow. A graduate program in philosophy and religion will be added when faculty and library resources permit.

DELTA UPSILON

PHI MU

The brothers are actively pursuing the possibilities of a new house. They are looking for one larger than the present one which lends itself better to the activities of a fraternity.

In the near future, the brothers plan to have a party including the Carolina Chapter of DU. Also they have been invited by a local fraternity at Southeastern Community College to share a house at Ocean Drive Beach for Easter Weekend.

They had a very interesting and profitable four-day visit from the national field secretary.

Phi Mu, concerned with the drug problem, had H. G. Grohman, chief detective with the Sheriff's Department, speak on Drug Abuse at their Philomathean Hour on Feb. 24.

A Chip'n'Dip party was given for the pledges Feb. 27 at Wrightsville Beach.

ZETA TAU ALPHA

The Zetas recently had a cookout hosted by Mary Gardell in honor of the new pledges. One of the highlights of the party was the announcement of Big Sisters.

Preparations are underway for Zeta State Day April 18 in High Point. The sisters will be staying at Delta Gamma Chapter House for the weekend.

New officers are Sherry Kinlaw, president; Carol Sweet, vice-president; Linda Simon, corresponding secretary; Laura Trawick, recording secretary; Ann Griffin, treasurer; and Judy James, historian. Field secretary Marty Sik will visit March 8 for officer training.

Litter Prevention Pays

Throw-away aluminum cans are being squirreled away at a tidy profit, and this helps to make the countryside look a little neater.

Reynolds Metals Co. has started a program in selected areas under which it pays Boy Scouts and civic groups 1/4-cent for each discarded aluminum beverage can turned into the company. In the Los Angeles area more than a million cans are coming in each month.

The company has formed a special metal recycling division and hopes to develop new methods for the re-use of aluminum, including possible recovery of the metal from municipal garbage heaps.

New "Marine Fence"

A new "marine fence" that can be easily assembled to bar intrusion of floating oil and debris in marinas and harbors has entered the anti-pollution fight. It is made of sheets of asbestos and rubber, combined with foamed flotation material. The sections are linked together by welded marine-type chain stretched along the bottom underwater edges of the fence. The weight of the chains

Delegates Report on Entertainment Convention

By BOB WIARD

The National Entertainment Conference held its annual convention Feb. 15-18 in Memphis, Tenn. UNC-W delegates were Student Body President Hugh Newkirk and Dance Committee Chairman Bob Wiard who took part along with some one thousand other delegates from member schools across the country.

The purposes of the convention were to provide a forum for educational and informative discussion on purchasing, promotion, and presentation of programs on the college campus; to provide a setting for students to meet and deal with agents and introduce new talent to the college scene along with new ideas and concepts in campus programming.

The NEC is devoted to the development of professional standards and knowledge of the entertainment fields among its exclusive university and collegiate membership. It is an information, communication, and service organization for colleges and universities which deals solely with problems in all media of the performing and visual arts field: classical, semi-classical, and popular music, films, lectures, theatre, art exhibits and recordings. The NEC, through workshops, handbooks, papers, and meetings provides and educational training program for the various entertainment training program for the committees on the college campuses.

Newkirk and Wiard feel the convention was extremely successful for both the NEC and UNCW. They regret that the SGA budget will not allow for bookings of such groups as the CCR, or Chicago, or The Fifth Dimension.

However, due to a hard working Dance Committee, the budget is increasing with each concert.

Thanks to educated buying and programming, the committee is getting better entertainment at lower prices and thus serving the desires of the students.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This report was submitted by Bob Wiard after returning from the convention.

Clear Protection

Vandalism may be decreased with a new plastic development from industry. It's called Lexan.

This transparent plastic has been developed by General Electric Company, and according to C. R. Carson, GE's sheet products manager, it is unbreakable, 250 times stronger than glass.

Its applications, according to a company spokesman, include schools, factories, public housing units, banks and retail stores.

Prize-Winning Play Rates Praise

By DAVID JAMES

WAITING FOR GODOT by Samuel Beckett was presented in the SRO Theatre Feb. 12 - 15. Those who were present on these nights were rewarded by the opportunity to see a production of the highest calibre. For WAITING FOR GODOT, Beckett was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1969. WAITING FOR GODOT is probably the single most important work in post-World War II theatre. The play is concerned with the position of man in a universe that seems wholly indifferent to his existence. In such a universe man, knowing nothing, positive of nothing, cannot act meaningfully. He can only suffer, play games in a futile attempt to relieve his torture at the knowing uncertainty of his existence, and wait for the unknown quantity (Godot) which will somehow infuse his life with meaning and purpose.

Bodot, the symbol of this unknown quantity is a tenuous being. Indeed, even Godot's existence is uncertain. Man's aspirations, his deferred hopes, are never realized. All that is left to the characters in the play is a continuous state of waiting, an existence that never changes.

In the production Doc Clay and Neal Bell portrayed the two central characters, Estragon and Vladimir, two tramps waiting in an unknown place for an unknown person. Bound to each other by ties of need stronger than love or hate, they interact upon each other as catalyst and depressant. Both actors rendered sensitive, thoughtful interpretations of their characters. Neal Bell was particularly good as the fearful, almost child-like Didi. He exhibited a depth and versatility that Doc Clay often lacked. Although Clay's portrayal was uniformly consistent, he often lacked the humor and lightness inherent in his character. At times he appeared purposelessly ponderous.

Tom Wilson and Tony Rivenbark as Pozzo and Lucky, slave and master, provided a physical, visual, and oral contrast that was continually exciting. The interplay between the two was extremely fine. Rivenbark, in particular, deserves commendation. Although he had few lines, he remained visually and emotionally exciting throughout the play. This is a difficult task for any actor. All in all, the cast was the most uniformly excellent in any production thus far at the SRO Theatre.

Mrs. Anne Fitzgibbon, the director, deserves the highest praises for her choice of the play, her original and exciting staging, and her sensitive direction of a complex work. WAITING FOR GODOT is very possibly the most completely realized production in the history of our campus theatre. Too often in the past, superficial productions of almost no dramatic worth have been presented. We hope that such productions as CRIME ON GOAT ISLAND and WAITING FOR GODOT indicate an entirely new trend.

Of Interest To Men

MEN FACE STYLE CHOICE

Straight-leg, flare, bell-bottom or traditional, with cuff or without - these are some of the fashion choices confronting men buying pants today. It's similar to the mini, midi or maxi decisions faced by women. There are belt and beltless pants with a variety of pocket treatments, too. Never before have the makers of men's pants provided so many choices in style. For example, the company best known for its Levi's blue jeans now has 198 models and fabrics in its current men's line.

HEW outlines change

A ten-point program calling for more affirmative action, beyond non-discrimination, to attract and involve members of racial groups in the total life of the university has been outlined by Dr. Eloise Severinsson, regional civil rights director for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Dr. Severinsson's recommendations, outlined in a letter to UNC President William C. Friday, came as a result of a compliance review conducted by HEW officials in February to determine whether UNC-W provides its services without regard to race, color, or natural origin, as outlined in Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Dr. Severinsson acknowledged that the compliance review indicated generally that Negro students are treated without regard to race; continuing, Dr. Severinsson listed specific steps toward establishing an affirmative action program, particularly in recruiting Negro students and faculty members.

The compliance review team recommended that all publications available to the general public include a statement of the university's equal educational opportunities policy, and that present and future alumni be advised of this policy also.

They also suggested that employers recruiting on campus be equal-opportunity employers;

---- that admissions policies of fraternities and sororities sanctioned by the university not discriminate on the basis of race, color, or national origin;

---- that off-campus housing lists include only those landlords who will accept students regardless of race, color, or national origin;

---- that dormitory room assignments be made without regard to color, race, or national origin;

---- that the Wilmington campus place teachers only in schools in compliance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

President Friday was requested to submit a plan of action regarding these recommendations to HEW within 30 days.

Chancellor appoints

Dempsey assistant dean

John Carl Dempsey has been appointed acting assistant dean of student affairs. His appointment became effective with the start of spring quarter, March 23.

Appointed by Chancellor William H. Wagoner, Dempsey will assist Dean of Student Affairs J. Marshall Crews in supervising students' extra-curricular activities. His office is in the Hinton James Student Services Building.

Dempsey entered Wilmington College in 1954 and was graduated with an associate of arts degree in 1956.

After working as a surveyor for the Corps of Engineers, N. C. State Highway Department, and Department of Conservation and Development, he returned to Wilmington College and earned his A. B. degree in 1965.

Dempsey was appointed instructor in mathematics the year he was graduated and will continue to teach engineering, in addition to his new duties.

He has begun work toward the master's degree in education at N. C. State University and hopes to receive his degree in the summer of 1971.

UNC-W Wilpoll Day

UNC-W students will "Join the rest of the nation in its goal to look inward to the many problems which threaten man's future" in observation of Wilpoll (Wilmington pollution) Day, April 22.

Staged in conjunction with National Earth Day, Wilpoll Day will be a day set aside by those students, faculty, and members of the community who are sincerely interested in man's environmental quality.

Activities will begin at 8 a.m., when outdoor displays will be put in place. A group discussion of the problems concerning pollution will be conducted on the steps of the Student Services Building. The discussion will be open to any student, citizen, or politician who would like to address the group.

Films on pollution and conservation will be shown in the Zoology Lab in Hoggard Hall from 9:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. and from 2:30 - 3:30 p.m.

A teach-in will be conducted from 12:30 - 2 p.m., featuring speakers from the faculty and student body, and from local industries.

Richard W. Boera, chairman of activities, will deliver the introduction, followed by an invocation by Dr. B. Frank Hall.

Dr. Robert Stevens, U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service and N. C. State University, will be guest speaker for the teach-in.

Other speakers will include Dr. James F. Pannell, chairman of the Biology Department; Daniel B. Plyler of the Biology Department; and Hubert S. Huffman, president of the Biology Club.

Chancellor William H. Wagoner will present awards to winners in the Filthy Photo Contest, followed by an address by John Kallman, president of the Student Political Activities Club.

Industrial representatives from DuPont, Regal Paper Company and Hercules will conclude the teach-in.

Members of the Biology Club and SPAC will police the campus, following the close of activities at 3:30 p.m.

"Pollution is a should be a major concern to every individual," Boera stated. "Man is not only the most dangerous animal, but he is also one of the most susceptible victims in the modern world."

"We as college students and future leaders of the nation, realize the omens of the future and for this purpose we seek to analyze the present. This is the purpose of our day," he concluded.

Will man survive?

The issue of pollution has finally begun to accumulate popular support. Unfortunately, the process of pollution has been taking place for hundreds of years. Our environment has been deteriorating significantly since the industrial revolution.

In our political system however, strong action is not initiated until the problem in question has reached a crisis stage. The industrialist and big business segments in our society are the ones who will be hurt financially and otherwise by the cleaning-up process.

These segments make up a large portion of the power structure, and they are going to fight like hell to protect their vested interests. At the present time the fight against pollution is almost as popular as mother and apple pie, so there is little open talk against the movement.

Private industry spokesmen beat their chest proudly and inform us that they spend $800 million a year to control pollution. At first glance this sounds like an impressive figure, but far more is needed to reduce the level of pollution.

When one takes into account the tremendous wealth held by private industry, their expenditure for pollution control loses some of its significance. Compare the anti-pollution effort of private industry with the efforts being put forth by some of the local governments in this country.

Pittsburgh, Los Angeles, and New York City are making significant progress in clean-up projects. New York City is planning a $2 billion "clean air, clean water, and clean streets" program for the 70's.

What is needed to clean up the environment in this country? A total effort is needed. Larger governmental expenditures are a vital part of this effort. Stronger legislation and stricter enforcement of existing anti-pollution laws would also aid in the restoration.

The people's genuine concern even to the extent of material sacrifice, is one of the most important prerequisites for success. Sacrificing the internal combustion engine for a cleaner, less efficient device may become necessary.

This desire for a healthy environment must consist of more than a simple identification with the movement. The disease of pollution is a gigantic one, and conquest of the disease will require more than "bull sessions," buttons, bumper stickers, or editorials. Every available avenue of correction must be utilized. Our system is capable of response but it must be stimulated.

This stimulation can and must take many forms. Political pressure in behalf of the movement is one of the more obvious types of stimulation.

The people must refuse to support candidates who are indifferent, or only mildly in favor of anti-pollution programs. Confront your elected representatives and candidates and find out exactly where they stand on the environmental issue. A check on your legislator's voting record on environment-related bills could prove to be interesting.

An examination of the Nixon administration's position on the environment issue reveals a certain amount of contradiction. President Nixon has placed himself in the ranks of the movement. He has toured the countryside in motorcades, inspecting the scenery and showing concern for the sorry state of the landscape.

In Nixon's July 18 message to Congress he expressed concern for the environment. The President cited population expansion and pollution as threats to the survival of the human race. He called for increased efforts in birth control and requested Congressmen to give the highest priority to safeguarding the environment.

Mr. Nixon must be applauded for formulating an organized, broad anti-pollution program, as opposed to the previous hit-and-miss legislation. In February of this year Nixon sent the 37-point program to Congress. The President very accurately stated, "No longer is it enough to conserve what we have; we must also restore what we have lost."

The President has been reluctant to commit himself on a total figure for anti-pollution spending. An evaluation of Nixon's commitment to the environment issue can be made. Mr. Nixon has asked Congress for $4 billion over four years to finance waste-treatment plants in cities without adequate facilities.

Senator Muskie, chairman of the Senate subcommittee on air and water pollution has stated it would take at least $12.5 billion over five years.

In the end it will take an almost complete mobilization of public opinion behind the clean environment movement to save this planet from complete contamination. If the students in the United States focus their attention on the environment issue the same way they did with the civil rights, free speech, and anti-Vietnam War movements, the issue of pollution will be kept alive until the problem has been alleviated.

Environment gains momentum

DATELINE: U.S.A.
WASHINGTON -- Wisconsin Democratic Representative Reuss announced March 28 that he had filed suit with U. S. attorneys charging several Wisconsin firms with polluting rivers in that state.

Representative Reuss is chairman of the House Conservation & National Resources Subcommittee.

The polluters were charged with violating the Rivers & Harbors Act of 1899.

The Advisory Council on Executive Organization is preparing to recommend to the President that he set up a cabinet-level department. The Council will also advise the Chief Executive to reorganize all the national agencies dealing with pollution.

A bill to curb oil and sewage pollution by ships, discharges from mines, and thermal pollution from nuclear power plants has been passed by the Senate and the House. The bill is awaiting endorsement by the President.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. -- John Holman of Holman & Moody has begun anti-pollution research at his Charlotte firm. Holman will test new engines for their effect on air pollution.

NEW JERSEY -- Du Pont has filed suit charging the state has an unconstitutional Health Department regulation. The regulation in question prohibits the burning of any fuel containing more than 1% sulphur. Du Pont claims the regulation is "unconstitutional deprivation of the company's property."

NEW YORK -- Adam Willinsky, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Attorney General of New York, has charged that the state is allowing factory workers to be exposed to in-plant noxious fumes. A New York Health Department study was the basis for the charge.

LAS VEGAS, NEVADA -- Womens club members, and college and high school students held a public forum to protest Southern California Edison's newest polluter. The polluter is Southern California Edison's newest generating plant.

The plant is located 100 miles south of Las Vegas. Protestors claim the new plant could have a pollution level 1.6% less than the present one.

Seahawk stages comeback- again

Well, here we go again with another revamped, revitalized Seahawk, the only American college newspaper which has undergone more coups than the Greek government.

Traditionally, with the advent of each new journalistic hierarchy, come promises of newer news, funnier features, more systematic circulation, and a positive publication date. This time, however, brothers, you'll get no promises of perfection. All that we will guarantee is a regular, bi-monthly publication in which we will attempt to express the opinions and interests of the students of UNC-W.

Comments AND compliments are welcome. It takes, however, a great deal of patience and a number of dedicated people to transform a college newspaper into a university publication.

FACTS NEEDED

The kids themselves will provide the ultimate solution to problems arising from the abuse of drugs. Until recently, most adults would just rather not talk about it, thinking their families would never be involved. Now statistics show that nearly all young people either use addictive drugs or have plenty of chance to obtain the stuff if they want it.

Stiff penalties and arguments against drug abuse that seem logical to "grown-ups" have made little difference. Some authorities question whether this approach can ever be effective. What all of us can do is give maximum support to school and other organizations which are seeking solutions to the problem; learn all we can about the effects of drugs; and help our children understand the facts-- all the facts.

Custom-Made Town Builds-In Safety

A new town for 75,000 people being built on 12,000 acres of open farmland has incorporated the best new ideas in traffic control.

Litchfield Park, Arizona has arterial roads which are limited access parkways, fenced off and landscaped. There are no pedestrians, roadside stores, homes, driveways, or parked cars to interfere with the flow of traffic. Very few traffic lights are needed.

All businesses are in shopping centers and industrial parks. Even gasoline stations are off the main roads. Homes are built on cul-de-sacs or long, looping roads that return cars to their original entry point.

A complete 35-mile long network of pathways winds throughout the town for pedestrians, and bicyclists. It crosses main roads via overpasses, and keeps vehicular traffic entirely separate from foot traffic. The road system has safety built-in.

PARTY PHILOSOPHY -- Rep. Rogers Morton (R-Md.), chairman of the Republican National Committee, says, "I believe we've come to a time when we've got to perhaps devote less time to philosophical debate and more time to political management."

Dialogue with an un-dean

By Terry Hammond

The man who sat facing me leaned back in his seat, looking more like a football player in his turtleneck jersey, than like an assistant dean.

Punctuating statements with puffs of his cigarette, Carl Dempsey, newly-appointed assistant dean of student affairs, carefully considered each question, then gave simple, straightforward answers.

--- T. H.: How did you happen to be selected for this position, Mr. Dempsey?

---C. D.: I think that I was chosen primarily because I've sort of grown up in this place. I don't exactly have the perpetual feeling of a faculty member. It hasn't been too long since I was a student here.

TAU KAPPA EPSILON

Tau Kappa Epsilon has been preparing for the annual Public Service Weekend, April 24-26. Plans are also underway for the 6th Annual Hell's Angels Party, April 18. Pledges for last quarter were Cecil Reynolds and Ed Weddington. In recent elections, the following officers were elected: Edward Talton, president; Mark Fear, vice-president; Charles Blackwelder, secretary; Donnie Summerlin, sergeant-at-arms; John Leach, treasurer; Frank McBride, chaplain; Phil Keilen, pledge master; and Steve Stein, historian.

ZETA TAU ALPHA

The Zetas have been busy with final plans for State Day, April 18. Zeta Tau's contribution will be name tags. The theme for Zeta State Day is "Soaring to the 70's With Zeta." The sisters are diligently preparing for a Zeta-Tau Kappa Epsilon softball game, April 12. A picnic will follow the competition.

The field of student work has always appealed to me, because I've been one for so long. I'm pretty familiar with and interested in the problems that you've run into at the university.

--- T. H.: As assistant dean, what will your duties include?

---C. D.: Actually, they're not specified. They will generally be determined by the students. I imagine a great deal of my work will concern social functions.

The primary reason that I'm here is that there has always been a gap between the students and the administration. We're hopefully filling that gap. My position is directly under Dean Crews and Chancellor Wagoner; I am not a subordinate of any other dean.

--- T. H.: Have you made any plans for change yet?

---C. D.: Not as yet. There are, however, some spots concerning student services in which student interests are not understood as well as they should be.

For instance, one big gripe concerns the closing hours of the Pub. In the afternoons, everyone gets run out so that the janitor can clean up. As long as students want to use it, the building should be open.

--- T. H.: Have you extended the hours then?

---C. D.: We are working on a plan using student volunteers to work, thus pushing closing time back as much as an hour and one-half until 4 p.m.

--- T. H.: What do you consider the greatest problem confronting the university?

---C. D.: Lack of communication. What do you think it is?

---T.H.: Lack of communication. Bureau cracy. What do you plan to do to bridge the gap?

---C.D.: This is it. I hope my appointment will help to bridge this gap. Of course, my effectiveness will be determined by the students. The thing that I would like to stress is that this is no police situation.

---T. H.: How will you overcome the students' feeling that you're a watchdog, sitting here in your little office, watching each student as he comes in?

---C. D.: That's going to be my biggest problem. All I can say is that I wouldn't be here if this were a police position. I don't even care to use the title of dean. Chancellor Wagoner knows how I feel about this. I just want to work along with you students. If you need me, I'll be here.

SGA nominations open; vote slated April 30

Nominations for student body and class officers and senators for 1970-1971 will close Monday, according to George Holston, secretary of elections.

Students may make nominations in the office of the Dean of Student Affairs for any of the following positions: president of the student body, vice-president of the student body, secretary of the student body, and three class officers from each of sophomore, junior, and senior classes, in addition to five student senators from each of the three rising classes.

A Constitution test will be administered to each nominee on one of the following dates: April 14 at 3 p.m. in A-111; April 17 at 12:30 p.m. in A-111; or April 20 at 11:30 a.m. in A-111.

All candidates will be required to attend a short meeting at 9:30 a.m., April 22, in the Upstairs Pub. A student assembly to introduce the candidates and their platforms will follow the meeting at 10:30 a.m.

Primary elections will be conducted from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. in the Pub. April 23. Regular elections will be conducted April 30 from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. in the Pub.

Candidates for any elective offices in the Student Government Association shall have at least a 2.0 quality point average at the time of their election.

In addition, the president of the student government association shall be a member of the highest rising undergraduate class. His (and all candidates' class status) shall be his class level as of September of the same year. In the event the president or any other class officer does not attain his projected class level, he must resign.

The vice-president and secretary of the student government association shall be members of either of the two highest undergraduate classes.

Clubs fight pollution with filthy photos

April 20 is the deadline for entries in the Filthy Photo Contest, which is being sponsored by the Biology Club and Student Political Activities Club to bring to public attention any pollution - causing elements or eyesores in SENC land.

Persons interested in participating should submit a photograph of what they consider the most harmful cause of pollution in this area.

Any interested person of any age is eligible to compete, with the exception of professional photographers, or contest judges and their immediate families.

Contestants may submit photographs of any size, black and white or color. No slides will be accepted, and no photographs will be returned.

Each contestant should print his name, address, and the site where the picture was taken, on the back of the photograph.

Winners, who will be notified by mail, will be announced during Willpoll Day activities, April 22.

Awards will include $100, first prize; $75, second prize; and $50, third prize.

Photographs should be mailed or taken to UNC-W Biology Club, c/o Frank Allen, Biology Department, UNC-W.

Judges for the contest will be Chancellor William H. Wagoner, Dean J. Marshall Crews, and Dr. James F. Parnell.

Crews: students to watch p's & q's

In the spring a young man's fancy may turn to love, but if his Q.P.'s are down, it had better turn to summer school, according to a warning from J. Marshall Crews, Dean of Student Affairs.

"Any student who is in danger of not fulfilling the requirements for unconditional retention should plan to attend summer school," Dean Crews said.

"For example, a student who has attempted 45 hours in any college must have a 1.0 quality point average to remain in school on probation. A student who has attempted 90 hours must have a 1.66 quality point average."

Lancaster wins math honors

Senior James L. Lancaster, mathematics major, recently presented a paper, "On Linearly Ordered Spaces," to the 49th Annual Meeting of the Southeastern Section of the Mathematical Association of America at Clemson University.

Lancaster's paper, based on research he conducted in the undergraduate honors program, was one of four student papers selected from entries from throughout the southeast United States.

A 1962 graduate of Shallotte High School, Lancaster is a dean's list student and works full-time as a radiation safety technician at General Electric's Energy Division in Wilmington.

Miss Eloise Scott and Miss Barbara Greim, members of the mathematics faculty, also represented the institution at the meeting.

Renovations to aid overload

Bids were opened earlier this month for remodeling the former library in the Administration Building to provide additional office space.

University officials said the new office space that will be provided by dividing the large library area into smaller offices will eliminate an overload in present administrative space.

The former library now houses the office of University Relations and the Student Placement Service.

A portion of the additional space could possibly be used to house the Coastal Plains Center for Marine Development Services.

Dean Crews emphasized that it is the student's responsibility to know his standing. He said that either he or the registrar will be glad to check students' grades with them if they feel they may need to attend summer school.

The catalogue has a brief retention chart on page 55. Detailed retention charts are available in the Office of the Dean of Student Affairs.

AMS elects UNC-W

UNC-W was elected to institutional membership in American Mathematical Society in its January meeting. The AMS is the professional organization of mathematicians whose purpose is to support research in mathematics.

As an institutional member, UNC-W will benefit from this program in expanding the holdings of the William Madison Randall Library. UNC-W is the fifth campus of the Consolidated University of North Carolina to be elected to membership.

Film competition open to college film-makers

NEW YORK -- Plans for the largest student film festival in history, with the sponsorship of a major American business organization, have been announced.

NATIONAL STUDENT FILM FESTIVAL

The competition is to be sponsored by Joseph Schlitz Brewing Company, American Film Institute, and National Student Association.

Aimed at stimulating the creative talent of young film makers on the college campuses of the country, the festival will be highlighted by world premiere screenings of prize-winning films.

This year's festival, which is expected to attract more than 300 entries, will award $22,500 in prize money and $60,000 in fellowships, and will permit winning filmmakers to negotiate their own distribution arrangements.

Each of the festival judges -- five professionals selected from outstanding directors, editors, actors, producers, educators, technicians, and critics -- will name his own $2500 winners at fall premieres in N. Y. and Los Angeles. The judges will also grant 20 other films $500 each by a weighted ballot system.

All filmmakers who enter the festival will be eligible for two AFI Schlitz Fellowships worth $30,000 each for two years of study at AFI's Center for Advanced Film Studies in Beverly Hills.

Films qualified for entry must be made on a non-commercial basis by American college students or by any student enrolled in a United States college, university, art institute, or professional film school.

Films submitted to a previous National Student Film Festival sponsored by NSA, or films already in commercial distribution prior to the end of the judging period, are not eligible.

Further information can be obtained from Ron Henderson, National Academic Services, 510 La Guardia Place, New York, N. Y. 10012.

Biggs tapped

Dr. Walter Clark Biggs, Jr. associate professor of biology, has been tapped for membership in the Society of the Sigma Xi, a national organization founded to encourage original investigation in science.

Dr. Biggs will be initiated by the North Carolina State University Chapter of Sigma Xi in Raleigh, May 19.

A native of Wilmington, Dr. Biggs was recently invited to serve on a National Science Foundation (NSF) panel to evaluate proposals submitted to the Instructional Scientific Equipment Program.

He received his A.A. degree from Wilmington College and earned his B.S. degree at East Carolina University. After attending the University of Kansas, Dr. Biggs completed his M.S. degree at Texas A & M University and earned his Ph. D. in zoology at North Carolina State University in 1969.

Seahawk tee team travels to Greensboro

By Tommy Torhan

'Hawk golfers travel to Greensboro today to face East Carolina in their sixth match.

Coach Earl Allen's successful golf team has been led by Hoppy Smithwick, Tom Brinson, and Bern Coulter. Also on scholarships are Greg Nelson, Austin Overly, Jim Paschal, and Charles Whisnant.

The Hawks face Pembroke College, East Carolina, and, twice more, South Carolina Baptist, Campbell College, and St. Andrews College before hopefully advancing to the NAIA District tournament, May 11-12.

Also on the road today are the young and eager tennis team as they face Pembroke there.

Only in their second match of the season, Coach Charlie Sproles' young team is led by Captain Dick Dayvault. Rounding out the squad are Alfred Smellus, Dee Overby, Bill Brooks, Danny Conner, Mark Thompson, Robert Rehder, and Dennis Masengill.

Tomorrow they turn to N. C. Wesleyan, and then to Wayne Community College in Goldsboro next week.

Seahawks to battle PSU

Idle until Tuesday when they face Pembroke State University, the Seahawks have been plagued with bad weather as they roll up the wins.

Coaches Bill Brooks and Dave Miller's team has been different this year, in that almost no one player has any position tied down. In the infield, Sam Askew, Jerry Martin, Paul Livingston, Eric Higgins, Mike Wheeler, David McGuire, and Jim Atkins all have played a role so far.

Charlie Maultsby, David Sandlin, Ed Booth, Kurt Newber, and slow-starting Gene Russ, who was hindered by a bad leg, have all run action in the outfield. Also vying for positions are Barrett Payne, Kenny Meadows, Howard Wilshire, and Barney Lewis.

Bruce Cavanaugh and Clarence Ferguson have been the back-up men for the abundant and talented pitching staff.

Players who have seen action on the mound are Chuck Cuppett, Ed Atkins, Barnes Yelverton, Jim Johnson, Ed Booth, and Larry Wilkerson.

In the opening games, Paul Livingston and returning batting champion Sam Askew, have led the Seahawks at the plate. Everyone seems to be batting well, but the fine pitching staff and the excellent defense seem to be the winning factor in the Hawk's opening games.

May 14-16 will highlight the season at Pembroke if the strong contending Seahawks can keep their winning ways at the NAIA District Tournament.

If the Hawks are successful they will meet May 21-23 in the NAIA Area Playoffs, the site to be later announced.

SRO Theatre presents 'Exit the King'

By Donna West

"Exit the King," a contemporary play by Eugene Ionesco, opened last night in the S.R.O. Theatre in Kenan Hall.

Director for the production, which will run through Sunday, is Dr. Terry Rogers. Mary Laura French is stage manager and assistant director and Mrs. Anne Fitzgibbon serves as technical director and costume mistress.

A ritualistic drama, "Exit the King" relates the last hours of the life of King Berenger I as he prepares to meet his death.

"King Berenger, as all mankind, savours what pleasure there is in life and hides from the realities of life that bring pain and depression. He refuses to admit that he must die and attempts to prevail against the inevitable," stated Dr. Rogers.

Neal Bell is cast in the role of Berenger, who rules over a shrinking kingdom that is dying with him.

Anne Fitzgibbon portrays Marguerite, Berenger's first queen, who progressively directs him to accept his approaching death.

The young Queen Marie, played by Donna West, seeks to persuade him to cling to life and to deny the inevitability of death.

Three other characters who add a dimension to the underlying seriousness of the drama are His Notability The Doctor, played by David James; the Guard, portrayed by Jere Hodgkin; and Juliette the Maid, played by Marsha Bryant.

Tickets may be reserved by calling the S.R.O. Theatre Box Office at 791-4330 or by making a reservation with Mrs. Catherine Burruss, secretary to the Drama and Modern Language departments in Kenan Hall.

Student tickets are free upon presentation of an I.D. card. All other admissions are $1.

Performances begin at 8:30 p.m.

4 Seasons to give concert

Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons will appear in concert in Hanover Hall, April 30 at 8 p.m. Sponsored by the Dance Committee, the concert will be open to the public. Student tickets will cost $2.50; general admission will be $5 in advance.

In the last eight years, the Four Seasons collectively have come up with nearly 40 hit singles, while an additional four Top 100 records have been added to the count by lead singer Valli, working as a solo artist. In addition, the Seasons boast 20 consecutive chart LP's (two featuring the solo sound of Valli). All told, the group has accounted for the sale of more than 50 million discs.

With their first huge triumph, "Sherry," the Seasons were able to perform before national audiences and meet with the same degree of success they enjoyed as local performers.

"Sherry" led to "Big Girls Don't Cry," "Walk Like a Man," "Ray Doli," "Dawn," "Let's Hang On" and numerous others during the first three years of their success.

The hits kept rolling on: "Opus 17," "I've Got You Under My Skin," "Working My Way Back To You," "Tell It To The Rain," "Will You Love Me Tomorrow" and most currently, "And That Reminds Me."

In the midst of all this success, The Seasons, to prove to themselves that it was their sound, rather than their name, that brought success, recorded under a different name, "The Wonder Who." The tune was "Don't Think Twice" and it also clicked with the record-buying public.

Frankie Valli made his solo recording debut with a million seller, "Can't Take My Eyes Off You," written by another member of the group, Bob Gaudio. Subsequent hits were "To Give" and "The Girl I'll Never Know."

Bob Gaudio has emerged as one of today's most acclaimed writers, arrangers, and record producers. He has written most of the Four Seasons' hits and is presently writing and producing records for other artists, including Frank Sinatra, who has recorded 11 of Gaudio's songs.

Throughout this incredible string of single successes, the group also established itself as one of the hottest album-selling acts in history. Their albums are far-ranging in musical content, from gentle folk melodies to the profound music of Bacharach and Dylan.

The Four Seasons' newest project is the album "Genuine Imitation Life Gazette," which has just been released. The LP is the Seasons' first concept album and represents their commentary on the world today. A year in the making, it is the product of hundreds of hours of collective thought and effort by the group.

Student and faculty tickets to the concert are on sale in the lobby of the Student Services Building.

AANC members present exhibit

By SYLVIA QUINN

The Associated Artists of N. C., Inc. are exhibiting in the "Prospectus Nineteenth Exhibiting Members Juried Show" in Kenan Hall through April 30.

Exhibits consist of paintings, drawings, sculptures, graphics, and mixed media by AANC members and candidates for exhibiting membership.

Of 120 works submitted, 54 were accepted. The works were judged by A. B. Jackson of the Art Department, Old Dominion College, Norfolk, Virginia.

The 10th Annual Traveling Exhibition (1970-'71 was chosen from this show.

Prizes were awarded for seven works. "Bill's Pansies", an etching by Jill Flink of Raleigh, won a $50 Foushee Prize. "Wake Angel", an ink and watercolor by Thomas Hammond of Cullowhee also won a $50 Foushee Prize.

Victor Huggins of Blacksburg, Va. won NCNB-First Prize of $250 for his acrylic, "Low Tide." UNC-W art instructor Gail McKennis won a $50 NCNB Prize for "Yellow Interaction".

Honorable Mention prizes went to Sally Vilas of Chapel Hill for the intaglio, "Ahead of Everybody"; Mary Jane Jenkins of Raleigh for "Three Rows"; and Sara Edmiston of Greenville for the mixed chalk and ink, "Untitled".

Also on display in the courtyard behind Kenan are sculpture by James Taylor and ceramics by James Knecht of the Art Department, UNC-G.

Construction slated on B & E building

Tentative plans call for construction of a $480,000 Business and Economics Building, here at UNC-W. At the present time the estimated completion date is July 1, 1971.

The building will be located behind the library parking lot. The size of the structure will be comparable the recently completed Education Psychology Building.

Business Manager James Price said the building was in "what is called the design development stage."

UNCW hikes fees

With the switch to the semester system, UNC-W will hike tuition and fees for both instate and out-of-state students.

Fees for in-state students will be $57.50, and tuition will be $130. Out-of-state students must pay $57.50 in fees and $400 tuition.

Other fees will include the following:

Application Fee (to accompany application, nonrefundable) $10.00
Late Registration Fee 7.50 Transcript Fee (after the first) 1.00

Private Music Fee: 1/2 hour/week 37.50
2 1/2 hours/week 67.50
Graduation Fee 10.00

The above fees apply only to students carrying at least 10 semester hours.

The privileges of students taking less than five hours per semester will be restricted to attendance of classes, library privileges, and parking privileges.

Charges for summer session tuition and fees will be announced in the summer session bulletin.

Student affairs committee... what???

What is the Student Affairs Committee? This is a difficult question to answer. The UNC-W catalog does not answer many questions. The catalog does reveal the fact that the committee does exist. A close examination will show that on page 14 the Student Affairs Committee is listed under the heading, Committees and Councils.

Student Affairs Committee consists of: "Mr. Brown, Chairman, Mr. F. Allen, Mr. W. Allen, Mrs. Cheek, Mrs. Pearsall and three members of the Student Body: President of the Student Government Association, President of the Senior class, and Chairman of the Student Judicial Committee."

The membership of the committee is the only information given in the catalog. The Student Affairs Committee is mentioned in the 1969-70 Student Handbook. The Handbook further complicates the matter by calling the agency the "Faculty Student Affairs Committee."

The Handbook, on page 30, has this to say about the committee: "It shall be the duty of this group to administer, interpret, and arbitrate all matters concerning these rules and regulations, rules pertaining to student off campus organizations until such time as the number of recognized fraternities and sororities reaches three. At that time an Inter Fraternity Council shall be established to be responsible for the duties listed in this section. However the Student Affairs Committee reserves the right to rule on decisions made by the Inter Fraternity Council."

On page 32 of the Handbook, the Student Affairs Committee is again discussed: "Any request for the relaxation of restrictions (pertaining to fraternities and sororities) because of exceptional circumstances must be approved by the Assistant Dean of Students, who serves as the Chairman of the Student Affairs Committee."

Several assumptions can be made on the basis of this information. One could assume that the only students affairs of any consequence are those related to fraternities and sororities. That is not entirely true. Another possibility is that the Student Affairs Committee has out-lived its usefulness. A more correct statement would be that the committee has functions that are not spelled out. The Student Affairs Committee is the agency that decides who will be the recipients of the SEAHAWK editorships and the scholarships that go along with them. Members of the committee have said that the committee performs the functions of a publication board which many universities have. With these facts in mind one could easily surmise that either the Handbook is sick or the Student Affairs Committee is as shrouded in secrecy as the CIA.

The committee holds its meetings behind closed doors. The members are instructed not to discuss the proceedings with the students.

Another interesting point is the fact that the students on the committee (Student Body President, Senior Class President and the Chairman of the Student Judicial Committee) take part in decision - making for the following year, i.e. they make decisions that apply to a student body of which they will not be a part. These students elected for the following school year do attend the meetings, and take part in the proceedings, but they do not vote!

A factor that should concern YOU THE STUDENTS, is that the exact functions of the committee are not known. Their influence is considerable. Of this you can be sure. What additional functions will the committee assume? What is on the agenda for the next meeting? Why all the secrecy?

Since my job is directly in the committee's line of fire this article may bring a reprisal from the committee or the administration in general. If this be the case at least it will not be a secret execution.

The students are the life and breath of any university. STUDENTS, ASSERT YOURSELVES. Ask your Student Government Association members about the committee. The J. D. "affairs" are yours! You have a right to know!

Note from the library

To provide students with better library service, officials at William Madison Randall Library are more rigidly enforcing existing regulations.

According to P. C. Smith Jr., librarian, overdue notices will be mailed only at midquarter and near the end of the quarter.

Fines will be 10 cents per day, double the amount if the fine is not paid when the book is returned.

The offices of the Business Manager and the Registrar will be advised of accounts outstanding at the end of the quarter, according to Smith.

SMELLING SWEET . . .
Trumpet-shaped blooms of the Easter lily are a sight spring has really come to the mid-Atlantic island of Bermuda. They appear in late March and April, bringing with them a wonderful, heady perfume which wafts over garden walls. Thousands of flowers are picked while still in bloom and flown to the United States, Canada and Britain.

Senators lack legislative ability

Like most amateur productions, the UNC-W Student Senate has some good performers, some bad. The majority are simply mediocre.

The typical Senate meeting runs like a B-rate movie...lots of dialogue and little action. The majority of the cast play their roles with a minimum of effort, raising their hands on cue.

Many of the Senate's deficiencies stem from the senators' ignorance of the most basic rules of parliamentary procedure. A profitable meeting is frequently interrupted by arguments about correct procedure or by plaintive queries, such as "How do you table a motion?"

presiding officer could possibly aid in alleviating the confusion. Unfortunately, the present president of the Senate appears to be equally confused. A well-informed presiding officer could possibly aid in alleviating the confusion. Unfortunately, the present president of the Senate appears to be equally confused.

Since the resignation of the secretary of the student body during winter quarter, no Senate roll has been kept. The neglect of this elementary task exemplifies the inefficiency of the Senate.

To build a more effective legislative body, a course in parliamentary procedure should be required of all SGA officers and senators.

Until the students' representatives learn to conduct a meeting properly and to run an organized group, no meaningful work can be achieved. Legislation will be just as sloppy as the Senate.

Vietnam dilemma

The United States is presently engaged in a war. The War is called a conflict. The military effort being carried out by the U.S., in Vietnam is not a total commitment. At times it appears there is a "business as usual" situation in this country.

Although there is a large anti-Vietnam movement in this country, the mood is much different than that during World War Two. During World War Two certain commodities were rationed, and the whole country felt threatened. The whole country, does not feel threatened today, indeed many do not remain aware of the fact that we are at war. This unawareness can be extremely dangerous. We should keep in mind that this War is exacting a tremendous toll from the U. S.

The American people should also remain aware of the fact that 48,000 Americans have lost their lives in Vietnam, 269,000 U. S. soldiers have been injured, many for life. This is a tremendous price to pay.

Economic considerations should also be made. It is presently costing the U. S. around $200 million a day to support its war machine. Most of this money ends up in Vietnam. The exact effect of this spending on the economy is hard to determine. Most economists agree that it has severely damaged our economic condition.

If the United States had no serious domestic problems, the economic cost of the war could be rationalized. We all know better than that. Air and water pollution, hunger in the U. S., and crime, are just a few domestic problems that will require billions of dollars.

Opposition to the Vietnam War is presently not confined to the students in this country. Many of our highly respected leaders are urging a speedy withdrawal.

Former U. S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark has said, "If we are concerned for our character, hope to find human dignity, to finally reverence life...America must turn from violence, and end the war in Vietnam immediately..."

Mayor John Lindsay has commented, "...here at home it must be said that the agony of this needless conflict threatens to go on and on unless we act now to end it."

According to Senator Harold Hughes, "...the vast majority of Americans identified with the peace movement are motivated by impulses that are constructive, dignified, and high-minded."

Every United States citizen has a right to question and object. Every taxpayer has an even stronger right to express his dissatisfaction with the war.

"The man who gets along with other people never sets the pace."

Apathy plagues SG Association

To the Editor:
To The Students:

Apathy has settled among the masses. The spectre of chaos haunts the Student Government Association for the year of 1971-72. Only the second year of being part of the University system, and we, the students, have failed our University.

Why? Because, of 27 offices open for elections, only nine have been filled for, as of noon, April 13.

Just who is going to run the Student government? Will it be the administration or a small group of students acting without legality or mandate?

It is up to you the individual, not a group, friends, or other classmates. It is your responsibility as a student of UNC-W to make sure all offices are filled with responsible representatives.

Stand up and be counted! Demand good government! But now search yourself; Maybe you are the leader needed.

Next year many will complain of the Student Association. Don't, unless YOU are willing to serve!

VOTE

for

and

SENATORS

SS debate ends deadlocked ; motions tabled --as usual

With pleas for parliamentary procedure and with rampant confusion, the Student Senate attempted unsuccessfully, to settle a proposed amendment to the Constitution.

Action on the bill is still pending.

The proposed amendment would eliminate class presidents, vice-presidents, and secretaries. Each class would have a Senate Delegation. The delegations would be headed by a chairman. The senator who received the most votes in the general election would be appointed chairman, according to the plan.

The ensuing debate continued for nearly an hour and a half. Arguments pro and con were readily assailed across the room.

The arguments against the abolition of class officers were as follows: In the future, class officers will be needed to coordinate the anticipated class activities which will occur when the University's population has doubled in size.

Another argument against the amendment was that the proposed change of title from Class President to Class Chairman amounts to no actual change.

Opponents also held that, emphasis should not be placed on ending class titles, but in correcting student apathy.

Candidates who run in elections for class offices but lose, still perform a useful service by the interest the campaigns arouse. This was another argument against the amendment.

Arguments in favor of the amendment were also presented. Some said the offices of vice-president and secretary possess no real duties, and are sought after only as status symbols.

Advocates pointed out that any functions now in the office of class president could be assigned to the chairman. Advocates also pointed out that large universities have class officers.

Pro-amendment fores also said the change would reduce the loss of good candidates, who lose in the races for class offices. They held that these candidates would probably win in a race where eight persons could be elected.

A fifth point raised in favor of ratification was that the Senate should be primarily concerned with the needs of the present student body

AMERICA... THE BEAUTIFUL

Students to vote in SGA election

The UNC - W Student Government Elections will be held from 9 a.m. - 3 p.m., Thursday, April 30. As of this issue many offices are not being contested.

The present list of candidates includes: Bob Ward, student body president; Brian Black and Thomas Hodges, student body vice-president.

Chick Coleman is running for senior class president, along with senior class vice-presidential candidate Terry Smith and senior class secretary candidate Sherry Kelly.

The senior class senator candidates are: Laris

Milligan, Jim Wentz, Raymond Fowler, and Jack Di Sarno.

At the present time there are no candidates for junior class president. Gary Huggins is junior class vice-presidential candidate and Elise Kruse is the candidate for secretary of the junior class.

The students running for junior class senator are: Ed Boylan, Ellen M. Gore, Ellen Ryder, and Brenda Harrell.

Bill Brooks is the lone sophomore class presidential candidate. Bob Andrise is running for sophomore class vice-president and Betsy Coleman is seeking the sophomore class secretary post.

The sophomore class senator candidates are Mike Godwin, Raleigh Todd, Paula Stanelly, and D. Gary Grdy.

All candidates must take the Constitution Test. The test will be administered April 14, 1970.

The Primary Election will be held April 23. All candidates will be required to attend a short meeting at 9:30 a.m., April 22, in the Pub. A student assembly to introduce the candidates and their platforms will follow the meeting at 10:30.

'Exit The King' challenges audience; cited as 'significant attempt'

By JAMES THORNTON
Congratulations to the Drama Department for its taste and courage in presenting plays which challenge the imagination and intellect of both the cast and the audience, rather than copping out with a sure thing.

Ionesco's EXIT THE KING, a play which makes a fairly confusing attempt at establishing a continuity from the contradictions of existence, was indeed a severe test of the maturity of the SRO Theatre.

Dr. Terry Rogers' production was a significant attempt, if not an unqualified success, in presenting a play which in itself has not resolved a balance of the obtrusiveness of philosophical dialectics and the reticence of artistic expression.

The difficulty of presenting Ionesco's play must have been magnified by the necessity of interpreting the ideas behind the play as well as the play itself. For example, the situation of the king himself (Neal Bell) is ambiguous. Should the audience identify with him or even sympathize with him, or should it identify itself only with his situation?

Neal Bell's performance would seem to indicate the former interpretation, and it was quite convincing. But perhaps the pathos of his representation obscured the situation to some extent.

The effort might have been more successful, if the king had been more ridiculous, because the identification of the audience with the existentialist dilemma of the protagonist would then come only after the audience had objectified the situation. The insistence on the validity of existence through mere accumulation is simply too serious in the pathos of Bell's interpretation.

The king and Queen Marie (Donna West) were a little too convincing, and there are places near the end of the play where Marguerite (Anne Fitzgibbon) seems, while persuading the king of the triviality of his existence, to be suffering from the same delusions of triviality.

The audience seems to have sympathized with the king, but, in sympathizing with the man, it reacted unfavorably to any personal identification with his situation.

The same difficulty is apparent in the partial success in covering the pessimistic depths of the play with a surface layer of humor. The comedy became so sporadic that the audience could hardly respond to it.

It is probably this problem of the relationship of comedy and pathos in the play that makes the necessity of a consistent interpretation most apparent. Most of the comedy was carried in the bedside manner of the doctor (David James), the progress reports of the guard (Jere Hodgkin), and the antics of Juliette (Marsha Bryant), but it was only incidental to the overflows of sentiment between jokes.

The opposition of absurd motivation and content with traditional behavioral patterns was not followed through.

But, aside from the individual differences of interpretation, the play was pretty successful. There were some inconsistencies and failures of emphasis (as in the guard's failure to make the audience feel the irony of the confrontation of human accomplishment and death in the eulogy), but the play as a whole created a coherent illusion.

Individual performances were good, particularly Neal Bell's. The problem, inherent in the play itself, was more in the relationships of characters than in separate speeches and performances.

Ionesco sets up a situation in which communication breaks down, but, in the necessity of not reacting to the speeches of other actors, a performer sometimes seemed undecided as to whether he was actor or audience, which several times resulted in an unconvincing and uncomfortable artificiality in the situation.

The technical staging of the play was good, although the disappearing scenes were a little awkward; and there were several periods in the play that were very well done, in which the audience was drawn easily and naturally into a particularly poignant or comic situation.

But the play as a whole never quite congealed into a single effect. We were all too hopeful that seduction of life would be genuine, and Ionesco apparently was not.

Placement office states responsibilities

UNC-W Placement Office located in the Old Library in Administration Building, is continually arranging interviews for seniors with business, professional, and military organizations.

To aid the prospective employee, the office has formulated the following nine responsibilities of the candidate for placement service:

1-The candidate should analyze his interests and abilities, consider his career objectives, seek information about his fields of interest through published material and counseling, and organize his thoughts so that he may ask and answer questions intelligently.

2-The candidate should notify the Placement Office as early as possible of the interviews he wishes to have.

3-Before taking an interview, the candidate should read the company material and fill out such forms as may be required. He should arrive on time for his appointment.

4-The candidate who is invited to visit an employer's premises should promptly acknowledge the invitation and should accept only if he is sincerely interested in a position with that employer. If the candidate is to set the date of the visit, he should write the employer to confirm the date.

5-A candidate making a visit at an employer's expense should seek reimbursement only for those expenditures which pertain to the trip. If he visits several employers on the same trip, he should prorate the total cost among them.

6-When he receives an offer of employment, the candidate should notify the employer as soon as possible, but no later than the deadline specified by the employer, whether he will or will not accept.

7-A candidate with a legitimate reason for the extended consideration of more than one offer should not only notify employers whose offers he is refusing, but also communicate with employers under consideration to establish a mutually satisfactory decision date.

8-A candidate, realizing that an employment offer is to be accepted in good faith and with sincere intentions of honoring the commitment, should not thereafter present himself for interviews with other employers.

9-Throughout negotiations for employment, the candidate should keep the Placement Office advised of his decisions.

Lee said the number of applications from students wishing to transfer from other institutions of higher education have nearly doubled. On March 13, 1969, the office of admissions had received 41 applications from transfer students; on the same date this year, 81 had been received. Transfer acceptances for 1970 are up 19 from acceptances in 1969.

Music recital slated

The Music Department will present Miss Joanna Lewis, a 14-year-old pianist, in recital at 3:30 p.m., Sunday, in the auditorium of the Education-Psychology Building.

For the past five years, Miss Lewis has studied piano with Frank Honey, assistant professor of music.

The recital will be open to the public free of charge.

Pittman added to faculty as anthropology instructor

Anthropology, an exploding field of study, has at long last, been added to the UNC-W curriculum. The anthropology department became a reality with the hiring of R. H. Pittman, instructor in Anthropology.

Pittman is a native of Whiteville N. C. He did his undergraduate work at Wilmington College, Pembroke State College, and Western Carolina College, where he earned a B. S. degree in 1965. Mr. Pittman taught biology at Spartanburg Senior High School for two years.

On the graduate level Pittman studied at the Binghamton branch of the State University of New York. He received his M. A. from S.U.N.Y. earlier this year.

Last Summer Pittman took part in the Grand Gulch Archaeological Field Project. The dig was located in Southeastern Utah.

When asked about student interest in the new department Pittman said, "I'm very pleased with the student's response in this new field of study. Morale is very high."

There are about 100 students enrolled in anthropology this quarter. Professor Pittman stated that he thought enrollment would continue to grow next year, and added, "I'm going to initiate a new course in physical anthropology next year." He also stated that there is a need for another instructor to emphasize social Anthropology.

When questioned about specialties, Pittman revealed that his specialties are physical anthropology and archaeology, he said, "I've had most of my training in this."

Currently there are three sections of anthropology in progress this quarter, two sections of the introductory course and one section of Indians of North America.

Political Science Department to expand in coming year

The UNC-W Political Science Department will be expanded next year with the hiring of Mr. Said Sadhzad Ahmad. This will raise the number of political science instructors to four.

Tentative plans also call for activation of Chancellor Wagoner, Dr. Wagoner will conduct a senior seminar in political science next year.

Ahmad was born in India. He received his M.A. from Aligarh University, India.

From 1960 to 1962 Ahmad studied at Manchester University. His studies at Manchester were in public administration. Mr. Ahmad is presently completing work on his Ph D at the University of Tennessee.

"This expansion will strengthen the areas of concentration in political science," according to Dean of Faculty J. Paul Reynolds, Dean Reynolds added, "Dr. Ahmad will join the staff in September."

Ahmad has had extensive training in international politics. He will join the faculty as Lecturer in Political Science and teach international law and international politics.

Several new political science courses will be offered next year. The new courses are: International Law, Political Systems of Developing Nations, The American Legislature, The American Judicial System, and Public Administration.

Department Chairman J. C. Dixon had this to say about the hiring of Ahmad, "He has special training in international relations and comparative government and this will strengthen the department, since his expertise is in a different field from those of our present staff."

Education & Psychology Building now in use

Classes got underway for the first time in the new Education and Psychology Building, following Easter vacation.

The $554,000, two-story brick and masonry structure has a 191-seating capacity auditorium, eight classrooms, nine faculty offices, a curriculum laboratory, a reading services room, psychology laboratories and a demonstration classroom and laboratory.

Halls in the new structure have been painted light blue, green, yellow, and gold. Classrooms feature blue, red, and gold chairs, in addition to brown, green, or blue chalkboards.

The multi-colors were used in the building so that the education and psychology departments could advise other schools and interested people whether one color was more conducive to learning than another, according to Dr. Harold G. Hulen, head of the Education Department.

Baptist invade Hawks today

South Carolina Baptist invades Brooks Field today as the smooth playing Seahawks host in their 18th outing of the season. Veteran Seahawk mentor Bill Brooks' squad leads District 27 ahead of Pembroke and Atlantic Christian College. The Hawks have only dropped one conference game to Atlantic Christian College early in the season at Wilson and one non-conference game to East Carolina here. The Hawks are sporting a record of 15 wins and 2 losses overall.

In recent games Paul Livingston, Jim Atkins, and Bruce Cavanaugh have led the team at the plate. Hawk hitting seems to be in a slump as they have been relying mainly on the pitching and defense in some crucial (tilts).

In the infield Jerry Martin, Paul Livingston,

Jim Atkins, and Sam Askew have been playing the main roles. Also seeing action in the infield have been Mike Wheeler, Eric Higgins, and David McGuire. Higgins has been a valuable pinch runner also in recent games.

Charlie Maulsby, David Sandlin, and Gene Russ have been playing consistently in the outfield with Ed Booth and Kurt Newber being worked in where opportunity permits. Booth has also seen action on the mound.

Marine Corps veteran Chuck Cuppett seems to be the one called on in the clutch. Ed Booth and Ed Atkins have seen action on the mound.

Varsity crew team to compete in rowing association regatta

Today and tomorrow the rowing team will participate in the Third Annual Southern Inter-collegiate Rowing Association Regatta at Charleston, South Carolina.

Showing a marked improvement two weeks ago against the Citadel in Charleston, the team seems to be more aroused and enthusiasm is high for the thirteen team event. The teams are all from the East coast from Florida to Virginia. It will give the team a look at some fine teams and the support given to them by their respective schools.

Narrowing the 30 man team to 12, Coach Anderson's squad worked out at a practice site in the Brunswick River. The team needs access to the river and is currently negotiating with the State Highway Department for permission to use buildings and pier facilities which they own.

The team started individual workouts before they got the boat in the water. The workouts consisted of presses, squats, pullovers, sit-ups, rowing, reverse curls, dead lifts, and wrist rolls. All members of the team have worked hard in the off-season, waiting patiently for the boat.

The boat is 62 feet long, two feet wide, 18 inches deep, and weighs from 250-300 pounds. The boat was paid for by money-raising projects and donations. The whole program depended upon the success of their fundraising drives. The much-needed equipment for the first race at the Azalea Festival amounted to $1500, which was reached to cover the minimum cost of racing. Several local businesses have given Coach Anderson much help through contributions to the rowing team fund. They have offered both time and enthusiasm for the project.

"The Inmen" will perform at the May Dance May 2, at the Timme Plaza Motor Inn from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Dress will be either formal or semi-formal. Cocktail dresses and dark suits and ties are proper semi-formal attire.

The semi-formal or formal dress rule was initiated to make the event less costly. Dale Donahue, May Dance chairman, said the dance committee feels that there should be one dance per year to which students can dress formally. "We encourage students to come in either attire," Donahue stated.

Student ID cards must be presented at the door. Light refreshments will be served. Highlight of the evening will be the presentation of the 1970 May Court, Gretta Scott, and her court.

Members of her court include: Chris Deasy, Maid of Honor, Sherry Southerland and Donna Lester, Senior attendants, Donna Marks and Judy Thompson, Junior attendants, Dru Farrar and Pat Corcoran, Sophomore attendants, and Dianne Raynor and Monica Felton, Freshman attendants.

The dance climaxes the first annual May Weekend, April 30 - May 3.

Another event will be a baseball game at Brooks Field at 7:30 p.m. on May 1. Several team members will be honored during the evening.

A small, outdoor concert is tentatively scheduled for the afternoon of May 3.

New SGA president plans student lounge with TV

By Sue Sandlin

Bob Wiard, running unopposed, was recently elected president of the student body for 1970-'71, despite last-minute efforts by dark horse write-in candidate Artie Greene.

Wiard, who has served as president of the junior class this year, said he "intends to support the school in the manner to which it is accustomed."

His plans include a more efficient Student Union, which will have a lounge and a television for the students.

"I have enjoyed serving in the past," Wiard stated, "and I hope I will meet with the satisfaction of the students in the future."

Wiard received 275 votes, and Greene received 76 votes as a write-in candidate.

Greene, who feels that the most urgent problem facing UNC-W is student apathy, would like to initiate a Teacher Evaluation Program here.

"I hope that no matter how the elections turned out, they may have in some way awakened the students to the importance of student government and I hope that it may be raised to equal the educational standard here," Greene stated after his defeat.

Responsibility gap

if a university is only as mature and responsible as its students, then UNC-W is still in its infancy.

The assuming of responsibility, a quality in which the majority of students here are sadly lacking, is a mark of maturity; the ability to accept tasks and to complete them with a minimum of confusion and delay is the trait of a capable person.

UNC-W students apparently are immature and incapable of accepting responsibility.

Witness the recent Student Government elections and the lack of candidates and voters; look at the small number of people working on student publications; investigate the number of people helping the Dance Committee.

Then listen to the students who criticize the Student Senate for dillydallying; or the SEAHAWK, because it doesn't run a gossip column; or the Dance Committee for its choice of bands.

Ask them about THEIR extracurricular activities. If they protest that they are loaded with term papers, quizzes, studying, part-time work -- please remind them that so are the SGA members, SEAHAWK staffers, and Dance Committee members.

They're students, too. The only difference is that THEY CARE.

UN-Earth Day

What UNC-W needs is an UN-EARTH DAY..... One entire day devoted to unearthing the social consciences of those students and faculty members who apparently feel that they have not contributed to the ravaged environment that threatens this generation.

It is doubtful, however, that another organized teach-in would arouse anything other than amused contempt in those people who regarded Earth Day as an extension of Moratorium Day.

The ignorance demonstrated by those individuals who denounced the teach-in as mass hysteria propagated by bearded, hippie trouble-makers, is incurable, a product of the southern grit intellect, which seemingly dominates this campus.

The wiser members of the complacent, clean generation might do well to join their "bearded, hippie" brothers in fighting such crises as polluted air and water, dangerous pesticides, and overpopulation.

Who knows? The pollution cause might even become a fad.

Vehicular roulette

Parking and driving problems are a pain on any university campus, but here at UNC-W, they stick out like a sore thumb.

For example, senior parking places, a deserved privilege, were once clearly marked with large, white "S's". Time and weather, however, have so faded the labels that few remain visible in Kenan Lot. A new student, ignorant of parking regulations, could easily mistake the lot for a general parking area.

In addition, nothing is more frustrating than to pull halfway into the only empty space in a parking lot, only to discover a pint-sized bike nestling in the center.

One parking space could easily contain four motor bikes. It seems feasible, therefore, that a special area reserved for bicycles and motor bikes could alleviate the space problems and provide a fair solution for both motorists and cyclists.

Last fall quarter, THE SEAHAWK suggested that University provides students with $ aid

Nearly one-fifth of the students here are sharing in UNC-W's $73,000 student financial aid program, according to a study recently completed by the school's Office of Student Affairs.

The Student Financial Aid Program, directed by Calvin L. Lane Sr., is composed of four separate divisions: the scholarship program, work-study, work assistance, and the student loan program.

The lion's share of the total aid fund, $34,400, is mered out in scholarships ranging in value from $100 to $500 per year.

Currently 104 students hold scholarships funded by the state, and 59 students are attending UNC-W on scholarships financed by private funds.

Scholarship applications are reviewed by a six-man scholarship committee, and awards are made on the basis of financial need, character, leadership, and scholarship. Financial need is determined by the resources available to the student in relation to university expenses.

Scholarship recipients are required to maintain a "C" average and to attend the university as full-time students to retain their scholarships.

The work assistance program provides students an opportunity to earn as much as $300 per year working part-time, usually eight hours a week, in various departments on campus or in the campus library or bookstore.

Currently 62 students are receiving financial aid in the work assistance program which is funded by the state.

The federally-funded work-study program is similar to the work assistance program, in that students perform part-time work on campus. To qualify for the program students must come from low-income families.

During the 1969-'70 academic year, 30 students are receiving assistance in this program. The federal government supplies 80 per cent of the students' earnings for 10 hours of work per week, and UNC-W supplies the remaining 20 per cent from state appropriations.

In order to apply for federal funds under the work-study program, UNC-W must first expend all its funds appropriated for the work assistance program.

A variety of loans in both federal and state programs are available to students. N.C. Department of Public Instruction makes loans to N.C. residents who plan to teach after graduation. These students may borrow as much as $600 per year at four per cent interest and may cancel the loans by teaching one year in N.C. public schools for each year that they held the loan.

N.C. residents may also apply to the College Foundation, Inc. for educational loans. Repayment of the principle plus seven per cent interest starts nine months after the student is graduated or leaves school.

The federally-supported National Defense Student Loan Program makes loans of up to $1000 per year for as many as five years to eligible students.

The federal government supplies 90 per cent of the loan fund, and the state supplies 10 per cent. The size of the loan made to the student depends upon his need and the availability of the state's share of the funds.

Repayment of the principle plus three per cent interest begins nine months after the student leaves school. The loan is cancelled at the death, or total and permanent disability of the borrower, or persons who teach in any public or non-profit elementary or secondary school, overseas school of the U.S. Armed Forces or accredited institutions of higher education may cancel up to 50 per cent of the amount borrowed at a rate of 10 per cent a year. Persons who teach in a designated low-income area or a recognized school for the handicapped can cancel their entire loan at a rate of 15 per cent a year.

Students from middle income families who may not qualify on the basis of need for assistance from other sources, can borrow as much as $1,500 per year from commercial sources in the guaranteed loan program.

The federal government guarantees payment of the loan in case of death or default of the borrower; and, for borrowers whose adjusted income is under $15,000 a year, the federal government pays the full rate of interest while the borrower is still in school.

Repayment of the loan begins from nine to twelve months after the borrower leaves school.

Twenty-six UNC-W students are participating in the loan program administered by the Director of Student Financial Aid.

arrows be painted on parking lots to designate one-way lanes and to help prevent accidents. Thus far, no action has been taken, and the right corner of Hanover Hall parking lot resembles a demolition derby, with cars from both directions careening around it.

These relatively simple solutions: repainting the senior spaces, designating a parking area for bikes, and painting one-way arrows on parking lots, could certainly alleviate both congestion and confusion.

Sr knocks facilities for job interviews

To the Editor:

To the Administration:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the administration for their thoughtfulness in maintaining a room in which graduating seniors can be interviewed. I only wish that all the offices on our campus could be as well equipped as the interviewing office.

Let me give you an example of one of the advantages this room possesses. Just this past Tuesday we were given a gift. In the middle of an interview, Lumber that is to be used in renovating the library was piled in our sweet little office. The nice delivery man was very considerate to the interviewer. He gave him a great big boom every time he placed some lumber on the floor. At one time, I thought he was going to give the interviewer a personal piece of wood -- right in his lap. The interviewer was so overcome with emotion that he had to take several aspirins.

Now didn't he take back with him a wonderful impression of UNC-W?

This is just one of the memories that interviewed seniors can look back on. I have only this last request: please don't provide the seniors next year with anything as modern as our office was this year. I have confidence that the administration will respond to this wish.

Next year, put the interviewing office in a pleasant location such as the faculty restroom or one of the broom closets. That is all that is necessary for a senior to plan his career.

Blacks discuss UNC-W

RAPPING-- Dialogue participants (clockwise) Veronica Sellers, Rachel McCullough, Dale Wright, and Lana Donaldson discuss the HEW proposals and the conditions facing blacks at UNC-W. (photo by Sessions)

By Terry Hammond

Following HEW's recent controversial recommendations concerning affirmative action, beyond nondiscrimination, to attract and involve members of racial groups in the total life of the university, THE SEAHAWK conducted a dialogue with four black students.

The students were asked questions pertaining to the HEW guidelines and the validity of HEW's charges.

The four participants included Lana Donaldson of Wilmington, a junior majoring in history; Dale Wright of Wilmington, a freshman majoring in Spanish; Veronica Sellers of Marion, South Carolina, a junior majoring in history; and Rachel McCullough of Wilmington, a freshman majoring in Spanish.

---REPORTERS: One of HEW's complaints was the absence of black students in fraternities and sororities. Do you feel these organizations purposely exclude blacks from rush activities?

---LANA: I don't say they purposely exclude them, but I don't think that the fraternities and sororities here on campus are for blacks, and it would be nice if we could get some organizations of black sororities and fraternities such as the Delta, AKA, Kappa, and the like.

---DALE: I don't think they purposely exclude them. They don't really make that much information available for blacks.

---VERONICA: I don't think they try to solicit black membership at all, and I do think we should have a black - oriented fraternity on campus.

---LANA: Why be a show-piece? I don't believe in showcase niggers, and that's what they want, and we aren't for it.

---REPORTER: Have any of you ever attended a Greek rush or Panhellenic?

---LANA: No, I wouldn't.

---REPORTER: Why wouldn't you?

---LANA: Because I know basically I'm not wanted, and I go nowhere I'm not wanted.

---REPORTER: Do you feel there should be a differential pattern of recruitment between white and black students?

---LANA: No, it should be equal for all students, but don't just talk to a certain group and leave the blacks on the fringe.

---DALE: No, we should recruit all students, the disadvantaged and minority students. This takes in a whole lot of people, because blacks aren't the only disadvantaged or minority group. I mean, if you're going to recruit them, recruit them for a good program, not just so we can say we've got blacks on the campus. Recruit them because they are students, and you need more students.

---VERONICA: I agree with Dale. I don't think we should recruit just because somebody's black, just because you want some tokenism. But I think whenever you recruit black and white students, you have to consider the background and school they are coming from. Well, take me for example, coming from a small town. In comparison to students in the white school there, I was almost illiterate. We have been subject to a lot of deprivations, and I think that should be considered.

---REPORTER: Well, would you say they should set up a different program for these students?

---VERONICA: Yes, I think they should. I guess with a 500 - year head start, you're going to have to help them catch up before you can set them off equal.

---DALE: But you know, this differentiation, there should be a differential recruitment program, but not solely on the basis that this girl happens to be black and you happen to be white. Recruit them because you've got different types of people...

---LANA: What's wrong with just plain people? Take them as people. To heck with the color of their skins! Take them as a person, not a number or some little something.

the kind of treatment he'd get from the student body, what he could expect, and what the average instructor would be like. You need more than just one black representative ... you should include a faculty member, who also happens to be black. I personally know that the majority of black kids in Wilmington will not come to this college, because they know that once they leave high school, that's the last time they're going to see a black faculty member, maybe for the next four years.

---VERONICA: I agree. A student needs to know what he's going into -- whether to come or not. Coming onto a campus where you don't know what to expect is bad. You're completely blinded. When you get ready to take a course, you need to know whether the instructor is anti-black or not.

---REPORTER: Would you have come to Wilmington had you known more about the campus?

---VERONICA: Definitely not. I still wouldn't be here now, except that I have no other choice.

---REPORTER: Why don't you have a choice? Are you here on a scholarship?

---VERONICA: Yes, I have a scholarship, and my grandparents also live here. But after staying here the first year, the first quarter, the first three months, I would have gladly packed and left!

---RACHEL: I think that including a black is a good idea, because you definitely need to tell them about the activities here. We don't have any part of activities like cheerleaders, May Court, and stuff like that.

---REPORTER: Did any of you try out for cheerleading?

---VERONICA: A girlfriend and I came out here, but after we got here we decided not to try out.

---DALE: I knew that they wouldn't accept two blacks on the squad. If I were accepted, I figured that sooner or later I'd drop out, because the cheerleaders being oriented the way they are, they'd shun any black girl. If I'm going to be up there up there cheering, I'm going to have a friend up there with me, and I want her to be the same color!

---REPORTER: Going on to another question: Should off-campus housing lists include only those landlords who are willing to house students regardless of race? Do you feel that a list designating those landlords who would rent to blacks would be sufficient?

---LANA: They are building dorms, now, so that will take care of some of the students, but the way things are in this town, they should have a list of approved housing for black students. And an approved list should not include Fourth Street, Jervay Homes or Castle Street. Right now it's catch as catch can. When you have to get out and find a place, you're liable to wind up with anything.

---LANA: There's a question about this dorm integration. When you get down to it, assign them by name. Don't look over there to see what Sallie Jo's address is and try to figure out what side of town she's from. Assign rooms arbitrarily.

---LANA: One thing I'd like to point out: why don't they have EBONY and JET in the library? Why don't they have anything over there on black history. Black people have contributed so much to America. Who laid out the city of Washington? A black man! What about people like W.E.B. DuBois and the Niagara Movement? What about Martin Luther King, Stokely Carmichael, prominent people, the new black movement? Baby let me tell you, black history is far richer than this Anglo-Saxon crap that I get shoved down my throat five days a week!

---VERONICA: Really they do need black literature. Several times I've Art faculty, students participate in shows, competitions, visitation

By Sylvia Quinn

Faculty and students in the Art Department are having a busy and fruitful spring quarter.

Mrs. Gail McKennis, art instructor, recently won the NCNB Purchase Award in the Nineteenth Associated Artists of N. C. Exhibiting Members Show for her intaglio, "Yellow Interaction."

Mrs. McKennis also won honorable mention for the print entitled "Orange and Blue" in the Thirty-second Semi-Annual Southeastern Exhibit at the Gallery of Contemporary Art in Winston-Salem.

Claude Howell, chairman of the Art Department, acted as a judge in the art division of the Golden Star Awards sponsored by Star - News Newspapers.

Howell will judge two art shows, exhibit in two invitational shows, and serve on an accreditation team to Jacksonville High School, during May.

On May 2, Howell was in Greenville to judge the Annual Arts Festival at the Greenville Arts Center.

May 3, the 1970 Spring Arts Festival Invitational Show at the Arts and Science Museum in Statesville opened. Two of Howell's paintings: "Tidewater" and "Cutting Board Shapes" are in the show, which will be open through May 31.

Howell will also be exhibiting in the North Carolina-Virginia Invitational Show at Thalheimer's in Richmond, Va., in May.

He will judge the Kingston Art Council's exhibit at the Vernon Park Mall Shopping Center, May 16-17, and is scheduled to serve on a visitation committee to Jacksonville High School to accredit the school's art department.

Art students are exhibiting in the Twelfth-Annual Student Art Show, a presentation of the best works for 1960-70.

Faculty Lecture Committee to sponsor Craig Phillips

Dr. Craig Phillips, superintendent of public instruction, will discuss public education in North Carolina in a lecture May 18 at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of the Education - Psychology Building.

The lecture is sponsored by the UNC-W Faculty Lecture Committee.

Phillips was elected N. C. Superintendent of Public Instruction in 1968. Experienced as a teacher, principal, and administrator, he has served as superintendent in both the Winston-Salem and Charlotte - Mecklenburg school systems.

Dr. Phillips has also worked in an executive capacity for the Richardson Foundation, a philanthropic organization.

Dr. Harold Hulon, chairman of the Education - Psychology Department, invited Dr. Phillips to speak. "The committee asked me to invite someone who would be interesting and well-qualified to speak on public education," Hulon explained, "and I chose Dr. Phillips."

The general public is invited to attend. There will be no admission charge.

Summer registration to begin on July 10 for first term

Registration for 1st Term of summer session is scheduled for July 10 from 8:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. in Hanover Hall. Registration for 2nd Term will be held July 20 from 8:30 - 12:30 p.m. in Hanover Hall.

First term will run from June 11 - July 15; second term will run from July 20 - August 21.

During a six - weeks term, students may earn a maximum of 10 quarter hours of credit.

Applicants are admitted entirely on the basis of academic, physical, and character qualifications and without reference to national origin, creed, or color.

Scientists address NCAS

Four UNC-W scientists presented papers to the 67th Annual Meeting of the N. C. Academy of Science at N.C. State University, May 1-2.

Dr. Daniel Plyler, professor of biology, presented a paper titled "Hydroxizurea - A Plant Growth Inhibitor" before the Botany Section.

Doctors Will S. DeLoach and Jack Levy presented a paper dealing with "The Calculation of the Number of Isomers in Certain Ring Systems. III. Stereoisomers in Cycloalkadienes and Cycloakatrienes". The paper was based on joint research.

Biological Conservation

DAVID W. EHRENFELD
Barnard College,
Columbia University

If you're not too concerned about redwoods, will you fight for the blue whale? A problem as explosive as biological conservation is a difficult one to treat. The facts, more often than not, are lost in the heat of emotional debate.

BIOLOGICAL CONSERVATION, written by David W. Ehrenfeld, treats the fate of communities of animals and plants and of individual species in the modern world in an authoritative, straightforward, and uncompromising manner.

Ehrenfeld's argument is not that we must "save nature," but rather that we must see ourselves as part of nature and learn how to live within it without destroying it.

Several examples of how this thinking has been successfully achieved are given. Such principle topics as pollution, pollution control, characteristics of endangered species, population control, management of communities and species, and the hazards of present political, economic, and social policies, are presented in a lucid and concise manner which will stimulate and hold the interest of any concerned reader.

Perhaps the most important aspect of the book is that Professor Ehrenfeld has positive suggestions to make about what can actually be done.

The problems are clearly drawn and attainable solutions are indicated. And, when the furor and emotionalism of the debate ends, that's when conservation efforts begin.

The Emergence of Manpower Policy

GARTH L. MANGUM

To the average citizen, the Neighborhood Youth Corps and the War on Poverty are probably the most familiar aspects of the larger issue of manpower policy.

Garth Mangum, as former Executive Director of the President's Committee on Manpower, was responsible for coordinating the administration of the various manpower programs introduced during the 1960's.

IN THE EMERGENCE OF MANPOWER POLICY he evaluates each manpower program based on his own investigation or on his synthesis of the examinations of others.

Professor Mangum's work is the first to appear with a succinct history of manpower policy in the U.S. from the immigration policies at the turn of the century through the beginning demands for skilled industrial manpower about the time of World War I, the worker welfare concerns of the 1930's, the manpower stringencies of the Second World War, the GI-Bill, and the Sputnik-sparked race of the 1950's, to the policies of the present time.

He sees the emerging policy as a dual thread concerned both with the development and use of manpower as an economic resource and with employment as a source not only of income, but of status for workers and their families.

A Radical's Guide To Economic Reality

Angus Black

A RADICAL'S GUIDE TO ECONOMIC REALITY conveys the understanding of real economic theory.

Professor Angus Black brings his message home with such timely items as the California Grape Strike and the economics of drugs (not the aspirin variety), told in some of the most pungent -- and funniest -- language never to appear in a dictionary.

Of course, if you get your jollies from THE THOUGHT OF CHAIRMAN MAO, maybe you'd better forget it. But pick up a copy anyway, just for the heck of it.

Thumb through "Big Business or Screw the Customer and Full Speed Ahead." Hop over a couple of pages to "Hope for Dope." Then, on to "Higher Education or Robin Hood Freaks Out." If, by then, you aren't interested enough to read on to "Why Can't I Be a Rainmaker, Too?" (Chapter 14), perhaps you'd really be happier at Peking University, anyway.

But since you may have to take Economics to graduate, why not make the very best of marginal analysis, maximization, scarcity, general equilibrium, supply and demand, and all the rest of that?

HEW cites UNC as discriminator

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare cited five of the six members of the Consolidated University on charges of racial discrimination, following compliance reviews by HEW officials.

The rank of the universities as to number of charges of racial discrimination is as follows: University of North Carolina at Charlotte (9), University of North Carolina at Greensboro (8), University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (7), North Carolina State University (6), University of North Carolina at Wilmington (6).

University of North Carolina at Asheville was not listed in the report. The Ft. Bragg Extension Center was cited with three points of discrimination.

There were 13 recommendations given to the various universities. One recommendation for the entire university was to give HEW officials increased access to university records.

OEO grant

Dr. Nathaniel Shope of Appalachian State University has received a $27,000 anti-poverty grant from the U.S. Office of Education. The grant will be used to finance a study of low-income college students.

According to Dr. Shope, "As many as 75% of low-achieving community college students continue to withdraw the first year." The study will be conducted in co-operation with several N. C. community colleges.

Booth, Cuppett rank high in national pitching poll

According to mid-season statistics, pitchers Ed Booth and Chuck Cuppett are tenth and thirteenth in the nation respectively. Last year Booth, Ed Atkins, and Pete Eyer finished first, second, and fourth in the nation, respectively, for their earned run average. Also the past few weeks, the Seahawks have been number one in pitching and defense throughout the nation from recent statistics recently released.

If the 'Hawks can bring their batting around, and keep their strong pitching up, they will travel to Pembroke this week for the NAIA District Tournament. From latest regular season standings, Lynchburg, Atlantic Christian, Pembroke, and the Seahawks will have earned the right to participate. The winner in this single elimination tournament will represent District 27 in the NAIA Area Playoffs May 21-23.

In the infield, Coach Brooks will probably start Jerry Martin at short stop, Paul Livingston at second, Sam Aske at third, and either Mike Wheeler or Jim Atkins at first base. The outfield spots will be rotated between David Sandlin, Charlie Maultsby, Ed Booth, and Gene Russ. The infield will be determined by who starts on the mound. Bruce Cavanaugh will probably open behind the plate.

Hawk golfers await tourney

The Seahawk golf team is eagerly awaiting the golf tournament they are to participate in next Monday at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina. Teams represented will be Campbell, St. Andrews, N. C. Wesleyan, Atlantic Christian, East Carolina, High Point, and the Hawks.

The team is led by Hoppy Smithwick. Bern Coulter plays second with Greg Nelson close behind. Jim Paschal, Tom Brinson, Austin Overby, and Pat Whisenant have also seen action.

Smithwick is medalist for the year overall with 75.9 shots per match. Coulter and Nelson follow respectively with 77.2 and 78.3.

Coach Earl Allen's team, that plays its home matches at Municipal Golf Course, played two matches last week. Before they tangled with St. Andrews and Pembroke they had a 9-5 overall record for the season.

The team has beaten Pembroke, High Point, and St. Andrews, while dropping matches to Campbell, Atlantic Christian, and East Carolina.

The short ones are the tough ones. Hoppy Smithwick contemplates a four-foot putt on the green, which will require concentration and good judgment. (Photo by Sessions)

The team is fresh from a visit to Charleston, S.C., where they participated in the third-annual Southern Intercollegiate Rowing Association Regatta.

The shell team got a good look at some fine crews from the South. Thirteen teams, coming from Virginia to Florida, competed in the regatta.

The team needs access to the river and is currently negotiating with the State Highway Department for permission to use buildings and pier facilities, which are state-owned.

Assisting Coach John Anderson have been Jim Houser and Robert Walton; David Carver is the team manager.

Team members include

TENNIS

Coach Charles Spole's tennis team closed out the season with a win over Southeastern Community College last week. The win ended their slate at 6 wins and 2 setbacks.

The young team is led by captain Dick Dayvault. Also playing continually are Dee Overby and Bill Brooks. Rounding out the squad are Danny Conner, Bill Brooks, Robert Rheder, Dennis Massengill, Alfred Smetius, and Bill Clark.

Chem Major begins study for honors

Gary Wayne Whitehead has initiated an extensive independent research project which will lead to graduation with honors in his major field.

A chemistry major, Whitehead will research "The Fridel - Crafts Method for the Preparation of Phenoxaphosphinic Acid Derivatives," Dr. Jack B. Levy of the chemistry faculty is advising Whitehead in the honors program.

To qualify for the honors program, Whitehead has maintained at least a 3.0 (B) quality point average on his first three years of college work.

The honors program at UNC-W is designed to comprise three quarters, with six quarter hours credit given only at the successful completion of the research project.

After the research project is completed and the honors paper is written, the final step is an oral examination by a committee of at least four members, with one or more members from outside the student's academic area.

Dorm committee organizes to decide policies, philosophy

A dormitory planning committee was organized in mid-April to formulate policies concerning the dorms, which are slated for completion next fall.

Committee members are Bill Brooks, Vickie Daum; Veronica Sellers; George Holston; Steve Jones; Sherry Kinlaw; Thomas Brown, Assistant dean of student affairs; Helena Cheek, dean of women; and J. Marshall Crews, dean of student affairs.

Tentative plans call for the inclusion of one male and one female faculty member on the committee.

'Studio, '70' to end season

By Donna West

Closing this year's theatrical entertainment, the S.R.O. Theatre will present "Studio, '70," an evening of three-one-act plays directed and produced by students, May 21-24 at 8:30 p.m. in the campus theatre.

Theme for the production is a triangle, symbolically representing the variety of plays.

"The Apple Tree," a musical based on "The Diary of Adam and Eve" by Mark Twain will be directed by Terry Wortley.

Popular on Broadway several seasons ago, "The Apple Tree" features Sandy Lazarides as Eve, and Eddie Thompson as the snake, who musically and humorously portray the fall of Man in the Garden of Eden.

A farcical tragedy, "Aria da Capo" was written by Edna St. Vincent Millay after World War I to expose how human nature leads men into war and despair.

Directed by Donna West, "Aria da Capo" takes its character from the Italian commedia dell'arte and ancient pastoral tragedy. Players include Abbe Godwin as Columbine, David Jones as Pierrot, Dale Donahue as Coothurnus, Johnny McGee as Corydon, and Brian Benson as Thyrsis.

Exploring the relationships between socio-economics groups in our country today and poking fun at human nature is "An Albino Kind of Logic" by Curtis Zahn and directed by Gil Huguley.

Bill Marlowe portrays John; Roc Prince, Jim; Susan Huguley, Jane. The chorus consists of Dean Dunford, Joan Carol McGee, and Dale Wright.

These plays are now in rehearsal, using a "thrust" stage and several playing levels in the S.R.O. Theatre.

Faculty advisors are Doug Swink (drama), W. Terry Rogers (technical), and Anne Fitzgibbon (costumes).

Working backstage in stage managing, properties, costumes, lighting, sound, and make-up are Dorothy Odum, Glendy Higgins, Susan Ballard, Emma Ange, Barbara McDaniel and Jerry York.

Students will be admitted free with I. D. cards. General Admission is $1. Reservations may be made by calling the Drama and Speech Department.

SCOTT TO ADDRESS GRADS

Governor Robert Scott will speak at Commencement exercises June 7 at 4 p.m. in Hanover Hall.

"We think we are most fortunate in securing the Governor as our speaker, and we are sure everyone is looking forward to his address," stated Mrs. Helena Cheek, assistant dean of student affairs.

Reverend William L. Watson of Silver Lake Baptist Church, a UNC-W student, will give the invocation and benediction. Phyllis Ruhland will lead the procession. Wallace Ambrose, Chick Coleman, Gloria Jean Horrell, and Dana Lee will usher.

A reception honoring graduates and their guests, given by Chancellor and Mrs. William H. Wagoner at Kenan House, will follow the Commencement.

Seniors are requested to pay $10 graduation fee to the cashier, immediately.

Academic regalia can be obtained from the Office of Student Affairs June 1-5.

Seniors will rehearse for graduation June 5 at 10 a.m. in Hanover Hall.

All graduates will meet at 3:30 p.m. in the gymnasium room to line up for the academic procession. It is important that everyone be on time. "Students should remember to wear dark shoes with their caps and gowns," Mrs. Cheek stated.

There will be approximately 132 students receiving bachelor's degrees and 11 receiving associate of arts degrees in nursing.

Students who were graduated following summer, fall, and winter quarters include: Thomas Leroy Bancroft, David Wayne Barker, Marie Evangeline Bassow, John Purdy Blair Jr., Bobby Gene Calson, Susanne Clements Canoutas, Thurman Wirt Casey, Robert Edwin Crumpler, James Herbert Dempsey, Mary Eunice Dexter, Delrilla Dorsey, James Johnston Doss and Linda Lanier Fear.

Also Betty Long Frink, Carolina Margarita Hernandez, Beverly Snead Hill, Jere Lee Hodgins, William Thurman Horne, William Henry Huggins, Jr., Margaret Carolyn Hurst, Stephen Roscoe Jones, Mary LeGwin McKeithan, Michael DeVore McQuay, Odie Ray Marsh, Catherine Currin Martin, Carolyn Tiddler Milton, June Gideon Mullen, Janet Olive Musslewhite, Linda Louise Nance, Brenda Shields Parker, Richard Edwin Parker, and Margaret Jean Pate.

Others who were graduated are: Sylvia Foy Perry, Sidney Murrell Salling, Gary Curtis Shell, Eva Mae Smith, Shirley Ann Stephens, Kathryn Cherworth Stubb, Terry LeRoy Walton, Douglas Franklin Welch, Dan Edwards Whisnant, and Doyle Irving Whitfield.

Also included are: Nancy Cates Appleton, Elizabeth Ann Barnhill, Mary Ella Barnhill, Jack Lyon Best, Roland Charles Blackburn, Jr., Joy Lee Bordeaux, Georgia Simmons Bowden, Barbara Melton Clewis, Joanne Marie Conroy, Walter Vernon Denning, Jr., Ellen Stevenson Dunn, Emma Rosemary Finley, Joseph Nephi Gore, Jr., Luther Wayne Kellum, Jane Whedbee Lane and Barbara Sharon Langston.

Personally...

-CHANCELLOR WILLIAM H. WAGONER: I commend you students and this student body for meeting in this fashion (spontaneous meeting on Cambodian situation) today. It is my honest opinion that a solution can best be arrived at in a meeting like this. I believe that committees like this, as they develop from individuals like you, will bring positive action to remedy the situation. This meeting is in the finest tradition of the university concept.

-TOMMY HODGES, delegate to Washington: Violence begets violence.

-JOHN KALLMAN, president, Student Political Activities Club: Talking won't get anything done. We ought to do something.

-GARY GRADY, freshman: I find it hard to believe that we had 435 blithering idiots in Congress when the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution was passed.

-JOHN RICHARDSON, sophomore: Nixon has the legal right to do anything he wants to in Southeast Asia now. He's proven that.

-WRIGHTSON JACKSON, sophomore: What we have is not our elected representatives running the war, but the president. Get the power back to the elected representatives!

-AL SIMEONE, freshman: If students have a mass demonstration, congressmen will simply say, "Well, that's just another group of students."

-RICHARD BOERA, veteran: It's up to the people to tell Congress to just go ahead and win the damn thing or to get the hell out!

-DR. GERALD SHINN: It's time to stop forming committees, to stop writing letters, to stop talking. It's time we gave our representatives in Washington our personal ideas. It's the only way they can know how we feel.

To Deserve Trust, Congress Must Act

In voting to send representatives to Washington to confer with North Carolina legislators about the move into Cambodia, concerned students at UNC-W demonstrated their maturity.

By utilizing legislative channels and avoiding violent conflict, these people have proved to the community, and indeed to the nation, that university students recognize and respect the powers of Congress.

National leaders and legislators, however, must recognize the tremendous trust and responsibility that these future leaders have placed with them.

If Congressmen fail to respond when these constituents have called for action, then the youth of America cannot be condemned for mass protest and dissent.

Black decries apathy which plaques students

To The Editor:

Today (May 15) at 9:30 a.m. there was a student meeting in the Hinton James Service Building (sometimes referred to as the Pub). This meeting was called so the students (Tom Welcher, John Kallman, Glindy Higgins, Tom Hodges, and Brian Black), faculty (Dr. Gerald Shinn), and administration (Carl Dempsey) who went to Washington to see Rep. Alton Lennon and senators B. Everett Jordan and Sam Ervin could report to the students their opinions and reflections of what occurred in Washington. That is now history.

There were 120 students at that meeting. Our student body consists roughly of 1,200 students. That means that about 10% of our student body attended this meeting... a meeting that was very important to our campus, the state of North Carolina, the entire nation, and the entire world. However, only 10% of the students were interested enough to attend the meeting. That means that 90% of our student body would rather not attend and later make excuses why they did not attend. These people who sit around on their fat asses and bitch about what a terrible university we have here are really sickening! Anyone can sit around and criticize the university, but how many of these apathetic people have here are really sickening! Anyone can sit around and criticize the university, but how many of these apathetic people can come up with any solutions for our campus problems or even help the Student Government, SPAC, the SEAHAWK, or even attend the baseball games to show school spirit?

A university is the student body, so when you student, who make up that 90% which do nothing, bullshit about how backward UNC-W is in your opinion -- just remember that you're a part of UNC-W. A spontaneous meeting of close to 100 students and faculty members concerned about the move into Cambodia elected May 6 to send seven delegates to Washington, D. C. to meet with legislators and to express concern about the domestic situation in the U. S. and its foreign policy.

The open forum discussion featured speakers from both right and left wings. The group, therefore, decided that the representative delegation would simply express concern and would request Congressional action of some sort, rather than to come out either for or against involvement in Cambodia.

Dr. Gerald Shinn explained that the purpose of the trip was "not to take our grievances to Washington, but to say to our congressman and senators that we are concerned about the situation both abroad and at home, and we would simply like to have our elected representatives in Washington see if they couldn't do something about the situation."

The representative group included Dr. Shinn, Carl Dempsey, acting assistant dean of student affairs; Brian Black, vice - president of the Student Government Association; John Kallman, president of the Student Political Activities Club; Tommy Hodges, Glindy Higgins, and Tom Welcher.

Travelling to Washington, on May 12, the group met with Representative Alton Lennon (D.-N.C.), Senator Sam J. Ervin (D.-N. C.), Senator Sam J. Ervin (D.-N.C.), and Senator B. Everett Jordan (D.-N. C.).

Dr. Shinn and Welcher met with Jordan. According to Welcher, Jordan "either couldn't or wouldn't discuss Vietnam or Cambodia.

"He primarily discussed the port here in Wilmington and several times remarked about what a beautiful city Wilmington and several times remarked about what a beautiful city Wilmington is," Welcher stated. "I don't think that any of us were too impressed with Sen. Jordan."

The group met with Lennon at 3 p.m. in Sen. Ervin's office. "Lennon said that he is convinced that we are right to be in Vietnam," Black stated.

Often referring to news clippings, Lennon at one time quoted the WASHINGTON STAR, saying that "it would be a communist victory for us to pull out and a fatal blow to American credibility."

"Lennon stated that Vietnam is a sovereign, free country needing help and that we are helping to support their sovereignty," Miss Higgins said.

Opining that an open declaration of war will never be made, Lennon stated that we should either win the war or get out of Vietnam.

Hodges felt that Lennon was very cooperative in talking with the group, going out of his way to come to the Senate Building to meet with them.

The third conference was with Sen. Ervin, who gave a summary of Vietnam from World War II to the present day, developing it from the Eisenhower Administration to the Nixon Administration.

"Ervin did take a stand," Kallman stated. He thinks that our being in Vietnam is definitely legal. Ervin said that after the Tet Offensive was a moderate success, the military told the politicians they could have won the war, but were not given the necessary political power. The Senator said he felt that we are not there to win the war."

Both Lennon and Ervin gave the delegates the impression that neither of them would have voted for the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, had they known then what they know today.

Ervin, however, feels that legislators who voted in favor of the Resolution should stand behind their ideas.

Describing the meeting which most impressed him, Kallman quoted an aide to Sen. Edward Brooks, who told the group, "You can protest and get your name in the paper, or you can work behind the scenes and be a factor."

Miss Higgins felt that Ervin failed to communicate with the students.

"He failed to get down to the nitty-gritty about the protests. He glazed over the polarization between the elected officials in Washington and the students who are protesting peacefully. Headminded he was an antique."

"Ervin repeatedly said that the right to vote was the proper means of expression for dissenting Americans," Welcher stated. "When asked if that meant he was in favor of lowering the voting age in N. C. to 18, however, he said he was neutral on that issue. I felt that he thought young people should be seen and not heard."

Black students back strike

The National Association of Black Students announced May 12 that it would support the university strike to end the war in Vietnam and Cambodia. The statement read as follows:

"The National Association of Black Students supports the strike, however, we must realize that this extension of the war into Cambodia is only a logical progression of America's insane foreign policy. The peace movement now has its casualties just as the civil rights movement had its casualties. It is clear to us that when you are for the cause of humanity and survival this country strikes back with troops, guns, tanks, and bombs.

"We do not necessarily urge black students at this time to join in with white students because the two groups relate to this country from different perspectives. However, on a local level where there are similar analyses, that decision should rest with the respective black student base.

"We encourage black student, in their own way, to strike and take those actions which will halt the atrocities and the genocide of peoples of color.

What is transpiring is indeed an educational experience."

The Association also announced the first black students convention to be held at Wayne State University in Detroit, Michigan, June 26-July 5. (Editor's Note: This release was mailed before the deaths of the two black students who were killed in Jackson, Mississippi.)

Senator Jordan on Cambodia

Senator B. Everett Jordan (D. North Carolina) released the following statement on the Cambodian situation on May 1, 1970:

"The President's decision to order American troops into Cambodia is, without question, the most crucial action he has taken in Southeast Asia.

And it is one which gravely concerns me for a number of reasons.

I am, in the first place, completely against any broadening of this country's involvement in Indo-China and want, instead, to see our role in Southeast Asia reduced as rapidly as it can be done without forsaking the basic cause for which we have been fighting.

On that basis, I am totally opposed to providing any troop or arms support to the Cambodian government which would widen the commitment in that part of the world.

If that is contemplated as part of the President's plan, I think it would be a monumental and tragic mistake.

The only grounds on which I think the President's move can be justified is as a military tactic designed to wipe out enemy concentrations which have been immune to attack. To the extent that this could shorten the war and permit withdrawal of our troops as scheduled or at a faster pace, I support his action, but only on that basis.

and Goodell, are working in cooperation with Sam Brown and David Hawk, former Vietnam Moratorium Committee members in an effort to drum up popular support for the act.

The bill also provides that the U.S. will not, "...furnish to Cambodia any defense article or any military assistance or military advisors..."

Supporters of the measure are currently organizing a drive to collect 20 million signatures endorsing the proposed legislation.

Presently the UNC-W SEAHAWK and SPAC are taking part in the drive.

The Amendment to End The War

Sec. (a) Unless the Congress shall have declared war, no part of any funds appropriated pursuant to this Act, or any other law shall be expended in Vietnam after December,

1970, for any purpose arising from military conflict; Provided that, funds, may be expended as required for the safe and systematic withdrawal of all United States military personnel, the termination of United States military operations, the provision of assistance to South Vietnam in amounts and for purposes specifically authorized by the Congress, the exchange of prisoners, and the arrangement of the asylum for Vietnamese who might be physically endangered by the withdrawal of all United States military personnel from Vietnam shall be completed not later than June 30, 1971, unless the Congress, by joint resolution, approves a finding by the President that an additional stated period of time is required to insure the safety of such personnel during the withdrawal process.

(b) Unless Congress shall have declared war, no part of any funds appropriated pursuant to this Act or any other law shall be expended after December 31, 1970, to furnish to Laos any military advisors, or to support military operations by the forces of the United States or any other country in or over Laos.

(c) Unless the Congress shall have declared war, no part of any funds appropriated pursuant to this Act or any other law shall be expended, after 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, to furnish to Cambodia any defense article or any military assistance or military advisors, or to support military operations by the forces of the United States or any other country in or over Cambodia.

(d) For the purposes of this section, the "defense article" shall have the same meaning given such term under section 644 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961.

Senate takes the initiative

The U. S. Senate is presently debating the controversial Amendment to End The War. Enactment of the measure would give Congress the power to withdraw all U. S. forces from Indo-China by June 30, 1971.

Provisions for removing Vietnamese from communist controlled areas are included in the Bill. The bill also provides for "...an additional stated period of time..." for withdrawal if needed to insure the safety of the troops involved.

Gay, Greim earn doctorates

Carl Gay, associate professor of history, and Barbara Ann Greim, lecturer in mathematics, will receive doctorate degrees in the spring commencement program at UNC-CH.

Dr. Greim completed her degree in April. She earned her B.S. degree at Ursinus College as a National Merit Scholar and won a Carnegie Fellowship for graduate work at UNC-CH. A native of Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, Dr. Greim was appointed to the faculty in September, 1969.

Dr. Gay successfully defended his dissertation, "The Daladier Administration, 1938-40," on May 1. He received his B. A. from Wake Forest University and his M. A. from UNC-CH. Dr. Gay is a member of the Executive Committee of the University Advisory Council, the Southern Historical Association, and the American Academy of Political and Social Science. (See related article on page 5).

Is the war legal, moral?

In recent days the President has been under continuous attack, perhaps unjustified attack. In August of 1964 the Tonkin Bay Resolution was passed. Let's look at a part of this resolution; "The United States is, therefore, prepared, as the President determines, to take all necessary steps, including the use of armed forces, to assist any member or protocol state of the Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty requesting assistance in defense of its freedom."

Not only does the President have legal power in this country under the above resolution and the SEATO treaty but also, it is legal under international law by the well established right of collective self-defense against armed attack. This includes the bombing of North Vietnam.

Also intervention is legal under the U.N. Charter and international law without a formal declaration of war. For military action can be taken under a collective defense agreement (Note: Korean War under U.N. command) without a formal declaration. We also have not violated the Geneva accords of 1954. North Vietnam has violated these accords from the beginning by leaving forces and supplies in the South and using its zone for aggression against the South.

The President has full authority to commit U.S. forces to Indo-China under his constitutional powers as Commander-in-Chief and Chief Executive, with the responsibility to conduct foreign affairs. Which means it is his job to carry out our agreement with South Vietnam and Cambodia under the SEATO treaty.

Many of our well-meaning citizens say this is an immoral war. I ask them is it moral to abandon these people to the mercy of the Viet Cong terrorists? Is it moral to break our agreement and word to assist these countries against outside aggression under the terms of the SEATO treaty?

Senator Fulbright (Dem) a leading dove was the floor manager for the Tonkin Bay Resolution which committed U.S. troops to Vietnam in mass forces. After the death of thousands of GIs, that Mr. Fulbright helped send to Vietnam he calls for complete withdrawal. This comes at a time when honorable withdrawal of troops and Vietnamization of the war seems close and likely. Is it moral that these troops he helped send to Vietnam should die in vain?

Let's now turn our attention to Senator McGovern (Dem) and Senator Muskie (Dem) both of whom are presidential hopefuls. If President Nixon is allowed to carry out his Indo-China policy, and if his troop withdrawal and Vietnamization plan works, keep in mind that he is a Republican, and they are Democrats. Well my point should be obvious by now, if a Republican President ends a Democratic war he becomes a much tougher opponent in 1972.

"Say Daddy, are pennies still good for anything?"

Travelling to Washington, on May 12, the group met with Representative Alton Lennon (D.-N.C.), Senator Sam J. Ervin (D.-N. C.), Senator Sam J. Ervin (D.-N.C.), and Senator B. Everett Jordan (D.-N. C.).

Dr. Shinn and Welcher met with Jordan. According to Welcher, Jordan "either couldn't or wouldn't discuss Vietnam or Cambodia."

"He primarily discussed the port here in Wilmington and several times remarked about what a beautiful city Wilmington and several times remarked about what a beautiful city Wilmington is," Welcher stated. "I don't think that any of us were too impressed with Sen. Jordan."

The group met with Lennon at 3 p.m. in Sen. Ervin's office. "Lennon said that he is convinced that we are right to be in Vietnam," Black stated.

Often referring to news clippings, Lennon at one time quoted the WASHINGTON STAR, saying that "it would be a communist victory for us to pull out and a fatal blow to American credibility."

"Lennon stated that Vietnam is a sovereign, free country needing help and that we are helping to support their sovereignty," Miss Higgins said.

Opining that an open declaration of war will never be made, Lennon stated that we should either win the war or get out of Vietnam.

Hodges felt that Lennon was very cooperative in talking with the group, going out of his way to come to the Senate Building to meet with them.

The third conference was with Sen. Ervin, who gave a summary of Vietnam from World War II to the present day, developing it from the Eisenhower Administration to the Nixon Administration.

"Ervin did take a stand," Kallman stated. He thinks that our being in Vietnam is definitely legal. Ervin said that after the Tet Offensive was a moderate success, the military told the politicians they could have won the war, but were not given the necessary political power. The Senator said he felt that we are not there to win the war."

Both Lennon and Ervin gave the delegates the impression that neither of them would have voted for the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, had they known then what they know today.

Ervin, however, feels that legislators who voted in favor of the Resolution should stand behind their ideas.

Describing the meeting which most impressed him, Kallman quoted an aide to Sen. Edward Brooks, who told the group, "You can protest and get your name in the paper, or you can work behind the scenes and be a factor."

Miss Higgins felt that Ervin failed to communicate with the students. "He failed to get down to the nitty-gritty about the protests. He glazed over the polarization between the elected officials in Washington and the students who are protesting peacefully. He admitted he was an anti-que."

"Ervin repeatedly said that the right to vote was the proper means of expression for dissenting Americans," Welcher stated. "When asked if that meant he was in favor of lowering the voting age in N. C. to 18, however, he said he was neutral on that issue. I felt that he thought young people should be seen and not heard."

Education cost

A recent State Board of Higher Education study revealed that an increasingly large portion higher education financing is provided by state funds. The board estimated that approximately 34% of the total cost is borne by the state.

Black students back strike

The National Association of Black Students announced May 12 that it would support the university strike to end the war in Vietnam and Cambodia. The statement reads as follows:

"The National Association of Black Students supports the strike, however, we must realize that this extension of the war into Cambodia is only a logical progression of America's insane foreign policy. The peace movement now has its casualties just as the civil rights movement had its casualties. It is clear to us that when you are for the cause of humanity and survival this country strikes back with troops, guns, tanks, and bombs.

"We do not necessarily urge black students at this time to join in with white students because the two groups relate to this country from different perspectives. However, on a local level where there are similar analyses, that decision should rest with the respective black student base.

"We encourage black student, in their own way, to strike and take those actions which will halt the atrocities and the genocide of peoples of color. What is transpiring is indeed an educational experience."

The Association also announced the first black students convention to be held at Wayne State University in Detroit, Michigan, June 26- July 5. (Editor's Note: This release was mailed before the deaths of the two black students who were killed in Jackson, Mississippi.)

Senator Jordan on Cambodia

Senator B. Everett Jordan (D. North Carolina) released the following statement on the Cambodian situation on May 1, 1970:

"The President's decision to order American troops into Cambodia is, without question, the most crucial action he has taken in Southeast Asia.

And it is one which gravely concerns me for a number of reasons.

I am, in the first place, completely against any broadening of this country's involvement in Indo-China and want, instead, to see our role in Southeast Asia reduced as rapidly as it can be done without forsaking the basic cause for which we have been fighting.

On that basis, I am totally opposed to providing any troop arms support to the Cambodian government which would widen the commitment in that part of the world.

If that is contemplated as part of the President's plan, I think it would be a monumental and tragic mistake.

The only grounds on which I think the President's move can be justified is as a military tactic designed to wipe out enemy concentrations which have been immune to attack. To the extent that this could shorten the war and permit withdrawal of our troops as scheduled or at a faster pace, I support his action, but only on that basis.

and Goodel, are working in cooperation with Sam Brown and David Hawk, former Vietnam Moratorium Committee members in an effort to drum up popular support for the act.

The bill also provides that the U. S. will not, "...furnish to Cambodia any defense article or any military assistance or military advisors..."

Supporters of the measure are currently organizing a drive to collect 20 million signatures endorsing the proposed legislation.

Presently the UNC-W SEAHAWK and SPAC are taking part in the drive.

The Amendment to End The War

Sec. (a) Unless the Congress shall have declared war, no part of any funds appropriated pursuant to this Act, or any other law shall be expended in Vietnam after December,

1970, for any purpose arising from military conflict; Provided that, funds, may be expended as required for the safe and systematic withdrawal of all United States military personnel, the termination of United States military operations, the provision of assistance to South Vietnam in amounts and for purposes specifically authorized by the Congress, the exchange of prisoners, and the arrangement of the asylum for Vietnamese who might be physically endangered by the withdrawal of all United States military personnel from Vietnam shall be completed not later than June 30, 1971, unless the Congress, by joint resolution, approves a finding by the President that an additional stated period of time is required to insure the safety of such personnel during the withdrawal process.

(b) Unless Congress shall have declared war, no part of any funds appropriated pursuant to this Act or any other law shall be expended after December 31, 1970, to furnish to Laos any military advisors, or to support military operations by the forces of the United States or any other country in or over Cambodia.

ed States or any other country in or over Laos.

(c) Unless the Congress shall have declared war, no part of any funds appropriated pursuant to this Act or any other law shall be expended, after 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, to furnish to Cambodia any defense article or any military assistance or military advisors, or to support military operations by the forces of the United States or any other country in or over Cambodia.

(d) For the purposes of this section, the "defense article" shall have the same meaning given such term under section 644 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961.

Senate takes the initiative

The U. S. Senate is presently debating the controversial Amendment to End The War. Enactment of the measure would give Congress the power to withdraw all U. S. forces from Indo-China by June 30, 1971.

Provisions for removing Vietnamese from communist controlled areas are included in the Bill. The bill also provides for "...an additional stated period of time..." for withdrawal if needed to insure the safety of the troops involved.

Gay, Greim earn doctorates

Carl Gay, associate professor of history, and Barbara Ann Greim, lecturer in mathematics, will receive doctorate degrees in the spring commencement program at UNC-CH.

Dr. Greim completed her degree in April. She earned her B.S. degree at Ursinus College as a National Merit Scholar and won a Carnegie Fellowship for graduate work at UNC-CH. A native of Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, Dr. Greim was appointed to the faculty in September, 1969. Dr. Gay successfully defended his dissertation, "The Daladier Administration, 1938-'40," on May 1. He received his B. A. from Wake Forest University and his M. A. from UNC-CH. Dr. Gay is a member of the Executive Committee of the University Advisory Council, the Southern Historical Association, and the American Academy of Political and Social Science. (See related article on page 5).

Is the war legal, moral?

In recent days the President has been under continuous attack, perhaps unjustified attack. In August of 1964 the Tonkin Bay Resolution was passed. Let's look at a part of this resolution: "The United States is, therefore, prepared, as the President determines, to take all necessary steps, including the use of armed forces, to assist any member or protocol state of the Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty requesting assistance in defense of its freedom."

Not only does the President have legal power in this country under the above resolution and the SEATO treaty but also, it is legal under international law by the well established right of collective self-defense against armed attack. This includes the bombing of North Vietnam.

Also intervention is legal under the U.N. Charter and international law without a formal declaration of war. For military action can be taken under a collective defense agreement (Note: Korean War under U.N. command) without a formal declaration. We also have not violated the Geneva accords of 1954. North Vietnam has violated these accords from the beginning by leaving forces and supplies in the South and using its zone for aggression against the South.

The President has full authority to commit U.S. forces to Indo - China under his constitutional powers as Commander-in - Chief and Chief Executive, with the responsibility to conduct foreign affairs. Which means it is his job to carry out our agreement with South Vietnam and Cambodia under the SEATO treaty.

Many of our well-meaning citizens say this is an immoral war. I ask them is it moral to abandon these people to the mercy of the Viet Cong terrorists? Is it moral to break our agreement and word to assist these countries against outside aggression under the terms of the SEATO treaty?

Senator Fulbright (Dem) a leading dove was the floor manager for the Tonkin Bay Resolution which committed U. S. troops to Vietnam in mass forces. After the death of thousands of GIs, that Mr. Fulbright helped send to Vietnam he calls for complete withdrawal. This comes at a time when honorable withdrawal of troops and Vietnamization of the war seems close and likely. Is it moral that these troops he helped send to Vietnam should die in vain?

Let's now turn our attention to Senator McGovern (Dem) and Senator Muskie (Dem) both of whom are presidential hopefuls. If President Nixon is allowed to carry out his Indo-China policy, and if his troop withdrawal and Vietnamization plan works, keep in mind that he is a Republican, and they are Democrats. Well my point should be obvious by now, if a Republican President ends a Democratic war he becomes a much tougher opponent in 1972.

"Say Daddy, are pennies still good for anything?"

Book review

New York—A crucial question: where peaceful demonstrations end and where any angry confrontation begins, is discussed by those directly involved, in Janet Harris's new book, STUDENTS IN REVOLT. (McGraw-Hill, $4.95).

Eyewitness accounts on what is happening today are provided by Nesbitt Crutchfield, a member of the Black Student Union at San Francisco State College; Robert Friedman, editor - in - chief of Columbia University's daily newspaper; Heidi Reichling and Karl Dietrick Wolff, respectively secretary and president of the West German radical student organization, SOCIALISTISCHER DEUTSCHER STUDENTENBUND, plus others.

Author of THE LONG FREEDOM ROAD and BLACK PRIDE, both McGraw - Hill books, Mrs. Harris teaches at C. W. Post College, Long Island University.

Opera to be presented May 29

The Music Department will present "Cavalleria Rusticana", an opera by Pietro Mascagni, in Thalian Hall at 8:30 p.m. May 29.

Mascagni's opera is set in a Sicilian village on Easter Day in the latter part of the nineteenth-century. It deals with a tragic theme, the alienation of affections.

"The Regina Coeli" and "The Eater Hymn" will be among the familiar melodies included in the opera.

The featured role of Santuzza, a village girl in love with Turridu, will be sung by Martha Teachey. Miss Teachey is a recent master's degree candidate from UNC-Greensboro. She performed her graduate recital earlier this month. Larry Oldham, a post-graduate student at UNC-W, will sing the lead tenor role of Turridu, a young soldier.

Soprano Brenda Taylor will portray Lola, wife of Alfio, a carter. Baritone Edward Lockamy will sing the roles of the peasants and villagers.

Mrs. Rhesa Stone and Miss Ann Darden will sing the roles of the peasants and villagers.

Mrs. Rhesa Stone and Miss Ann Darden will serve as accompanists. Loyd Hudson is conductor of the University Chorus.

Tickets for the performance can be purchased from chorus members or at the door.

Dialogue

Gay: I am a little hawkish...

Dr. Carl Gay, who recently earned his doctorate from University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, feels the U.S. must

An elfin-like man who radiates energy and good humor, Dr. Carl Gay, associate professor of history, served in the United States Navy and taught social science at history at a local junior high before joining the UNC-W faculty.

A native of Fountain, N. C., Dr. Gay has definite ideas about almost everything, and particularly about American involvement in Vietnam and Cambodia, as a recent interview revealed.

—REPORTER: Dr. Gay, what do you consider the biggest problem, which UNC-W faces?

—DR. GAY: I feel that the majority of our problems will probably center around the transition from college to university. The addition of dormitories, graduate studies, and getting ready to handle the problems that progress will create -- the overall growth of the college -- will necessarily present problems.

—REPORTER: well what do you feel is the biggest problem facing the nation today? Some people say that it's Vietnam and Cambodia; others cite the pollution crisis and student unrest.

What is your opinion?

—DR. GAY: The divisiveness that has entered our society, whether it's about Vietnam or the colleges is definitely the major problem today. We are apparently becoming polarized, and we are losing the unity that existed in the United States as short a time ago as World War II.

—REPORTER: Dr. Gay, would you mind voicing an opinion, one way or the other, about Vietnam?

—DR. GAY: I don't mind, but you'll have to give me a minute to decide how to say what I believe...I am a little hawkish as far as the situation is concerned. I feel that we are there, in effect, fighting a battle for the free world, even though it looks doubtful. We must take a stand somewhere.

—REPORTER: Well, if you approve of U. S. involvement in Vietnam, do you feel that the move into Cambodia was justified?

—DR. GAY: On Cambodia, I can see the military advantages of the move, but from other points of view, I would doubt the wisdom of it.

—REPORTER: I recently read that the Cambodians and the Vietnamese, whether they are North or South Vietnamese, are traditional enemies--that the Cambodians hate the Vietnamese. Could you tell me whether this is true?

—DR. GAY: That's true. The two people are traditional enemies.

—REPORTER: Do you feel that we can ever win in Vietnam?

—DR. GAY: I don't know. We will certainly be there for many more years, but, as I said, we have to take a stand somewhere.

Careers open in special ed

The Bureau of Education for the Handicapped is making a move to reach college students, not yet decided upon their careers, with offers of information about opportunities in the field of Special Education.

Careers requiring anywhere from two years of college to a Doctors degree are open. Information about scholarships, fellowships, and Federal Government loans, for those who qualify and which may or may not require repayment will be provided to interested persons.

Statistics from the Bureau's Program Planning and Evaluation Office indicate that currently there are over six million school age children in need of special education.

To meet this need, approximately 320,000 professionals will be needed, according to officials of the Bureau of Education for the Handicapped.

Fonda hosts NBC Special about the film phenomenon

Peter Fonda, star of "Easy Rider", one of the trendsetting films that are changing the direction of the film industry, will host the second part of an NBC Television Special, "The New Communicators," June 12 at 10 p.m. NYT.

Dealing with the "film phenomenon", the explosion of interest among young people in the making of films, "The New Communicators" is produced and written by Lee Mendelson.

Unlike former days, film courses are now available at almost all major universities, and many elementary schools teach creative filmmaking to their youngest students.

Mendelson chose 40 films from almost a thousand submitted from all over the world for the two - part special. The first segment of the program was broadcast last week.

Films range in complexity of theme from a stylized satire on modern human relationships to an animation of the NBC peacock, and in length from seconds to 12 minutes. Mendelson, however, feels that they all have a common thread: they all communicate in a unique and exciting way.

"The Magic Mushroom", by a 13 - year - old girl, was done at the Yellow Ball Workshop in Massachusetts. "Claude" an animated cartoon illustrating the lack of communication between children and parents, was created by Dan McLaughlin at UCLA and has won awards throughout the world.

Fantasy lives have struck a responsive chord with the young filmmakers included in the program. "Bluebeard's Last Wife", produced with the assistance of the British Film Institute, examines the dream world of a lonely woman who invents a fantasy husband, and finds herself enmeshed in a nightmare.

"Mate Game" by Jeremy Paul Kagan satirizes the fantasies imposed on contemporary psyches by overcommercialization. The couple in the film, conditioned to shallow relationships, can only relate to each other by using pawns which represent their respective romantic ideas and by "playing the game."

Perhaps the most poignant of all of the films is a 20-second flick made by a youngster from the Yellow Ball Workshop. A slip card says simply "Wouldn't it be nice if all bombs exploded for peace."

'Hawks falter against strong Braves

The Seahawks finished on top of NAIA District 29 with a 10-3 district mark and a 20-5 overall record, moving into the NAIA District 29 tournament, played May 16 at Pembroke.

"It is always good to be a team, but that doesn't mean anything in a tournament like this. All our teams are so close and well-balanced that anything could happen. It could be no great upset for anyone of them won," Coach Bill Brooks commented on his teams' position.

The 'Hawks boasted excellent pitching with a team earned run average of 1.28. The Seahawks also led the nation in fielding percentages at the time.

Top hitters were outfielder David Sandlin (.900), second baseman Paul Livingston (.298), and third baseman Sam Askew (.280). The team relied mainly on pitching and defense, because of a .227 team batting average.

Usually a light hitting team, UNC-W exploded for 12 hits which, combined with Eddie Booth's home hit, brought a 7-0 win over the Atlantic Christian College Bulldogs in the first round of the District 29 Tournament.

ment.

Booth increased his season's record to 7-1 in gaining his fourth shut-out of the campaign. He encountered control trouble late in the fray, but a couple of double plays and the fielding of shortstop Jerry Martin preserved the shutout.

The 'Hawks jumped on losing pitcher Ronnie Hopkins, who came into the action with a 0.24 ERA, for two quick runs in the second inning.

Mike Wheeler walked, advanced to second on a safety by Bruce Cavenaugh. Both runners then advanced up on a wild pitch. Wheeler then scored on Martin's boulder to third base and Cavenaugh tallied on a single by Charles Maultsby.

With one out in the third, rightfielder David Sandlin rocketed the first pitch offered for a tremendous home run which cleared the light poles about 380 feet from the plate.

Gene Russ followed Sandlin's blast with a double to leftcenter. Lefthander Bob Johnson came in to pitch to lefthanded hitting Wheeler who rifled a 0-1 pitch over the rightfield fence, giving the Seahawks a 5-0 lead.

They then tallied seven runs in the fourth and seventh innings. The run in the fourth was the result of a double by Maultsby followed by Sam Askew's double.

A walk to Russ followed by a single by Wheeler and Cavenaugh's sacrifice put runners on second and third with one out in the seventh.

Bulldog pitcher Wayne Pigford uncorked a wild pitch which scored Russ standing up.

Maultsby, Askew, and Sandlin rapped out two safeties each to lead the hitting.

Friday, the Seahawks fell at the hands of the home-run-hitting Pembroke Braves 12-4.

The loss, the first to Pembroke after five wins in a row, forced Coach Brooks' lads into action again Friday night. In the late tilt the 'Hawks topped Lynchburg 6-2 to gain the berth in the finals opposite Pembroke.

The Seahawks' outbait Pembroke in the afternoon long fray 9-8, but the Braves used the long ball and the bunt to score in two big frames against the 'Hawks.

Pembroke's home run leader, Ronnie Collins, slammed his sixth round tripper of the season, while Preston Douglas got his fourth and fifth of the year off starter Chuck Cuppett.

Two of the Braves over the fence blasts came in the third inning when they scored four times to move ahead of UNC-W 6-2. Douglas batting from the left side of the plate hit one over the right field wall with two mates aboard and Collins followed with his round tripper over the left field fence.

Coach Harold Ellen's Braves used Douglas's second home run to chalk up two runs in the sixth inning and capitalized on three Wilmington miscues combined with three sacrifices to score three more runs in the inning.

Barnes Yelverton replaced Cuppett, the loser who finished 6-3 on the season, to get the final out in the sixth and shut-out the Braves on one hit over the last three frames.

Pembroke, playing as the visiting team, tallied twice in the first inning on Douglas's two-bagger, a pair of sacrifices, and a base on balls.

Sam Askew singled home Charlie Maultsby with UNC-W's first marker in the bottom of the first. Jerry Martin's single scored Bruce Cavenaugh for the teams' second run in the second inning.

UNC-W scored twice in the fourth frame on Askew's double, Martin's single, and Pembroke's only error of the afternoon.

Pembroke center fielder Preston Douglas' two run home run put a dent into a fine pitching effort by Eddie Atkins and gave Pembroke State University the District 29 baseball tournament championship by a score of 2-1 on Saturday afternoon.

Needing the win to push the double-elimination tournament into the final game against Pembroke that night, the Seahawks instead saw their season end with them finishing with a 22-7 record. Pembroke State's Braves, advanced to Area Seven tournament as representatives of District 29.

Douglas, who was later judged the Most Valuable Player in the District Tournament homered off Atkins in the bottom of the first inning after Dewey Knight reached first base on what was scored an infield hit.

It was the sixth home run of the season for Douglas and his third of the tournament. The Braves' center fielder went to bat fourteen times got five hits and four runs, the other two safeties being doubles. He batted seven runs during the tournament.

While Atkins was limiting the Braves to three more hits, Coach Bill Brooks' Hawks went five frames before breaking into the scoring column.

Lefthander Rick Coffin, the winner, 6-4 on the year, retired Coach Brooks' lads in order for the first four innings before Dave Sandlin ripped the first base knock into left field. Gene Russ hit into a double play and Mike Wheeler fled out to end the fifth inning with only fifteen batters facing the Braves southpaw.

The Seahawks brewed trouble for the Pembroke pitcher in the sixth inning with one out. Paul Livingston bounced an infield hit off Coffin's leg and Atkins drew a free ticket to first. Charlie Maultsby hit a short single into left field with Livingston stopping at third. Jerry Martin bounced into a double play with Livingston coming home on the play.

Askew walked to load the bases again and Sandlin poled along liner to deep center where Douglas hauled it in for the final out of the inning. Maultsby singled in the eighth with two out and Russ collected the first Seahawks safety with two out in the bottom of the ninth.

Atkins, in addition to the five hits, walked two and struck out seven in losing his third game against two wins.

Maultsby was the only Seahawk to collect more than one hit and Tammy Ham was the only one to collect two hits for the Braves.

"I think they performed real well for the short time they worked together and they improved a lot after the first few matches," Coach Charlie Sproles commented after closing out the season at Florence, South Carolina, against the University of South Carolina.

In his third year as tennis coach, Coach Sproles directed the team to a 9-2 record with wins over Pembroke, North Carolina Wesleyan, Wayne County Community College, Southeastern Community College, and the University of South Carolina at Florence. The squad dropped two matches to Campbell College early in the season.

"Devaylt was the leader during the season and encouraged his teammates by his superb play, and the seasons' success can be attributed to him," Coach Sproles added later.

The individual records ended with senior captain Dick Devaylt seeded number one with a 8-3 record. Sophomore Alfred Smellus finished with a 4-4 record with leading freshmen Bill Brooks and Danny Conner ending with 7-4 records.

Senior Dee Overby finished with a 5-5 mark and senior Dennis Masengill finished with a 4-3 record.

Seeing limited action freshmen Bill Clark and Mark Thompson completed their seasons with 2-2 and 1-2 records respectively.

Final double results saw Devaylt and Brooks finish with an 8-2 record and Conner and Overby end with a 7-3 slate mark. These were the only two regular double teams with the remainder of the squad being rotated in the third doubles position.

The NAIA Tournament was won by the team from Atlantic Christian College with the single champion coming from Methodist College.

The scores from the Seahawks last match at Florence against the University of South Carolina were as follows:

SINGLES

Dick Devaylt defeated Jimmy Gray 5-7, 9-9, 6-2
Alfred Smellus lost to Barney Van Burskirk 6-0, 6-3.

Bill Brooks defeated Kurt Boswell 6-1, 6-3.

Dennis Masengill defeated Debbie Wall 6-2, 5-7, 6-4.

Danny Conner defeated Frank Elmore 6-1, 4-6, 7-5.

Dee Overby defeated Wanda Mercer 6 - 3, 6-2.

DOUBLES:

Devaylt and Brooks lost to Gray and Van Burskirk, 6-3, 6-4.

Smellus and Mark Thompson defeated Wall and Boswell, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Conner and Overby defeated Mercer and Elmore, 6-3, 6-0.

DICK DEYVALT gets good position to return an easy volley. Deyvalt ended the season with an 8-3 record as the number one seeded player. (Photo by Sessions)

Ever hear of a career like this?

A new profession, deeply satisfying to your desire to help build a better world.

In which you would literally lead children into happy, useful lives which they never dreamed could exist for them.

A fast-expanding field in which the need is four times the number now engaged—insuring life-time professional security and better-than-most incomes.

If you want a career with all this and more, look into the fascinating field of Special Education—using new techniques and new teaching machines, some yet unknown to college students, to overcome the learning handicaps caused by the physical, mental or emotional problems of more than five million children.

45 students graduate after summer session

Forty-five students completed requirements for graduation during the summer session.

Mrs. Donna Goldstein Norris, an English major, was graduated cum laude. She compiled a quality point average of 3.5 on a four point scale to qualify for the degree with distinction.

Bachelor of Arts degrees in biology were earned by Robert Frederick Finke, William Denny McCaughan Jr., Donna, Mae Simpson, Wesley Edwin Thomas, Riley Freeman West Jr., and Christopher Kurt Zingelmann.

Students who earned degrees in business administration included David Michael Choate, William Kirby Flake Jr., Jesse Ray Galloway, Edward Earl Maready, Charles Albert Newkirk, John Florian Phillips, Larry Dwayne Sauls, Rudolph Calder Shackelford Jr., Joseph Starling Temple, and Gary Lee Watkins.

Elementary education majors who completed requirements during the summer were Esther Kathryn Drakos, Linda Jean Failing, Mary Katherine Griffith, Eleanor Powell Jacobs, Carol Armstrong Slinkard, Sally Ann Ward, Iris Wells Watkins, and Rebecca Hardee Willis, and Dorothy Richardson Sugg.

Three students, Sandra Smith Green, Elaine Odom Griffin, and Donna Goldstein Norris, received degrees in English.

George Lawrence Boylan, Phillip Stanley Gore, Sylvia

Corbett Jacobs, John Nixon King, Charles Richard Lancaster, Decatur Corey Overby, and John Clifford Pfaff were awarded degrees in history.

Degrees in mathematics were awarded to William Joseph Griffin and Thomas Peter Welch. William Martin Farrar Jr. received his degree in philosophy and religion.

Physical education majors who were graduated in August were Sharon Grey Calloway, Robert Elmore Dunn Jr., and Georgia James Macris.

Bachelor of arts degrees in social science were awarded to Robert Paul Brett, Martha Lynn Cowie and Caroline Carr Smith.

Doris Pump Carlton received the Bachelor of Science degree in medical technology.

ETS to administer exams for prospective teachers

PRINCETON, N.J.—College seniors preparing to teach school may take the national Teacher Examinations on any of the four test dates announced by Educational Testing Services, a non-profit, educational organization which prepares and administers the testing program. Dates for testing are Nov. 14, Jan. 30, April 3, and July 17. The tests will be given at nearly 500 locations throughout the United States.

The school systems and state departments of education which use the examination results are listed in an NTE leaflet which may be obtained by writing to ETS.

On each full day of testing, prospective teachers may take the Common Examinations which measure their professional preparation and general cultural background, and a Teaching Area examination which measures their mastery of the subject they expect to teach.

Prospective teachers should contact the school systems in which they expect to teach, or their colleges, for specific advice on which examinations to take and on which dates they should be taken.

THE BULLETIN OF INFORMATION FOR CANDIDATES contains a list of test centers, and information about the examinations, as well as a registration form. Copies may be obtained from college placement offices, school personnel offices, or from NTE, Box 911, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey, 08540.

Media running the gamut from pencil to bronze and welded steel have been used to create the works of art in the October art show which opens Sunday, October 4, at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

A reception, open to the public, was held in the lobby of Kenan Hall Sunday afternoon from 3-5 p.m. to mark the formal opening of the show which was selected from works in the Garden Gallery near Raleigh.

Described by UNC-W Art Department Chairman Claude Howell as "probably the best show of the entire year," the exhibition features 48 paintings, prints, drawings and sculptured works representative of the best artists in the state. Forty-two artists are exhibiting in the show.

A number of the artists have exhibited at UNC-W in earlier shows. Among them are Cullowhee artist Thomas Hammond who was a prizewinner in the 1970 Lower Cape Fear Exhibition sponsored by UNC-W; Vic Huggins, noted for his paintings in the round, and who won the WWAY Purchase Award at UNC-W in 1966 and held a one-man show on campus in 1967; and Ruth Clarke who also exhibited a one-man show at the University in 1967.

Other artists whose works have been shown at UNC-W in the Associated Artists of North Carolina Exhibiting Members Show are Peggy Dodge, Sara Edmiston, Jill Flink, Mary Anne Jenkins, Randy Macatee, and Gordon Mahy.

The catalog of paintings and prints includes serigraphs, etchings, oils on canvas, intaglios, ink drawings, oils on wood, woodcuts, acrylics, acrylic collages, pastels, oil and pencil works, ink wash drawings, collagraphs, watercolors, lino cuts, and acrylics on rice paper.

Sculpture pieces in the show have been fashioned in leather, marble, terra cotta, bronze, welded steel, and cedar.

The show from the Garden Gallery will be on exhibition throughout the month of October on weekdays between 8:30 a.m.-8:30 p.m. in the Kenan gallery.

Doctorates

Two faculty members received doctorates during summer commencement programs at North Carolina State University and Florida State University.

J. Marshall Crews, dean of student affairs, director of admissions, and professor of mathematics, earned his Ed. D. degree in adult education at NCSU. He holds the B.S. and M.S. degrees from George Peabody College.

The doctor's degree in physical education was conferred upon David K. Miller by FSU. He earned his B.S. degree at Wake Forest University and his master of education degree at UNC-CH.

Dr. Miller, assistant professor of physical education and assistant baseball coach, was named All-American as a baseball star at Wilmington College and was a member of the 1961 Seahawk team which won the national baseball championship. He was also named National Collegiate Athletic Association All-American at Wake Forest University and played professional baseball for the N.Y. Mets.

Unaware that he was being photographed, Bern Coulter expresses the sentiments of many students as he bites into a half-raw hamburger purchased from the Byrnes lunch counter in the Pub. Although food prices have soared since last year, quality of food served has declined. Half-cooked hamburgers, stale french fries, three-day-old hot dogs, and poor grade ham are regular fare at the lunch counter, which is the only hot (?) food concession on campus. (Photo by Sessions)

Dempsey strikes again

By JACK DISARNO
Editor

Saturday evening September 26 in Hanover Hall (Gym) a group called "Freedom" gave an electrifying performance to the delight of several hundred people in attendance. Advance billing had stipulated that "Freedom" was to play from 7-9 p.m. A late development made it possible for the "Spurlows", a nationally known group, to give a free performance. So this group played, taking part of the time allotted to "Freedom."

As planned, a group called "U.S. Male" was to play at the Get Acquainted Dance that was to start at 9 p.m. in the pub. Since the "Freedom" part of the concert started late, the group played until 10 p.m. Many groups wouldn't have bothered.

Even before the end of their Dempsey was seen talking to the bass player, presumably telling the group to wrap it up.

Immediately after the group finished their last scheduled number the crowd began calling for an encore.

At this time Dempsey came up to microphone (like he was running off tackle) and told the crowd that another band was going to play in the Pub and reminded the audience that they paid for two bands. Dempsey then stated that he would "let" Freedom play one more song. According to Dempsey, after the last number everyone was to go to the Pub and take part in the festivities there.

Several things should be noted by Dempsey and others.

(1) Many of the people who attended the "Freedom" concert were non-students and were consequently unable to attend the dance (legitimately so).

(2) Since both groups had been "paid for", both functions could have taken place simultaneously, providing a choice for the students.

(3) MOST IMPORTANTLY, Dempsey had no authority to take any action. According to the SGA constitution, the Dance Committee is in charge of concerts. We realize that UNC-W is a state institution and the school has the right to have a member of the administration present at University functions. We also realize Mr. Dempsey has contributed much time and labor on the behalf of students. These factors do not excuse his behavior. Dempsey has no legitimate claim to the power he exercised.

(4) The people that were most abused at the concert were those who had bought the general admission tickets, (non-students). These 267 people are the ones who can make or break a concert, financially.

Perhaps the administration generally and Dean Dempsey, in particular need to be reminded that UNC-W students are not in the early stages of adolescence. Sorry to say it Dean Dempsey, but the days when our administration phoned the parents of local students who had cut a class, are gone.

Non-students stereotype today's college student

The image most non-students in this country have of students is not an entirely accurate one. To day the college student has been stereotyped as the under-statement of the decade.

Most Americans think the vast majority of students are long haired, heroin shooting, revolutionaries. The truth is, students today do wear longer hair, and many do use marijuana, and many are extremely dissatisfied with our political system.

Recently a survey was conducted by a major publication, on this subject. The survey is statistically sound. Over 200 campuses from all parts of the country were included. Responses from over 7,300 students were recorded.

The war in Southeast Asia, drugs, pre-marital intercourse, and abortions were some of the topics of the inquiry.

On the War, the survey showed these results: thirty-six percent favored immediate withdrawal, twenty-nine percent felt we should speed up withdrawal, while only twenty-six percent supported Vietnamization. Nine percent felt we, "Should fight for total victory no matter what."

In view of the large number of issues students are concerned with, an attempt was made to rank them in terms of support. Thirty-nine percent of the students said the War was the single most important issue. Racial conflict and the environment were tied for second place with fifteen percent. Other issues with considerable support were: government repression (7 percent), overpopulation (7 percent), the economy (6 percent), crime (3 percent), students rights (2 percent), nuclear disarmament (2 percent), and womens rights (1 percent).

The survey's findings on drugs were very interesting. It was revealed that the use of marijuana is widespread on the campuses, but "hard drugs" (eg. heroin, cocaine) aren't as easily found. Only one percent of the students use hard drugs regularly. Since the drugs in this grouping are often fatal, even one percent is a large number.

However, the situation is not as bad as many people think. Around half of the student population smokes pot (13 percent) use it frequently 34 percent occasionally).

The survey also included a section on sexual activity. Sex is one area where the general public's conception about students is almost accurate. According to the survey less than half (49 percent) to be exact, of the female students were virgins, while only eighteen percent of the male students are untouched. This is a startling departure from the Kinsey report of a generation ago. The Kinsey report showed that seventy-three percent of the female students had not had pre-marital intercourse while forty-nine percent of the males had not. The results on sexual activity differ greatly from surveys taken as late as a couple of years ago.

Perhaps the most interesting, and encouraging results of survey are the socio-political findings. Twelve percent of the students in this country are satisfied with the U.S. system (political : social) as is. An unbelievable SEVENTY-THREE PERCENT say, "The system isn't perfect but working within it is the most effective way to change it." Fifteen percent of those questioned say, "The system needs complete overhaul; violent revolution is the only way."

The overall picture that emerges is one of a liberal not radical student population. This does not mean that the liberal student is not capable of violent acts. When extreme repression by school administrators, municipal police, or the National Guard, takes place the moderates and liberals often will side temporarily with the radicals.

This temporary alignment of the moderates with radicals is reflected by the statement by thirty-three that "Violence is justified only when provoked by authorities." An encouraging fifty-three percent said, "Violence is unjustifiable under any circumstances." Fourteen percent advocated the use of violence generally in achieving their goals.

One thing should be noted about trying to gauge the "radicalness" of the student population, that is, concentration. There are areas in this country where student radicalism is disproportionately high. The Greater Boston area is an excellent example. These areas tend to get more than their share of media coverage and therefore color the public's opinion of students.

So the U.S. need not initiate a massive cage-building program. It has been discovered that students still display many human characteristics.

Alpha Chi Sigma Joins Sigma Sigma

Alpha Chi Sigman, women's service organization, has been accepted as a colony of Gamma Sigma Sigma National Service Sorority.

Alpha Chi Sigma was founded at Wilmington College in 1963 under the sponsorship of the North Carolina Sorosis. The name was chosen from the Greek letters to designate "First College Sorosis."

The organization encourages service to the university and the community, high social standards, and scholarship. Members must maintain a "C" average or better to remain active.

Alpha Chi Sigma has helped in the fund-raising drives of the Muscular Dystrophy and Arthritis Foundations and has assisted Alpha Phi Omega Fraternity in the Easter Seals Rockathon. Members made food baskets at Thanksgiving and Christmas and distributed them to needy families in the community.

The club recently gave $100 to the university to purchase shrubbery for planting on campus. The group also has given the school a silver service and other items to be used at social functions.

Members have ushered at concerts, served at faculty teas and receptions at graduation, and assisted in freshman orientation programs.

Seniors to apply for GRE exam

PRINCETON, N.J. — Undergraduates and others preparing to go to graduate school may take the Graduate Record Examinations on any of six different test dates during the current academic year, Educational Testing Service recently announced.

First testing date for the GRE is Oct. 24. Scores from this administration will be reported to graduate schools about Dec. 1. Students registering for the October test date must submit applications by Oct. 9. A $3 late registration fee will be charged for applications submitted after Oct. 6.

The other test dates are Dec. 12, Jan. 16, Feb. 27, April 24, and June 19. Equivalent registration deadlines and late fees apply to these dates.

National Wildlife Federation says ocean dumping is killing Atlantic

By ED CHANEY
National Wildlife Federation
Says Ocean Dumping is Killing Atlantic

The mid-August furor over dumping several hundred tons of nerve gas off the Florida coast overlooked the fact that the United States has been using the ocean for years as a trash can for noxious wastes.

This fact was highlighted later that same month when the Navy dumped several tons of surplus TNT off the Maryland coast. Originally, it was planned to drop the explosives off the coast of New Jersey at the spot where mustard gas had been dumped three years before. When that fact became public knowledge the dumping site was shifted. Good thing, too, since ships five miles away felt the explosion when the TNT hit bottom.

But surplus military weapons and explosives aren't the only things the U.S. has been pouring into the sea at the rate of 48 million tons per year. Included in that ghastly disposal are sulfuric acid, arsenic, naphthenates, cyanides, mercury and other heavy metals, pesticides, refuse—from municipal sewage to plastics and cannery wastes; radioactive wastes, chemical warfare agents, construction and demolition debris and various rejected or contaminated products—from foodstuffs to appliances.

The ocean off the East Coast and the Gulf of Mexico are dotted with dumping sites where the throw-away society has cast poisons and problems in the belief that out of sight is truly out of mind.

This attitude underwent brief revision last winter when it was discovered that the ocean off New York harbor where the city had been dumping its sludge was dead. Dead. Not dying; dead. Scientists studying the content of bottom sediment in the area were horrified. A bottom sample from one station included cellulose cigarette filter tips, bandaids and aluminum foil. The same items have been found in the stomachs of fish. Oxygen in the water in the dumping area was found to be less than one part per million. A concentration of 2.5 ppm is usually considered essential for marine life. In fact, nothing was found.

What is most disturbing about the extent and variety of dumping is that so little is yet known about the effect of sludge, chemicals poisons, and junk on the marine environment. There is some evidence that materials breakdown very slowly on the ocean bottom.

News From the University

Editors note: In an effort to build a feeling of unity between students of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, THE SEAHAWK is initiating a regular feature, News From The University. This feature will make news from the other five branches of the Consolidated University available to UNC-W students on a regular basis. The subject matter will range from entertainment news (eg. concerts) to administrative functions, such as Board of Trustees meetings.

NCSU—Raleigh
"Chicago," "The Guess Who," and Richie Havens head the list of concert performers who will be presented by New Arts Inc. of N.C. State.

"Kenny Rogers and the First Edition" will perform on campus Oct. 16 at 8 p.m. "Chicago" will play Nov. 6, followed by "The Guess Who," January 22 and Richie Havens, February 12.

All concerts will be on campus in the Coliseum at 8 p.m.

Admission is by season ticket only. Season tickets for non-State students are $8.

UNC-Chapel Hill

A lecture series designed to motivate and orient student activists during the election-week recess will feature William F. Buckley, Louis Harris, and former LBJ aid Joseph Califano.

Student body President Tom Bello and administrator Dean

Raymond Dawson are the organizers of the program.

National political columnist Stewart Alsop, and New York Times columnist James Reston will also speak in the series this fall.

In November UNC Chapel Hill students will be excused from classes and examinations to participate in campaigns. Students will be required to make up the work.

Is there cause for dissent?

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing this letter to congratulate the Board of Trustees on their "Policies, Procedures, and Disciplinary Actions in Cases of Disruption of Educational Process". I agree completely with the, dissension is tolerable, as long as the dissenter does not try to infect other people with his revolutionary propaganda. However, I am of the opinion that a much more effective measure would have been to show that there is no reason for violent dissent, and in fact no reason for dissent at all. It would have been simple, for these dissenters suffer under ridiculous illusions.

They compare the willful destruction of private property, such as ROTC buildings with such acts of national patriotism as the Boston Tea Party. The patriots of Boston were protesting the fact that they were being taxed to, among other things, pay for foreign wars which they, themselves, did not support.

These radicals compare the Kent State incident with the Boston Massacre, where residents of Boston confronted British soldiers and were gunned down. These patriots were protesting the fact that government troops had been placed among them, against their wishes, under the guise of keeping the peace.

The Declaration of Independence clearly states that the colonists had a right to violent revolt; for example:

"For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us.

"For protecting them by mock trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these states:

"He has constrained our fellow citizens taken captive,..., to become the executioners of their,... Brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

"He has refused to assent to laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

"He has erected a multitude of New Offices and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people...

"He has kept among us in times of peace, Standing Armies without the consent of our legislatures."

It is certainly evident that none of these conditions which excited our forefathers to violent revolution exist today.

Using this our heritage of freedom and "unalienable rights" as the scale by which to measure the necessity of action, I can see no reason why there should be dissension of any kind.

Frats organize rush activities

Greek fraternities got into full swing this week with fall rush activities.

The brothers of Pi Kappa Phi commenced the week with a program Tuesday night in which speakers and brothers indoctrinated rushees on the fraternity—its purposes, advantages, standings, and social activities.

Following the meeting, a party was held in the bar. Similar activities are planned for Thursday night.

Pi Kaps will begin the weekend Friday with a "Boys' Night Out At 4216 Market Street" party.

Richard Verrall, rush chairman, stated, "Saturday night is the big dance, and if you boys don't have a date, don't worry, you're assured of one. The brothers want to welcome everyone to open house all week. We guarantee plenty of free drinks and a hell of a good time."

Alpha Delta Upsilon will begin the week Thursday with a dinner party in honor of rushees. A field secretary from the national fraternity will speak. A field secretary from the national fraternity will speak. "The Heathers" will entertain at a band party at he house on 4226 Market St., Saturday night.

Richard Bullard, vice-president and rush chairman, encourages freshmen and all other interested men to attend. "Dates can be arranged for those who need them, and stag girls will hostess the parties as part of our new sisterhood program." "Stag parties and a wild

Who respects the trash man?

By KENNY HUDSON
Staff Writer

How often do we hear the following, or a very similar, conversation?

"Say, who's that?"

"Oh, that's just the trashman."

Just the trashman. In our society, we have no room for a "just" anybody. While men continue looking down on their fellow men, an ultimate scope is forming.

The trashman, as well as any man of similar circumstance, has recently given society a well-deserved jolt. Major U.S. cities have been forced to confront, and for the first time, mull over the situation. That which is constantly taken for granted somehow has a way of showing its importance when unexpectedly removed.

It seems that the major problem created by uncollected garbage cannot be overlooked. The vital (yes, vital!) services rendered by these persons aren't ones that the average citizen would be willing to tackle. If a buck must be passed, therefore, certain appealing conditions must accompany it.

What is the answer? In my opinion, it's very simple. The men should be paid an appeal salary. (By appealing, I mean acceptable to both the circumstances and the man.) I heard statements that these men are actually overpaid. Can really, in all honesty, call salary that barely supplies necessities of life too much?

But even more important is the salary is the philosophy behind it all. No one wants to be considered inferior. If these men were looked upon as people instead of repulsive objects referred to as "that", there would be no room for dissension.

Until we are willing to accept everyone on this equal level, we can expect nothing more than what we are now experiencing. The formula is the simplest of all: conceived by any man... yields peace.

New auditorium to open sometime this month

By BOB JENKINS,
Staff Writer

Sarah Graham Kenan Memorial Auditorium, the newest facility constructed on the campus, is slated to open in the next few weeks.

Constructed at a cost of $760,000 by Miller Building Corporation, the auditorium was financed through a grant from the Sarah Graham Kenan Foundation, Inc.

The fully-carpeted building seats 550 downstairs and 250 in the balcony. Two seminar rooms, an office, and lighting facilities are located upstairs. The downstairs contains box offices, the Green Room, and four dressing rooms, which can accommodate 28 people.

The predominant color of the interior of the auditorium is blue, but the foyer is gold, the curtain red, and the seats varicolored.

Production equipment includes a scenery loft, and modern backstage machinery.

Dedication for the building is set for late fall.

Joyce Grenfell, British Actress and comedienne, will give the premiere performance in the auditorium, Oct. 27.

Freshman will vote for class officers and senators, Oct. 12, in the Pub.

Freshman will elect a class president, vice-president, secretary, and five senators.

Freshman nominated for office as of Oct. 2 include Barry

S. Asbury, Gloria E. Ramos, and Helen L. Skelton for president; Beverly Kinlaw for vice-president; and Catherine Lace for secretary. Nominees for senator are Elizabeth Fickling, Vicki Martin, Bobbie Sellers, and Linda Walton.

ESCAPE FROM ADDICTION

"Addiction is a broad sense, by which I mean harmful dependence on chemicals, is one of our most urgent, contemporary health problems," writes Dr. R. Gordon Bell, in the preface of his new book ESCAPE FROM ADDICTION (McGraw-Hill, $5.95).

After 24 years experience working with the problem of addiction, Dr. Bell is optimistic. He states, "By calling this book ESCAPE FROM ADDICTION, I am trying to emphasize that there is hope for recovery and that the days of stigma-laden labels for chemical dependence of whatever kind are being left behind."

The author, president of the Donwood Institute which operates a 50-bed hospital for addiction, treatment, education, and research in Toronto, bases much of his material on the institute's program of rehabilitation and treatment.

Providing full coverage on the effects of alcohol, narcotics, and other addicting drugs, the book investigates the clinical and social problems of addiction.

A STUDENT GUIDE TO CAMPAIGN POLITICS

For students interested in political campaigning, Donald G. Herzberg and J.W. Peltason unravel some mysteries and offer practical advice in their new book, A STUDENT GUIDE TO CAMPAIGN POLITICS (McGraw-Hill, $1.95 paperback).

"Political campaigns in the United States are unique," the authors write. "They are longer, more chaotic, more decentralized, and less issue-oriented than campaigns in any other country in the world."

The book offers young people step-by-step advice on campaigning responsibilities—speech writing, door-to-door canvassing, soliciting absentee votes, telephone canvassing, etc. The book is not ideological, nor does it promote causes or candidates.

Hendrix dies in London

BY JOHN TEW
Staff Writer

Jimi Hendrix was born in Seattle, Washington, a half Cherokee and Negro, who rose to become one of the world's foremost psychedelic-rock guitarists.

Hendrix started out with such greats as Little Richard, one of the kings of rock and roll, then formed his own band, The Jimi Hendrix Experience, with Mitch Mitchell on bass and Noel Redding on drums. Because of the togetherness of the group and the great show put on by Hendrix (playing guitar with his teeth, behind his back, accompanied by gyrating body movements) The Experience became a favorite at rock festivals.

Hendrix was often up on drugs and the effects of his highs showed up in his music. "Electric Ladyland" is one of the best examples of this. Hendrix once shot heroin into his temple and came close to losing his life.

He had thought of death: in "I Don't Live Today" from the LP "Are You Experienced?", Hendrix takes you with him into what he thinks is death.

Hendrix was great and he knew it. This was said to be one of the reasons for the break-up of The Experience. . . He toured with several different people backing him up at concerts and recorded his last album with Buddy Miles on drums and Buddy Cox on bass at Madison Square Garden on New Year's Eve, 1970. Entitled "Band of Gypsies", the album was good, but lacked the togetherness of The Experience.

Hendrix's last performance was at the Isle of Wight Festival about three months ago.

Jimi Hendrix died in a London hospital Friday, Sept. 18, 1970. Although the cause was not officially publicized, sources attribute his death to an overdose of drugs.

There will never be another performer or person like Hendrix, but contemporaries no doubt will appear. There is, however, no doubt in my mind that, wherever he is now, he is trying to get a wah-wah pedal for a harp or pitchfork.

Drama Department to present "My Heart's in the Highlands"

"My Heart's In The Highlands" by William Saroyan will open the 1970-'71 theatre season, Oct. 22.

Produced by the Drama and Speech Department, the play will run through Oct. 25. A warm, human play, "My Heart's In The Highlands" suggests that things are not right in the world, but that perhaps, if man will love and respect his fellow man, there may be a chance for human existence.

The story revolves around the relationship of a poet, his son, and an old actor near the end of his days. Although they have very little in the way of material goods, they do possess the love of humanity, which has a strong effect on the surrounding community.

Though lacking the traditional "happy ending", the play produces a feeling of hope in the future of man.

The cast includes Peter Danilowicz, Mark Barefoot, Gwen Glancy, Tom Wilson, Eddie Thompson, Johnny McGee, Michael Zipser, Joel Perry, Ken Rene, Rosalie Hilburn, Craig Martin, Dawn Gardner, and Susan Robbins.

Production staff is W. T. Rogers, director; Sam Swain, assistant director; Dale Wright, stage manager; Joe Johnson, house manager; Liz LaFollette, properties; and Al Fitzgibbon, costume design.

Shinn, Lau selected Outstanding Educators

Two associate professors, Dr. Gerald H. Shinn and Dr. L. Wang Lau, have been selected for inclusion in the 1970 edition of Outstanding Educators of America.

Outstanding Educators of America is an annual program designed to recognize and honor men and women who have distinguished themselves by exceptional service, achievements and leadership in education. Guidelines for selection include an educator's talent in the classroom, contributions to research, administrative abilities, and civic and professional recognition.

Dr. Lau, a native of Shekhi, Kwongtung, China, and now a naturalized United States citizen, did not enter school until he was 10, when the Japanese forces were withdrawn from Hong Kong.

Despite this, Dr. Lau was permitted to skip two years of schooling and was graduated fourth in a class of 2,204, according to statistics compiled from the Hong Kong High School Graduate Record Exam. In his final year of high school, he won the swimming championship of China.

Afterwards, Dr. Lau came to the U.S., where he enrolled in the University of Oklahoma as a Texas Gulf Sulphur Scholar. He also held an academic scholarship awarded by the university. After earning his B.S. degree in physics in five semesters, Dr. Lau entered UNC, where he earned the M.S. in Physics and completed course work for the Ph.D. in physics.

While serving as a full-time associate professor of physics, Dr. Lau changed his doctoral concentration to nuclear engineering and was awarded his Ph.D. by NCSU.

He has also held assistant professorships at N.C. Central University and Shaw University. In addition, Dr. Lau spent two summers as research assistant at Research Triangle Park and was Student Reactor Physicist at the Experimental Gas Cool Reactor Project in Oak Ridge, Tennessee.

Dr. Lau resigned his position at UNC-W at the end of the 1969-70 academic year to accept a position as nuclear engineer for the Tennessee Valley Authority, where he will be working on the design and analysis of the world's largest nuclear reactor complex.

Dr. Shinn, associate professor of philosophy and religion and German, holds the A.B., B.D., and Ph. D. degrees from Duke University. He also studied at Goethe Universitat at Frankfurt am Main, Germany, and received a Ford Junior Fellowship to attend the Institute for Medieval and Renaissance Studies in 1965-66. Dr. Shinn also received the Gurney H. Kearns Fellowship.

Assistant supervisor at Arad, Israel, for the archaeological dig for the Institute of Mediterranean Studies, Dr. Shinn has been instrumental in developing the UNC-W collection of antiquities and in stimulating students' interest in archaeology.

A member of the N.C. Institute for Creative Education, Dr. Shinn has been working during the past year to establish the Wilmington Institute for Creativity to identify and nurture hidden human talents.

Baptist Student Union plans to establish campus center

Working to establish a student center near the campus, Baptist Student Union is planning an eventful year.

Although no decisions have been made about the location of a BSU Center on the campus, President Mike Lewis said, "The support we have received from the State Baptist Student Board and from local pastors seems very promising."

This year, BSU has a campus chairman, the Rev. Stancil Baucom of Riley's Creek Baptist Church. Mr. Baucom will visit the campus two days each week to meet with interested students.

BSU is an interdenominational group open to persons of varied religious backgrounds.

1970-71 program includes fellowships, projects, Bible studies, speakers and conventions. BSU Officers are Mike Lewis, president; Buddy Watson, vice-president; Elfrida Godwin, secretary-treasurer; and Carolyn Edwards, member-at-large.

New administration office located in Alderman Building Offices in the Administration Building have been renovated and relocated this year.

Lack of space was the primary reason for the renovations. Prior to January, 1969, the UNC-W library was located on the first floor of the Edward Alderman Administration Building.

When the library was transferred to its present site in the William Madison Randall Building, the vacated quarters were first used for the Placement and University Relations offices, then were divided into smaller suites which now house the Registrar's Office and the offices of the Dean of Women and Dean of Student Affairs.

Money for the renovations was approved by the 1969 State Legislature. The design, which was drawn up by Ballard, McKim, and Sawyer, was approved by Chancellor William Wagnoner and the Property Control Division of the N.C. State Government in Raleigh.

IT'S TOO BAD . . .

The Soccer Team has never received the credit it's entitled to. They have never been given the recognition they deserve. Most of all, they have never been adequately covered in this newspaper. They have no cheerleaders, no great fame, and no space to speak of in the infamous STAR-NEWS. Soccer players have been nationally cited as "natural resources"; some have earned executive salaries. Isn't it a shame that the soccer players are not even given a decent following by the student body?

DEDICATION . . .

The wrestlers now have scholarships. I believe the soccer team to be the hardest-working, most dedicated team on campus. (Wrestlers: Isn't it a little easier to train when you are being paid?)

Soccer players arrived two weeks before school begins. They train individually during the summer. I know that baseball players play in the same heat, but do they run even one-third the distance the soccer players do? With no dugouts to rest in, no benches, and no time-outs, the soccer players also wear almost no protection.

You add it up. Conclusion: lunacy or dedication? I believe the latter.

To the soccer players, students, or whoever: I realize that you have already played three games. I (on behalf of my staff) apologize. But remember, people: in the past, you have never received so many words in one issue or in one year. Be patient!!!

'Hawk Soccer Team to travel to Florida for Stetson Classic

By TOMMY TORHAM
Staff Writer

Seahawk Soccer Team travels to Deland, Florida this week to play in the Stetson Classic, where they will match skills against the Citadel, University of Miami, and Stetson, the host.

This marks the fourth outing this year for the 'Hawks', who have collided with Belmont-Abbey, Lynchburg, and Shaw University.

"I was pleased with the performance of the team in their season-opener against Belmont-Abbey last week," commented Larry Honeycutt, new head coach.

Coach Honeycutt added that he has a well-balanced team with eight returning lettermen.

Offensive lettermen who have seen action are Steve Boles, co-captain Jackie Blackmore, Tom Torham, and Barney Lewis. Transfer Jim Braswell also has seen much action in the opening games.

On defense, co-captain John Leach, Steve Clemmons, James Whisnant, and Gary Winters are back from last year's squad. Also seeing action against Abbey were Bob Elliot, transfer John Howarth, and Paul Bonti. At the goalie slot has been third-year man Bill Watkins, who gained the starting position. Lee Patkus seeks the position of alternative goalie.

Also expected to see action in Florida are Mark Fear, Walter Glover, Howard Solomon, Steve Raeford, Cladd Merritt, and David Hunt.

Coach Honeycutt sports a well-balanced team with no unit any stronger than the other, but depth offensively seems better than that of defense.

Honeycutt said he expects much from the team, with a strong finish, if the offense continues to produce goals and there are no defensive injuries. This month, the team travels to Buies Creek to meet Campbell College, where they will also play St. Augustine.

The 'Hawks' will host Pembroke, Methodist, N.C. Wesleyan, and will close out the regular season at home, Nov. 4 against St. Andrews.

Placement Center aids seniors in job-hunting

UNC-W Placement Center is now offering a permanent service to both graduating students and alumni, which will include interviews, counseling, and referral.

Placement services to seniors include arranging interviews between interested students and company representatives, personal counseling, company information, and referring students' resumes to companies who are requesting employees, but are not able to arrange campus visits.

Each year, companies and government agencies interview on the campus for personnel. Each student interviewing must complete a resume and file it in the center. The resumes should be submitted this week.

Students may sign up for interviews in the Placement Center, which is located in the Administration Building, after each semester registration.

The Center maintains a reference file of companies who interview on campus, in addition

Fitzgibbon finds individuality in Canadian frontier territory

By PAT PACKARD
Staff Writer

Modern mechanical life was abandoned by Anne Fitzgibbon, during her vacation this summer. Anne and her daughter packed sleeping bags and traveled 2500 miles north to Red Lake, Ontario a 1970 frontier land.

Drifting for over two weeks among the natives of Red Lake, Anne explored the country, talked with the people and even sampled a mooseburger. Experiencing nature in its virgin state, untarnished by population or pollution, was unique in itself, but Anne returned to campus with unusual insight regarding the people of Red Lake.

"Canada doesn't try to be a melting pot," explained Mrs. Fitzgibbon, who visited people with professions that varied from gold-mining to teaching. Individuality was respected, but everyone was impressively friendly. Anne sensed no hypocrisy among the residents of Red Lake, saying they live there out of desire.

Relating to her theatrical background, Mrs. Fitzgibbon excitedly discussed the possibilities of capturing the magic of Red Lake on film. "Critics would acclaim the film as an excellent sampling of realism," she commented.

Fortunately, Red Lake is relatively unknown as a vacation resort. Anne met only one other American during her stay in Canada. Thousands of campers would certainly destroy the "frontier" atmosphere.

Because technology is an intricate part of our lives, students may find it difficult to imagine a land so purely untouched by humanity. But, Red Lake has somehow evaded materialism and remains a place of freedom and mooseburgers.

Howell exhibits in RM Center

Claude Howell, chairman of the Art Department, is presently exhibiting in the R.M. Arts Center in Rocky Mount.

The exhibition, which will continue through Oct. 23, includes oil paintings, drawings, and water colors which Howell completed in August at Ocracoke.

Students to publish magazine

ATLANTIS, UNC-W's new literary magazine, will be published for the first time this semester.

"There has been no literary magazine on our campus, but there has recently been a revitalization of interest for such a publication," stated Pamela Ray, editor-in-chief.

The magazine will publish poetry, short stories, reviews, interviews, oil sketches, and photography.

Office for the semi-annual magazine is located in the Education-Psychology Building in Dr. Harold Hulen's suite. Material may be submitted for publication either at the office or to a member of the English Department.

CHICAGO, a seven-piece rock band, will appear in concert, Nov. 5, in the Gym at 8 p.m.

'Chicago' to appear in concert in Hanover Hall on November 5

By KAY GREGORY
Staff Writer

Chicago will appear in concert Thursday, November 5, at 8 p.m. in Hanover Hall. Student tickets are now on sale for $3.50. General admission tickets are $5.00.

Both student and general admission tickets may be purchased in the Student Government Office, and students wishing to buy an additional ticket for their date, husband or wife not attending UNC-W may with their I.D. card, purchase a student ticket. Each student is limited to two student tickets, however.

Chicago tickets may also be purchased at Harvey Cannon Ltd., McGraths, Belk Beery, Kings Department Store, both Payne's Stores, New Hanover High School and John T. Hoggard High. Tickets may also be purchased by mail at the following address: UNC-W, c/o Chicago, Post Office box 3725, Wilmington, N.C.

"There is just no way to sum up Chicago in words," stated Concert Chairman Ernie Sawyer about the seven-piece rock band famous for such songs as "Wake Up Sunshine," "Make Me Smile," and "25 to 6 to 4".

Chicago, using a format different from that of previous groups, will present two 45 minute shows divided by a 15 minute break.

Performing music ranging from jazz, brass, and the classics to rock and roll, Chicago were first known in their hometown as "The Big Thing", performing as a bar and dance band. They later ventured to Los Angeles to become the Chicago Transit Authority and later, after earning national acclaim, shortened their title simple to Chicago.

Members of Chicago are as unique as their music. No one member claims leadership, as they consider themselves equals. Chicago record producer James Guercio calls the group "a creative community", following rigid rehearsal schedules and holding writing seminars.

Pete Cetera, bass and vocals; Terry Kath, guitar and vocals; Robert Lamm, organ, electric piano and vocals; Lae Loughmane, trumpet and flugel horn; Jim Pankow, trombone;

Walt Perry, woodwinds, and Dan Seaphine, drums, compose the band.

Chicago's fame is spreading. At present they are said to be the biggest American act on the international scene.

Freshmen vote Skelton president

Helen Skelton defeated Barry Asbury by a 33 to 16 vote in the race for Freshman class President. Beverly Kinlaw and Diane Lace were elected to the offices of Freshman Vice President and Freshman Secretary, respectively. Lace and Kinlaw and the five Senate candidates ran unopposed. Turnout for the Freshman election was 50 out of a total enrollment of 550 or 9.09%.

The five Freshman Senate candidates elected were: Vicki A. Martin, Bobbie Sellers, Terry Rodgers, Linda Walton, and Elizabeth Fickling. Steve Tabor who did not campaign, received two write-in votes for the Senate. None of the Senate candidates were opposed.

The poor turnout was in spite of numerous attempts by the Board of Elections to inform and motivate the Freshmen.

The Board of Elections took these steps to motivate the Freshmen: The deadline for filing was extended longer than in previous years. Two Freshman meetings were held, one to explain nomination and election procedures, and one for the purpose of candidate speeches.

Announcements concerning the election were placed on every door of every classroom building except the Education-Psychology building. WGNI also made public service announcements about the election on Friday. Two very large signs that could be seen across campus were placed outside the Pub. A student election story was run in the previous edition of SEAHAWK.

A total of 18 write-in candidates received 26 votes. Part of the cause for the inactivity can be traced to inactivity by the candidates. Turnout in this election was the lowest ever in a SGA election.

Geography, Social Sciences expanding according to Randall

By WAYNE ROGERS
Staff Writer

Dr. Duncan Randall, geography instructor is quite optimistic concerning the future of the university's geography curriculum and social science program in general.

The geography department, located in Edward Alderman Building is just one branch of the social sciences. Others include economics, political science, sociology, psychology, and most recently, anthropology and geology.

With the transfer of administration offices downstairs, geography students have acquired a combination geography lab and seminar room which Randall says will be used specifically by geography students for study and statistical analysis, but especially during research work. Necessary equipment is being made available for the lab which he believes will benefit the students greatly.

At present the geography curriculum consists of Physical, Economic, Industrial, Urban, Political, and Regional Geography of both the U.S. and Europe. Dr. Randall anticipates that "eventually we will have Marine Geography and Geography of the North Atlantic Basin" to coincide with the new Marine Biology program here.

Agricultural Geography will also "soon be offered". This, he believes, is very important since "one-half of the world is still producing." The addition of staff members, however, will determine the speed of the program's expansion.

Fall semester marked the beginning of the geology curriculum which, although a natural science, is closely related

Disruption codes may backfire

By GIL JOHNSON
College Press Service

The first student demonstrations and possible violence on state colleges and universities in the west are likely to result from revisions in student conduct codes designed to quell student uprisings.

That is the feeling of most student leaders from New Mexico to Washington, where the governing boards of state institutions in each state have either revised or replaced old conduct codes to add more stringent clauses against political activism on campus. "These repressive codes," according to one student leader, "are likely to stir the students up, rather than quiet them down."

The new codes, written without or with minimal student involvement, came in response to public anger generated by campus disturbances last spring on various campuses. Many apply to campuses with have never gone through student disruptions.

—In Oregon and Washington, two very similar codes of student and faculty conduct have been decreed by the respective governing boards of those states. Detailing clauses under which a student may be suspended or expelled or a faculty member fired, they deal with possession of firearms, physical abuse of people or property connected with the institution, possession of drugs, and other offenses which would generally be handled in civil courts.

But both codes contain incitement clauses, and these are what students are objecting to. The Washington code states that members of the university staff or students may be suspended for "intentionally inciting others to engage immediately in any of the conduct prohibited herein, which incitement leads directly to such conduct." The first clause of both these codes list as a violation obstruction or disruption of normal teaching or research, or other lawful activities of the institution. Conceivably, under these rules, a professor could be fired for telling his own students not to come to class during a strike or moratorium.

At the University of Washington, the new rules of student and faculty conduct allow the university president, or any administrator he designates, to impose on any student, faculty member, or staff member an interim suspension "whenever there is reasonable cause to believe that such a person has committed, and may reasonably be expected thereafter to commit, any of the acts prohibited in the conduct rules." Such interim suspensions would be declared without a hearing, although a person so suspended would be allowed to request a hearing within seven days of being notified of his suspension.

These new statutes, which essentially give university and college administrators power to declare a state of martial law, are generally prefaced by good helpings of liberal rhetoric, such as that of the UNM Regents in the preamble to their new statement of policy: "Universities traditionally have been sanctuaries of thought, free exchange of ideas and the search for truth. They are not sanctuaries for those who use unlawful means to pursue their ends."

Bio. Club meets

The Biology Club held its second meeting of the year Wednesday October 14 here on campus. The topics of discussion were: a tutoring program for beginning biology students, a lecture series, and a trip to Baldhead Island.

The next meeting is scheduled for October 28. Turnout for the meeting was good. Tentative plans stipulate October 31 is the date for the Baldhead Island trip.

Tutoring sessions will be held every Tuesday and Thursday night from 7-9 p.m. Watch for posters for more information about the lecture series.

The second art show of the season in Kenan Hall will be held throughout the month of November. It will be a one-man show by Jill Flink of Raleigh.

Never fear, Spiro's here!!!

Throughout history a few men have had omnipotent powers; Ireland had St. Patrick, India had Nehru, and Egypt had Nasser. The United States is now lucky enough to have a protector of this stature. The name of our fearless defender is, in case you haven't noticed, Spiro Theodore Agnew.

In some ways Spiro is much more resourceful than the forementioned men. Spiro does his deeds with less formal (constitutional) authority than his predecessors (St. Patrick, Nehru, Nasser). After all Spiro is only a Vice President (a position inferior to U.S. Senate), but Patrick was a saint, Nehru a Prime Minister, and Nasser a president.

One must also compare the accomplishments of this man with fellow leaders. St. Patrick merely drove the snakes out of Ireland. Nehru merely held a culturally diverse country together, and kept India relatively free from Chinese domination, and Nasser only increased Egypt's diplomatic power a thousandfold.

Spiro's contributions are numerous indeed. Note just a few of his many accomplishments. He launched one of the most vigorous offensives ever against the American mass-media in his first outing. Being an expert on higher education, Spiro determined which university presidents should be removed and didn't hesitate, to publicly condemn them.

Next Spiro began to cleanse the Senate of dangerous individuals. Senator Gore of Tennessee, long suspected of being a threat to American society, was first on the list. Next on the list was Charles Goodell, a real radical or "radiclib." Anyone could identify Goodell as a radical anybody knows radicals are involved in subversive activities like working for peace.

Oh yes, then there was the time that he informed the people of Tennessee that their state is "...located somewhere between the NEW YORK TIMES and the GREENWICH VILLAGE VOICE." And Spiro always plans out his attacks with LOGIC as his basis.

Is nuclear arms control vital?

One of the disappointments of the Spring [American Physical Society] meeting in Washington was the apparent slackening of interest on the part of physicists in the problem of arms control and disarmament. The special session devoted to this topic attracted only a sparse turnout this year, compared to the standing-room-only response at the session on ABM in the same meeting last year. Concern about Vietnam, the environment and employment pre-empted the attention of physicists this year, just as in the public press these urgent topics have crowded news stories on nuclear escalation off the front page and well back among the department-store ads.

But somehow we must manage to keep in mind that it is still true that by far the greatest source of danger in our environment today are the thousands of nuclear ICBMs poised in launch positions waiting for the signals to deliver instant death to hundreds of millions of people.

New ideas and possibilities are being generated that deserve thoughtful analysis. At the Washington meeting Ralph Lapp reminded us that a first logical step in the control and eventual reduction of nuclear weaponry would be a decision by the two superpowers, unilaterally or in consort, to adopt "stable" deterrent systems. (A stable system is one that provides a credible retaliatory second-strike deterrent and yet is plainly inadequate to be used for an offensive first strike.) Lapp argues that a submarine missile fleet is an example of a stable system. Since the submarines are highly invulnerable to an opponent's surprise first strike, as few as 30 of them would clearly provide enough surviving capacity to strike a devastating retaliatory blow (destroy most major cities) while this number of vessels (taking into account the relative inaccuracy of submarine missiles) just as clearly could not mount a credible first strike (destroy most missile sites).

By contrast, land-based missile systems in the age ABM and MIRV have become unstable systems. Each of the capability of their land-based systems to ensure that the warheads that survive a first strike would be enough for effective retaliation.

At the same session a second speaker, Patrick Friel, made the interesting proposal that the United Nations be set up in the business of monitoring the sizes of both nations' strategic forces with reconnaissance satellites and that henceforth all the information gathered about the two opposing systems be made public. The idea is that the destructive power of these forces is so great that disclosure of their sizes and technical characteristics in no way compromises the security of either nation.

Even though arms control does not happen to be one of the topics foremost on campus agendas this season, it is crucial that in responding to the needs of other areas physicists not decrease their contributions to the thinking in this area. After all, unless we have reason to feel confident that we can eventually solve the problem of nuclear escalation what point is there in worrying much about environmental and social reforms.

—Harold L. Davis

James Taylor: refreshing sound

By PHIL KELLY
Staff Writer

At a time when a song's position on the pop charts is so much dependent upon how many decibels that group can put out, it is refreshing to note that JAMES TAYLOR refuses to conform to the rules of electronic music.

Certainly on his first album he uses electrical wizardry, but I am sure that he could lull one to sleep with his smooth, melodic music and beautiful lyrics even if the lights went out.

Bringing it home Taylor makes the most a pathetic native and up and think objectively about our state, in CAROLINA IN MY MIND.

STEAM ROLLER BLUES is a gutsy, teeth in the dirt number, reminiscent of some of the classics by such greats as John Lee Hooker, Blind Lemon Jefferson. He (Taylor) let's you know you've been there.

KNOCKING 'ROUND THE ZOO: frustrating to put in a cage and poked at—some of us have been there.

Give your ears a break. JAMES TAYLOR. Apple Records. And while you're at it, try his brother Livingston Taylor. Beautiful.

News from the university

UNC—Asheville-Sociology has, this year, been added to the list of majors offered at UNC-A. Dr. Walter Boland, department head, hopes to stress the study of human behavior by involving students in outside-the-classroom observation.

Introductory courses are being revamped and brought up to date. Changes in pre-requisites will also be implemented.

Although UNC-A has a major in sociology the department is staffed by two professors. Off-campus field work will be emphasized in the future.

NCSU—Raleigh-Vice President Spiro Theodore Agnew, will address North Carolina Republicans Oct. 26 on the N.C. State campus. The rally will be held in Reynolds Coliseum at 8 p.m.

State GOP Chairman James Holshouser stated that an appearance will, "...push our candidates over the top."

Agnew will leave Raleigh sometime the 27th. The Vice President was described as "America's greatest campaigner," by Holshouser.

The University of North Carolina's (Chapel Hill) graduate Sociology Department ranks seventh in the nation, according to a recent American Council on Education survey.

Dr. Gerhard Lenski is chairman of the department. Lenski had this to say concerning his field of study, "Sociology, to me, should be the study of the trajectory of human history and the forces that shaped that trajectory."

The high ranking is due, in large part, to the department's highly competent faculty. Thirty sociology professors staff the department.

Almost a hundred grad students (and about 300 undergraduates) are currently studying sociology at UNC.

Standard Oil fined $1 million for oil spill

In late August the U.S. District Court in New Orleans fined Chevron Oil Company (a wholly owned subsidiary of Standard Oil of California) $1 million for causing last winter's oil disaster in the Gulf of Mexico by refusing to install safety devices on its offshore wells.

The spill originated from a cluster of Chevron wells about 30 miles off shore which spewed up to 1000 barrels of oil per day creating a 50 square mile slick. The spill could have been prevented by installing inexpensive safety devices as required by law, but Chevron refused to do so.

Following the spill, Interior Secretary Hickel prodded the Justice Department into asking for a Grand Jury indictment on 900 separate counts of violating the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act of 1953. The Act provides for fines up to $2000 and/or six months imprisonment for each violation.

Chevron pleaded no contest on 500 counts and the maximum fines were levied by the Court. The Assistant U.S. Attorney General handling the case dropped the remaining 400 counts.

Secretary Hickel has announced apportionment of $176,729,000 from the Land and Water Conservation Fund for fiscal year 1971 to the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa and the District of Columbia.

The apportionment represents more than 95 percent of the $185.4 million Congress appropriated for State use. $8,671,000 was set aside in a contingency reserve to meet emergency situations and unforeseen needs of States and their cities or counties.

The 1971 apportionment exceeds the 1970 apportionment by more than $117 million. This additional money was requested last February by President Nixon in his Message on the Environment. At that time he stated that the purpose of his request was to provide additional park and recreation facilities, with increased emphasis on locations easily accessible to crowded urban areas.

All money allocated from the Fund to the States is matched on a 50-50 basis. Individual projects are approved by State officials and the Interior's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, which administers the Fund.

The States' share of the Fund is apportioned as follows: Forty percent is divided equally among the 50 states; five percent is reserved for unforeseen needs; and the remaining 55 percent is divided among the States, Territories, and the District of Columbia on the basis of (1) population, (2) Federal resources and programs, and (3) out-of-state visitor use of recreation areas. NORTH CAROLINA'S SHARE—$2,079,968.

'Music Man' tryouts slated for Oct. 26-28

Tryouts for "The Music Man" by Meredith Willson will be conducted Oct. 26 and 28 in the music room of Kenan Hall at 8 p.m.

"Cast for the SRO play can be as small or as large as the number of people who read for parts," stated Doug Swink, director of drama. "Men, women, and children of all ages are needed to fill the cast, which includes 29 speaking roles."

Slated for the weekend of December 11-12, "Music Man" will be the SRO Players' first show in Sarah Graham Kenan Auditorium.

Bob Alexander, professor of vocal music, will serve as choral director for the production, and Bill Adcock, instrumental band professor, will direct orchestration, which is also open for tryouts.

The story deals with Professor Harold Hill, a traveling salesman who cannot read music or play any instrument, but, who nevertheless charms the people of River City, Iowa in 1912.

During his week-long stay, Hall has no problems in selling the townspeople his instruments and fancy uniforms, but his "think system" of learning music produces a few skeptics.

In the end, the scheming professor is transformed into a reliable citizen by the naive faith of the town librarian.

"Gary, Indiana", "Till There Was You", and "Seventy-Six Trombones" highlight the musical score of the play.

Swink stated, "Anyone who wants to help in any capacity is invited to come and sign up."

UNC-W needs code

TO THE EDITOR:

The main purpose of a University is to educate. This policy has been a matter of dying importance. It seems that the student at this institution feels that the education is secondary and the grade is first (conditioned response) (sic). I feel that students are very apathetic in their studies and have stooped to the level of a common cheater, cheater.

We need at this University an honor code concerning not only cheating but stealing. A friend of mine seemed quite disturbed last June when she saw several boys filling out blue books with notes the night before an exam. This appears to be an accepted method of education. I am personally tired of studying for an exam and having someone do better than I because he cheated. This happened last spring when a student got up from the exam, went to the library, filled out his exam blue book and turned it in.

Maybe an honor code would help. It may not, but the student's mind may become a little less lax and will not be so impervious to education.

Joyce Grenfell to open Kenan Auditorium

British comedienne Joyce Grenfell will perform in Kenan Auditorium, Oct. 27.

Grenfell was born in London of American-British parents. Formerly a journalist and radio critic of The Observer, she made her first appearance on the stage in April, 1939 in The Little Review. Herbert Farjeon had heard her doing an imitation of a Woman's Institute Lecturer at a private party and persuaded her to write it down and do it in his new show. She appeared in all three editions of this revue and followed it with three others: diversion, diversion II and light and shade, all for Farjeon.

She toured hospitals in 15 different countries in 1943-1945 and was rewarded the O.B.E. (Order of the British Empire). She did not return to the theatre until August, 1945, when she was one of the stars in Noel Coward's SIGH NO MORE at the Piccadilly.

Tuppence Coloured and Penny Plain, revues devised by Laurier Lister, followed. In 1964 she appeared in Joyce Grenfell Requests the Pleasure, of which she was the author. It had a very successful run at the Fortune and St. Martin's Theatres and afterwards went to the Bijou Theatre in New York.

Next came a concert tour of Northern Rhodesia and then her first London one-woman show, for which she also wrote the material, at the Lyric Theatre, Hammersmith in 1967. This was followed by seasons at the Fortune Theatre and later on at the Haymarket (1962). In 1963 she was one of the feature artists in the film The Americanization Of Emily. Also, in 1963, she made a nine-week concert tour of Australia and New Zealand, breaking all previous records at the Theatre Royal in Sydney.

In 1964 Miss Grenfell kept busy with the making of the film THE YELLOW ROLLS ROYCE, a concert tour of Switzerland, two 50-minute solo programs for the BBC-TV, a concert tour of Great Britain and a concert tour of Canada.

Early in 1965 Miss Grenfell opened a long run of her concert program at the Queen's Theatre in London. Then followed another tour of Great Britain. Later in the year, the BBC officials requested her to return to television, and she taped the first of two more 50-minute shows.

In 1966 she completed her assignment at the BBC and taped the second program promised. After that she toured Great Britain for seven weeks, and South Africa for more than three weeks. In July she is scheduled to appear in Australia for the third time and in New Zealand for the second time. Altogether, this tour will cover 11 weeks of work "down under".

In addition to The Americanization Of Emily, Miss Grenfell has appeared in the following films: The Happiest Days of Your Life, Genevieve, The Million Pound Note, The Good, Companions, Happy Is The Bride and all three of the St. Trinian films.

Miss Grenfell has appeared widely in television as soloist and panelist. She has been on CBC in Canada and the ABC in Australia and starred eight times on the Ed Sullivan show in New York, on CBS. She has participated in the BBC Brains Trust, collaborated with Stephen Potter in the How series and served as panelist on the We Beg To Differ show for many seasons. She has given a few lectures, but prefers to be known as a stage performer of songs and monologues. From 1960-1962 she was a member of noted Pilkington Committee in Great Britain.

Her tour of America in October-November, 1967 will mark her fourth concert visit of our hemisphere. Her presentations are delightfully devised, showing her as a great author as well as singer and raconteur. This will be a long-awaited series of theatrical events.

Eden lauds legislators

To The Editor

I think congratulations are due the state government of North Carolina for its efforts in preventing irresponsible (sic) voters' from corrupting the American system of elected representation. I am of course talking about efforts to keep such radicals as 18 year olds and members of minority groups from voting in this state. Although I feel that I myself an intelligent enough to objectively view all sides of an issue and vote correctly, it is the majority that rules, and I realize that the majority of 18 year olds and members of minority groups would not vote for the majority of people in power in this state. This then is an excellent example of the foresight of our leaders as well as an example of job security.

Shew begins research to graduate with honors

Harry Wayne Shew, a senior at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington, has initiated an intensive independent research project which will lead to graduation with honors in his major field.

A biology major, Shew will research "Mutagenic Effectiveness of Hydroxyurea." Dr. Daniel B. Plyler, professor of biology, will advise him in the Honors Program.

Shew is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Shew of Leland, is a 1967 graduate of Leland High School. To qualify for admission to the Honors Program, he has maintained at least a 3.0 (B) quality point average his first three years in college.

The Honors Program is designed to comprise two semesters, with four semester hours credit given only upon successful completion of the research project. After the research is completed and the honors paper written, the final step in the program is an oral examination by a committee of the faculty.

Since the program was begun in 1965, 14 students have completed the Honors Program.

RECORD REVIEW

IRON BUTTERFLY with Pinera and Rhino

"Metamorphosis" Atco M-8339

Iron Butterfly, known for "In-a-Gadda-Da-Vida", has evolved into a somewhat different sound. Erik Brann, original lead guitarist, is out of the group and two new guitarists have replaced him.

"Metamorphosis" (a transformation by magic or sorcery) is the first album by the new group and the results have shown that this phase of the Butterfly has not weakened them.

Two cuts off the album have been released as singles, "Easy Rider (Let the wind pay the way)" and "Shady Lady".

The songs vary in sound from experimental to classical guitar, but there is still the heavy Butterfly sound.

The group seems to be more involved in the problems of today. "Slower than guns" emphasizes the problem of air pollution in the phrase: "Miles and miles of gasoline fumes, in the air like transparent tombs".

The LP is a good buy and more singles should be released from it soon.

NC Government Interview seniors

Seniors interested in employment opportunities in North Carolina State Government will be able to talk with a representative from the State Personnel Department on October 22, 1970. Arrangements for the interview are to be made with the College Placement Office. One should report there to establish a specific appointment on this date.

State Government employs over 39,000 persons in 1,400 different types of jobs. Business, accounting, rehabilitation, social work, laboratory science, education, computer programming, and the natural and physical sciences are only a few of the possible employment areas. Information which fully describes the employment opportunities is available at the Placement Office. In addition, State Government officers its employees a continued education program, excellent possibilities for advancement, paid vacation and holidays, sick leave, and other liberal employee benefits.

British pacifists originated present-day peace symbol

In the wake of the recent controversy about the origins of the peace symbol, we would like to set the record straight. (See New York Times for August 3, 1970, page 30.) In spite of John Birch Society charges that the symbol is really an upsidown cross, an anti-Christ witch's foot, or a Communist inspired device based on an early symbol that represented the devil's eye, the origin was rather prosaic, and thoroughly British. (One reader even pointed out that the symbol is very close to the initial ideogram in the Japanese word for rifle, shouju.)

The symbol most of us know as the peace symbol had its origin in England in 1958. It was first seen being used by British pacifists in their Easter "ban the bomb" march to Aldermaston to protest Britain's involvement with nuclear weapons. (Aldermaston is the location of the Atomic Weapons Research
